Christian Advocate.

VOL. 27.—NO. 1. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1881. WHOLE NO. 1335.

PUBLISHED FOR THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

C. T. LATHROP, Publisher.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, ... $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE
REV. H. D. MOIRK.
REV. G. H. BLACK, D. D.
REV. J. S. ANDREW.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE
REV. W. H. WATKINS, D. D.
REV. JAMES A. GODBEY.
REV. W. E. B. HUNNICUTT.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE
REV. JOHN MATHEWS, D. D.
REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

THE GOLDEN MILESTONE

Lowlives are the lives that purple branches
Spread themselves abroad like roofs of choral
Rising aloof
In the Red Sea of the Wilder Sunset,
From the hundred chimneys of the village,
Like the Afreet in the Arabian story,
Blackling columns
Tower aloft into the air of amber.

At the window winks the flickering fire-light,
Here and there the lamps of evening glimmer,
Like the water-lilies,
Answering each another through the darkness
On the beach the lighted logs are glowing,
And like Ariel in the cloven pine-tree,
Groans and sighs the air imprisoned in them
By the fireside there are youthful dreamers,
Building castles fair, with stately stairways,
Asking blindly
Of the future what it cannot give them.

By the fireside tragedies are acted,
In whose scenes appear two actors only,
Wife and husband,
And above them sits the sole spectator
By the fireside there are peace and comfort,
Wives and children, with fair, thoughtful faces
Waiting, watching
For a well-known footstep in the passage.

Each man's chimney is his Golden Milestone,
At the central point from which he measures
Every distance
Through the cityways of the world around him.

To the farthest wanderings still he sees it;
Hears the talking flame, the answering night-wind
As he heard them
When he sat with those who were, but are not Happy he whom neither wealth nor fashion,
Nor the march of the encroaching city,
Drives an exile
From the hearth of his ancestral homestead!

We may build more splendid habitations,
Fill our rooms with paintings, and with sculptures
But we can not
Buy with gold the old associations!

—H. W. Longfellow.

Letter from North Texas.

MR. EDITOR: When I parted with you in New Orleans now nearly one year ago, you requested me, and I promised you to write an occasional letter to the dear ADVOCATE from this far off land, as it is regarded by some. Several times before I have attempted to redeem this promise but was interrupted. Then I have thought it would be better to defer any communication until I had become better acquainted with the country and better prepared to give an intelligent and satisfactory account. So far I have not traveled much beyond the limits of the North Texas Conference, but have traversed a large portion of the territory embraced in this Conference. I have been as far as Long View, in Gregg county, embraced in the East Texas Conference, and as far west as Limestone county, in the Northwest Texas Conference. By [illegible] to map of the State any interested can see the extent of my observations in Texas. While there is not so great an extent of territory embraced in the North Texas Conference as some others, in the State, I think it is pretty generally conceded that it embraces the most desirable portion of the State, at any rate a very large proportion of it. It certainly is during the greater part of the year the prettiest country that I ever beheld. But just now! Oh! dear! You cannot imagine how cold the winds are that sweep over the vast prairies, and how fearfully bad the roads are, through what are called the "black lands." Much of the cotton crop remains yet on the plantations within 15 to 20 miles of the railroads because it is utterly impracticable to get it hauled over the "dirt road," as the people make the distinction. The portion known as North Texas is certainly as fine a farming country as any on the continent. This is the testimony of farmers who have come from all the other States, North and South, and settled in this region. Every variety of crop can be grown successfully. The seasons after all are not so unfavorable as the people of the older States, imagine. In some parts of the State it is true, they have protracted drouths, or long rainy seasons that render agriculture a precarious business, but God in His wisdom and goodness has so provided that in Texas there is room for years to come for farmers in the farming region, and for herdsmen in that portion of the State where stock raising is more profitable. Thousands of emigrants are pouring into the State almost weekly who pass by the best farming portion of the State and go too far to the west because that portion is new, and they have an idea that the country beyond is always the best. Hundreds have been disappointed. I suggest to those who would come to Texas, either first consult some reliable friend in the locality, whither you desire to come, get a full statement of particulars, or examine yourself and see before you move.

I am pleased with the preachers of my Conference and the unexpected kindly reception they gave me. I feel very much at home among them. They are certainly a faithful, laborious, self-sacrificing company. I never saw a Conference of Methodist preachers more intent upon doing the work of the Master faithfully. Methodism is in the van, but feeble, nevertheless compared with the older States. There is a general waking up all along the line on the subject of building parsonages and comfortable churches, of which there has certainly been great need hitherto. I have an appointment, Paris circuit, very convenient, and a fine field for usefulness, I think. My family reside in the beautiful little city of Paris, Lamar County, and my circuit is just outside. I will write again.

Your brother, H. J. HANNA.

PARIS, TEXAS, Dec. 27, 1880.

The Right of Prohibition.

MR. EDITOR: Being engaged, soul, body and spirit, in a desperate struggle in this community, with the great enemy of our race (I mean the liquor trade) and the enemy's name being "Legion," and a number of the chief men in our church, and some in other churches of like prominent position withholding their aid and sympathy, refusing to sign a petition to the legislature to prohibit the traffic in this place, full of schools and churches—and seeing in this week's NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE a paper from our much esteemed and lovable Bro. C. N. Hoover, in which he uses this language, "but it is a very doubtful question, if the State, or God Himself, has a right to enact such laws as shall force a free agent to do, or not to do, that in which none are interested but himself."

The trouble my dear Bro. Georgie gives me is, does he think that none are interested in the importation, manufacture, sale or giving away of spirituous liquors, but the man who does these things? That is the foundation of our troubles in this struggle with liquor men and their friends.

Their dear rights, oh surely, a democracy is going to seed, I hope Bro. Gilmer does mean that, for he is a good, true and Godly man and Methodist of the best stock. I will not say what rights are lodged in the Power Divine, nor yet in the State, but the latter do some times wonderfully abridge men's rights in shutting them up from doing harm and then many good people are glad that a dangerous murderer is out of their way.

The good book says "no man liveth to himself," and that teaches me that every man and woman and child within my small circle, is deeply interested in all I do, and I am living with my eyes steadily fixed on this solemn fact, and hence I am struggling against this destroyer of our young men and boys. I would make it impossible for them to so disgrace themselves, and their pious parents, and plunge in the eternal pit as I see some doing almost daily. O Lord God Almighty help, and help now. Amen.

J. W. JORDAN.

GREENVILLE, Ala., Jan 1, 1881.

Duty and Privilege.

BY REV. C. F. DEEMS, D. D.

People seem to have very mixed ideas of duty and privilege. In the first place, they seem to think that there are more duties than privileges; in the second place, that it is harder to discharge the former than to enjoy the latter; and in the third place, that these are quite opposite, if not contrary, things. Each of these propositions is false. There are a hundred things to enjoy where there is one to do. It is difficult to enjoy our privileges, because they are not always perceived to be privileges, and most of us have accustomed ourselves to pull in the harness of duty. We have contracted the habit of making ourselves do what we ought to do. We feel as if there was something glorious in that. We praise ourselves and others, and expect ourselves to be praised, for doing duty. We are all the while magnifying duty. All heroism seems to consist in doing duty. And that is right. But we do not accustom ourselves to enjoy our privileges, and that is wrong. We do not blame a man if he permit a proper enjoyment. We do not blame him if he omit a manifest duty.

More than all that, so far from being antagonistic, we cannot long study either one or the other without coming to perceive that there is no duty incumbent on man which it is really not a privilege to discharge; and there is no enjoyment possible to a man which it is not his duty in some sense to possess.

We forget that all existence is the gift of our Heavenly Father. If we could only always remember that, how it would change the color of our entire life. We should cease to drag ourselves to the discharge of duty. We should cease to regard life as a hardship because it has its duties. We should drop the miserable idea that the enjoyment of rational pleasure detracts from [illegible] interferes with the performance of duty.

Consider the case of an earthly father of high character and great resources. In the training of his family there must necessarily become duties created for each member of the family by his will, but does he set himself to invent duties? Does he assign any work to any member of his family which could possibly be avoided without loss to the family? Does he not rather employ his sagacity in striving to contract what we may call the area of privilege? Does he not give to each member of the family every privilege and every enjoyment possible for that person without injury to himself or the whole family? In such a family as that, consider what the result would be to the character of any member if he spent his time in thinking of duties incumbent upon him, in preparing to discharge them—in discharging them—and incessantly the results, especially if he did this with almost never the use of any privilege granted by his father, and almost never the enjoyment of any pleasure. Think how dry such a character would be, and how dry such a life.

We shall have to preach more and more the duty of being happy, if men will not be happy otherwise. Not the duty of frivolity; not the duty of unbridled lusts; not the duty of ill-regulated passions—but the duty of real, thorough appreciation of the enjoyable things of life; the duty of entering upon them with a gusto and an appetite that shall be kept keen and fresh and healthy, by enjoying everything in the name of immortal love—in the name of God's love to us.

Any host, who has proper sentiments, enjoys more to see his guest eat discriminatingly and heartily of the viands he has prepared, than to have that guest eat sparingly, as if he were afraid that he would beggar his entertainer, and then strive to pay him the most profuse and rhetorically ordered praise. Must it not be so with that Infinity Heart that hath set the tables of the universe and bidden His children to His high feast? When one has exerted himself to make us happy, our best compliment to him is to be happy. How few people do this! How few people dwell upon their pleasures! How almost every one permits the mote of annoyance near his eye to shut out the glorious sun of life! Sometimes the Heavenly Father spans us with a whole sky of splendor and delights, and yet if we can detect the least speck of cloud in that hemisphere of duty, we set our imagination to fanning, that it will soon become as big as a man's hand and then pour out a deluge that shall sweep away our standing crops, our factories, and our homes; and we feel that it is our duty to fall to work at once to prepare for the evil day, and so all this privilege of pleasure becomes as nothing to us.

Let me urge upon my readers this simple experiment: For the next month enter upon the discharge of whatever you consider a duty with the feeling that God is unspeakably good in permitting you to do anything, and that it is a delight to do it, and take all possible pleasure therein. As far as practicable, discern the happier elements in your case, and roll the thought of them plainly in your minds with joy and gladness, and see if you do not come to feel as if every duty were a sweet privilege, and the enjoyment of every honest pleasure equivalent to the performance of a high duty. So into the warp of duty weaving the woof of enjoyment, life shall become a fabric at once strong and beautiful.

The French Decrees.

In no respect have the firmness and hopeful stability of the French Republican government been more strikingly exhibited than in the enforcement of the decrees against unauthorized religious orders and educational institutions. From time immemorial, the Jesuits have been in France, as elsewhere the arch-enemies, alike of religious and civil liberty. The present Republican government had not been organized a day before they began to plot their destruction. Their alliance with the friends of despotism has not been concealed; it has been manifested in every form in which they could hope to give it efficiency. They were more to be dreaded than the public advocates of imperialism. The French people and the French statesmen know them as their deadliest enemies.

Accordingly the recent decrees were passed, not for the purpose of suppressing any form of religious faith or worship, but simply to carry out existing statutes that were framed to meet the machinations of religio-political adversaries. It is impossible for us in this land of long-established freedom fully to appreciate all the circumstances which justified these proceedings in the eyes of the friends of the French Republic, but we cannot fail to indorse the firmness with which they have been carried out. Had the Jesuits shown a disposition to submit to law and agitate in a legal manner for the repeal of obnoxious statutes, their cause would have had an entirely different aspect, but relying on the support of the monarchists and procrastinists they openly set the laws and the officers of the law at defiance. They have not succeeded any better with open defiance than with secret machination. The impiety of the law has been vindicated, and still further, it is made evident that the Republic does not have the fear of the Pope or of his army, the Jesuits, before its eyes.—New York Observer.

The Jesuits.

The expulsion of the Jesuits from France seems to be regarded by many as a revival of mediæval persecution. No mistake could be greater. Unless the Catholic country from beginning to end. Almost the whole population, at least nominally Catholics. If not them, one kind of religionists expelling another kind—a Catholic expelling Catholics. If all who are at least nominally Catholics in France were to protest against it, the government would not dare to expel them. It is only because so large a portion of the population desire or consent to it that the government undertakes it.

Again, it is said by the partisans of the government controlled by the clericals that they are expelled. It is not the attempt of one set of religionists to put down another. It is a civil government defending itself and society from a dangerous organization. They are driven out, not for religious reasons, but for State reasons. The action of the government has no reference to religion, pro or con. If these men were good, loyal citizens, and were doing nothing to endanger the government or to injure society in its civil capacity, they would not be expelled. The government cares nothing whatever for their religious views. It does not care whether they are Pagans or Protestants, infidels or Catholics, but it does care whether they are good and true citizens.

There is no persecution when the government breaks up an organization which threatens its life. It is not a new organization. It has a long history. It is well known in France what they are, and what they are about. It is no persecution to break up a society, notwithstanding its claims to be religious, when its existence and work are a constant menace to the government and to society.—Presbyterian Journal.

Archbishop Purcell undertook to combine with his pastoral functions those of a savings-bank, and invited the trusting members of his diocese to deposit their savings with him, promising safely to keep the same and respond in payment whenever they should call for the funds. What the Archbishop did with those funds is to invest them in the building of churches, school-houses, parsonages, etc., for the purpose of promoting Catholicism. It turned out in the end not only that he "had too many irons in the fire," but that he was a very poor investor of trust funds. The crisis, at length came, and the Archbishop could pay neither interest nor principal. His creditors found that, whatever may have been his motives, they had been practically swindled.

The whole number of these creditors is about five thousand, holding unpaid claims amounting to four millions of dollars. The most of them are poor people, and can ill afford to lose their money. A suit (which for some reason seems to hang fire) has been commenced in their name for the recovery of these debts by the sale of the church property that was created with their money, and the title to which was vested in Archbishop Purcell, who, according to the Catholic theory, held it in trust for Church purposes.

We do not know precisely what are the laws of Ohio on the subject; yet we do know what are the laws of equity in regard in such a case. This property ought to be held liable for the Archbishop's debts, and to be levied on and sold for this purpose. It belongs in justice to his creditors. They furnished the money, either in whole or in part, for the building of these structures. It may be rather a serious business for the Catholic congregations to have this property sold at auction to the highest bidder; yet it will be much more serious to the five thousand creditors not to have it thus sold. They want their pay; and, if the Catholic congregations cannot or will not furnish the money, then justice demands that the property shall be sold to satisfy these claims. We hope that this will be the verdict of law, as expounded by its agents.

It is certain that we are now alive, having a body and the powers of thought, consisting of memory, reason, imagination, and will. From the numbers who have died and from reason, we conclude that it is certain we will die. It is equally certain that we do not know which, where, nor how our death will take place. We are certain from the principle of decay found in our bodies that our death will occur in a few years hence, or possibly in a month or a day. We know certainly that we must die, but we do not know subject to chance, mishap or happiness or misery, right or wrong, for we do not know that we will ever have the power to make a probationary choice for an hour after we are dead.

It is certain that each day as it passes can never be recalled or lived over again in this world. It is certain that all the infallible information we have concerning our happiness or misery after we are dead are resolved from a book called the Bible. This book certainly encourages and commands us to do all things which are right and abstain from all things which are wrong if we would enter upon a state of [illegible] death has seized upon our bodies. It is perhaps that neither in the Bible nor in the best maxims of the world, nor in our experience nor in our observation, have we any reason to hope for a moment of time that peace or safety or happiness or real well-being will ever come to us in this life.

The Jesuit Fathers.

Forty Roman Catholic members of the British Parliament have signed an address to the Cardinal Archbishop of Paris on "the expulsion of the Jesuit Fathers from their houses in France." In which they say:

"In one word, we believe that in the present conflict the cause of the Jesuits is the cause of freedom, of education, of civilization; aye, and of religion itself."

This expression of belief on the part of forty members of Parliament may be regarded as the most gigantic joke of the season. "The Jesuit Fathers" have long known from the beginning, in every country in which they have established themselves, as the sworn enemies of freedom, plotters against the liberties of the people, meddlers in opposition to all rightful government. They have been driven out of nearly every Roman Catholic country in the world by the Roman Catholics themselves, and even by Popes, as dangerous incendiaries. In the present conflict in France, while the people are straining every nerve, and thus far successfully, to establish a republican government, "The Jesuit Fathers" are dealing their utmost to fasten again on the neck of the nation the yoke of despotism which they have so gallantly thrown off, and are claiming the right to educate in their own way the young so as to instill into their minds their own hatred of popular liberty. We do not wonder that these Roman Catholic members of the British Parliament should espouse the cause of the Jesuits in France, because just now the Jesuits are the body-guard of Popery, the forlorn hope of that worst of all forms of despotism which enslaves soul as well as body; but that they should venture, with the light of history in their eyes and with a perfect knowledge of what they are aboutgad in France, to assert that "the cause of the Jesuit Fathers" in France is, anywhere else "is the cause of freedom," is carrying a joke a little too far. We cannot believe that there is one out of these forty members of Parliament who had failed to laugh in his sleeve over its absurdity. But they must be true to the Pope, even though they renounce their common sense.

TIGHTLING. WOMEN. The Hour, commenting upon the drinking habits among women on this side of the Atlantic says: In New York tippling among women is not as common as it is in the more moist and sluggish climate of England. Our bright sparkling air gives a buoyancy to the spirits, which takes the place of champagne. But it would be a great mistake to suppose that women here do not drink a great deal more than is good for them and that many happy households have not been broken up by this fearful vice. In Canada the love of drink is very strong among women. The shops where worsted and silks for embroidery are sold are especially constructed so as to have a little bar in the rear, and the fairest of the sex may be daily seen—by the initiated—imbibing cocktails and other fancy drinks. This tippling is only to be found among the Anglo-Saxon population.

A petition has been sent to Prince Bismarck praying that the Jews be restricted in their civil rights and that the absolute equality enjoyed by them with Germ[illegible] citizens be abolished. An interesting discussion on the subject took place in the lower house of the Prussian Diet. Herr Bachem, Court Chaplain Stoecker, and others accused the Jews of acquiring wealth by disgraceful means. Herr Bismarck denounced the revival of race hatred. The minister of state said the existing laws established religious equality, and the government had no intention of proposing a modification of them. Herr Windthorst, Ultramontane, said the question was a social one. He thought the protection demanded for the Jews ought to be extended to the Catholics. The discussion ended without a vote.—New York Independent.

The mother of Taine, the eminent French essayist and critic, is dead, at the age of 79 years. She was venerated by her son, who never failed to visit her daily, when she was in Paris. He also spent his evenings with her, when he had no social or literary engagement.

South Carolina Conference

APPOINTMENTS.

CHARLESTON DISTRICT. [illegible] P. E. Charleston, Trinity, A. Coke Smith; Charleston Bethel, E. J. Meynardie; Charleston Spring street, H. E. Chreitzberg; Cainhoy circuit, A. G. Smith; Hollywood circuit, J. W. Tupper; St. Stephen's mission, D. W. Seals; Summerville, S. D. Browne; Cypress circuit, S. D. Vaughan; A. W. Nesbit; St. Paul's mission, to be supplied; St. George's circuit, W. S. Whitaker; Bamberg circuit, T. L. Wannamaker; Colleton circuit, M. H. Poppell; South Branch ville et, D. Tiller; Walterboro circuit, Col. Strohecker; Tomotley, to be supplied; Edisto circuit, W. M. Lovell; Allendale circuit, W. H. Nelson; Black Swamp circuit, [illegible] Shiley; Barnwell circuit, to be supplied; E. B. Lawless; Editor S. C. Advocate, S. A. Weber.

ORANGEBURG DISTRICT. [illegible] P. E. Orangeburg station, G. W. Dodds; Dorchester circuit, J. H. Hall; Branchville, N. K. Melton; Providence circuit, W. D. Kirkland; St. Matthew's circuit, E. Auld; Leesville circuit, J. A. Clifton; Orange, R. R. Dagnall, Jr., Supply; H. Pooser; Edisto mission, W. H. Wheeler; to attend school, I. L. Sheford; Williston and Blackville, J. B. Mesaheimer; Langley and Aiken, A. J. Newbit; Graniteville circuit, and mission, Spirit Lewis.

COLUMBIA DISTRICT. [illegible] P. E. Columbia, Washington station, H. N. Wells; Columbia, Main station, J. L. Stokes; Columbia City mission, L. M. Little; Columbia circuit, W. A. Clark; Ridgeway circuit, W. W. Darling; Winnsboro and Blackstocks, Wm. Martin; Fairfield circuit, A. C. Counts; Chester station, C. T. Herndon; Chester circuit, L. A. Johnson; Fort Chester circuit, J. T. Clyde; D. W. Barber, sup.; Rock Hill circuit, J. Marion Boyd; Fort Mill, W. W. Williams; Yorkville station, Marion Dargan; Lexington Fork circuit, H. W. Whittaker; Lexington circuit, J. J. Workman; Edgefield circuit and mission, J. A. Mead; Johnson's circuit, W. A. Rogers; Batesburg circuit, E. F. Kistler; Gilbert Hollow, J. E. Watson; Richland Fork circuit, E. H. Price.

SUMTER DISTRICT. [illegible] P. E. Sumter station, D. J. Simmons; Sumter circuit, J. S. Beasley; Sterling Hill and Kershaw, R. G. Dantzler; Bishopville station, A. W. Moore; Manning station, H. M. Mood; Brogdon circuit, W. W. Mood; Santee circuit, W. H. Kilgo; Camden, F. Z. Dantzler; Hanging Rock circuit, W. H. Ariail; Lancaster circuit, A. W. Wooding; Chesterfield circuit, C. H. Rowell; Zoar circuit, J. W. Ariail; Lyttleborg and St. Luke's, G. H. Wells; Wedgefield circuit and mission, A. A. Gilbert.

FLORENCE DISTRICT. [illegible] P. E. Florence station, W. S. Martin; Darlington station, W. T. Capers; Society Hill circuit, H. J. Morgan; Cheraw station, J. W. Humbert; Darlington circuit, D. D. Dantzler, S. Jones, sup., Jeffers's Creek, E. T. Hodges; Timmonsville circuit, N. H. Clarkson; Mars Bluff station, H. A. C. Walker; West Marion circuit, Wm. Carson; Effingham circuit, T. P. Phillips; Williamsburg circuit, J. W. McRae; Scranton mission, to be supplied by T. S. James; Johnsonville circuit, A. W. Jackson; Georgetown, S. A. Porter, Thos. M'Dehell, sup.; Georgetown circuit, to be supplied by Dan'l Durant; Black River circuit, J. C. Davis; Kingstree, T. E. Hilbert; Clarendon circuit, J. W. Kogers.

MARION DISTRICT. [illegible] P. E. Marion station, A. H. Foster; North Marlboro circuit, M. M. Ferguson, W. L. Pegues, sup.; Bennettsville circuit, John W. Murray, P. A. Murray; South Marlboro circuit, J. C. Bissell; Little Rock circuit, S. J. Hill; Mullinsville circuit, J. D. Zimmerman; Marion circuit; L. M. Bruce; Conwayboro station, Jas. M. Ebbs; Conwayboro circuit, Basil G. Jones; South Conwayboro circuit, J. S. Porter; Buckesville station, R. H. Jones; Waccamaw circuit and mission, A. B. Lee.

SPARTANBURG DISTRICT. [illegible] P. E. Spartanburg station, J. T. Wightman; Spartanburg City mission, Jas. F. Smith; Union station, R. D. Smart; Cherokee springs circuit, J. W. Carlisle; Cane Creek circuit, J. W. Brown; Jonesville circuit, J. K. McCoy; Limestone springs circuit, J. T. Kilgo; Glendale and Coersens circuit, A. P. Ayers; Goshen Hill circuit, Augustine W. Walker; Laurens circuit, Arthur C. Walker; North Laurens circuit to be supplied; Clinton circuit, W. M. Hardin; Belmont circuit, J. B. Wilson; Chappells circuit, J. A. Wood, B. M. Boozer, sup.; Pendet circuit, I. J. Newberry; York circuit, Abner Ferine; Vanderbilt University, A. M. Shipp, Professor; Wofford College, W. South, W. W. Duncan, Professors; R. C. Oliver, Sunday-school Agent.

COKESBURY DISTRICT. [illegible] P. E. Cokesbury station, Wm. Thomas; Cokesbury circuit, J. W. Keitt, one to be supplied; Abbeville station, A. J. Stafford; Abbeville circuit, W. W. Jones; South Abbeville circuit, T. B. Boyd; Edgefield station, R. P. Franks; Tumbling Shoals, M. L. Banks; Greenwood circuit, W. C. Power; North Edgefield circuit, W. P. Meadors; Newberry station, J. B. Campbell, J. C. Counts, supernumerary; Newberry circuit, A. J. Stokes, T. Moth. White, supernumerary; North Newberry circuit, A. C. Legette; Saluda circuit, J. R. Traywick.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT. [illegible] P. E. Greenville station, J. O. Wilson; Greenville city mission, L. Wood; Greenville circuit, L. F. Beaty; Reidville circuit, O. M. Boyd; North Greenville circuit, J. E. Bachman; Fork Shoals circuit, H. H. Browne; Williamston circuit, W. R. Richardson; Anderson station, J. E. Carlisle; Anderson circuit, John Attaway; West Anderson circuit, J. W. Daniels; Pendleton circuit, W. Hutto; Pickens circuit, S. P. H. Elwell, J. H. Graham; Seneca City circuit, supplied by W. A. Hodges; Walhalla circuit, C. B. Mann; Williamston Female College, S. Lander, President.

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1881.

Entered at New Orleans Post-office as Second-class Matter.

EDITORIAL CORPS.

Dear the last night of the year
This my last effort ere night hides me
My pen can well with me say a tear,
Though I may not forget the old friend dear
There was no cloud of hope to cheer,
I sang a world to New Year's welcome.

After I penned my Bedding Death,
I hoped a good and fragrant flower
Baptized with Winter's tears of pain,
Might spring and bloom yet again
The broken links of memory solding,
And melody sweet yet find power.

I thought of friendships once so dear.—
Alas your friends are few
Dividing winds and waves so drear
Have banished many a friend once dear,
Till there was little left to cheer,
Save Jesus and His promise true.

His promises to those oppressed,
Were precious to my weary soul:
Come unto me, all ye distressed,
And I will give you endless rest!
How this has calmed the troubled breast
And bid our sorrows cease to roll!

The night was weary, dark and long,
No sound the voiceless silence stirred,
While pain, the hours seemed to prolong
And round the gathered memory's throng,
When, lo! a bird's sweet joyous song,
Was the first New Year's sound I heard!

It was the dayspring of the day,
The birthday of another year;
And in the East were clouds of gray
Which soon the sunlight drove away;
Ah! 'twas the bird's thanksgiving lay,
That brought me hope, and sweetest cheer!

And now, when o'er the day or night,
Seem weary spirits, Oh! refuse
Where even hope denies its light,
And white winged peace takes to its flight,
I look, look o'er that weary night,
And sing my Buddist, sweetest song.

Did Judas Partake of the Lord's Supper?

This question has never been satisfactorily answered, and probably will always be a matter of dispute.

Our authorities differ in their assertions. Mr. Wesley says that Judas was "not at the Lord's Supper," while Dr. Ralston says: "The immaculate Saviour of the world condescended to communge at the table with Judas Iscariot, knowing him to be a devil!" We are convinced that Dr. Ralston is wrong in this assertion, and any one acquainted with the circumstances will at once say that he was precipitate in his conclusion.

Each evangelist gives us only a very partial history of the life of Christ. The four, taken together, give us a fuller, but by no means a perfect one, owing to the studious care which some seem to have used, in order to omit what another had recorded, as doubtful at times to determine the right of events.

The last six days of our Master's life were spent at and around Bethany. The little village of Bethany, some two miles distant, was a favorite place of resort. There, in the persevering Spirit of Christ's Heart, we find him, after a good night's rest, ready for the duties of the day. Early in the morning he would leave Bethany, and, passing over the brow of the hill, would enter Jerusalem, and, passing through the streets, would go to the temple, where he would teach the people. Some of her characteristics shone brightly commanded the admiration of all who knew her. As those as well as abroad she was conspicuous for her good. Her room, her dress, and her actions bespoke the careful, orderly mind. To this added a charming unassuming obsequiousness, yet nothing of indifference or haughtiness. It was the unpretentious modesty. Her devotion to the church was marked by a spirit of activity and others. Before the Methodist Church has lost, in her estimation more nearly scriptural shall others hence indeed look back to her love, its instruction her beauty sympathy, as members were formed. We delight she looked forward to the spiritual growth, of which we might be told at Washington. She spoke the time of his determination to be present, as we thought that Christ might be home, a disciple, the while, that we might, that those the great host gone before Apostles and Martyrs Bible, would with holy, joyful and prepared with

Some of the incidents of six fabulous years, who gave those kindly attentions, warm and encouragements, to precepts and instructions, necessary in bringing up children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." We can speak cheerfully of her and her husband's success in this respect for we found the children of that family respectful, polite and obedient. We are sure that the memory of a mother's loving care will be a blessed inheritance, more precious than silver or gold.

Her death was sudden. Taken sick one day, died before the next morning. We trust she has the angels say, "Good morning." It is well

JOHN BOYKIN was born in Burke county, Ga., April 12, 1798, and moved with his parents, when very young, to Alabama, and from thence to Simpson county, Miss., and finally to Smith county, where he has lived for forty years and more.

When about twenty-six years old he married Miss Cordenia Bowling, with whom he lived happily and raised fifteen children to be grown, eleven of whom are living and all members of the church. The wife preceded the husband to the "better land" a little more than a year ago.

Bro. Boykin has been a member of the Methodist Church for more than fifty years, and not only was he consistent, but for the greater part of that time one of the most prominent official members of the circuit where he lived.

He was a man of decided character; none more true to his conscientious convictions. He was deeply pious, very liberal in supporting his church, and was a thorough Methodist in doctrine and polity.

He died at his home near here December 16, 1880, after suffering for three weeks or more with profuse dropsy of the heart. May his good example stimulate.

C. M'DONALD.

JULIAN POOLE, Son of L. and C. F. Poole, was born December 10, 1879, and died November 22, 1880. Julian was an interesting child and winning in his ways. He was just budding into life with all tenderness and sweetness characteristic to his age. May the Lord sanctify this bereavement to the spiritual good of the entire family, raise the afflicted mother to health and bring the father to repentance.

Died July 24, 1879, near Floyd, La., aged seven years, six months and eight days, ALICE MAY, daughter of W. H. and Fannie A. Phipps; and on October 6, 1880, near Waterproof, La., aged fifteen years and nine months, CLAUDE LORRAINE, son of the same parents. Both fair and interesting the comfort and support of a long invalided mother the pride of a doting father. They have left their weeping parents suffering the will of God on earth, and gone unto Him who said "Suffer little children to come unto me."

O! weeping, sorrowing mother and father; struggling with grief almost too hard to bear, look upward to the bright home of your loved ones. Their graves though widely apart, are set as milestones to direct your weary feet in the way to their sweet rest in a place

H. F. B.

Did Judas Partake of the Lord's Supper?

This question has never been satisfactorily answered, and probably will always be a matter of dispute.

Our authorities differ in their assertions. Mr. Wesley says that Judas was "not at the Lord's Supper," while Dr. Ralston says: "The immaculate Saviour of the world condescended to communge at the table with Judas Iscariot, knowing him to be a devil!" We are convinced that Dr. Ralston is wrong in this assertion, and any one acquainted with the circumstances will at once say that he was precipitate in his conclusion.

Each evangelist gives us only a very partial history of the life of Christ. The four, taken together, give us a fuller, but by no means a perfect one, owing to the studious care which some seem to have used, in order to omit what another had recorded, as doubtful at times to determine the right of events.

The last six days of our Master's life were spent at and around Bethany. The little village of Bethany, some two miles distant, was a favorite place of resort. There, in the persevering Spirit of Christ's Heart, we find him, after a good night's rest, ready for the duties of the day. Early in the morning he would leave Bethany, and, passing over the brow of the hill, would enter Jerusalem, and, passing through the streets, would go to the temple, where he would teach the people. Some of her characteristics shone brightly commanded the admiration of all who knew her. As those as well as abroad she was conspicuous for her good. Her room, her dress, and her actions bespoke the careful, orderly mind. To this added a charming unassuming obsequiousness, yet nothing of indifference or haughtiness. It was the unpretentious modesty. Her devotion to the church was marked by a spirit of activity and others. Before the Methodist Church has lost, in her estimation more nearly scriptural shall others hence indeed look back to her love, its instruction her beauty sympathy, as members were formed. We delight she looked forward to the spiritual growth, of which we might be told at Washington. She spoke the time of his determination to be present, as we thought that Christ might be home, a disciple, the while, that we might, that those the great host gone before Apostles and Martyrs Bible, would with holy, joyful and prepared with Matthew, Mark and Luke record the institution of the Supper, and the circumstances connected with it, as occurring on the first day of unleavened bread, when the Passover must be killed. John does not record the institution of the Supper, but he does record the fact that Jesus washed the disciples' feet, and that he then said to them, "Ye are clean, but not all." He knew who should betray him, and therefore said, "Ye are not all clean." Then he said, "He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me." Then he said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me." Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake. Then Peter beckoned unto him that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake. He then answered, "He it is, to whom I shall give a sop when I have dipped it." And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon. And after the sop Satan entered into him. Then said Jesus unto him, "That thou doest, do quickly." Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him. For some of them thought, because Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast; or that he should give something to the poor. He then, having received the sop, went immediately out. They knew not for what intent Christ said these words, but some thought He said, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast.

But Judas went out, and covenanted with the chief priests to deliver Him for thirty pieces of silver. For two days the cold-hearted traitor lurked around his meek and gentle Master, seeking opportunity to betray Him. He was present at the feast of the passover, thinking that his secret was his own. But at the close of the feast, and before the institution of the supper, his dark plot was revealed. Mathew thus records the circumstance: "And as they did eat, He said, Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray Me, etc. Mark's testimony is the same. From this we conclude that they were eating the pass-over when Judas was accused and exposed. Bishop Morris goes still further, and says that he was then expelled, before the institution of the supper. We have no express warrant for saying this, yet the inference is so strong we think we can safely say, with Mr. Wesley and Bishop Morris, that Judas did not partake of the Lord's Supper. We can at least say this much, that those who assert that Judas did partake do so arbitrarily, without the shadow of an evidence. They can adduce no testimony from the word of God to prove their position. Neither have we any positive proof that Judas did not partake, but our testimony is of a strong inferential nature.

While Judas was in his sheep's clothing, he had the meekness of a lamb, and was all attention to his Master; for, as our deadliest enemies do, he endeavored to conceal the secret counsel of his heart with love. While he thus endeavored to pass as His friend, and said, as if in perfect innocence, "Master, is it I?" the intent of his heart is known by the omniscient Son. "Thou art the man! Imagine the feelings of Judas when he sees his exposure, the climax of infamy, the height of his disciples, and hears the dreadful curse. It would have required great effort on Judas' part to remain in the room after such a development. His only desire was to make his escape from the society of these good and holy men since his hellish plot had been revealed. You put a wicked man in the society of Christians, and he is unhappy; he is ill at ease, and his only thought is to know how he can escape such a place of torment. If you were to put a sinner in heaven he would endeavor to make his escape. The place is not at all congenial with his nature.

It is hard to conceive of a case in which a worse man could be in the presence of better men than is afforded by the present circumstance. The vilest wretch that ever lived was in the presence of the holy disciples and immaculate Son, whom he had sold Himself to betray. When he was discovered to be of such character it is reasonable to suppose that he had rather leave than stay. It would have been torment for him to have stayed.

It is furthermore certain that our Master would not have compelled him to stay. Then, as he preferred leaving to staying, the inference is that he left immediately after the exposure of his shame. Again, we infer that Judas did not partake of the Lord's Supper, because, when a person is detected in a dark plot which he has laid, and is only waiting for a convenient opportunity to execute it, the impulse of his heart is to wait no longer, lest he be apprehended or prevented. Put yourself in Judas' place, and you can well imagine what he did. You have determined, coldbloodedly, for the sake of a few paltry dimes, to betray innocent blood. It is your fixed determination, and nothing can daunt you.

While in the presence of the one whom you are going to betray, and surrounded by all his friends, you are suddenly and unexpectedly exposed, you are informed of your designs by the doer whom you are going to betray. Your desire, then, would be to make your escape, and except at once the black plot; you would be afraid to stay another moment. He who can believe that Judas staid there, and sung and prayed, worshiped with the rest of the apostles, under these circumstances, is more credulous than I am. It seems to me a person who believes this displays common sense to support a theory.

Judas was afraid to stay there. Peter had no scruple, and he would have cut off his head as quickly as he did the ear of Malchus if the Master had command him. Moreover, Judas did not want any longer for a more convenient opportunity. The Master had not been long in the garden before he became with soldiers and torches and clubs, etc. The very circumstance shows that he was well conversant in the habits of the apostles. While we could assign other arguments, our mind is shaped, with the following.

If we were to invite paupers, and those who are in love and charity with their neighbors, to the communion of the Lord's Supper, would we not be very wrong if we were to give the consecrated bread and wine to a person singing, and of unpenitent, hatred and murder? Certainly we would. Would not he be themselves, and it is no reason, so that we should give it to them, if they should come. Suppose an infidel were to take advantage of the invitation, and come to the communion table, do you think he should be allowed to partake? Certainly not. Penitence, and love and charity, are fixed by our churches as conditions to the communion of the Lord's Supper. Whence do we get these conditions? From the example and teachings of Christ, and those of the apostles. If Christ did not make repentance, and love and charity, the conditions of communion, and did not require these of the communicants on the day of its institution, then we have no right to make these conditions. But, if Christ suffered Judas to partake, he did not require repentance, and love and charity, as conditions, for he did not require it. We must tear down every barrier, and make the invitation general, to all, whether believers or unbelievers. Just so the person examines himself, and satisfies himself that is all. We must expose this holy sacrament to the low, the vile, the mean, the impenitent, the murderers in heart and life. Either our rules are wrong or Christ did not suffer Judas to partake.

I had rather say that Judas did not partake, and put the sacrament in such a position and surrounded by such protection as to keep the undefiled away.

J. M.

From the Work.

BERAUX BRIDGE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: This year will long be remembered by the sugar planters of Louisiana for unprecedented bad weather. And then to think that in addition to this every impediment possible is thrown in their way by the professed party of freedom in favor of sugar made by slave labor is of itself sufficient to convince the Southern people that the Radical Republican party is not their friend.

The manner in which his fraudulency invites the attention of Congress to the election in the South is a fit and proper outcropping of a brain whose body was elevated to the President's chair, which he titled to honor, through the vilest frauds and most corrupt corruptions that ever disgraced the pages of a nation's history.

The South has made its record, and one, too, for which she will never have cause to blush. It is better for her that she should be defeated with the man who saved the Union, when the Southern Confederacy was within a stone's throw of victory and independency, than to have been successful with one whose record is as spotted and soiled as our agitator of sectional bitterness and strife.

C. D. HAYLEY.

DECEMBER 18, 1880.

HOLMESVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Three years I have spent on the Amite circuit, and they have been years of interest and profit to me, and, I trust, to many others. There has been about one hundred and seventy-five additions to the church by baptism, transfer, letter, recognition, etc. A few have died, some have moved off, two or three have been expelled, some lost sight of, one or two gone to the Baptists, and yet the circuit is much stronger numerically than it was three years ago. I have been appointed to a new circuit, composed of a part of Brookhaven, Scotland and Amite circuits, called Adams and Bogue Chitto.

I am very fortunate in one respect. I have four local elders on my circuit. Truly, the Lord's local prophets are numerous in this country. Then, they are all working men: they seem to be ready and willing to do what they can. For the whole, I think I have a splendid circuit, and now, if I only have the hearty co-operation of all the good people in my charge, with the blessing of God upon our labors, I shall look for fine results. Pray for us.

M. R. LEWIS.

DECEMBER 18, 1880.

Christ and the Word.

Whatever the word is, it is because of its relation to Christ. Is the word of God quick and living? It is because Christ is the life. Is it powerful? It is, because Christ is the power of God. Is it sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow? It is, because Christ is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; because Christ divides between Peter who confesses Him as the Son of God, and Peter who savors of the things of men. Is it a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart? It is, because Christ knows what is in man, because He seeth Nathanael when he is under the fig-tree, and the Pharisees who think evil in their hearts. Is it said of the word: "Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in His sight, but all things are naked and open unto the eyes of Him with whom we have to do?" It is, because the spoken and written word is identified with the Lord Himself, whose eyes are as a flame of fire, even the Son of Man, unto whom the Father hath committed all judgment. Is the word spoken of as the sincere milk, the nourishing food of the soul? It is, because Christ is the bread of life. Is it commanded as a shining into darkness? It is, because Christ is wisdom. The science of Scripture is the Saviour in whom are all things which pertain unto life and godliness. The soul that has found Jesus has something in Scripture always and profitable. Jesus is the door by which alone we can enter the sanctuary of the word. And when we come to Jesus we enter into the possession of the word, for He is the words of eternal life. They are His, and He only can give the word. "John xvii. 11. And as we have the word through Him, and in Him, so we find Him in every portion of Scripture. "When Peter goes to the accordant voice of all the holy prophets, and of the apostles of our Lord and Saviour, testifies I stand in Jerusalem at our Lord's ascension century, and hear the multitudes of those who go before, and of those who follow after, crying: 'Hosanna to the Son of David!' Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord to save.'"—Boyle. "Jesus only." Is the true center of Scripture in all its manifold revelations, and hence all Scripture is new covenant, the gospel of grace. The law shuts up to "Jesus only," even as in "Jesus only" it finds its true exposition and manifestation. The kingdom is "Jesus only," as glory; the church, "Jesus only," as head. The sinner is accepted, "because it is 'Jesus only;'" the saint lives and grows, because it is "Jesus only."—Life of Faith.

The American Pulpit.

Even those who are not active in the membership of any church, must recognize the great and growing importance of the education of the ministry who are to fill the pulpits of the churches. The American ministry, in spite of the efforts of the newspapers to tempt its members to exchange wholesome intelligence for morbid notoriety, are a power in the land, whose use for the best ends is a matter of interest to every public-spirited citizen. It is true that the American people are very generally free from the tendency to ascribe a social and a moral weight to a minister or priest, because of his ordination or consecration. They expect a man to pass for just what he is worth, and not, like a new silver dollar, for what some authority has stamped on him. But the American ministry, as a rule, will stand this test. They make themselves felt in society and in public life. They are recognized as worthy leaders in great social reforms. They weigh more than they count in society. Their fellow men recognize in them an order of more than usual earnestness and devotion,—men whose master-wish it is to do the right thing and to see righteousness prevail.

Not only are they a superior class, but their position fits them to bring their power to bear on society. The pulpit, as Mr. Carlyle says in Past and Present, is a vantage ground whose greatness even its occupants do not appreciate. It is a point from which a man may speak from the heart to the heart, as nowhere else in this world. And where it is made the channel of really thoughtful and earnest utterance, by a man born for the work, no greater engine for civilization and enlightenment can be imagined. It is not possible to claim that it is always, or even ordinarily, so used. Those whose experiences in this regard have been the happiest, can probably recall no drearier hours in their lives than some they spent under "the droppings of the sanctuary," and grieved the member of ministers whose vocation must be a secret between themselves and heaven, a secret into which other men have never been admitted. But, after all deductions have been made, the pulpit remains a unique instrument for the moral purification of society. The press is sometimes disposed to claim that it has superseded some of the pulpit's functions; but the claim cannot be substantiated. Just in so far as it does its own work well, the newspaper must reflect society in a broad, indiscriminate way, whose constant contemplation tends rather to depress than to elevate the moral nature of the majority of readers. It is the pulpit's privilege to deal with life not less truthfully but yet more discriminately, to insist on those specters of sin of which our moral remissness tends to make us oblivious, and to emphasize righteousness as the great end for which all this complex hurly-burly exists. It can turn men's thoughts away from the details, to the great central realities of human existence. It can divert their minds from the make-shift and incorrect standards of human judgment, to that perfect standard by which all acts are finally appraised. It can set itself against low and Mammonish ideals of success, and call upon men to live for the great unselfish ends of human welfare. All this the pulpit can do, and in some measure has done. It is among the under-valued agencies of society, whose vast worth we should begin to discover in the great losses which would follow its removal. John Dyer in the Penn Monthly.

Mrs. Carlyle's Grave.

A New York editor traveling in England made a visit to the Old Haddington cathedral, and with this interesting and pathetic result: With pride the sexton showed the effigies, showing also other titled names that decorate the spot. "And there," said he, while moving along, as he pointed out a flagstone bearing two names, one of which was but a few years old, "there is Mrs. Carlyle's grave."

"The wife of Thomas Carlyle?" I enquired.

"Ay," said he, "ay, ay."

And I saw that it was, and that this was the toilsome glorified by that immortal epitaph, the finest tribute ever paid to wife or woman, in which the illustrious literary giant

> Mightiest thinker of foggiest mind
> Wielding mysterious power on feeblest mankind—

after referring to her long years of wise and her helpful companionship, says that, by her death, "the light of his life is clean gone out."

"And Mr. Carlyle," said the sexton, "comes here from London now and then to see this grave. He is a gaunt, shrugg, weird kind of old man, looking very old the last time he was here."

"He is eighty-six now," said I.

"Ay," he repeated, "eighty-six, and comes here to this grave all the way from London."

And I told the sexton that Carlyle was a great man, the greatest man of the age in books, and that his name was known all over the world; but the sexton thought there were other great men living near at hand, though I told him their fame did not reach beyond the graveyard, and brought him back to talk at Carlyle.

"Mr. Carlyle himself," said the grave digger gently, "is to be brought here to be buried with his wife, ay." "He comes here lonesome and alone, continued the grave-digger, "when he visits the wife's grave, his nephew keeps him company on the gate, but he leaves her there and she stays there for him. The last time he was here I got a sight of him, and he was bowed down under his white locks, and he took his way up by the ruined wall of the old church, and seated then, and in here by the gateway, and he uttered up here to his self.

"Softly as the grave-digger said he passed. Softer still, in the broad daylight of the Lothians, he proceeded. And he stood here a while in the grass, and then kneeled down and stood on his knees at the grave; then he bent over, and I saw him kiss the ground as, he kissed it again and again, and he kept kneeling, and it was a long time before he arose and tottered out of the cathedral and wandered through the grave yard to the gate, where his nephew stood waiting for him.

Repaid in Kind.

A Christian family were burned out of house and home. Almost everything which they possessed was swept away by the devouring flames. A lady who had no personal acquaintance with them, and resided in a distant city, felt that she might do something to evidence her sympathy and render assistance in such an emergency, but various circumstances made it impracticable for her to do as she would gladly have done. Nevertheless, she could not deny herself the blessing of being a sharer in the sorrows and losses of those she loved. Though she had not money at hand, she had a bountiful supply of wearing apparel and other useful articles, and from her stores she promptly made up a generous parcel, and sent it to the relief of the destitute people whose goods had fallen a prey to the flames; studiously concealing her name, so that they had only the Lord to thank for the timely gift.

Time passed, and misfortune and sickness came, and the generous giver found herself in need of the very articles which she had so freely given. It would not be strange if, under such circumstances, a thought of the unwisdom of her own generosity should intrude itself upon her mind; but she repelled the suggestion, and held fast her trust in the living God.

About this time some relatives, returning from a journey, visited her, and, having an abundance of just such articles as she needed, without any suggestions as to her necessities, freely gave her, not money nor cloth, but garments ready made of the same kind which she had given away so long before. She had lent to the Lord, and the Lord had repaid the loan in kind, giving her just what she wanted, and when she wanted it, so encouraging her to trust in God, and "lend, hoping for nothing," looking to the Lord to supply all her needs according to His riches in glory.—The Christian.

Who is Buddha?

Did you ever notice, my son, that the man who tells you he cannot believe the Bible is usually able to believe almost anything else? You will find men who turn with horror and utter disbelief from the Bible, and joyfully embrace the teachings of Buddha. It is quite the thing just now, my son, for a civilized, enlightened man, brought up in a Christian country and an age of wisdom, to be a Buddhist. And if you ask six men who profess Buddhism who Buddha was, one of them will tell you he was an Egyptian soothsayer, who lived two hundred years before Moses; another will tell you that he brought letters from Phœnicia, and introduced them in Greece; a third will tell you that she was a beautiful woman of Father India, bound by her vows to perpetual chastity; a fourth will, with a little hesitation, say he was a Brahmin of the ninth degree, and a holy disciple of Confucius; and of the other two, one will frankly admit that he doesn't know, and the other will say, with some indecision, that he was either a dervish of the Nile whatever that is or a fetich de se, he can't be positive which. Before you propose to know more than everybody else, my son, be very certain that you are at least abreast of two-thirds of your fellow-men. I don't want to suppress any inclination you may have toward genuine free thought and careful, honest investigation, my son. I only want you to avoid the great fault of atheism in this day and generation; I don't want to see you try to build a six-story house on a one story foundation.

Before you criticise, condemn and finally revise the work of creation, my son, be pretty confident that you know something about it as it is, and don't let a man who is older in years and experience than yourself, don't, let me implore you, don't turn this world upside down and sit on it, and flatten it entirely out, until you have made or secured another one for the rest of us to live in while you demolish the old one.

Home of the Spirit.

Redeemed and regenerate humanity is the home of the holy Spirit. He came, on the Pentecost, to abide, to dwell; to make the natures there renewed his domicile. Christ only sojourned in human society; and when his earthly mission of suffering and redemption was completed, he ascended to the throne of his father, where "he ever liveth to make intercession for the saints." His dwelling-place is heaven. But, in his departure from a world, for which he had given his life, he did not leave his disciples orphans. He sent to them another Comforter, or advocate, that he may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of Truth whom the world can not receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you and shall be in you." The same idea of the permanent presence of the Holy Spirit in the human heart is conveyed in other forms of expression. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" "Where two or three are met in my name there am I in the midst of you." The divinity has his home in the shrine; and, in consonance with the idea, the Spirit, if one may so say, has his legal residence in the consecrated and purified heart. Here is his home, his resting place, as the dove came back to the ark, so this celestial messenger returns from his excursions over a world deluged by sin, to abide in this fleshly tabernacle till the flood-gates sink and the bow of promise span and illuminate the darkened heavens. Unlike the angels under an older dispensation, who, as ideas evening guests, the Holy Spirit has taken up permanent quarters in the devoted soul. Nothing will cause him to depart but sin. He likes a clean house. Filthy habits and foul conversation will grieve him away. Purity is the only condition of his stay. In sickness, sorrow, trouble, he will cleave closer to you. When other friends desert you, he will stick closer than a brother, entering into your griefs, illuminating your darkness, inspiring you with hope, and encouraging you to trust for value by bear the burdens of this mortal state.—New England Methodist.

Sunday-Schools.

REV. MR. SCHINE, an Episcopal clergyman in Philadelphia, read a paper on the subject, "When were the Sunday-schools originated? Some years ago, traced their origin to very ancient times, and created considerable interest among clergymen, and especially among interested people, respecting their existence before the seventeenth century. He says that a printed manual of Sunday-school instruction was issued by Dr. John Wesley, in 1674, proving that Sunday-schools were generally established among that earnest people two and a quarter centuries before Robert Raikes opened his first school. These people were persecuted almost to extermination until 1733, when the remnant embarked for Pennsylvania, settling principally in Montgomery county. Their leading minister settled at Towamencin, and at once prepared to open a church and Sunday-school in 1735, or a year before Robert Raikes was born, in a building which remained in regular use till torn down about twenty years ago. Sunday-schools were thus in practical operation, in this country nearly half a century before they were known in England, and it is claimed by these people that they have existed among them in the fatherland for centuries.

An English collier went to hear the celebrated Rowland Hill, the infidel who is attracting so much attention in England, and at the close of the lecture an opportunity was given to state any objections to the sentiments offered, if any one had such to present, whereupon an uncultured, plain-looking man arose in the audience, and said: "Master Bradlaugh, me and my mate Jim were both Methodys, till one of these infidel chaps came this way. Jim turned infidel, and used to badger me about attending prayer meetings; but one day in the pit a big cob of coal came down upon Jim's head. Jim thought he was killed, and ah, mon! but he did holler and cry to God." Then turning to Mr. Bradlaugh, with a knowing look, he said: "Young man, there's now't like cobs of coal for knocking infidelity out of a man!"

"MORE TO FOLLOW."—Rowland Hill tells a good story of a rich man and a poor man in his congregation. The rich man desired to do an act of benevolence, and so he sent a sum of money to a friend to be given to this poor man as he thought best. The friend just send him five pounds, and said in the note, "more to follow." After a while he sent another five pounds and said, "more to follow." After a while he sent another five pounds and said, "more to follow." Again and again he sent the money to the poor man, always with the cheering words; "more to follow." So it is with the wonderful grace of God. There is always "more to follow."—Moody's Anecdotes.

NOVEL READING AND DIVORCES.—It ought to be remembered, when many are seriously questioning why divorces are growing so sadly numerous, that one of the fruitful causes is the present passion for novel-reading. Novels generally terminate in marriage and misdirected youth, by their rose-colored descriptions, into expectations which are oftentimes sorely disappointed. In the bitterness of the disappointment the divorce court is appealed to as the only resort.—Presbyterian.

Marriages.

WIDNEY—KORWIN.—At the residence of E. J. Rowe, Esq., in Baton Rouge, La., on December 8, 1880, by Rev. John T. Sawyer, Mr. Lymon S. Widney and Miss Adele Korwin.

GAY—FOX.—At the residence of Col. N. L. Willis, Alexandria, La., November 18, 1880, by Rev. J. D. Harper, Mr. J. B. Gay and Miss Lulu Fox. All of Louisiana.

VER RUSS.—At the residence of Col. Kimball, Hancock county, Miss., November 25, 1880, by Rev. I. W. Calhoun, Mr. John A. Orr, of Pearlington and Miss Mamie R. Ross, of Hancock county.

MOORE—COLLIER.—At the residence of the bride's mother, near Carthage, Miss., December 9, by Rev. Irvin Miller, Mr. S. W. Moore to Miss Emma J. Collier.

HESLIP—SUMMER.—At Pilkville, Miss., December 15, 1880, by Rev. C. McDonald, Mr. W. B. Heslip to Miss Fannie E. Summer.

JONES—BATE.—At the residence of the bride's father, December 22, 1880, by Rev. H. P. Lewis, Mr. B. Jones and Kate E. Bate. All of Franklin county, Miss.

FERGERSON—GIBSON.—December 29, by Rev. H. P. Lewis, Wm. R. Ferguson and Mrs. M. E. Gibson. All of Pike county, Miss.

CROSBY—WARREN.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Brookhaven, Miss., December 2, 1880, by Rev. H. P. Johnson, Mr. George Crosby to Miss Josie B. Warren.

TILLMAN—BRYAN.—At the residence of the bride's father, December 21, 1880, by Rev. O. A. Oats, Mr. James D. Tillman and Miss Carrie Bryan. All of Carroll county, Miss.

PRICE—TILLMAN.—At the residence of the bride's mother, December 21, 1880, by Rev. O. A. Oats, Mr. B. C. Price and Miss M. E. Tillman. All of Carroll county, Miss.

Obituaries.

MISS LIZZIE RAHN was born in September, 1854, and died November 21, 1880. She was for many years a member of the church. After short illness she departed for that better country where sorrow and sickness never are known.

To the community, to her friends, to her mother, to the church, her death was a sad affliction. To her life was quiet, yet in its sphere it dispensed blessed influences like the gentle stream down through quiet places, blessing the woods, the plants and the animals on its bank.

Some of her characteristics shone brightly commanded the admiration of all who knew her. As those as well as abroad she was conspicuous for her good. Her room, her dress, and her actions bespoke the careful, orderly mind. To this added a charming unassuming obsequiousness, yet nothing of indifference or haughtiness. It was the unpretentious modesty. Her devotion to the church was marked by a spirit of activity and others. Before the Methodist Church has lost, in her estimation more nearly scriptural shall others hence indeed look back to her love, its instruction her beauty sympathy, as members were formed. We delight she looked forward to the spiritual growth, of which we might be told at Washington. She spoke the time of his determination to be present, as we thought that Christ might be home, a disciple, the while, that we might, that those the great host gone before Apostles and Martyrs Bible, would with holy, joyful and prepared with

Some of the incidents of six fabulous years, who gave those kindly attentions, warm and encouragements, to precepts and instructions, necessary in bringing up children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." We can speak cheerfully of her and her husband's success in this respect for we found the children of that family respectful, polite and obedient. We are sure that the memory of a mother's loving care will be a blessed inheritance, more precious than silver or gold.

Her death was sudden. Taken sick one day, died before the next morning. We trust she has the angels say, "Good morning." It is well

JOHN BOYKIN was born in Burke county, Ga., April 12, 1798, and moved with his parents, when very young, to Alabama, and from thence to Simpson county, Miss., and finally to Smith county, where he has lived for forty years and more.

When about twenty-six years old he married Miss Cordenia Bowling, with whom he lived happily and raised fifteen children to be grown, eleven of whom are living and all members of the church. The wife preceded the husband to the "better land" a little more than a year ago.

Bro. Boykin has been a member of the Methodist Church for more than fifty years, and not only was he consistent, but for the greater part of that time one of the most prominent official members of the circuit where he lived.

He was a man of decided character; none more true to his conscientious convictions. He was deeply pious, very liberal in supporting his church, and was a thorough Methodist in doctrine and polity.

He died at his home near here December 16, 1880, after suffering for three weeks or more with profuse dropsy of the heart. May his good example stimulate.

C. M'DONALD.

JULIAN POOLE, Son of L. and C. F. Poole, was born December 10, 1879, and died November 22, 1880. Julian was an interesting child and winning in his ways. He was just budding into life with all tenderness and sweetness characteristic to his age. May the Lord sanctify this bereavement to the spiritual good of the entire family, raise the afflicted mother to health and bring the father to repentance.

Died July 24, 1879, near Floyd, La., aged seven years, six months and eight days, ALICE MAY, daughter of W. H. and Fannie A. Phipps; and on October 6, 1880, near Waterproof, La., aged fifteen years and nine months, CLAUDE LORRAINE, son of the same parents. Both fair and interesting the comfort and support of a long invalided mother the pride of a doting father. They have left their weeping parents suffering the will of God on earth, and gone unto Him who said "Suffer little children to come unto me."

O! weeping, sorrowing mother and father; struggling with grief almost too hard to bear, look upward to the bright home of your loved ones. Their graves though widely apart, are set as milestones to direct your weary feet in the way to their sweet rest in a place

H. F. B.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1881.

THE USES OF LIFE.

I long for ever think Fame's proudest height,
Though we sit on hills afar,
Where the flames of triumph are,
Though the deepest mysteries lie opened to our sight
If we would not by that power,
For the world another dower;
If the great harbinger shore not in our gain,
We have lived our life in vain.

Though we revel in sweet dreams
Though with poet's eye we look
Full on nature's inner mood,
And our spirits wander with the birds and streams,
If we let no music in
To this world of grief and sin,
If we fear to spirit bear onward by the strain,
We have lived our life in vain.

Though on fair be ridin and bright,
Though upon our brows we wear
Truth and grace and beauty rare,
And the hours go swiftly ringing to their flight,
If we call no glory down,
No darkened life to crown,
If love and joyance have no ministry for pain,
We have lived our life in vain.

Such we be to heart and hand
Manly with all noes to sing,
Ready courage and in hope,
Strong laborers to the world to stand;
For in these we right in wrong,
What avails it to be strong
If we lend not the weak raise not the bowed again,
We have lived our life in vain.

To those shall be given,
Make other spirits bright,
Those wobbist walk birthright,
With seeking for himself alone, e'er entered heaven
In blessed wedge blest,
To label and our rest
Is find not in the world's work, heart, hand, and brain,
We have lived our life in vain.

Blessings after loss,
Lates mourning for joy and song,
All how few have understood,
One hath proved it fully,
And He died upon the Cross
For the universe.
If we follow not His footsteps through the pathway
Of
We have lived our life in vain.

Eighty years we live,
Then we gather in the gold
Upon the robes of wealth untold,
Or to dust consigned we die,
Soulless universe,
We have lived our life in vain.

Our Pulpit.

The True Pulpit and the True Pew.

Ministerial co-operation with the Spirit in saying men is the work required by Christ is the divine force that says salvation. The stress is on the people, "in vain." Attention is invited to a practical study of the relations of pulpit and pew. The Gospel, which we joyfully carry to the masses, is not like the use of water with two handles, which is carelessly held with indifferent grasp and here and there spilled by the way. We are to partake of it ourselves, and so renew our mental strength. Each would have its receiver, as well as give to others, so also, as I saw this man the other morning, who, in serving others, put down into the dish his long, slender dipper, and in his contentment drew his own thirst. "We shall not receive this grace in vain."

I consider what the true pew is. The pew is spiritual, a note merely ecclesiastical, dignified by age, an investment with official powers; not scholastic or artistic; not devoted to poetry, painting, music and the fine arts. Had the Mediterranean such a notion, we might now have Pauline poems instead of Pauline epistles. Men come not here to hear a dissertation on Miracle or upon art; but, burdened with sin, to be better prepared for Eternity. The true preacher estimates his soul, and those to whom he ministers; to the saving grace of God, and looks upon all else as regard secular adjuncts as fatal to his success. While he seeks to fill others, has his own soul filled with Christ, this region of spirituality was the ground at the day of Pentecost, is not a walnut desk and cushion and pew, before which people are to receive. Ezekiel shows the preacher to be a watchman proclaiming messages then received from God's mouth. Elsewhere are found the appellations, "sowers of seed," "feeders of flocks," and "fishers of men." These are not material pursuits, but spiritual. They indicate that the servant of God is to be the alert—diligent, zealous and toiling—not a genteel loafer, sipping wine and toasting his elegant slippers by the fire. What art thou, O Paul? "I am a worker together with God, rescuing my lost brother, and building up the saints in love. I am known of God, owned by Him and used by Him."

God uses all kinds of men. I saw a carpenter take up a slender, bent tool, and do work with it. Laying it down, he said, "It is all it can do." Yet it did the work. So some old file or bent trimlet among us can say, "I, too, am a worker with Him." Beware, then, how you salute such as seem pre-eminently great among you. Possibly, some of us, who stand conspicuous, may have done better work carting ashes. Thorough consecration is demanded. Then can the minister of God instruct, command and comfort; then is he worthy all honor. Despising him, you despise God; receiving him, you receive God.

II. The true pew. It receives not the grace of God in vain. We have thousands of pulpits and sermons in this land. Where does all the preaching go? How is it that there is so little to show—that the outlay is greater than the income? Where has the truth gone to? You have seen these patent chairs perforated with holes. These holes are artistically arranged in squares or circles, still they are only holes. Just so there are many pews which are only gospel sieves. The Gospel is lost. Did the pew hold all that is given to it, the best results would be seen. Ah, but you are dissatisfied with the pastor, with the church, the society, perhaps with your Bible and your God! Is it not your fault, possibly? Worried and vexed, have you no blame to take to yourself? Isn't your pew perforated? If each Christain separates himself, as does as he pleases, the Church has no unity and cohesiveness, just as the sand grains on the Jersey coast slip through your fingers, each a distinct atom. One sees why the shore line changes. So Zion offers but feeble resistance to the incoming tides of worldliness from want of compactness and unity in sympathy and aim. No man liveth to himself or dieth to himself alone. "Well," you say, "I will give up my pew, take off my name from the roll and go away." Be nothing rashly, my friend; be not reckless and desperate, as men sometimes are in peril. After destruction has come upon them, and they sit amid the cold, white ashes of their former possessions, their condition is, indeed, pitiful. Remorse and grief consume them. They find no place for repentance, though they seek it diligently with tears. What will you give in exchange for your soul? Again, before you retire in disgust from that perforated pew, make trial of the lifelessness of religion. It is not moonshine, sham, or cant. Investigate for yourself. Be not content with a second-hand version, as those who trust in mere translations of foreign tongues. Study the original, even Jesus Christ. Your disquiet will be exchanged for comfort as restful and sweet as the peace and stillness of an odorous early summer's night, when the very blossoms sing in the tranquil air. I held, the other night, the hand of a neighbor as his spirit fled, but failed to fully realize what it would be for my own soul to make the exit. It will be very real to me some day, for it is appointed to all men once to die. If I have received the grace of God in vain, death will be horrible and frightful. I shall look back upon my crumpled pillow through the vista of faded years, and turn, nervously, to see eternity before me. Nothing but that pillow is between the force of a wasted life and the appalling realities of darkness. It slips from under my head! The end is come! This is no ghastly fancy borrowed from the pages of a French novel, but a simple fact. Learn, then, to receive the grace of God now, that you may not then fear to die. Thus sustained, when that pillow slips from you, your head will sink on the heart of your Redeemer.

Before you give up that perforated pew, think how heaven waits on the faithful. You may feel its pull as some friends goes up to its splendors. As we have sung to-night,

"There are the good and true
That I have loved the best."

Think to whom you are indebted for this grace of God in its nobleness, fullness and adaptation to your immortal destinies. "Do not let slip these magnificent blessings here, and the glorious career beyond." We beseech you, as workers with Him, receive ye not the grace of God in vain. To-day, if ye will hear His voice, harden not your hearts, for now is the acceptable time, be reconciled to Him.

An artist solicited the honor of painting the queen's portrait. She kindly consented, for she knew it would be his fortune. She appointed the hour and place. Her majesty was there, but the artist was not quite ready and did not appear. She retired, leaving word that she should not return. The disobliging man had received her royal grace in vain. Beware, lest this grace we preach be lost through similarly culpable neglect. The true pulpit is a fountain of this grace. The true pew receives and retains it, illustrates and imparts the same to all around. The pastor is certain as to whom he extends an invitation to fill his pulpit, and you, too, may not desire your pew filled indiscriminately; but the doors of pulpit and pew are to be ever open for the influence of the Spirit of grace, who will sanctify and edify our souls in love, that we all may be built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.

Extemporizing at the Pulpit.

They make a great mistake who suppose that extemporizing has been "the law with all great preachers;" in fact, we may almost go so far as to say the reverse has been the case. Extemporizing will often be exposed to deadly evils which only a very honest mind can overcome and make the best of. When Father Taylor, the American preacher, often lost himself and became bewildered in the course of his sermon, he extricated himself by the ejaculation, "I have lost the track of the communion-table, my brethren, but something I know, I am bound for the kingdom!" and the frankness of the confession would be sure to save him from suffering in the esteem of his audience. But the more stately and dignified masters in this very obvious, cannot debase themselves in that way.

The most singular instance of this kind in our memory is the case of a very distinguished man, to whom we loved to listen in our boyhood, a preacher with a wonderful command over every faculty that could give brilliancy or beauty to pulpit exercises. He always preached without notes, and always broke his discourses into divisions; but once, to our amazement and that of the congregation, having traveled through, so far as we remember, two departments of the discourse, he caught himself and said: "I have forget the, the third division!" He turned around to the organist: "Organist, strike up a verse." He gave out a line of a hymn, and, while the organ was playing and the people singing, he leaned in deep thought over the pulpit; the singing over, he announced the missing link. "But," said he, "is not that singular?" And he proceeded to show how it was that he lost it, and how he found it proceeded, in a really enchanting way, to talk upon the law of association of ideas and the mystery and marvels of retentiveness and memory as a proof of the immateriality and immortality of the soul, until the time was gone, and we really had no more of the sermon after all.

A similar anecdote has often been told of the late Thomas Binney. Dr. Harris, the author of "Mammon," had begged his services for some anniversary, and Binney declared his utter inability to prepare a sermon in those days he was a strictly extempore speaker. It was urged: "Oh, come and preach such and such a sermon; that is ready to your mind!" And so Mr. Binney promised that he would take the service; but he also, having got through two heads of the discourse, became bewildered. "Thirdly—thirdly—I've forgotten what was thirdly!" he said, and he looked over the pulpit to where Dr. Harris was sitting. "Bro. Harris, what was thirdly?" Harris looked up and said: "So and so." "Exactly," said the discomfitted preacher, who pursued his way with ease and happiness to the close.—Sunday at Home.

A lady, with more money than learning, called at a jewelry shop recently and asked to see their solitaire diamond rings. A tray of single-stone rings was shown to her. She looked them over carefully, and at last selected one. "That is a very pretty stone," she said, "and if you will assure me that it is a solitaire I will take it."

Religious Intelligence.

MISSIONARY.

THE TANGANYIKA MISSION.—It is gratifying to know that the missionary of the London Society at Urambo, Central Africa, still maintains pleasant relations with the powerful King Mirambo. Urambo is a very important station, as it is the capital of a warlike king, who has been greatly feared, not only by surrounding tribes, but by travelers in Africa. Mirambo's sway south of the Victoria Nyanza is almost as extensive as is that of Mtesa north of the lake. It is of first importance, therefore, that Urambo be occupied and held as a mission station, both for the purposes of the London Society's Tanganyika work and for the safety of travelers to and from the Church Societies' Nyanza Mission in Uganda.

Dr. Southon who represents the London Society at Urambo, is a medical missionary and has peculiar advantages for the post. He writes that before Mirambo went off on a recent warlike expedition, with cannon and seven thousand men, he provided him with sixteen cows, bullocks, twenty-one sheep and goats, and forty acres of plantain, a very liberal gift, even for a sovereign. He also ordered a field of rice to be set apart for Dr. Southon's use, and that the villagers should glean it for him when ripe. After the king left he sent back word that Dr. Southon was to be chief of Kwikuru and Urambo; but the missionary felt compelled to decline peremptorily this honor. The chiefs are also very friendly and liberal, and fully agree with Mirambo that, as Dr. Southon was invited to come to Urambo, he should be well taken care of. The people are very grateful for kindnesses. The missionary has many calls upon his professional skill, his fame having gone into all the country round. An interesting episode was recalled from King Ruhaga, of the Waha, who is friendly with Mirambo. Ruhaga said he called in order to "feast his eyes upon a man with a white skin." Dr. Southon was not at all favorably impressed with him, but considers him a very degraded and treacherous specimen of a degraded tribe. He came to ask Mirambo's help in a war against King Kianza, a much stronger and better ruler; but Mirambo refused, and said the two had better fight it out and he would support the victor.

The proposed station on the northern end of the lake is not yet established. Mr. Hore selected Ujiji, at Kigoma Bay, where he procured of the natives almost a coll site. The bargain was closed and the land paid for when the Arabs of Ujiji heard of it, and sent and persuaded the natives to undo the transaction at least until the consent of the Sultan of Zanzibar was obtained. Mr. Hore sent at once to get the necessary permission.

Mr. Hore has made a visit to the south end of the lake. He writes that the community at Ijingo, extending from the Zungwe to the Lofi Rivers is inhabited by a peaceable and industrious people. They cultivate fine gardens, make excellent pottery, build mill-stones, and manufacture cotton cloth. The Arabs have here no power or influence. The soil is rich and the country is heavily wooded, and there is abundance of game, though the tsetse fly prevails. Mr. Hore thinks Ikombar Harbor, Sombe's country, or the Lofi River would be very suitable for a mission station.

Speaking of the work at Ujiji, Mr. Hore says that, though that place is the stronghold of the enemy, the Arabs, a very good impression has been made on the Wajiji, who compare the Arabs with the missionaries to the decided advantage of the latter.

The Rev. W. Griffith and Mr. Hutley continue to occupy Lguha, on the west shore, about midway between the northern and southern ends of the lake. Chief Kasanga is very friendly, and there is no disposition, apparently, on the Arabs to set up obstacles. The people, however, are great believers in witchcraft. They have a system of slavery and they worship fetishes. Under date of March 22, Mr. Griffith wrote that the work of the mission is going on steadily, with no wonderful results and yet no great opposition. The station proves to be a very fine one, both as regards health and easy communication with Ujiji. Mr. Hutley writes of the industrious spirit of the natives, and says that they appear very anxious to work, though they have an evident interest in the workshop. He says:

"When we first came here, many of the natives came offering their services; but now no one comes to work. One reason may be that then they had not commenced planting, and they were interested in the matter by the chief and their natural desire for cloth. Another reason, perhaps, is, we have not wanted the men except to come and live with us entirely; and, naturally enough, they, like all other natives who have never been used to work for a stranger, do not care to do that, having nothing to induce them. When these natives learn to appreciate and desire European articles—such as knives, better cloth, crockery, etc.—for themselves, then they will in all probability be willing to work in order to obtain them. All this I hope will be the work of time. With these desires will come also the desire, in the most intelligent, to know more of the white man who made these things. First his language; then how to read and write; and, if instructors be near at hand, his religion."

Letters from the missionaries as late as July show that they are well and undisturbed. The party of reinforcement has arrived at Mpwapwa, on the way to the lake.—New York Independent.

The English Baptist missionaries of the Congo Mission have visited Sanda, on the route between San Salvador and Stanley's Pool (their objective point), three times. The people of the towns which they have visited, though generally very suspicious, and ready to oppose their coming at first, generally desire to hear fully the Gospel message. In some instances they have asked the missionaries to remain and teach them. The roads are much better than those from the coast and donkeys are much more useful. The missionaries are anxious to push on at once to Stanley Pool, but are convinced that it is wiser to "make haste slowly."

The number of accessions to the missions of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in the Diocese of Madras, India, from July 1st to December 31st, 1879, was 1,797, in thirteen districts. The largest accession in any one district was in that of Nagalapuram, where 587 persons renounced heathenism. Bishop Caldwell himself gives these figures, and announces that he is about to make a tour of inquiry among the new converts, to test them, their purpose, and their piety.

—Miss Whitfield, of Lockport, N. Y.; Miss Kinsman, of Philadelphia, and Miss Lizzie Kipp, of Washington, D. C., sailed from New York for Santiago, Chili, their field of labor, August 10. They go to assist Prof. Humphrey, who is now there, in building up a school. Miss Kinsman is to have charge of the Kindergarten department.

—The Rev. Dr. Wenger, Baptist missionary, died at Cuttack, India, August 20th. He went out as a missionary in 1839, and during his long period of service, made versions of the Bible and parts of the Bible in the Sanscrit and Bengali languages. His Bengali version is the standard with all the denominations.

A writer in the Nonconformist and Independent estimates that the various branches of the Methodist family provide for the spiritual wants of 3,138,000 persons or for nearly one in eight of the whole population of England and Wales.

A colporteur in Japan recently sold a thousand copies of the Scriptures in two weeks, and the Mayor of Yokohama has ordered ten copies of the New Testament to be placed in one of the schools.

The Church Missionary Society has nine European and four native clergymen laboring in different stations in the limits of Palestine.

Scotch Presbyterians require their missionaries in China to return home once in every seven years.

Since the dis-establishment of the Irish Church, it has raised £1,000,000 for the cause of religion and charity.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Moody's sermons have been translated into Arabic and are very popular. The teachers in all the institutions of the Presbyterian mission at Zahleh, Syria, have been supplied with copies, and read from them on Sunday evenings to interested audiences. The Greek Christians at Jeditha told their priest he ought to imitate the Protestants and display more energy in teaching the people and their children. He had no trouble in opening a school, but the matter of preaching puzzled him. At length, he went to the Protestant teacher and asked him to lend him "that little book," and went diligently to studying it, so as to learn how to preach.—Methodist.

THE BISHOP'S DECISION NOT NECESSARY.—The Philadelphia Methodist Conference meets on the 10th of March in Philadelphia. The Methodist says: "Nearly all the city churches, about to change pastors, have succeeded in placing the appointment beyond contingencies by entering into arrangements with the ministers thought to be most suitable." Why go through the form of appointment by the Bishop, if this prevails?

—When a clergyman withdraws from the Protestant Episcopal Church and enters another communion, if he returns he must spend three years as a lay communicant before he can resume his ministry. An effort is to be made to have this canon amended, as it is believed it works injustice to many and injury to the Church.

THE BOOK CONCERNS. The New York Methodist Book Concern has a net capital of $1,080,505. The net profits for the year were $71,155. The sales of publications amounted to $520,631, against $502,726 the previous year. The Western Book Concern at Cincinnati has a net capital of $471,178, the profits for the year being $27,895. The sales fell off $56,873 from the previous year.

—In England the Church is said to be the only profession that can supply a living to more young men than are anxious to enter it. And Prof. Calderwood said that in Scotland, with no system for the aid of young men seeking the ministry, more press into it than there are places for them to fill.

—The statistics in the Presbyterian Church for the present year show an increase over last in churches of fifty-four; in Sabbath-schools, 1,756, and in money raised for home expenses, $81,837. The total of benevolent contributions was $1,128,891, and of home expenditures, $2,940,225.

—The Rev. J. G. Smith, of Philadelphia, now resides at the Siamese Baptist Church at Bangkok, where he labors without pecuniary recompense, offers to provide a missionary if the Baptist churches of this country will furnish the outfit and traveling expenses to Siam.

—Ex-Gov. Brown, of Georgia, has presented to the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, at Louisville, Ky., $50,000 for the endowment of a professorship. The full amount has already been paid over.

—In the village of Shia Chia Tang, where in 1877, a heathen temple was turned into a Christian worship, there is now a church of forty-nine members, all of whom have been baptized within a year.

—Rev. Dr. Hugh Miller Thompson says: "I know, from the best evidence, that the cultured Unitarianism of New England is largely drifting into the Episcopal Church."

—In 1571 the Christian Reformed Church of the Netherlands was formed as a protest against the rationalizing tendencies of the Reformed Church of Holland. It now has 340 ministers and 350 congregations.

CHICAGO.—St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal church, Chicago, Bishop Fallows, rector, raised, on Sabbath, January 25th, $24,800 towards its debt of $25,000, so that the church is virtually out of debt.

—There are, it is said, 120,000 German Protestants in Brazil, the majority of whom are Lutherans. They are very poorly supplied with pastors and with churches.

—The Disciples hope to raise out West, where they are strong, $50,000 to build a fine church in Washington city, so that President Garfield may have a church worthy of his position.

—The foreign church of Maliawar, Hawaiian Island, Rev. T. H. Ronse, pastor, reports, at the close of the first year, 1879, fifty members and no debt.

—The total number of Protestant congregations in Spain is 60, with an attendance of 20,000 hearers, and 50 schools with 7,000 children.

—A Methodist church was dedicated at Stuttgart, Germany, Sept. 7th. On the evening of the same day four German preachers were ordained.

—Thomas Hughes has asked Bishop Jaggar to dedicate the church which is shortly to be erected in his Tennessee colony.

—Mr. Spurgeon continues very ill at Mentone, and will probably be unable to preach for some time to come.

—The London Missionary Society reports 1,000 churches, and 97,726 church members in Madagascar.

—European missionary societies pensions worn out missionaries; American societies do not.

—The prosecution of Mr. Mackonochie, the English ritualist, has cost a round $60,000.

—There are eighty-two Mormon Churches in England and Ireland.

—The Baptist have in Liberia 22 churches and 1600 communicants.

Our Young People.

IF I WERE A FLY.

If I were a fairy sleight and small,
Say about an inch or half,
And I spun web on forming the letter O,
What do you think I would do? I know
In the bell of the lily I'd rock and swing,
Twitter and sing;
And, taking the gold dust under me,
I'd splash the lips of the buzzing bee,
That he might have meal to make his bread,
With former spread
For his blood and babies all in rows,
Each in a cauldron up to his nose.

I'd come the cents of the bumble bee
By the fallen plinth,
And make them glossy with morning dew
By coming me tinted with purple and blue,
And out of the sunset sky I'd get
For the violet
Yellow and red, and pink and white,
And purples deep, and a tender green;
And all night long, as they lay in sleep,
I would paint and sleep.
Their violet cheeks in a hundred dyes,
That well they might each girl startle and
I'd open I would come where the tired mistress
At a fancy sing,
With my eyes fixed home I'd push it down
And they'd think, "All at once we go wonderfully strong!"
In the nest of the robbin, under the eaves
Of the apple leaves,
I'd drop a worm in the gaping throats
That answer my chirp of the mother's notes,
When to day Miss Turchell digests in vain
For a drop of caine.

I would fill at the brook my sipping cups
And lay it all dripping in her lap.
Oh, what would I do as a fairy small
I cannot tell all;
But I would do much with a right good will
To all things good and to nothing ill.
And I'd laugh and skip, like a bird on the
Twitter and sing
And make boys and girls, and birds and flowers
All say, "What a lovely world to carry
With, what I can not quite so small
I can do all
In my own sweet home by the same good will No fairy, but something better still.

—The Nursery.

The Biggest Story.

Who has not seen a knot of boys gathered together after school hours or upon Saturday afternoon, putting their heads together for the manufacture of the "biggest story?" Each one takes his turn, and the tide of laugh rises higher and higher according as the "flowing" grows stronger and stronger.

The smartest boy carries off the prize, and who is the smartest boy in the story-telling circle? It is pretty certain not to be the best student or the best workman. The patient, hard student is the one who is called the "dig." The boy of quick wit and nimble fancy is envied and praised as the high flyer.

Let us see whether we can describe him. He is a boy of retentive memory. He can learn his lesson while the girls are getting ready for school. He is a boy who is ambitious to appear well. He has no objection to have other scholars prompt him on the sly, and to work out his sums and problems for him, and even to write parts of his compositions. If he can make others believe that he understands a thing, he goes away pleased with himself because his self-esteem is flattered. He rushes into the region of fancy as naturally as an inflated balloon, filled with gases, darts upward in the air. That is where he likes to sail. Ah, those day dreams and sky-scraping flights, how pleasant they are!

One boy, sneering at a slow pace of heels, says, "You take your turtle's gait, if you want as for me, I despise the plodders. I'm going through the air. I'll be there before you can get four o'clock at your mother's apron strings." But this experiment does not always succeed. The boy who trusts to an honest pair of legs steps every time on a sure foundation, arrives in due course, stronger and better for his journey, and brings in all his treasures; for are not the treasures found in and near the soil of an honest every-day life.

But how fires it with the lordly flyer? He comes down, he does not know where. He comes down lighter than when he went up, and the reports himself with a whole crown and unbroken bones, he may thank his good fortune. Let him read the story of Icarus and his flying machine. It will be good reading in this present century and forties, and let him remember that most of the chaps who take to the balloon and despise the legacy of legs are pretty sure to come down from some of their trips head or broken bones; and then their days of flying are not over, but even the common despised walking will be forever restored to them.

In fact, let the young folks who read these lines remember that it is a bad thing to form the habit of telling the "biggest story." It is a bad habit to indulge in doing things in a dreamy, fanciful way. It is a bad thing to get into the habit of making your fancy do duty for your eyes and ears. It is a bad thing to so mix up truth and fables that you are by-and-by puzzled to separate the one from the other.

On the other hand, it is a good thing for us, especially when we are young, to train ourselves to handle hard truths and facts.

It is a good thing to lay the layers by the best lines, while we are passing through our building period. It is a good thing to make sure that we are getting every lesson perfectly before we advance to the next. This is a good rule, whether we are yet in school or have a situation in any business. Master each step completely before you go to the next, and be sure that success lies in that direction, and let the telling of the "biggest stories" be done by others. They will be the failures, while you will succeed.—Christian Weekly.

How Love Removed a Mountain.

"Mamma," said Arthur, "how can faith remove mountains?"

"I will tell you how love once removed a mountain," said his mother, "and then you will perhaps understand what is now puzzling you.

"More than a hundred and twenty years ago, there was born in an old castle on the shores of the Pentland Firth, in the far north of Scotland, a boy, who, when he grew up, became a very useful man. His mother was one of a noble family, and he inherited a title himself. He was Sir John Sinclair; but better far than titles and wealth was the training the mother gave to her son. She taught him—for his father died when he was young—how to manage wisely his estates; and as he grew up he showed that he did not intend to live a selfish, luxurious life, but to do his best for his neighbors and his country. At that time good roads were very much needed, even in the more busy parts of England; and in the north of Scotland, where the inhabitants were few, and for the most part poor, the roads were often very bad.

"One day a neighbor asked Sir John when he would make a road over Benchuit, a large mountain which interfered much with freedom of traveling in Caithness. He was not prepared to begin a road over Ben Cheit just then, but the time came soon after. He went to London on a visit, and there saw Miss Lady whom he wished to marry, and when he asked her to go to live in Caithness, she shook her head. She liked Sir John; but to those days of slow traveling and bad passage, the distance between Thurso and London seemed immense, and Miss Maitland could not make up her mind to go so far from home. However, she did not directly refuse him, and he went back to Caithness resolved to go for her sometime. But Ben Cheit, as road no longer, stood in the way of a direct road to the south. He surveyed it carefully, made up his mind what to do, and then sent out over the country for all the men that could be got to help him. One summer's morning, at early dawn, nine hundred and two men assembled under his command, and by night fall the cart-track was made into a carriage road. Before he could go south again, a gentleman who had just been to Caithness told him that Miss Lady was married to another man.

"But what more was needed," answered the minister, "could do to make mountains out of the way altogether, in this world, my dear; but if we love and trust him, he will give us strength and patience to make a way over them; and that is better. Early Days.

Two Pictures from Life.

"Once upon a time I was in the dining room of a great hotel when I saw a little girl enter with her father and mother, and presently they were showing into the room and sat down at the same table where I was. The child might have been ten or twelve, and was very handsomely dressed. Nature had made her very pretty, but no beauty of feature could overcome the impression of fretfulness and peevishness depicted on her baby face.

"There was on the bill of fare every luxury that any one could wish, but such a piece of work as the little girl made about her dinner! She would have this, she couldn't bear that, and she whined and sputtered with the other, and then began to make trouble.

"I did not seem as if she were a spoiled child either to her parents. I read in their every look and tone, for none could be more patient and forbearing than they were. They were married soon afterwards.

"That was not Sir John's only effort. He lived to be an old man, to do a good deal for Scotland, and to be much respected. And now, Arthur, can you see how love can remove mountains?

"He didn't remove it, mamma," said Arthur. "But what more was needed," answered his mother, "could do to make mountains out of the way altogether, in this world, my dear; but if we love and trust him, he will give us strength and patience to make a way over them; and that is better. Early Days.

Two Pictures from Life.

"Once upon a time I was in the dining room of a great hotel when I saw a little girl enter with her father and mother, and presently they were showing into the room and sat down at the same table where I was. The child might have been ten or twelve, and was very handsomely dressed. Nature had made her very pretty, but no beauty of feature could overcome the impression of fretfulness and peevishness depicted on her baby face.

There was on the bill of fare every luxury that any one could wish, but such a piece of work as the little girl made about her dinner! She would have this, she couldn't bear that, and she whined and sputtered with the other, and then began to make trouble.

It did not seem as if she were a spoiled child either to her parents. I read in their every look and tone, for none could be more patient and forbearing than they were. They went on managing the affair as well as they could until dessert came.

I would have liked to know her, for the grown folks had interested me. But the little girl found that more were to be had she would be content with nothing else. Neither pa nor ma, nor auntie, nor any one would she be pleased with, when her father laid her pocket-book on the table, and, with a good deal of petulance, exclaiming and voice, left the room.

"I wish I was dead. Everybody is always having to wait for me!"

That same afternoon I went in Fairmount Park, and met the same family. The little girl was in the lead, and as she passed along this time she was the child of the hour, and owned it. Boys of all ages and sizes, some large, some small, were following her, and she seemed to enjoy it. Every boy had been engaged to wait on her.

Was such a precocious little girl to be pitied or blamed? Certainly not. She was all right, and her parents were all right. Some day she will be a great comfort to them, and they seemed to enjoy the present

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1881.

Annual Meeting.

The Publishing Committee of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE will hold its annual meeting at the office of the ADVOCATE, 112 Camp street, on Wednesday, January 12, 1881, at ten o'clock A. M. A full attendance is desired.

A New Volume.

In entering upon another year of journalism, according to our custom, we submit a few statements and reflections pertinent to the occasion.

1. The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is the property of the patronizing Conferences. The Publishing Committee elected by these Conferences is an incorporated body, holding the property in trust, and administering its affairs for the Conferences. This committee makes the contract with the publisher, elects the editor, and, at its annual meeting, reviews and examines the conduct and management. The house in which the paper is published was purchased by the Louisiana Conference for the purpose, in part, for the use of the ADVOCATE. It thus has a permanent domicil, secured by charter, free of rent. The press, type, furniture, mail books, and the good will of the paper, are the property of the Conferences. The ownership is wholly vested in the Conferences. No individual has any personal interest or investment in it. It is connectional and church—not individual—property. Other Conferences, by adopting the paper as its organ, and by electing committees to represent them, can become joint owners with those Conferences to which it now belongs.

2. The paper is out of debt, well furnished with the usual appointments of a printing and publishing office, and is in a condition to maintain its present standard, and to improve upon it, provided its circulation can be reasonably extended. The advertising space has been greatly reduced in order to make room for reading matter. The aim of the committee has been to improve the paper, and, after paying expenses, to do all that is possible to make it attractive and satisfactory to its subscribers. Our subscription list could easily be doubled this year if the members of the patronizing Conferences would do their utmost in its behalf. Here is a property and a paper built up and in a condition to do the work of the church. Shall we not utilize it, and strengthen its power for good, and make it more and more useful?

3. Time is a factor in the establishment of a newspaper. A newspaper, like a college, and like a commercial business, is a growth. It takes time for it to become rooted in the tastes and affections of the people, and to become rich in many hallowed and pleasing associations. With every new volume the influence for good increases, and, if adequately supported, each year of its life adds to its value as a means of quickening the spiritual life and fostering the institutions of religion. We have many old friends, who are bound to us by long association and by a strong affection. They may help us to gain new readers, and to multiply the good which is being done. Thirty years have passed since the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE was established. It is an established institution and enterprise of the church, and only needs the hearty support of its owners and patrons to make it abundantly prosperous and successful.

4. A religious paper is necessarily limited in its circulation by the very conditions of its existence. The religious public is the smallest part of the public. Religious people are a small fraction of the people. And a denominational paper is restricted in its circulation to the church which it represents. And, still further, where the same denomination has several papers, any one of them must depend upon a limited territory for its support. It is manifest that only a thorough canvass of the church within the bounds of our patronizing Conferences can secure a supporting patronage. There are very few persons who are willing, or who feel themselves able, to take more than one church paper. The thing that is expedient and right is to see that our patronizing Conferences work for their own paper, and that the pastors aim persistently to place a copy in every Methodist family. The world will work for its own. Light literature, secular papers, fashion journals, and publications teeming with moral poison and death, are easily spread. A wholesome religious paper can only be maintained by the hearty and undivided efforts of religious people. Not one-half of our Methodist families, taking the whole church into account, read a Methodist paper. There is room for improvement, and a loud call for more earnest effort.

5. In regard to our business methods, we remind our subscribers that the cash system requires an impartial course. It is not practicable to make exceptions. The integrity of no one is questioned, but we have found that the credit system leads to heavy losses and to accounts difficult of adjustment. We are sure that none have just cause of offence because our terms are cash in advance. We can not safely do business in any other way. Do not fail to renew in time. Provide for it in advance, or get your pastor to have the renewal made. The habit once formed, it will be comparatively easy to keep in advance and allow no stoppage of the paper.

6. We need the assistance of those whom it is our desire to serve. The prayers of our readers, the co-operation of all the preachers. Send us news items from the work, the condition of church and country in every neighborhood, the state of education and of our Methodist schools, and write. We need the help of all the Methodists in the bounds of the Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, and also from the regions beyond. We solicit such aid as our friends can render, both to furnish the sinews of war, and also to carry on the battle for the truth and against sin, error and popular wickedness.

Seek God as Men Seek Silver.

This is the teaching of the wisest man, on whose lips ever danied the wisdom of God. In relation to the business of personal religion, men profess to be hindered by various adverse influences. Some profess to have well-founded doubts as to the truth and obligation of revealed religion. Others profess to be hindered by the too exalted standard of Christianity, that it is unattainable and practically impossible in a world conditioned as ours. And some others shrink from the cross of a public acknowledgment of Christ. All of these objections have some force, but not enough to meet and resist a fair investigation. We have no time or space just here to consider these excuses for a non-religious life; we proceed to another phase of difficulty. When urged to begin the work of a religious life men often reply that they have thought of it, but that it is a very grave and important matter; that they do not know how much feeling a man ought to have, or how much effort they should put forth, and, not being able to determine these points, they hesitate, and delay to act at all. Solomon, as the mouthpiece of God, settles this question, and clears away all the obscurity that may seem to hang about it. "Seek wisdom, or true religion, as men seek silver." It is true salvation is infinitely more important than any, and all other questions, but God, in infinite condescension and measureless love, makes it no more difficult to seek and serve Him as our everlasting all than it is to seek and find "silver" as the representative of wealth. You need to feel no more in earnest about seeking salvation than you do about seeking wealth; nor put forth greater effort in serving God than the accumulation and care of wealth demands.

Let us look at the matter as we find it exemplified in the practical and daily life of men. How do they feel about it? About to this extent that to accumulate wealth is one of the first and most important aims of life, so much so that no other aim or theory of life is allowed to interfere with the conclusion and programme. So let a man feel about salvation, that there can be no purpose of money-making, no desire for pleasure, nor scheme of ambition more important than salvation; that it would be better to fail in all these directions than in salvation. How do men act who strongly desire to accumulate wealth? Generally they begin early to acquire such knowledge, to form such habits and practice such methods as will result in accumulation. The probabilities are against a large financial success if the effort to accumulate is delayed till late in life, the time, the opportunities, and the energy requisite, are no longer ours. Reason and revelation conspire to teach that we should remember our Creator in the days of our youth, and to seek first the kingdom of God; the promise is that they who seek God early shall find Him.

Men who feel that money-making is important, and intend to devote their lives to accumulation, do so in accordance with established and well-recognized methods of success. They seek as successful men have sought; they avail themselves of the best examples, and the brightest lessons of experience. They do not rashly despise old business maxims, nor the well-trodden paths along which the thousands have trod to the goal of success. They know they must be diligent, must acquire character and credit, must make more than they spend, and must take no hazardous risks. So the way to seek God—the method of serving Him is a matter of specific revelation—and these specific principles have been illustrated countless times in the experience of earnest seekers, and in the lives of all the faithful. The man truly concerned about his soul will not go after new and doubtful methods; he will cling to, "thus saith the Lord," and to the experience of those who have tasted of the good word of God, and have felt the power of the world to come.

Men who have determined to make wealth the great object of their pursuit do so persistently; they do not propose to make a few spasmodic efforts, and then abandon the enterprise if success has not crowned them. Not at all; these plans reach forward through long years. Indeed, it is to be the great life business to accumulate. So a man in earnest about salvation does not begin the work, or enter upon the new life as an experiment, to test its desirableness or its possibility, but he rather says: "This one thing I do; I must be saved." He enlists for all the war, endures hardness as a good soldier, and intends to endure to the end, that he may be saved.

Men determined to seek silver are willing to do so in the face of hardships, and in the daily and long practice of self-denials. They give up leisure, luxuries, pleasures, tours and company all for wealth. No man dreams of making a fortune without self-denial. So a man equally concerned, and equally resolved in the direction of salvation, is willing to deny himself, and take up his cross and follow his redeeming Lord. He is willing to count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, his Lord.

It is observable that men devoted to making money do so with ever-increasing zest and concentration. Life's aim has also become life's supreme pleasure. The stream has cut the channel deep, and it will flow no other way. So with growing years there should be a corresponding growth of spirituality and heavenly-mindedness; a ripening for immortality. The grand motto should be: "Only Jesus will I know, and Jesus crucified." We should run, with ever-increasing delight and patience, the race set before us.

But, with the strongest purpose, best plans and best methods, men fail to accumulate wealth. But no man need fail who seeks the wisdom from above. W.

Hope and Purity.

The unfairness of scoffers and infidels is nowhere more plainly shown than in their adoption of some extravagant deformity in religious thought or conduct as a type of Christianity. How rarely do the enemies use the name of a confessedly good man as a type of professors! The erratic, the feeble-minded, the fickle, and the hypocritical are always selected as specimens by which all are to be judged. Especially of late have the teachers of the Materialistic school taken up the hope of immortality and judged it by the professors who have fallen short in practical use of that hope. If then, (they sophistically reason) such hopes produce nothing in this life, the belief upon which they are based must be a superstition.

Now I shall not endeavor to show this reasoning to be very shallow—indeed, it is too apparent to need exposure; but there is one point which will stick in the minds of many, viz: The failure of Christian belief in lifting men above the ordinary plane of honesty and morality. The demand is just and in every case, morally the professor of religion ought to be a superior man. "Every one that hath this hope purifieth himself, even as he is pure." So that we must respect this part of the scoffer's argument enough to ascertain how much professors do fall below the standard. But though we are prepared to admit that too many fall far below, we are not ready to admit the logic that would lay the blame to the religion, and not to the professor.

But let us state the proposition affirmatively: Christian hope is a purifier. The adversary says, "No, here is a very corrupt Christian." That is, he is a professor, but, if you please, our rule is a test by which we try professors, and not something to be tested by professors. But let us to the reasons why Christian hope is a purifier. 1. Christian hope cannot begin until "the old man is crucified." Sinful hopes and practices must be forsaken, and even the propensities leading to them must be exorcised or brought into complete subjection. "Ye can not serve two masters, God and Mammon." So that where corruption exists we have a right to say that the true Christian hope is wanting—the professors either being deceived or hypocrites.

2. In the next place Christianity is not comparative with earthly standards. Water is used as a symbol of purity, but only as a symbol. Neither are Christians standards for one another. The measure of purity and growth is outside of the believer, while the agencies by which he is purified and grows are within. But while this measure is without it has its witness within. The mysterious interaction of spirit with spirit has never been explained, and but most feebly illustrated by earthly terms used figuratively. Even the higher grades of intellection are faintly presented in symbolic language. They are as the "hinder parts" of the passing Deity who forbids man to look upon His face.

3. The Christian's hopes can never be embodied or engrossed. This is but a corollary to the foregoing; since if they could be expressed in any terms of language as now used, there could be found a measure, and then a scale of comparatively great and small hopes could be framed. But not so. The humblest Christian hope is immeasurably above anything expressible in earthly language. No hyperbola, no methods of amplification, or symbolization can give anything more than a hint of its illimitable vastness or ineffable glory.

4. All the examples by which he is influenced are virtuous and pure. If impurities attach to some features of those characters, he knows that they are not there for imitation, but that the tout ensemble of character is worthy of imitation in spite of the blots. No Christian ever prayed that he might imitate David's crimes. David himself never referred to them but with the deepest shame and contrition. He ever exemplified, in his struggles in life, the truth of the words quoted in the outset.

5. Lastly, heaven is everywhere portrayed as the abode of saints. No unclean thing is to enter. The vilest sinner imagines that somewhere and somehow he will get rid of his vileness before entering there. How many as they near death and begin to realize the existance of the world to come would fain purify themselves! The prayers and repentance then are made in haste, that the soul may go pure into the presence of God. But when one realizes that this heaven begins below—that death is but a translation, an emigration from earth to heaven, that here each day the pilgrim meets Jesus and comes into closer relations with Him in proportion to the purity attained, that each day the sight of heaven shows ineffable splendors that before were undistinguished from the general glare of glories—then he realizes that the condition upon which he is to attain this heaven is purity, and therefore he purifieth himself. The Christian who is not seeking purity in the direction of his professed hopes is deceiving himself. There is no exception to the rule. Without holiness none shall see God. The hope and the quality are inseparable.

T. A. S. A.

Cremation.

A clergyman recently refused to officiate at the funeral of a gentleman, whose corpse was not to be interred, but cremated. The church papers commended the course of the unwilling official.

It occurs to me that the arguments usually adduced to discourage cremation are puerile. Being burned up instead of being committed to the earth, they say, is unchristian. But who can, who will establish the verity of such assumption? True, the bodies of the patriarchs, prophets, the mortal remains of John the Baptist, of Stephen, and even those of the Lord, were interred. Reverence for the ancient usage, as also the manifest convenience of interment to make the occasion impressive to the survivors and mourners, might dictate the continuance of the same.

Opposers to cremation furthermore aver that it should be discountenanced from juridical considerations. There had been cases of murder, by poisoning, which had been discovered, and the guilty parties found out months after the interment of the victims. Being disinterred, the poison was discovered by scientists.

That some of the advocates of cremation presume, by this process, to render the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead ludicrous is itself ludicrous. Whether reduced to dust by the ordinary process of putrefaction and decomposition, or to ashes by the fire, is of little consequence. It requires no greater effort of the "mighty working" of Christ to raise the dead in the one case than in the other. Let the adherers of the stamina theory tremble. I do not believe that the Bible teaches the development of a new body out of stamina. That would be a growth, not a resurrection. We shall rise from the dead. If cremation should endanger the revivification of the body, then, indeed, persons burned to death are to be pitied.

Friends of cremation urge their innovation from reasons of sanitation and economy. The dead of our graveyards endangered the health of the multitudes in our cities, and, besides, fashionable burials, as they are now in vogue, were expensive affairs.

I have no fears that cremation will ever supercede the ancient custom of interment. People prefer the sod to the fire. As for myself, may the time not be near when the mystery of Christ shall be revealed?—I Corinthians xv, 51-52. "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump." Even so, come, Lord Jesus. A.

C. L. S. C.

These are the initials of Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle. Dr. J. H. Vincent, the well-known Sunday-school editor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is the accomplished president. His enterprise projected the scheme and consummated the organization. The design of the circle is to encourage systematic, methodical reading. A course of reading for nine months is prescribed, embracing the several departments of literature. One hour a day devoted to these volumes will complete the course in the period specified. There is no expense imposed, except the purchase of books (and they are given to Chautauqua students at reduced price,) and an annual fee of fifty cents for postage and correspondence. In towns and communities, where a sufficient number become members, and agree to prosecute the course of study, it is suggested to have a local organization of the circle, with stated meetings for review and consultation. Blanks are forwarded to each student, to report the results of every three months' labor. At the close of the entire course of four years, if reports have been satisfactory and approved by the proper officers, a certificate of graduation and life membership in the circle is presented.

With this brief outline of its purpose and plan a few words may not be unprofitable as to the advantages of such an organization.

1. It secures method in our reading. This is a chief desideratum. The bane of modern culture is not a lack of reading, but an aimless, desultory literary habit. Of making many books and the multiplication of papers and periodicals, there is no end. These are so numerous, varied and attractive that we are constantly tempted to become omnivorous. This habit is a calamity; it makes us at once intellectual gourmands and dyspeptic, feeble thinkers. With the habit of reading must be cultivated the capacity for healthy assimilation. Not only so, but this desultory practice will often betray us into reading much that is positively hurtful. If our books and periodicals could always be carefully selected, the time spent in literary pursuits would add ten-fold to our real culture and acquirements. Then, again, many have not the opportunity for much reading. Business and domestic cares are too absorbing. But if the one hour a day thus employed could always be wisely employed, a vast storehouse of most useful knowledge could be gathered and garnered in a few years.

2. This is of especial advantage to the young. A more important subject cannot command the attention of parents, ministers and Christians than what our children read. In shaping their destiny it has no less significance than the company they keep. An impure paper or "sailor-bound" dime novel may neutralize the home teaching and training of years. Many parents have not the taste and culture to make judicious selections for their children. This circle is to them a boon and benediction. Each volume has been carefully selected, and some have been specially prepared by eminent Christian scholars. The mastery of this four years' course will give them creditable acquaintance, if not culture, in well-nigh every department of learning.

3. The social feature of the organization has a positive value. If local circles are formed in our communities and churches, they will oftener bring together our young people. This will develop sociability and excite worthy emulations. They will have aspirations above the dance and theater. The "racket" and the "german," the "round" and the "square" dance will all be despised for the nobler ambitions of the immortal mind. A higher social life in our churches must be cultivated. Its long and grievous neglect has surrendered many to the world, who ought to have been the peerless and fearless chivalry of Christ. The circle will contribute to this desired end.

These and other considerations that might be enumerated lead me to heartily commend the C. L. S. C. It will be of special benefit to many of our young ministers who have not been favored with collegiate training. Any one wishing further information on this subject can get it by addressing Dr. J. H. Vincent, Plainfield, N. J. C. B. G.

Self-Sacrifice.

I believe in moral suasion for the drunkard; I believe in appealing to the conscience of the moderate drinker, and asking him to be a hero. What is heroism but self-sacrifice? All heroes are workers for others. * * * Ask the world's great men in what their greatness consists. One will tell you: "I make marble breathe;" another: "I make canvas speak;" another: "I sing a song that ages will repeat;" another: "I conquer a world." Are these men heroes? Perhaps. Are they great men? Perhaps; but listen! Across the hills of Galilee is heard the voice of Him who spake as never man spake. Reverently we ask: "Prophet of Nazareth, what is Thy greatness?" Hear the reply: "I come to seek and to save that which was lost." "By what means?" "By giving Myself a sacrifice for them." Competitors for heroism, fix your eye there, and take your rank according to the most magnificent standard of heroism that ever the world knew. Aye, and there are heroes in common life. In one of our sleeping cars at night there was an old bachelor, who was annoyed by the continued crying of a child, and the ineffectual attempts of the father to quiet it. Pulling aside the curtain, and putting out his head, he said:

"Where is the mother of the child? Why doesn't she stop this nuisance?"

The father said, very quietly: "The mother is in the baggage-car in her coffin; I am traveling home with the baby. This is the second night I have been with the child, and the little child is wearying for its mother. I am sorry if its plaintive cries disturb any one in this car."

"Bless my soul!" said the old bachelor; "wait a minute." The old man got up and dressed himself, and compelled the father to lie down and sleep while he took the babe himself.

That old bachelor, stilling the cry of the babe all night, was a hero, and the man who, for the sake of others, gives up a lawful gratification in his own house or in the social circle, is as great a hero as though he stood upon the battlefield. It requires some self-denial to be a teetotaler. It costs some men more moral courage to invite honored guests to the table and keep the wine away than it would be to march right up to the cannon's mouth on the field of battle.

The other day I had an attack of neuralgia in the face; it was as if fingers of fire were feeling for every nerve, and it was so agonizing at times that I just grasped the side of my face with clenched hands and cried out. A gentleman said to me: "Would you take a tablespoonful of brandy if you knew it would relieve you of that pain?" I was not long in saying: "No." You may call that extra fanaticism, but I would not take a spoonful of brandy to save my life. You may say that is suicide. I have another Judge besides you, and I shall stand in His presence. I am ready to give an account on that question. If I were to take a glass of brandy to ease me of pain it would injure my influence for good; and a man who willingly does that which will injure his influence for good among his fellow-men, I hold, commits a sin. I am willing to work with all who labor in any way for the promotion of this cause of temperance, but I advocate law for the tempter, and for the tempted love and sympathy. I have been a prohibitionist all my life, but I am none the less a moral suasionist. I rejoice that we are falling into our rightful position. At one time many of our temperance advocates were unlearned and uneducated men. Now we have men of superior education to fight our medical battles for us. We have Bishops and clergymen to do the theological part for us. The great object is to destroy the fort, and I do not care how it is done, whether by a musket shot or by a hundred-pounder. Let us strike hands and work together—not work for an order, for a society, for a body of men to put in office in rotation, but for the great cause, willing to sacrifice ourselves if necessary. I believe it is God's will to abolish everything that tends to immorality, vice, evil, and the violation of law. Then let us remember the responsibility standing between God's will and the work He wills to have done. Oh! it is a grand thing to co-operate with Him and with the angels in preventing sin.—John B. Gough.

The Christian Intelligencer.

—The sinfulness of human nature, the exceeding sinfulness of sin, the fearful consequences of transgression, the helplessness of a depraved heart, the absolute dependence of sinners upon the grace of God for salvation, are among the topics which have been neglected, or presented timidly and superficially in too many churches during the past twenty years. They are also among the themes which congregations have objected to as being gloomy and disagreeable in themselves, and repulsive to some hearers whose presence it was desirable to secure. They are also doctrines of the Word of God which men love put away from them, because unpleasant and humiliating, and because they disturbed their false peace and reproved their spiritual indolence and indifference. Men have cast out of their minds the idea that they had a great work to do in overcoming a depraved spirit by the help of God and in attaining a new and holy nature; that they must maintain a tireless conflict with evil in themselves and by many prayers and much pains build up a love of holiness that would fit them for the occupations and enjoyments of a holy heaven. Men have been determined that the great moral facts of the Scriptures, the things that make for righteousness, should not be preached to them, and they have turned their backs upon faithful preachers who have once or twice [illegible] depravity of human nature, uncovered to them the wickedness of their own hearts, and called them to repentance and holiness. Naturally the purity of the Divine nature and the righteousness of the Divine government have also been put out of sight and hearing. Consistency required it. God has been declared as being, and men have endeavored to cajole their consciences into believing that He is indulgent, forgiving anything and everything only for the sake of forgiving and but of a weak amiability. The result has been a lowering of the moral tone of too many churches, and a winking at moral delinquencies, bearing fruit legitimately in a most humiliating procession of defaulters marching out of the churches into the jails for the past six years.

Christian Neighbor.

—The only way for men to regain the confidence of one another is for them to prove or show that they are worthy of confidence, and the only way to prove this is to be and do it. But to furnish the necessary proof, a man must have the confidence of God; to get this he must be reconciled to God, cost what it may in the ways and works "meet for repentance." In his repentance he must as far as it is possible repair, restore—make good all the encroachments he has ever made on the rights of other men or on those of his Maker and Redeemer. This be a man's worthiness of confidence be made to rest on reconciliation with God, and on the favor or confidence which God will surely have toward such a "friend;" and then shall such a man command and retain the confidence of his fellows.

Virginia Conference.

Dr. John E. Edwards, writing to the Wesleyan Christian Advocate of the late session of the Virginia Conference, says:

We are still mourning and rejoicing over the death of Bishop Doggett—mourning over the great loss to the Church—rejoicing that he died so grandly. It was a sublime and triumphant close of his beautifully consistent and useful Christian life. The annals of Christian biography furnish no example that transcends the grandeur and glory that was displayed in the closing scenes connected with the last sickness and death of Bishop Doggett. So calm, so composed, so trustful, so peaceful, so resigned—so everything that can make the death-bed of a Christian sublime was blended in the conversation, spirit, and holy triumph of the dear, departed Bishop, as death gathered around him, and eternity dawned upon the eye of his faith.

He committed to me the custody of his manuscripts, with instructions to exercise my own discretion in the use to be made of them. Thus far I have only had time to run over them in a cursory way; but, I have seen enough to warrant me in saying that an exceedingly valuable volume of sermons, addresses, and lectures can be gathered from the material in my hands. It would not be a difficult matter to arrange a large volume of sketches and outlines of sermons, such as he ordinarily used in his preparation for the pulpit while engaged in the regular pastoral oversight of the various Churches he served for the space of thirty years; such a volume might be of value and service to young ministers, especially as models of sermonizing; for, as a sermonizer, to use a word well understood by preachers, he had no superior, and but few, if any, equals. He was, indeed, a master workman.

At our late Conference, Rev. R. N. Sledd, D. D., by request, delivered a Memorial Sermon on the occasion of the death of Bishop Doggett. It was a discourse of rare merit and excellence. His delineation of Bishop Doggett as a preacher was as nice in its discriminations, and as finished in its artistic execution, as it was accurate in its facts, and faithfully true to his character and workmanship. This sermon will appear in the Theological and Homiletic Monthly, for December, edited and published by Dr. Sledd. It will be read with pleasure and profit by all who knew Bishop Doggett.

Brother P. A. Peterson succeeds Dr. Sledd in the Centenary charge in this city. He opened his ministry on Sunday. Rev. Dr. Sledd is presiding elder on the Richmond district as the successor of Rev. L. M. Lee, D. D., who is stationed at Ashland. He has charge of the Randolph Macon College congregation, made up of students and citizens. He is at his work, in an improved state of health."

By the way, at our late Conference a collection was raised for R. M. College completing the subscription to pay all the debts of the college. This binds a large conditional subscription. If collections can be made, gathering in all the subscriptions secured in the last three years, the college debts will be paid, and all the stocks, in hypothecation, will be released, so as to give us the nucleus of our endowment. Dr. Bennett, who has been the prime agent in raising this subscription, proposes to proceed at once in the effort to raise an endowment fund.

"Waking Up."

It has pleased Dr. Hartzell, of this city, editor of an official organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to remark, in a recent issue of his paper, that "the Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are waking up on the temperance question." Can it be true that the reverend gentleman believed what he said, namely: "that our beloved church is only now waking up to the importance of the temperance cause?" If so, what a veritable Rip Van Winkle he must be! I presume that there never was a Southern Methodist Conference session held without some strong resolutions being adopted condemnatory of the liquor traffic and the use of ardent spirits. What will Rev. John Pipes, of the Louisiana Conference, for lo! these many years chairman of the Committee on Temperance, say to the insinuation of our woeful dormancy? However, with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, intemperance is not the summum malum; it holds that hypocrisy and bearing false witness against our neighbor are fully as censurable as touching "the unclean thing."

A.

Death of Rev. J. J. Smylie.

The following special dispatch to the New Orleans Times, dated Shubuta, Miss., January 1, contains all that we know of the sad event:

Rev. J. J. Smylie, of the Mississippi Methodist Conference, stationed at Shubuta, but visiting Quitman, was found in the courthouse this morning in a fit of apoplexy. He was irrational and has since died. Deceased was about fifty years old and long a citizen of Western Mississippi, and once a member of the legislature and a man of culture and refinement.

Bro. Smylie was a prominent and useful member of the Mississippi Conference, and his sudden death will be deeply regretted. We are informed that he was present at the recent session of his Conference, at Vicksburg, in cheerful spirits and apparently in excellent health. He was active and useful in Conference business, a successful pastor, and a preacher of much merit. May God sustain and comfort his bereaved family. We presume a suitable memoir will be furnished us for publication by some one acquainted with the life and history of our deceased and lamented brother.

An Opening for a Generous Deed.

There are altogether a good many in our bounds who prize the Advocate, and who are so straightened that they can not even afford to pay for it. Can not some of our generous-hearted readers help us to send the paper to some of these needy and deserving persons? Any sums remitted to us for this purpose will be appropriated in a way to do much good. The following letter is one of the many that we receive from time to time:

Mr. Editor: I regret very much to have received the publisher's card to-day. If my circumstances were not such, I assure you I would have renewed in time. The dear old Advocate was sent me the year now closing by dear Bro. Peavy, the arrangements being made by him. I must say that I am afflicted with a species of epilepsy, have not heard a sermon preached in over three years, and to say that I love the dear Advocate will not express my feelings. How I have enjoyed the sermons published by you! I have many tied away for next year, when I will not have the pleasure of reading the new ones. The sentiments of the Rev. J. W. Jordan, in to-day's paper, are mine if I was able. Part of your New Year's greeting to-day seemed written for me; while reading it I could not suppress my tears. I ask an interest in your prayers, and pray you success in your great undertaking, and the first two dollars I make after I am restored to health, the Advocate is mine.

We are greatly indebted to Rev. Dr. Ahrens for editorial service rendered during the past three or four weeks. As editor of the Family Friend, he is furnishing our German Methodists with a most valuable religious journal. It is owing to his indefatigable labors that they have a German translation of our discipline, a German Hymn-Book, a German Sunday-school paper, and other Methodist literature in the German tongue. Although his writing and preaching are habitually in German, he excels as a preacher and writer in English. We shall be glad to have the columns of the Advocate enriched at any time by contributions from his facile pen. Now that he has been fairly introduced to our readers, we trust that a long and intimate acquaintance may be maintained.

In our publication of the appointments of the Texas Conference, the name of Rev. A. E. Goodwyn was omitted. Bro. Goodwyn was returned to Bryan station, where he is doing a fine work, and where he enjoys the love of a devoted flock. We miss him very much in the Louisiana Conference. Our loss, however, is a gain to the pastoral work in Texas. There are few more faithful or more capable preachers and pastors than Bro. Goodwyn.

—Mr. J. M. Watkins, son of Rev. Dr. W. H. Watkins, of the Mississippi Conference, returned on Saturday last, from a visit to his father. He reports that Dr. Watkins is very feeble, and that there is no improvement in his condition. We would bespeak for him the prayers of the Church.

—Rev. W. T. Keith, formerly of Munford, Ala., wishes us to announce that his present post-office is Mountain Home, Ark.

Send the Reports.—If the secretaries of the Mississippi and Alabama Conferences will forward us such Conference reports as they desire published we shall take pleasure in giving them an early insertion in the Advocate. There are some things that it may be of general use to publish before the Conference minutes can be printed. Will the secretaries be kind enough to forward items?

Rev. C. B. DuBose, writing from Pensacola, Fla., January 1, says: "I know no better way of saluting the Advocate for 1881 than in sending you subscribers. The above names are the 'first fruits.' I repeat my challenge to any circuit or station in the Alabama Conference to surpass Pensacola station in subscribers to our church Advocates."

Ministers Ordained.—Mr. Editor: Please announce that on yesterday, January 2, I ordained, in this city, Milton S. Hotchkiss, of the Texas Conference, Mager G. Callaway, of the Mississippi Conference, Edward F. Edgar, of the Mississippi Conference, to the office of deacon. Also Benton S. Rayner, of the Mississippi Conference, to the office of elder. Yours truly,

A. C. KEENER.

New Orleans, Jan. 3, 1881.

Southwestern Bible Society.—The thirty-first anniversary of the Southwestern Bible Society will be held in the First Presbyterian Church, on Lafayette Square, on Sabbath, the sixteenth instant, at half-past seven o'clock P. M. The address will be delivered by Rev. B. M. Palmer, D. D. All friends of the Bible cause, of all denominations, and the public generally, are invited to be present.

New Orleans, January, 1881.

Louisiana Annual Conference.

Apportionments for 1881.

For Conference Claims, $4,500.—Apportioned as follows: New Orleans district, $1,480; Delhi district, $760; Opelousas district, $510; Homer district, $700; Shreveport district, $720; Alexandria district, $330.

For Bishops' Fund, $800.—Apportioned as follows: New Orleans district, $300; Delhi district, $100; Opelousas district, $100; Homer district, $125; Shreveport district, $125; Alexandria district, $50.

For Foreign Missions, $4,000.—Apportioned as follows: New Orleans district, $1,350; Delhi district, $900; Homer district, $650; Shreveport district, $650; Alexandria district, $300; Opelousas district, $450.

For Domestic Missions, $1,175.—Apportioned as follows: New Orleans district, $350; Delhi district, $250; Homer district, $200; Shreveport district, $200; Alexandria district, $127; Opelousas district, $150.

Disraeli on the Evil One.—This is how Disraeli, in his lately-published work, Endymion—a book believed to have been written many years ago—has shown the tendency of the spurious liberalism in theology which began to set up its head in the first half of this century:

"If the personality of Satan be not a vital principal in your religion, I do not know what is. There is only one dogma higher. You think it is safe, and I dare say it is fashionable, to fall into this lax and really thoughtless discrimination between what is and what is not to be believed. It is not good taste to believe in the devil. Give me a single argument against his personality which is not applicable to the personality of the Deity. Will you give that up; and if so, where are you? Now mark me; you and I are young men—you are a very young man. This is the year of grace 1881. If these loose thoughts which you have heedlessly taken up prevail in this country for a generation or so—five and twenty or thirty years—we may meet together again, and I shall have to convince you that there is a God."

The argument is not new, but it is forcibly put, and no one with any experience of life can fail to forecast the course of one who constructs a Bible and a God for himself and his followers. He begins by doubting or disbelieving a few disagreeable truths, and ends by doubting or disbelieving revelation as a whole.

Personal and Other.

Dr. Somerville has begun evangelistic services at Rome, against the opposition of the municipality—which tried to prevent his getting a hall—but with success and an audience of 1,000 people. At the close of his first address he was invited by acclamation to continue the services.

—Mr Vanderbilt has issued an order that trashy, immoral literature shall no longer be offered for sale on the cars and in the depots of the New York Central Railway. He deserves the thanks of all good people for his courage and good sense as well, and we hope the superintendents of all our railroads may follow his example.

—Rev. Dr. Gelkie, whose "Life of Christ" has made his name so widely known, is about to relinquish his ministerial charge in Paris, and will return to London. He was originally an Independent minister at Islington, but went over a few years ago to the Anglican Church.

—The Pacific Methodist states that Bishop Kavanaugh will remain on the Pacific Coast till April, and suggests to the Preachers to avail themselves of his services at the District Conferences.

—The new pastor of Park Place, Rev. John Harmon, late of New Orleans, arrived in the city on Saturday morning last, and was cordially welcomed by his old friends and his new charge. He entered upon his work on Sunday last under very happy auspices.

Bishop Keener, says the Shreveport Times, is an admirable presiding officer. Though long past middle age he retains some of the humor of earlier years, which occasionally crops out while discharging his official duties.

—Mark Firth, a prominent Methodist in Great Britain and a princely benefactor of various charities, is dead. It is said that he has given $1,000,000 to the various Evangelical Churches.

—M. De Cholseue, the new French Under-Secretatary for Foreign Affairs, took part as a soldier in the Crimean and Italian campaigns and was decorated by the Emperor for gallantry.

—The parishioners of Rev. Dr. Henry J. Morton, of Philadelphia, have presented him with a check for $10,065 upon the completion of his 50th year as pastor of their Church.

—Dr. Henry A. Buttz has been elected President of Drew Theological Seminary. He is a graduate of Princeton, and a member of the Newark Conference.

—Mr. Garfield shows his good sense by attending his own church when in Washington, though it is an old story here.

—Edward Lloyd Ford, former publisher of the Christian Union, is dead.

—Rev. G. De La Matyr, at the end of his Congressional term is going to live in Florida.

—Henry Stanley, who has been staying in Spain for a few weeks, returned to England recently.

—The prosecution of Mr. Mackonochie, the English ritualist, has cost a round $50,000.

—Queen Victoria has lately insured her life for a large amount in a French company.

Periodicals.

The Theological and Homiletic Monthly for December, among other excellent things, contains Dr. Sledd's masterful sermon of Bishop Doggett. This alone is worth more than a year's subscription to this improving and valuable periodical.

—Wide-Awake for January, is marvellously illustrated, and filled with interesting articles. Among the articles are: The Children of the Koppenberg; A Tale of Midnight; On Christ day Night; The Silken Shoe; Christmas with Grandpa Long-Legs; The Flower Puzzle.

—St. Nicholas for January, is up to its usual standard and beyond. The engravings are numerous and beautiful. It has: The Wrong Promise; Going Home for the Holidays; The Children's Fun Brigade; Stories of Art and Artists; Hamlet; How the Aristocrats Sailed Away; In Nature's Wonderland; Every Boy His Own Ice-Boat; New Year's Day; Bleeton Rogers, and other articles.

—Scribner's Monthly, January 1, 1881, has: Peter the Great as Ruler and Reformer, illustrated; The London Theaters, illustrated; The Expensive Treat of Colonel Moses Grice; In Albania with the Ghegs; Jean Francois Millet, illustrated; My Neighbor's Confession; Recollections of American Society; Glimpses of the Parisian Art; A Christmas Hymn, illustrated; Welsh Fairs; The Bible Society, and The New Version, The Battle of Waterloo Encored, and other articles.

—The North American Review, January, 1881, has: 1. The Philosophy of Persecution. Prof. John Fiske. 2. The Controlling Forces in American Politics. Senator G. F. Edmunds. 3. Atheism in Colleges. President John Bascomb. 4. The Rufus of Outrel Americai, part V. Desire Charnay. 5. Partisan Government. Wm. D. LeSueur. 6. Popular Art Education. Prof. John T. Weir. 7. The Limitations of Sex. Nina Morais. 8. The Mission of the Democratic Party. Senator W. A. Wallace. 9. Recent Philological Works. Prof. F. A. March.

—The Theological and Homiletic Monthly, January, 1881, has: Sin and Holiness, by Rev. J. M. Bolmd, A. M. 2. Churches and Architecture. 3. Evangelical View of Romans, 5-12, concluded. Rev. M. C. Thomas. 4. The Eternal Son. Luke, ix., 28. Bishop Keener. 5. The Sole Object of Ministerial Effort. Rev. Jos. A. Proctor. 6. The Manifestation of the Sons of God. 7. The Preacher's Cabinet. 8. Editorial Miscellany. The Eternal Son, by Bishop Keener, is a poem of 120 lines, describing and expounding the Transfiguration. We believe this is the Bishop's third poem, and we judge it to be the best. We shall give it to our readers soon.

—The Popular Science Monthly, January, 1881, has: The Development of Political Institutions, by Herbert Spencer. 2. Political Integration; Physical Education; The Sabbath, by Professor John Tyndall. 3. Domestic Motors; The Advantages of Ignorance; Esthetic Evolution in Man; A Japanese Typhoon; Artificial Hypnotism; Indigestion as a Cause of Nervous Depression; Oil-Plants of French Guiana; Distinction Between Real and Apparent Death, and other articles.

—The Art Amateur, January, 1881, contains several separate pages of exquisite designs, and the several departments are, as usual, filled with the choicest notes and illustrations. Montague Marks, Editor and Publisher, New York. Price, $4 00 a year.

—Good Company, No. 15, November, 1880, has: Rose and the Doctor; Up the Missouri; Autumn Leaves; Dora Distria; Doctor Benedict's Wife; Poems, The Phebe-Bird, The Morning Crescent, Autumn Leaves, Gerrit Smith; The Life-Saving Service; Miss Hattie; Eskimo Traditions and Religious Beliefs; A Chinese Family of Rank in America; The Lebanon Goshen Organ; Trained versus Untrained Nurses; Discussion and Suggestion; The Curvupt Stage; After the Battle; Swindling and the Swindled; Vestpionts that Pinch.

—Appleton's Journal, for January, contains the following articles: The Veterans of Yesterday; The Early History of Charles James Fox; Social Life Among the Ancient Greeks; The Influence of Art in Daily Life, 5; Dress; Political Somnambulism; Holland, and Its People; Philosophy At Concord; The Earl of Beaconsfield's New Novel; Vers de Societie; The Court and Literary Salons of Old Paris; Editor's Table; Notes for Readers.

A New Volume.—Littell's Living Age enters upon its one hundred and forty-eighth volume in January.

Foreign periodical literature, embraces more thoroughly every year the work of the foremost writers in all departments of literature, science, politics and art; and The Living Age, which gives in convenient form the best of this literature, can therefore hardly fail to become of more and more value every year to its readers.

The first weekly number of the year and new volume—a good one with which to begin a subscription—has the following table of contents;—Village Life in New England, by a Non-resident American, Contemporary Review; The Marshal Duke of Saldanha, Quarterly Review; Lyme Regis; A Splinter of Petrified History, Cornhill; My Holiday in Jamaica, Chambers' Journal; The Photophone, Spectator; Girl and Grandfather, Temple Bar; Sir Alexander Cockburn, Spectator; Jewish Success and Failure, Spectator; and a variety of select poetry. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,300 pages a year), the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

Publisher's Department.

We desire to exclude fraudulent advertisements of every description from the Advocate, and trust our friends, in ordering goods from the leading merchants of New Orleans and elsewhere, as represented in our columns, will mention having seen the advertisement in the Advocate. We will also take pleasure in attending personally to any commissions for our friends in the country with which we may be favored, while endeavoring our advertisers as being worthy of their patronage.

He was a stranger; but he entered with an air of confidence, and handed us what he called "a joke." We examined it, and told him that it contained neither sense nor point, and that it was a pure piece of idiocy. "Well," he replied, reaching for his manuscript, "I have read your paragraphs for some time, and I thought you preferred them that way."

Charles Fox and his friend Mr. Hare, both much incommoded by duns, were together in a house, when, seeing some shabby men about the door, they were afraid they were bailiffs in search of one of them. Not knowing which was in danger, Fox opened the window, and, calling to them, said: "Pray gentlemen, are you Fox hunting or Hare hunting?"

Charles the Simple once remarked to his fool, Jean, that he thought they had better change places. As Jean did not look well pleased at the proposal, Charles asked him if he were not content at the idea of being king. "Oh, content enough," was the reply, "but I should be exceedingly ashamed at having such a fool."

"Any thing new or fresh this morning?" a reporter asked a railroad editor. "Yes," replied the long-haired man of the apartment. "What is it?" queried the reporter, whipping out his note-book. Said the railroad man, edging his way to the door, "That paint you are leaning against."

Toddlekins is a very small man, indeed, but he never minded it at all until his three boys grew up to be tall, strapping young fellows, and his wife began to cut down their old clothes, and cut them over to fit him. And then he said he did get mad.

Among the replies to an advertisement of a committee for "a faultless organist, musical teacher," etc., was the following: "Gentlemen, I noticed your advertisement for an organist and music teacher, either lady or gentleman. Having been both for several years, I refer my services."

"I always sounds pretty to say: "The sun has sunk beneath the western horizon." But a moment's reflection shows that is about the only horizon he could sink behind, under the circumstances. When he feels like sinking, he always selects the western horizon in this section.

Sold a college professor to a notorious liar—girl, who was once, for a great wonder, prompt in his place at morning prayers, and at the appointed time. "I have marked you, sir, as punctual this morning. What is your excuse?" "Sick, sir, and couldn't sleep," was the reply.

Every now and then a car falls off the New York elevated railroad into the street and kills a man. Some day one will fall and crush Judge and then Mr. Dergh will take steps to have the whole elevated business pulled up by the roots.

"So," said a lady recently to a merchant, "your pretty daughter has married a rich husband." "Well," slowly replied the father, "I believe she has married a rich man, but I understand he is a very poor husband."

A professor was one day walking near Aberdeen, when he met a well-known natural. "Pray," said the professor, "how long can a man live without brains?" "I think ken," said Jeremy scratching his head, "how auld are ye yersel."

An aristocratic papa, on being requested by a rich and vulgar fellow for permission to marry "one of his girls," gave this rather crushing reply: "Certainly; which one would you prefer, the waiter or the cook?"

"Old woman, do you sell beets?" asked a lounger of an old vegetable woman in the French market. Looking at him from head to foot, she replied: "Yes, I had some like you was, I sell them two for a cent a piece."

Jeems: "I see, Robin, that the paper says we're tae hae anither storm next Monday." Robin: "Man, aes terrible! Since the Yankees hae gotten the weather under their keepin' we're a storm every other day."

A certain doctor of divinity said every blade of grass was a sermon. The next day he was amusing himself by clipping his lawn, when a parishioner said: "That's right, doctor, cut your sermons short."

A hardy seaman, who had escaped one of the recent shipwrecks upon our coast, was asked by a good lady how he felt when the waves broke over him. He replied, "Wet, ma'am, very wet."

What was it? I went out into the woods and got it. After I got it I looked for it. The more I looked for it the less I liked it. I brought it home in my hand, because I couldn't find it. A sliver.

A fugitive from justice got himself up as a book agent, and easily worked his way out of the country without anybody's trying to question him, or, in fact, go near him.

Leigh Hunt was asked by a lady at dessert if he would not venture on an orange. "No, madam. I should be very happy to do so, but I am afraid I would tumble off."

W. C. Shepard & Co.—American China dinner, breakfast and tea set, 160 pieces, for $15. Equal in looks and usefulness to French China.

A home missionary was asked the cause of his poverty. "Principally," said he, with a twinkle in his eye, "because I have preached so much without notes."

One man inquired for a fellow trader: "Is he honest—a man to be trusted?" "I think you'd find him so," was the reply, "if you trust him once you'll trust him forever."

By a nearly unanimous vote, the women of this country have decided that the two best bands are a husband and a hand-box.

A Methodist minister being recently asked if he had moved to his new appointment, said, "Yes, but it is a disappointment."

He said her hair was dyed, and when she indignantly exclaimed, "'Tis false!" he said he presumed so.

Business Notices.

Burnett's Malliston allays all irritation caused by the bites of mosquitoes.

Many Lose Their Beauty from the hair falling or failing. Parker's Hair Balsam supplies necessary nourishment, prevents falling and grayness and is an elegant dressing.

CANVASSERS make from $25 to $50 per week selling goods for E. G. RIDEOUT & CO., 10 Barclay St., New York. Send for Catalogue and terms.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

SOUTH WESTERN UNIVERSITY,
KINGSTON, TENN.

In point of grounds, buildings, apparatus and faculty, this is one of the most thoroughly equipped schools in the South. It is located in one of the finest sections of Virginia, 2,000 feet above the sea.

Bishop McTyeire, Dr. Garland, Dr. Summers and Dr. A. W. Wilson give it their cordial endorsement.

Music is a specialty. The director of this department, Prof. V. Kneringer, is a noted teacher and composer, and his pupils are thoroughly cultivated musical artists.

A full course of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Natural Science, and Mental and Moral Philosophy is taught with great care.

The fare is good and every care is taken of the health of the young ladies.

Parents living in the South would do well to send their daughters here to spend the summer.

$200 paid in advance will cover board, tuition, fuel, washing and lights for forty weeks. Music is an additional.

Spring session begins February 4, 1881. A discount of twenty per cent. to Methodist preachers, and Publishing House bonds taken from them at par.

Send for catalogue to

REV. E. E. HOSS, President.

THE METHODIST
BOOK DEPOSITORY
AND
Depot for Sunday School Books.

All the publications of the Southern Methodist Church on hand and supplied at same prices and discounts as at Nashville, thus saving time, trouble and expense. All new books received as soon as issued. Catalogues mailed on application.

In addition to our own publications we have made special arrangements with the leading publishing houses in the country that enables us to supply all the best Theological and Sunday School publications at short notice and at publishers' prices. Also a complete stock of Catechisms, Questions, and Liturgies, and sold at catalogue prices, no extra charge for postage when sent by mail.

A full supply of Gospel Hymns and Sacred Songs as well as the various Sunday School and Church new Books used in the South.

SCHOOL BOOKS
OF ALL KINDS

Supplied, from a single book, mailed post paid on receipt of price, to a complete stock for the largest store or school, at a liberal reduction. Catalogues sent when desired.

Forward your orders for anything in the line of Religious or Educational Books, and write for any thing you want and you will save time and money. No trouble to answer letters. Address,

LATHROP & WILKINS,
BOOK DEPOT,
New Orleans, La., or Houston Tex.

DR. J. C. RICKHAM,
RESIDENT ARCHITECT,
220 Jackson St., Bet. Chestnut and Coliseum
NEW ORLEANS.
Office Hours: Eight A. M. and three to four P. M.

DR. EDWARD HARRISON,
112 Canal Street from 11 to 1 P. M.
NEW ORLEANS.

PALACE OF SONG!
BY GEO. F. ROOT.
ENLARGED.

The already matchless contents of this popular work for Singing Classes, Choirs and Institutes,
A selection of heavy choruses and part songs has been added, swelling the book to 208 pages.

"Palace of Song,"
Is specially rich and full in BRILLIANT, SPECULAR CHORUSES, TOUCHING AND PATHETIC PIECES,
BRIGHT AND HUMOROUS SONGS,
CHOICE CHANTS,
VOCAL CULTURE CONDENSED,
DEVOTIONAL EXERCISES,
GLEES, PART SONGS, ETC.

Its choice many and preparatory departments are absolutely perfect. Examine "PALACE OF SONG," a step beginning the writer's work.

Price, by mail, 75 cts.; $7 50 per dozen, by express.

JOHN CHURCH & CO.,
66 West Fourth St., Cincinnati, O. 5 Union Square, New York.

MUSICAL CHRISTMAS GIFTS!

Most acceptable gifts to players or singers will be the following elegantly bound books.

☞ Any one mailed, post free, for the price here mentioned.

ROBERT FRANZ'S SONG ALBUM.
GEMS OF ENGLISH SONG.
HOME CIRCLE. Three volumes.
WORLD OF SONG.
PIANO AT HOME. Chaste collection.
SHOWER OF PEARLS. Vocal Duets.
CREME DE LA CREME. 2 Vols.
OPERATIC PEARLS.
GEMS OF STRAUSS.
GEMS OF THE DANCE.
CLUSTER OF GEMS.
SUNSHINE OF SONG.

Each of the above in cloth $2 50; Fine Gilt $3 00.

STUDENT'S LIFE IN SONG. $1 50.
CURIOSITIES IN MUSIC. $1 50.
BEETHOVEN. A Romance by Rau. $1 50.
RHYMES AND TUNES. Christmas Offering, $1 50.
SULLIVAN'S VOCAL ALBUM. $1 50.
FAIRY FINGERS. For Piano. $1 50.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston
C. H. DITSON & CO.,
843 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Life and Labors of
BISHOP MARVIN!
By Rev. T. M. Finney, D. D.

With contributions from our Bishops and other ministers of the various Conferences. This work is published with the consent and authority of the late Bishop's family, who receive royalty on each copy sold. It is a large octavo volume, handsomely bound in cloth and gilt, printed on fine tinted paper, 820 pages, illustrated with steel and wood engravings, with a fine steel engraving of the late Bishop in the front part of the book.

This work should be in every family.

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of $3, by

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans, La., and Houston, Tex.

Agents wanted to sell this work all over the South, to whom liberal commission will be allowed.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.
BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us, ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk.

Sold only in tins (¼ lb and ½ lb) labelled

JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

Also makers of Epps' Chocolate Essence for afternoons.

Farm and Garden.

PREVENTING SWARMING.—Swarming is a natural process, and when prepare for it takes place. Royal and drone [illegible] and when the right [illegible] and [illegible] cells are filled with brood. Some specific [illegible] have been attributed with [illegible] honey-comb cells; but in such cases, which are very rare in fact, the bees hatching out drones in worker [illegible] can be [illegible] rapidly increase [illegible] the last case by want [illegible] room. The regulations of hives [illegible] Mr. Quinn, when [illegible] colonies. The [illegible] of bees at [illegible] and [illegible] day hives [illegible] swarm, is of common occurrence in [illegible] of small hives. In apiaries [illegible] hives closely [illegible] very much [illegible] handy over, [illegible] Hence the less [illegible] swarms of small hives are [illegible] [illegible] Bees [illegible] Perhaps [illegible] [illegible] swarming [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Christian Advocate.

Age and the Intellect.

"The richer a nature," says Carlyle, "the harder and slower its development. Two boys were once of a class at the Edinburgh Grammar school: John, ever trim, precise and dux; Walter ever slovenly, confused and dolt. In due time John became Baillie John of Hunter-square, and Walter became Sir Walter Scott, of the Universe. The quickest and completest of all vegetables is the cabbage." This slowly-developed "Sir Walter Scott of the Universe" was thirty-four when he made his first draft of "Waverly," and forty-three which he re-wrote and published it. Nearly everyone of those tales which conferred immortality upon him, was composed after he had reached the age of forty-six. He wrote the "Heart of Mid-Lothian" at forty-seven; the "Bride of Lammermoor," "A Legend of Montrose," and "Ivanhoe" at forty-eight; the "Pirate" and "Peveril of the Peak" at fifty; the "Tales of the Crusaders" at fifty-four, and the "Chronicles of the Canongate" at fifty-seven.

Carlyle was forty-two when he published the "French Revolution," the first work of his to which he formally put his name. The publication of this work was, it is true, delayed, owing to the burning of the MS. of one volume through the carelessness of Mrs. Taylor, to whom it had been loaned by John Stuart Mill; but if that mishap had not occurred, Carlyle would have been over forty before his work could have appeared. His "Cromwell" was published when he was fifty; the first two volumes of his "Frederick the Great" when he was sixty-three, another two when he was sixty-seven, and the last two when he was sixty-nine. Swift was fifty-nine when he published "Gulliver's Travels," and certainly did no work on it before he was fifty-seven. Tennyson had reached fifty when his first idyls, "Enid," "Elaine," "Vivien," and "Guinevere" were published, and was about sixty-two when he completed the series with "Gareth and Lynette." Macaulay was forty-eight when he issued the first and second volumes of his "History of England," and the third, fourth did not appear till he was fifty-five. Good as are the essays of his early manhood, they pale when compared with this work of his mature years.

John Stuart Mill was fifty-three when his essay "On Liberty" was published and fifty-six when he gave us that on "Utilitarianism." Milton was scarcely more than fifty-four when he began to compose his "Paradise Lost." It was fifty-nine when he sold it to Simmons the bookseller. George Eliot issued "Middlemarch" between the years of fifty-six and fifty-nine, and since then "Daniel Deronda." Bacon was fifty-nine before he published his great work, "The Novum Organum." Cowper was over fifty when he wrote "Johnny Gilpin," and the "Task;" and Defoe was eight when he published "Robinson Crusoe." Darwin published his "Origin of Species" when fifty, and his "Descent of Man" when sixty-two. Owen wrote the larger part of his "History of Greece" between the ages of sixty-two and sixty-four, and Hallam applied nearly the same period of his life to the production of his "Introduction to the Literature of Europe." The two works by which Jesus Hoekhaus survived the grave, "The Book of Nights" and "The Song of Songs," were composed when he was sixty-five, and out of which he never rose.

Longfellow gave us "Hiawatha" when in eighty; "Tales of a Wayside Inn" when sixty-six, and since then has been as productive as he has been excellent. Wordsworth, many of his translations, notes, "Divine Humanity," and his epistolic poem, "Morinti Salutat," "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" was published when Holmes was forty-eight, and "Songs in Many Keys" when fifty-five. Washington Irving completed "Tales of the Alhambra" at forty-nine, published "Mahomet" at sixty-seven, and the "Life of George Washington" after that age. Even if we wrote, we believe, the "Conquest of Mexico" between the ages of thirty-one and forty-seven, rank the highest of Peru," between forty-seven and fifty-one Motley completed the "History of the United Netherlands" at forty-three, and after that began the story of "John of Barneveld," which he published when he was sixty.

Gentlemen have produced very readable books long after the noon of life. Replace distant extraordinary amount of mathematical work after sixty, and ten, and Victor Hugo nearly "got under way" before he was fifty. He published "Napoleon the Little" at fifty; "Les Chatiments" at fifty-one; "Les Miserables" at fifty-seven; the "Toilers of the Sea" at sixty-two; "The Man Who Laughs" at sixty-five, and the "Annals of a Terrible Year" at seventy. The great physicist and mathematician, Ampere, did not seem to devote his attention to the phenomena of electromagnetism till he was forty-five, and it was from fifty-one to fifty-three that he published his observations, a work characterized, as has been said, by "profound thought and extraordinary philosophical sagacity." Racine was fifty when he wrote "Athalie," the finest production of his genius, and a masterpiece of dramatic eloquence. Thiers was sixty-five when he completed his "Consulate and Empire," and Chateaubriand, sixty-three, when he published his "Etudes." Cervantes had passed his fifty-eighth year before he published the first part of "Don Quixote," and was sixty-eight when he issued the second part. He and Shakespeare died on the same day.

Dicero composed most of his philosophical treatises between the ages of fifty-eight and sixty-two. Galileo published his "Dialogue on the Two Principal Systems of the World" at sixty-eight; the "Dialogue on Local Motion" at seventy-four, the age at which he discovered the moon's diurnal libration.

Goethe and Kant, two of the greatest minds that ever lived, did, in view of their later works, scarcely anything till they had passed the age of forty-five. Kant was nothing but a professor till fifty-seven, when he published his "Critique of Pure Reason," on which he began work ten years before. When sixty-four he issued his "Critique of Practical Reason," and his "Critique on Judgment" was published two years later. But the most conspicuous literary example of fertility at an advanced age is Goethe. At forty-eight he published "Hermann and Dorothea," and at fifty-six, his immortal "Faust." "If Goethe," says Carlyle, "had died in 1806, the year when "Faust" appeared, he would have achieved a greater renown than any other man of letters; but he was destined to have twenty-six years longer, years of labor and productiveness." In 1809, when fifty-nine, he published "Elective Affinities," and in 1811, at the age of eighty-two "Helena," the second part of "Faust."—Boston Courier.

The Order of the Golden Fleece.

The name of Golden Fleece had a twofold signification. It meant to typify the spirit of chivalrous adventure—of going into new lands to conquer new time—the same spirit which actuated the Argonauts of legend, who went in search of the Golden Fleece. But there was also the religious side. The Saviour has been represented under the form of a lamb. To win His redemption by "knightly" deeds, in the best signification of that noble word, was obviously an object of the new society of chivalry.

High privileges were early conferred on the Knights of the Fleece, whose number was originally limited to thirty-one. When the Counts of Egmont and Horn were illegally executed under the reign of Philip II on account of the stand they made for the liberties of their country, they both appealed against the sentence, alleging, among other reasons, that as Knights of the Fleece, they had the right to be tried by their brother knights.

After the war of the Spanish succession, which left a Bourbon on the throne of Spain, there arose a dispute between the Emperor and the King of Spain as to which of them had the right to the sovereignty of the order. The question is an extremely complicated one. The Emperor Charles VI., as heir male of the Hapshburgs, might fairly claim the Knightly heritage as his right. On the other hand, Philip of Bourbon might urge descent through an heiress, and plead that in Spain and the Low Countries the salic law had never been recognized. The matter was finally arranged through treaty, the Emperor and King of Spain being recognized as joint grand masters of the order, with equal power to name knights. The Austrian and Spanish badges of the order are almost, though not quite, identical in form. Each has the well-known collar of gold and flint-stones, with the typical device, "Autre fird quau flamman meriff," though the nobler legend runs "Pretium non vile laborum."

The Archdukes of Austria and the Infants of Spain are all, as a rule, Knights of the Fleece. In later years the order has been conferred with what must to heralds have appeared undue freedom. For instance, on M. Thiers, who was not even "noble," and indeed had the sole merit of being president of the French republic, and one of the greatest men living. Then it was that political oddity called the Spanish republic, which bestowed the distinction of the little red dollar ribband on M. Thiers. The Duke of Aosta, by the way, while figuring as Amadeus I. of Spain, sent the fleece to a distinguished Castilian nobleman, who returned the decoration without a word. It is a waste of words to characterize the conduct of this grandee as it deserves, why the foreign house of Savoy should be less entitled to respect than the foreign house of France it would be difficult to explain.

The Prince of Wales is a Knight of the golden fleece, the only Englishman who enjoys that distinction. The Spanish order was conferred on him when he was ten years old, the Austrian some time later. Not long ago it was whispered that his Catholic majesty was rather anxious for an exchange of medals between the sons of S. Edmund and St. Andrew. He wanted the garter for himself, and would have conferred the fleece on the Duke of Edinburgh, or on Prince Albert Victor of Wales. Perhaps on both. I esume for himself the most coveted of all decorations, which, when worn over a grand cordon, hangs on the inner side of the body.—Cornhill Magazine.

The Argentine Republic.

Montevideo and Buenos Ayres lie on the estuary of the Plate, a distance of about 120 miles, the latter on the north, on the Rio de la Plata proper, and the former on the southern side. The steamers plying between the two places every night accomplish the voyage in from ten to twelve hours. The River Plate, or Rio de la Plata so called because it was thought to be a highway to rich silver mines, is an estuary formed by the meeting of two great rivers, the Uruguay and the Parana, which, with their many tributaries, bring down to the Atlantic the waters of the Plate region, i. e., of little less than half the continent of South America, a large watercourse, second only to that of the Amazon, which drains the other half of the same continent, and which flows into the same ocean, also influencing the north of the plate. The mouth of the Plate, however, is considerably wider than that of the Amazon itself. There are families between Cape Santa Maria and Cape San Antonio, the two headlands at its opening, and there is about the same distance from this opening to the cluster of isles near the confluence of the two rivers, where the estuary begins, the Plate being thus as long as it is wide.

The whole of the Plate region, with all to the west and south of it, belonged in former times to Spain, the boundaries of whose colonies, with the Portuguese possessions of Brazil, had never been even approximately traced. There was on this the eastern side of the Andes a Spanish Viceroyalty of the Plate, with the seat of government at Buenos Ayres, as there was on the other, or western side, a Viceroyalty of Peru, embracing all Chili down to Cape Horn, with the capital at Lima. On the expulsion of the Spaniards, in the early part of this century, the Plate country split up into various territories, parts of which are now known as Bolivia, Paraguay, and Uruguay; but the great bulk of it constitutes the Argentine Republic, a confederacy of 14 provinces or states, of which Buenos Ayres is still the head. A portion of the land lying between the Uruguay and the sea, and bordering on Brazil in the north, became an independent separate State under the name of Republica Oriental del Uruguay, and Montevideo was made its capital. The Argentine Republic, in its present limits, has an area exceeding half a million square miles, with a population of more than two millions. The Republic of Uruguay is only 73,000 square miles in extent, with between 400,000 and 500,000 inhabitants. These statistics, however, do not exactly agree with official measurements; for the claims of these South American States always encroach upon each other's boundaries, and are circumscribed within no definite lines. If we accept official statements, the area of the Argentine Republic is 4,193,500 kilometres—i. e., nearly eight times as large as France; while Uruguay is only about two-thirds the size of Italy. That there may be room for half mankind on the Plate, however, is hardly an exaggeration, and the question is, not as to the vastness of space the region possesses, but as to the chances its various States may have to fill it, and as to their ability to turn it to the best purposes.

"Mary," said a mother to a little girl, "if I was a little girl like you I should pick up all those chips." "Well, mamma," answered Mary, "aint you glad you are not a little girl?"

MISCELLANEOUS.

WARNER'S SAFE KIDNEY & LIVER CURE

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time, and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical fruit of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial Fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for Females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb. As a blood purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

READ ITS RECORD.

"It saved my life."—E. Lakelin, Sioux, Ala.

"It is the remedy that will cure the many diseases peculiar to women."—Mother's Magazine.

"It has passed severe tests and won endorsements from some of the highest medical talent in the country."—New York World.

"No remedy heretofore discovered can be held for one moment in comparison with it."—Rev. C. A. Haines, D.D., Washington, D. C.

This Remedy which has done such wonders, is put up in the LARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by druggists and all dealers at $1.25 per bottle. For Diabetes, equally as WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. This is POSITIVE Remedy.

H. H. WARNER & CO., Rochester, N. Y.

E. HEATH,

IMPORTER AND DEALER IN

Carpets, Floor Oil Cloths,

UPHOLSTERY GOODS, Wall Paper, Window Shades, Cornices, Lace and Nottingham Curtains, Mirrors, Moldings, Chromos, Engravings, etc.

Frames made to order—satisfactorily.

No. 99 Camp street, New Orleans.

SPENCERIAN

SPENCERIAN COMMERCIAL

STEEL PENS

Of the Very Best European Make, and Standard for Flexibility, Durability, and Evenness of point.

REAL SWAN QUILL ACTION.

In 20 Numbers. A sample Set, including Pen-holder and Pen-rest, sent on receipt of 20 Cents.

Lending " 10 Cents.

IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR & CO.,

138 & 140 Grand St., New York.

NO MORE RHEUMATISM OR GOUT

SALICYLICA

ACUTE OR CHRONIC

SURE CURE.

EUROPEAN MEDICINE CO.,

PARIS AND LONDON.

DANIEL ROMMEL, Sole Proprietor.

BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER

FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

Female suffering from profound weakness will derive great comfort and strength from the use of Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters.

Where children are affected with whooping cough, croup, severe colds or pain in the chest, the one and only remedy that should be used.

The Capcine will relieve pain more promptly than any other plaster. Will not blister where other plasters will, and even better.

Sold by all Druggists. Price 25 cents.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

Seabury & Johnson, Pharmaceutical Chemists, New York.

THE MILD POWER

CURES

Humphreys' Homeopathic Specifics

Proved from simple experience an entire success. Simply, Promptly, Efficient, and Reliable. They are the only medicines adapted to popular use.

LIST PRINCIPAL NOS. CURES.	Price
1. Fevers, Congestion, Inflammations.	.25
2. Worms, Worm-fever, Worm-colic.	.25
3. Crying Colic, or Teething of Infants.	.25
4. Diarrhœa of Children or Adults.	.25
5. Dysentery, Griping, Bilious Colic.	.25
6. Cholera Morbus, Vomiting.	.25
7. Coughs, Cold, Bronchitis.	.25
8. Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache.	.25
9. Headaches, Sick-Headaches, Vertigo.	.25
10. Dyspepsia, Bilious Stomach.	.25
11. Suppressed or Painful Periods.	.25
12. Whites, too profuse Periods.	.25
13. Croup, Cough, Difficult Breathing.	.25
14. Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions.	.25
15. Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains.	.25
16. Fever and Ague, Chill, Fever, Ague.	.50
17. Piles, Blind or Bleeding.	.50
18. Catarrh, acute or chronic, Influenza.	.50
19. Whooping Cough, Violent Coughs.	.50
20. General Debility, Phys'l Weakness.	.50
27. Kidney Disease.	.50
28. Nervous Debility, Spermatorrhœa.	1.00
30. Urinary Weakness, Wetting the Bed.	.50
32. Disease of the Heart, Palpitation.	1.00

For sale by druggists, or sent by the Case or single Vial, free of charge, on receipt of price. Send for Dr. Humphreys' Book on Disease, &c., (144 pages), also Illustrated Catalogue, FREE.

Address, Humphreys' Homeopathic Med. Co., 109 Fulton St., New York.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC

Ginger, Buchu, Mandrake, Stillingia and many other of the best medicines known are combined so skillfully in PARKER'S GINGER TONIC as to make it the greatest Blood-Purifier and the Best Health and Strength Restorer ever used.

It cures Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sleeplessness, and all diseases of the Stomach, Bowels, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Urinary Organs and all Female Complaints.

If you are wasting away with Consumption or any disease, use the TONIC to-day. No matter what your symptoms may be, it will surely help you.

Remember! This TONIC cures drunkenness, is the Best Family Medicine ever made, entirely different from Bitters, Ginger Preparations and other Tonics, and combines the best curative properties of all. Buy a 50c. bottle of your druggist. None genuine without our signature on outside wrapper. Hiscox & Co., Chemists, New York.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM The best and most economical Hair Dressing.

MISCELLANEOUS.

25,000 SOLD!

FARMER'S AND MECHANIC'S —MANUAL—

Edited by GEO. E. WARING, Jr.,

Author of "Elements of Agriculture," "Draining for Profit and for Health," and formerly Agricultural Engineer of Central Park, New York.

500 Octavo Pages—Over 200 Illustrations.

Worth to any Thinking, Working Farmer $25 per Year.

This book is for the most part a work of facts and figures—sound analysis and demonstrations, about which there can be no dispute. The design was to produce a work of substantial and enduring value, and of universal application and use. This work is offered as containing more that has been proven by long use to be of value, more that is most necessary for every farmer and mechanic to know, and more of promising novelty, than any other that has ever been presented to the farmers and mechanics of America. It is complete in every particular in which it is possible for such a book to be complete; and, in addition to this, it is sufficiently suggestive in many other respects to induce its readers to read more, to think more, to experiment more, and to become more intelligent and more successful in the management of their business as well as really happier and wiser men.

Price, in Extra English Cloth, Gilt Back, Only $3 50.

Sent postpaid on receipt of price. Address

LATHROP & WILKINS,

New Orleans, La., or Houston, Tex.

B. T. WALSHE,

SHIRTS,

Winter stock now ready. Prices moderate.

MEN'S FURNISHING GOODS.

Very Complete.

No. 13 ST. CHARLES STREET, New Orleans.

Country orders carefully and promptly filled.

YOUNG MEN'S

Christian Association,

OF NEW ORLEANS.

ROOMS, 87 CAMP STREET.

Open from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M., except Sundays, when they are open from 2 to 5 P. M., where will be found leading daily and weekly papers of the South and United States.

SERVICES.

Tuesday, 7:30 P. M., Prayer.

Thursday, 7:30 P. M., Singing.

NOON-DAY PRAYER-MEETING.

Daily, from 12 to 12:30.

Rooms, Offices and Rents controlled by them.

FURNITURE

JOHN BOIS,

DEALER IN

Parlor, Bed and Dining Room FURNITURE.

291 Camp St., cor. Calliope, New Orleans.

Repairing, Upholstering, Varnishing, etc., promptly done. Orders by mail promptly attended to. Spring Hair, Moss Mattresses made to order. A full line of common Furniture on hand; suitable for the country.

Unequaled Low Rates now Ruling at

JOHN GAUCHE'S

MAMMOTH

QUEENSWARE HOUSE.

We call the attention of our patrons to our new and extensive stock of Royal Semi-Porcelain DINNER SETS, 130 pieces, $25.00.

ENGLISH STONE CHINA DINNER SETS, 130 pieces, $15.00.

REAL FRENCH CHINA DINNER SETS, 130 pieces, $75.00.

ENGLISH PRINTED TOILET SETS, $5.00.

ENGLISH CHINA PRINTED DINNER SETS, $12.50.

ENGLISH CHINA GOLD BAND and PAINTED TOILET SETS, 10 pieces, $5.00.

THE FINEST SELECTION OF

CROCKERY

Glassware and Housefurnishing Goods

OF ANY HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

The assortment for both city and country trade is large, and the prices are guaranteed as low as the lowest than any establishment North or South.

REMEMBER THE PLACE, IT IS

JOHN GAUCHE,

AT THE MORESQUE BUILDINGS,

100, 102, 104 & 106 Camp Street.

Branch House, Nos. 108 and 110 Charles Street.

HOLIDAY MUSIC BOOKS.

DITSON & CO. call attention to their elegant and useful music books suitable for presents, and especially to their

VOLUMES OF BOUND SHEET MUSIC.

Prices of each in cloth, $2 50; Fine Gilt $3.

THE CLUSTER OF GEMS. 42 pieces of high character.

GEMS OF THE DANCE. 70 of the best pieces of new dance music, by the most celebrated composers.

GEMS OF STRAUSS. 80 splendid and brilliant compositions.

PIANOFORTE GEMS. 100 select piano pieces.

HOME CIRCLE. Vol. I. 170 easy pieces for beginners.

HOME CIRCLE. Vol. II. 142 pieces, of which 24 are for 4 hands.

PARLOR MUSIC. 2 Vols. 129 easy and popular pieces.

CREME DE LA CREME. 2 Vols. 85 select pieces of some difficulty, suited to advanced players.

FOUNTAIN OF GEMS. 97 easy and popular pieces.

WELCOME HOME. 70 easy and popular pieces.

PEARLS OF MELODY. 50 pieces of moderate difficulty.

PIANIST'S ALBUM. 102 pieces. Fine collection.

All the books above named are alike in size, style, binding and price

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston,

C. H. DITSON & CO.,

843 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

$777 A YEAR and expenses to agents. Outfit free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NEW DICTIONARY HOLDER.

These holders are so arranged that they press the book firmly together when it is closed—in short a Dictionary Holder is perfected in form, finish and operation, and will be found one of the most desirable articles for schools, literary or professional reference and library use. Every one who has a Dictionary should have one of these patent holders, and have the latest edition ready for reference. Place the dictionary in the holder and keep it there. There is no more sacrilege in cutting out a leaf of the Bible, than of its binding. Children and grown people need a dictionary if required to read the books and the book does not become worn, soiled and spoiled. You have to open the book and it opens itself at your desired place. Replaced by your side when reading, or writing, the book or leaf lies open and will not close itself. Operated

PRICES CURRENT.

REVISED AND CORRECTED WEEKLY

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
New Orleans, Monday, Jan. 3, 1881.

Our readers should bear in mind that our quotations represent prices for round lots, and that in filling small orders higher prices must be paid.

SOUTHERN STAPLES.

	To-day.	Sat.
Cotton, ₱ lb.
Low ordinary	8	7⅞
Ordinary	10⅛	9
Good ordinary	10⅞	10⅜
Low middling	11	10⅞
Middling	11⅝	11⅜
Good middling	12⅜	12⅛
Middling fair	13⅛	13⅛
Sales to-day	4,000 bales
Receipts since our last	68,422 bales
Receipts previously	842,495 bales
Sugar, ₱ lb.:
Fair	6	6⅛
Fully fair	6⅛	6⅜
Prime	6⅝	6⅝
Choice	—	—
Yellow clarified	7⅛	7⅛
White clarified	7⅞	8⅛
Powdered	—	—
Crushed	—	—
Molasses, in bbls., ₱ gallon
Common	32	33
Fair	35	37
Prime	41	42
Choice	46	47
Rice, Louisiana, ₱ lb.:
Common	—	4½
Fair	5	5⅝
Prime	6¼	6
Choice	8¼	—

GROCERIES.

Butter, ₱ lb.:
Western	12	30
New York	18	35
Coffee, ₱ lb.:
Rio, ordinary	11	11½
Rio, fair	13	13⅝
Rio, prime	14	14⅝
Cheese, ₱ lb.:
Western Cream	—	—
English	15	16
Candle, ₱ lb.:
Best Sperm	—	12½
Corn Meal, ₱ bbl.:
Choice K. D	—	3 25
Flour, ₱ bbl.:
Superfine	3 50	3 75
XX	4 00	4 25
XXX	4 37½	4 50
Choice XXX	—	—
Choice family	—	—
Fish:
Mackerel, No. 1, in kits	—	6 00
Half kits	—	4 50
Kits	—	3 00
Mackerel, No. 2, in bbls	—	8 25
Half bbls	—	3 50
Kits	—	2 25
Mackerel, No. 3, in bbls	5 50	6 75
Half bbls	3 00	3 70
Kits	75	—
Codfish, ₱ lb	5½	6
Herring, ₱ box	30	35
Oils, ₱ gallon:
Gal. linseed	55	60
Coal, in bbls	19	22
Linseed, raw	55	60
Linseed, boiled	58	63
Cotton seed	38	42
Lard	75	85
Soap, ₱ box:
Magnolia	—	2 00
Olive	—	2 50
Palm	—	2 00
Castile	—	2 75
Soda, ₱ lb	—	—
Starch, ₱ lb	—	3½
Salt, ₱ sack:
Coarse	1 02½	1 05
Fine	1 40	1 45

GRAIN AND FEED.

Corn, in sacks, ₱ bushel:
Yellow	—	—
White	—	60
Mixed	—	—
Oats, ₱ bushel:
Western	40	50
Red rust-proof	—	60
Bran, ₱ 100 lbs.
Choice	—	1 00
Hay, ₱ ton:
Prime	—	23 00
Choice	—	24 00
Cow Peas, ₱ bushel:
Mixed	—	—
Clay	—	—

PROVISIONS.

Bacon, ₱ lb.:
Breakfast	9½	10½
Shoulders	5½	6
Sides, clear rib	—	8
Sides, clear	—	8½
Hams, sugar-cured	9½	10½
Mess Pork, ₱ bbl	12 75	13 25
Dry Salt Meat, ₱ lb.:
Clear rib sides	6¾	7⅛
Clear sides	7⅛	7½
Shoulders	4¾	—
Lard, ₱ lb.:
Choice, in kegs	—	8⅜
Choice, in tierces	8	8

ESCULENTS.

Potatoes, ₱ bbl.:
Irish	2 40	2 75
Sweet	—	—
Onions, ₱ bbl	4 25	4 50
Apples, ₱ bbl	2 50	3 00
Cabbages, ₱ 100	—	—
Sour Krout, ₱ bbl	13 00	14 00

BALING STUFFS.

Bagging, ₱ yard:
India	—	—
Jute	—	—
Baling Twine, ₱ lb	—	17
Ties, ₱ bundle:
30 ties and buckles	—	1 85

SUNDRIES.

Poultry, ₱ dozen:
Grown chickens	4 50	5 00
Young do	2 50	3 00
Ducks	2 50	3 00
Geese	—	5 00
Turkeys	14 00	16 00
Eggs, ₱ dozen:
Western	32	35
Southern	35	40
Honey:
Strained, ₱ gallon	—	—
Comb, ₱ lb	—	—
Pecans, ₱ lb.:
Louisiana	12	15
Texas	8	10
Oranges:
Louisiana, ₱ bbl	—	4 00
Foreign, ₱ box	—	—
Wool, ₱ lb.:
Louisiana	27	28
Texas	—	—
Feathers, ₱ lb.:
Geese	—	—
Hides, ₱ lb.:
Country, green	—	5½
Dry salted	—	11
Dry flint	—	13
Ox Horns, each	—	6
Tallow, ₱ lb	5¾	6¾
Cotton Seed, ₱ ton:
In sacks	—	16 00
Meal	—	23 00
Oil cake	24 00	25 00
Cooperage, ₱ each:
Sugar hogsheads	—	5 50
Molasses barrels	1 40	1 60
Half barrels	—	1 10
Kegs	—	75
Oak Staves, per 1200:
Kegs	—	—
Barrels	—	—
Extra claret	90 00	100 00
Extra hogshead	125 00	130 00
Extra pipes	155 00	170 00
Tobacco:
Low lugs	—	4½
Medium	—	—
Good to fine	—	—
Low leaf	5½	6½
Medium	6½	7
Good	7½	8
Fine	7½	8
Selections	10	12

AN OLD LADY writes: "I am sixty-five years old and was feeble and nervous all the time, when I bought a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic. I have used a little more than one bottle and feel as well as at thirty, and am sure that hundreds need just such a medicine." See advertisement.

The Friend of Delicate Ladies.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure is the remedy that will cure the many diseases peculiar to women. Headache, neuralgia, disordered nerves, weakness; dumb shocks, and kindred ailments are effectually removed by its use.—The Mother's Magazine.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

LAREDO, Texas, Dec. 28.—A party just arrived from the Sabinas, a Mexican settlement, about nine miles west of here, brings information that a party of about thirty Indians attacked the rancho of Crysal, three days ago. Colonel Calsnero is following them with a force of one hundred men. Considerable excitement prevails in that section of the country.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—The following is a statement of the population of certain Southern States, according to the census of 1880. It is still subject to possible corrections:

Alabama, 1,261,241; Arkansas, 802,564; Florida, 266,566; Georgia, 1,537,878; Louisiana, 940,563; North Carolina, 1,400,000; South Carolina, 990,706; Tennessee, 1,542,463; Virginia, 1,512,203; West Virginia, 618,193.

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—A dispatch from Fort Bufort says: One of Sitting Bull's chiefs, who has been defiant, surrendered unconditionally on Monday, at Poplar Creek, with twenty-six lodges. It is confidently expected that in view of this surrender and of the severe weather, Sitting Bull, with his hundred lodges, will surrender soon.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—The census office has nearly completed the first count of the population of the United States, which shows an aggregate of nearly 51,000,000.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 30.—The court martial in the case of Cadet Whittaker, has been ordered to commence at West Point, on Tuesday, January 18. Brigadier-General Miles is to be president of the court.

NATCHEZ, Miss., Jan. 3.—An informal meeting of the citizens of Natchez and Vidalia, was held here for the purpose of consulting as to the feasibility of constructing a railroad from Natchez and Vidalia to Alexandria, and Texas. The design is to form a link in a transcontinental road from New York to the Pacific. Several communications from capitalists, North and West, relative to such a road, were read. The meeting appointed various committees, to report at another time.

Four or five Natchez capitalists have also under consideration the building of a road from Vidalia to Trinity, La., to tap the rich valleys of the Ouachita, Black and Tensas rivers, and bring them in speedy communication with the Mississippi river. Such a road could be built cheaply, and it is estimated would earn, gross $500,000 per annum. This latter road will certainly be built.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 3.—Snow has been on the ground here for one week, which is unprecedented in the history of this city. There was fine sleighing to-day and yesterday, the first in twenty-five years.

GALVESTON, Jan. 3.—The News has the following special:

MCKINNEY, Texas, Jan. 3, 1881.—It has been sleeting, snowing and freezing here to-day. This is the severest weather ever known here.

ENTERPRISE, Jan. 3.—Rev. J. J. Smylie, pastor of the Methodist Church at Shubuta, while at Quitman last Saturday evening, in the chancery clerk's office, getting the appointment as teacher of the public school for his town, dropped dead from apoplexy.

Col. John F. Harris, one of the largest planters and purest, and best citizens of Jasper county, died on the day before Christmas at his residence near Garlandville.

The weather has been colder here for the past week than at any time since the cold spell of 1834. Snow was six inches deep. The thermometer fell to ten degrees.

LOCKHART, Texas, Jan. 3.—A fire, Sunday morning, consumed nearly all the south side of the square. Loss, $50,000. No insurance.

FOREIGN.

DUBLIN, Dec. 28.—The State trials were formally opened to-day in the Court of Queen's Bench, before Lord Chief Justice May and Justices Fitzgerald and Barry. The courtroom was densely crowded with spectators. Chief Justice May read an address stating that, after the misconception which had arisen as to what he had said on a former occasion, he should not take part in the present trials.

DUBLIN, Dec. 29.—The attorney general of the crown, in his address, referred to the humble occupations of most of the traversers, and said doubtless they found agitation the most profitable. He warmly denounced the agitation as an intolerable conspiracy. The intention of the government, he said, in instituting these proceedings was to protect the rich and poor alike from a frightful tyranny that respected neither life nor property.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—A dispatch from Cape Town to the Daily Telegraph says: The Boers formed two camps near Potchefstroom on the 20th, two hundred mounted Boers and one thousand on foot attempted to capture the fort, which was occupied by four hundred. They advanced to within two hundred yards of the fort, but were repulsed by shot and shell. Seven insurgents were killed and many wounded. Paul Kruger held a council of war on the 23d inst., when it was decided to starve the garrison out.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The Standard states that a further dispatch of troops to Ireland is probable. The admiralty request that the war office arrange for a relief of the marines on service in Ireland, and the detention of so many marines there causes great inconvenience to the navy.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—A correspondent of the Times at Dublin says: Public interest in the Irish state trials has considerably abated. There was little or no excitement in the neighborhood of the court, and the large number of Irish members of parliament, who attended yesterday, did not appear.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The Standard's dispatch from Constantinople says: The Albanian League have summoned all males over eighteen years of age to arms in every district in Northern Albania. A great gathering at Jarova has just approved a war with Montenegro, and has decided to send two nobles to Cettinge to demand the evacuation of Dulcigno. If Prince Nicklia refuses, the envoys are instructed to declare war on behalf of Albanian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 30.—The porte is about to address a circular to the powers, containing propositions, the present secret acceptance of which, it is believed, can alone avert conflict between Turkey and Greece.

DUBLIN, Dec. 31.—The military correspondent of the Irish Times states that the authorities contemplate dispatch of flying columns over the country almost immediately, as was done during the Fenian rising. It is said that every step necessary for the movement is already arranged. Nine columns will be started, each comprising one troop of cavalry, a division of artillery, with two guns, four companies of infantry, ten sappers, and a detachment of army service.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Vienna and Constantinople dispatches concur in reporting the collapse of the arbitration scheme. The Porte's reply to M. Tissott's semi-official communication of the scheme is still withheld. It has been heretofore believed that the reply would not be a direct refusal, but would take the form of a counter proposal to send an international commission to Epirus and Thessaly to examine the frontier question on the spot.

The attitude of Greece, however, renders any pacific negotiations difficult, and the Daily Telegraph's Vienna correspondent asserts that the Porte will formally reject arbitration, and, abandoning the idea of a counter proposal, will allow things to take their own course. The question is, whether hostilities will be postponed until March or begin now. The final issue of war seems to be next to a certainty. The foregoing agrees in tenor with all that is known on the subject.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—A dispatch from Cape Town to the Daily Telegraph says: It is reported on good authority that Mr. J. H. Brand, president of the Orange Free State, has telegraphed here that he is unable to restrain the Boers of that State from joining the insurrection, and that in a few days he may be compelled to resign.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Dublin correspondent of the Times says: A more repidsive and terrible year has never come upon the country. Its history may be written in two words—distress and disturbance. It came with the begging box and has gone out with the blindgeon. It will take many years to reconstruct the social system now in ruins, and few can be sanguine enough to hope the task will be accomplished in the present generation.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—A Constantinople dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company says: The porte has dispatched a note to the powers setting forth arguments against arbitration, and proposing that a meeting of the delegates of the powers, including Turkey and Greece, be held at Constantinople to fix the Greek frontier.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—The death is announced of Hector Martin Lefuel, noted French architect, at the age of seventy.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—A Paris telegram this afternoon reports that Cardinal Hene Francois Regnier, archbishop of Cambrai, is dead. The same dispatch reports that the police are preparing to suppress disorders, which are apprehended, on the occasion of the funeral of the dead Communist, Blanqui.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S GIFT TO THE PRESIDENT.—A large box containing a massive desk or writing table, a present from Queen Victoria to the President of the United States, was received at the White House to day. The desk is made of live oak, weighs one thousand three hundred pounds, is elaborately carved and a magnificent specimen of workmanship. Upon a smooth panel is the following inscription: "Her Majesty's ship Resolute, forming part of the expedition sent in search of Sir John Franklin in 1852; was abandoned in latitude 74° 41', longitude 101° 22', west, on the 15th of May, 1854. She was discovered and extricated in September, 1855, in latitude 77° north, Capt. Buddington of the United States whaler George Henry. She was purchased, fitted out and sent to England as a gift to her Majesty, Queen Victoria, by the President and people of the United States, as a token of good will and friendship. This table was made from her timbers when she was broken up and is presented by the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, to the President of the United States as a memorial of the courtesy and loving kindness which dictated the offer of the gift of the Resolute."—N. Y. World.

Quarterly Conferences.

NORTH ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

DECATUR DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Courtland station	Jan. 8, 9
Town Creek circuit, at Town Creek	15, 16
Leighton circuit, at Leighton	22, 23
Iuka circuit, at Iuka	29, 30
Trinity circuit, at Trinity	Feb. 5, 6
Decatur station	12, 13
Oakville circuit, at Antioch	19, 20
Newberg circuit, at Lambertville	26, 27
Moulton circuit, at Moulton	28
Russellville station	Mar. 5, 6
Littleville mission, at Ebenezer	8
Danville circuit, at Danville	12, 13
Somerville circuit	19, 20

The District Stewards will please meet in Decatur, Wednesday, January 5, at eleven o'clock.

53 J. W. NEWMAN, P. E.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

UNION SPRINGS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Greenville station	Jan. 1, 2
Greenville circuit, at Oak Grove	8, 9
Fort Deposit circuit, at Leodaticdee	15, 16
Oaky Streak circuit, at Antioch	22, 23
Rutledge circuit, at Rutledge	29, 30
Rocky Mount circuit, at Rocky Mount	Feb. 5, 6
Union Springs station	12, 13
Ingo station	19, 20
Pine Level circuit, at Hill Chapel	27
Dixie mission, at Dixie Hill	28
Bermudaville circuit, at Clay Hill	26, 27
Mount Meigs circuit, at Mount Meigs	Mar. 5, 6
Union circuit, at Mount Hallurd	12, 13

The District Stewards will please meet me in the basement of Court street Methodist Church, in Montgomery, at ten o'clock A. M., January 14, 1881. A full attendance is earnestly and respectfully requested. (51) J. M. BOLAND, P. E.

MONTGOMERY DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Auburn station	Dec. 25, 26
Tallassee station	Jan. 1, 2
Hartville circuit, at Seal	8, 9
Kinsey circuit, at Carolina	15, 16
Crawford circuit, at Crawford	22, 23
Tuskegee circuit at Cotton Valley	29, 30
Salem circuit, at Salem	Feb. 5, 6
Loachapoka circuit, at Notasulga	12, 13
Tuskegee station	19, 20
Opelika station	26, 27
Franklin mission, at Franklin	Mar. 4
Montgomery station	5, 6
Tallapoosa circuit, at Tabernacle Chapel	13, 14

The District Stewards will meet at the District parsonage in Auburn, February 15, at eleven o'clock A. M. A full meeting is very much desired.

53 T. F. MANGUM, P. E.

MOBILE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

St. Paul	Jan. 1, 2
Whistler	8, 9
St. Francis street	15, 16
Franklin Street	22, 23
Eastern Shore, at Bay Minette	29, 30
Citronelle, at Mauvil a	Feb. 5, 6
Tunnahaville, at Four Mile Post	12, 13
Grand Bay, at Grand Bay	19, 20
St. Stephen's, at New Hope	26, 27
Bladen Springs, at Bladen Springs	Mar. 5, 6
Okatuppa, at Bethel	12, 13
Sugarville, at Sugarville	19, 20
Grove Hill, at Mt. Zion	26, 27

53 O. S. GLUE, P. E.

SELMA DISTRICT.—FIRST ROUND.

Clifton circuit	Jan. 1, 2
Rembert Hill	5
Chunchula Corner	8, 9
Lower Peach Tree	12
East Selma	15, 16
Brush Creek	21, 22
Marion	22, 24
Uniontown station	29, 30
Uniontown circuit	Feb. 1
Orrville	5, 6
McKinley, at Bethlehem	12, 14
Summerfield	19, 20
Spring Hill	26, 27
Perryville	Mar. 5, 6
Cahaba mission, at Ivy Chapel	7

District Stewards meet at Selma, Tuesday March 15.

56 W. A. M'CARTY, P. E.

PENSACOLA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Pensacola	Jan. 1, 2
Warrenton	8, 9
Millview, at Millview	15, 16
Milton	22, 23
Powelton, at Clear Springs	29, 30
Perdido Mission, at New Hope	Feb. 2
Stockton, at Stockton	5, 6
Pollard, at Mt. Carmel	12, 13
Yellow River, at Damascus	16
Georgiana, at Wesley Chapel	19, 20
Evergreen, at Evergreen	26, 27
Gravella, at Gravella station	March 2
Monroeville, at Perdue Hill	5, 6
Sepulga, at Bethel	12, 13
Montery, at Liberty	19, 20

I hope every official member will be present at these first quarterly Conferences, and every Steward will see to it that at least one-fourth of the preacher's allowance be paid by the first quarterly Conference.

52 S. H. COX, P. E.

MARIANA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Geneva circuit, at Geneva	Jan. 15, 16
Mariana station, at Mariana	22, 23
Cerro Gordo mission, at Cherry Pond	28, 30
Calhoun mission, at Shady Grove	Feb. 5, 6
Big Creek circuit, at Powellton	12, 13
Greenwood circuit, at Mt. Zion	19, 20
Chipola mission, at New Britton	26, 27
Headland mission, at Headland	Mar. 5, 6
Holme's Valley circuit, at Moss Hill	12, 11
Freeport and Walton, at Freeport	19, 20

The District Stewards will please meet at Campbellton, Jackson county, Fla., January 8.

Brethren please be punctual, as it is important that the whole work should be fully represented.

52 A. J. COLEMAN, P. E.

PRATTVILLE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Lowndesboro	Jan. 1, 2
Wetumpka	8, 9
Clanton and Verbena	15, 16
Bell's Landing	22, 23
Camden and Oak Lawn	29, 30
Autaugaville	Feb. 5, 6
Prattville	12, 13
Pine Apple	19, 20
Randolph	26, 27
Maplesville	Mar. 5, 6
Pleasant Hill	12, 13
Deatsville mission	19, 20

Brierfield mission quarterly meeting will be held at the same time and place as the Randolph quarterly meeting, at Cedar Grove. I have not given the places for holding the meetings, for they are on the minutes of each quarterly Conference.

52 A. H. MITCHELL, P. E.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

NEW ORLEANS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Moreau street	Jan. 23
Algiers	30
Louisiana Avenue	Feb. 6
Lafourch	13
Plaquemine and Gross Tete	20
Felicity street	27
Baton Rouge	Mar. 6
Carondelet street	13
St. Charles Avenue	20

The District Stewards will please meet me Tuesday, January 11, 1881, at seven o'clock P. M., at the pastor's office, Carondelet Street Church, to make the apportionments for the District for 1881.

J. B. WALKER, P. E.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

JACKSON DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Hinds mission, at Lane's	Jan. 1, 2
Canton	8, 9
Sharon, at Lodi Pine	15, 16
Thomastown, at Lone Pine	15, 16
Madison	22, 23
Soule Chapel	29, 30
Edwards	Feb. 5, 6
Bolton	12, 13
Jackson	19, 20
Benton	26, 27
Mt. Carmel	Mar. 5, 6
Fletcher's Chapel	12, 13
Silver Creek	19, 20
Lodi	19, 20
Yazoo City	26, 27

The district stewards will please meet at the parsonage in Canton, at ten A. M., on Tuesday, January 25. (11. W. L. C. HUNDICOTT, P. E.

BOOKHAVEN DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Brookhaven and Wesson, at Brookhaven	Dec. 25, 26
Crystal Springs station	Jan. 1, 2
Summit and McComb, at McComb	8, 9
Hazlehurst station	15, 16
Brandywine, at Beloboth	22, 23
Magnolia, at Magnolia	29, 30
Adams and Buguechitto, at Bethel	Feb. 5, 6
Scotland at New Hope	12, 13
Beauregard, at Balala	19, 20
Spring Ridge, at Hyrath	26, 27
Bayou Pierre, at Union chapel	Mar. 5, 6
Georgetown, at Bethesda	12, 13

The District Stewards will meet at Hazlehurst, January 15, at 12 o'clock, P. M. Prompt and full attendance very desirable.

53 R. F. JOHNSON, P. E.

WOODVILLE DIST. FIRST ROUND.

Jackson station	Jan. 1, 2
Clinton station	8, 9
Amite City, at Amite City	15, 16
Hopkins and Port Hudson, at Popkins	22, 23
Winans at Winans	29, 30
Bayou Sara, at New Hope	Feb. 5, 6
St. Helena at Pine Grove	12, 13
Wilkinson, at Bethel	19, 20
Woodville station	26, 27
North Wilkinson, at Hopewell	Mar. 5, 6
Amite, at Liberty	12, 13
Franklington, at Franklington	19, 20
East Feliciana, at Olive Branch	26, 27
East Baton Rouge, at Bethel	April 2, 3
Livingston, at Bayou Bartaria	9, 10

53 JAS. A. GIDDENS, P. E.

VICKSBURG DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Rolling Fork	Jan. 1, 2
Clover Hill	8, 9
Mt. Olivet, at Satartia	15, 16
Schlawee mission, at Satartia	15, 16
Warren, at Bovinia	22, 23
Vicksburg	29, 30
Port Gibson	Feb. 5, 6
Martin	6, 6
Rocky Springs, at Rocky Springs	12, 13
Utica, at Utica	18, 20
Natchez	20, 27
Fayette at Fayette	Mar 5, 6
Kingston, at Kingston	12, 13
Meadville	19, 20

District Stewards meet in the lecture room of the Methodist Church, at Vicksburg, January 29, at 10 A. M. [5-1] JOHN A. ELLIS, P. E.

SEASHORE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Moss Point, at Moss Point	Jan. 1, 2
West Pascagoula, at Antioch	15, 16
East Pascagoula, at Salem	22, 23
Ocean Springs, at Ocean Springs	29, 30
Pleasant Hill, at Scott's Station	Feb. 5, 6
Biloxi and Mt. at Gilgal	12, 13
Whittington, at Poplar Head	19, 20
Pearlington, at Pearlington	26, 27

The District Stewards will please meet me at Ocean Springs, January 29, 1881.

52 T. H. WEST, P. E.

WILLIAMSBURG DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Bethel, at Shelton	Jan. 8, 9
Ephm, at Ethan	15, 16
Chickasahay mission, at Mutual Rights	22, 23
Red Creek mission, at Griffith's school H.	29, 30
Williamsburg, at Williamsburg	Feb. 5, 6
Spring College, at Stewarts	19, 20
China Grove, at Pine Grove	26, 27
Mt. Carmel, at Sande	Mar. 12, 13
Westville, at Pleasant Hill	19, 20

52 D. A. LITTLE, P. E.

MERIDIAN DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Linwood, at Linwood	Jan. 1, 2
DeKalb, at DeKalb	8, 9
Lauderdale, at Lauderdale	15, 16
Meridian station	21
Marion, at Union Grove	22, 23
Bluffville, at Old Scotia	29, 30
Enterprise, at Chunkey	Feb. 5, 6
Winchester mission	11
Waynesboro, at Waynesboro	11 13
Paulding, at Paulding	19, 20
Wayne, at Liberty	26, 27
Enterprise and Quitman, at Enterprise	Mar. 5, 6
Shubuta, at Shubuta	12, 13
Shady Grove mission, at Shady Grove	19, 20

The District Stewards will meet at the Methodist Church in Meridian, January 20, at eleven o'clock.

52 R. J. JONES, P. E.

BRANDON DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Brandon station	Jan. 8, 9
Fannin and Ludlow mission, at Liberty	15, 16
Marion circuit at Richland	22, 23
Forest circuit, at Morton	29, 30
Philadelphia circuit, at Piney Grove	Feb. 5, 6
Beech Spring and Mt. Hebron, at Salem	12, 13
Carthage circuit, at Conway	19, 20
Walnut Grove circuit, at Walnut Grove	26, 27
Cato circuit, at Bethany	Mar. 5, 6
Trenton circuit, at Trenton	12, 13
Newton circuit, at Newton	19, 20
Lake circuit, at Lake	26, 27
Raleigh circuit at Carr's Church	April 2, 3

The District Stewards will meet at Morton, January 29, 1881, to fix the salary of Presiding Elder and apportion the collections ordered by the Conference.

13 JAS. M. CARR, P. E.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE is particularly recommended for Wakefulness, Hysteria, and other diseases of the nervous system.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE CROSS STYLOGRAFIC PEN OR FLUID PENCIL.

A pencil that writes with ink; never needs sharpening and never wears out. Made of all varieties of gold, silver, gold, platinum and iridium. 14 kinds from $2 50 to $5 each. Call and see them or send circular.

LATHROP & WILKINS, Agents for the Southwest, 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

LEON ARLAUD
DRUGGIST,
Corner Customhouse and Dauphine sts., New Orleans.
PURE AND GENUINE DRUGS. GUARANTEED UNADULTERATED
Medicines, Perfumery, etc. Specially of Rather's Eau de Cologne.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR
MUSIC HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

Easiest Terms! Lowest Prices!

General Agency for the Celebrated
Steinway, Knabe, Pleyel, Weber, Fischer Pianos.
And the Popular Organs of
CLOUGH & WARREN AND PELOUBET, PELTON & CO.,
Everything in the Music line at rock bottom prices. Send for illustrated catalogues.
LOUIS GRUNEWALD,
Grunewald Hall, New Orleans.

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE
INSURANCE COMPANY.

SOUTHERN DEPARTMENT:

OFFICE: CORNER CARONDELET AND GRAVIER STREETS.

The capital of the Company is TEN MILLION DOLLARS, to which there must be added its unlimited liability of the proprietors.

Fire assets, excluding paid-up capital	$9,881,426 21
Paid-up capital	1,228,200 00
Total fire assets	$11,109,626 21
Fire liabilities	3,944,358 24
Making the surplus for policy-holders	$7,165,267 98

Losses by Chicago Fire in 1871, $3,239,001
Losses by Boston Fire in 1872, $1,430,729

Fire risks of all kinds respectfully solicited. The Board of Directors is fully empowered to adjust and pay all losses from this city, thus placing the Company on an even footing with the local companies chartered under the State laws.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:
J. F. SCHRODER, Esq., Chairman, of Leopold Christ & Co.
NEWTON BUCKNER, Esq., of Buckner & Co.
PERRY NUGENT, Esq., of Nugent & Lallande.
PETER ANDERSON, Esq., of Anderson and Simpson.
HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary.
JULES P. ROUX, Ass't Resident Secretary.
NEW ORLEANS October 20, 1880.

P. WERLEIN,
135 Canal Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

PIANOS,
ORGANS,
MUSIC
AND
Musical Instruments.

Please send for my catalogue and prices before buying from any one, North or South.

$25 TO $35.
STEWART'S NEW IMPROVED
SINGER
Sewing Machine.

Great Reduction in Prices!
Down with Monopolies!
Hard Times Demand Low Prices.

We warrant all our Machines to be NEW, LATEST-IMPROVED and PERFECT for

FIVE YEARS.

Our NEW MACHINE is supplied with a LONG BALANCE-WHEEL, which is a great improvement over the old SINGER, as it enables the operator to wind the bobbin without running the machine, or removing the work from the needle. This is the most important improvement ever put on the Sewing Machine.

Also dealer in all first-class Machines, such as the

WHEELER & WILSON, GROVER & BAKER
DOMESTIC, WILSON, WEED, Etc

Cotton, Silk, Flax, Oil and Needles for all kinds of Machines. Address

M. A. PECK,
General Sewing Machine Agent
153 CANAL STREET,
Next to Holmes' Dry Goods Store,
New Orleans.

B. J. MONTGOMERY. C. KIRSO

R. M. & B. J.
MONTGOMERY
FURNITURE
AND
MIRROR EMPORIUM
Corner Camp and Poydras Sts.

After a sojourn of over six weeks among the Factories North, East and West, we open the Fall and Winter Trade with the largest and best selected stock of Furniture, French and German Plate Mirrors, Ornamental and Fancy Goods, Upholstery Goods and Cabinet Makers' Hardware ever brought to this city. We select our goods in person from the best factories, and are determined not to be undersold. Our assortment being too extensive and varied to be enumerated in detail, we request our customers and the general public to call and inspect for themselves.

On hand a full line of the celebrated Vienna Bent Wood Work and Invalid Wheel Chairs.

Goods packed and delivered F. O. B.

THE
NEW HYMN BOOK!
Everybody is Delighted with it.

Prepared by authorization of the General Conference of 1878, and especially adapted to revival, prayer and social meetings. The arrangement in the Standard Hymn Book has been preserved, as well as the most common hymns in that work, so that it can be used in connection with it. It contains 344 hymns besides benedictions and doxologies, etc., the order of public worship, baptismal service of infants and adults, and form of reception of church members. It is strongly bound in cloth, stitched with wire, and the low price at which it is supplied renders it particularly available for general use, in all churches for congregational singing.

Single copy by mail, postpaid, twenty-five cents.

In quantities of twenty-five or more, by freight or express, twenty cents per copy. Address

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans

FURNITURE.

W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
desires to inform the public and his patrons that his Stock of Parlor Suits, Chamber Suits and Dining-Room Suits, both fine and medium, has never been as complete as at present, with prices lower than ever.

His stock of Furniture suitable for country trade is very large, and special inducements are offered to wholesale buyers.

Orders from the country will have especial care and prompt attention.

W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
New Orleans.

D. MERCIER & SONS,
Better Known as Cheap Johns.
NO BRANCH STORE IN TOWN.
MEN'S, BOYS' AND YOUTH'S
CLOTHING,
HATS, BOOTS, SHOES, FURNISHING GOODS
ETC., ETC.
Cor. Dauphine and Bienville sts.,
New Orleans, La.
Orders from Country Merchants promptly executed on most reasonable terms.

DR. BLY'S CELEBRATED PATENT ARTIFICIAL LEGS A

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 27.—NO. 2. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JANUARY 13, 1881. WHOLE NO. 1336.

PUBLISHED FOR THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

G. T. LATHROP, Publisher.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, . . . $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE
REV. H. D. MOORE.
REV. G. E. REUE, D. D.
REV. J. O. ANDREW.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE
REV. W. H. WATKINS, D. D.
REV. JAMES A. GODDREY.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. JOHN MATHEWS, D. D.
REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.

THE ETERNAL SEA.

Lake Jasper.

By Hester Kenyon.

In Frederic Harrison's history he tells
The blessed land of Holy Light,
Its praises sound,
Its wrath of Heaven lay,
As it did at Eden's sacred day.
Engulfed it quite.

How fervent men have vowed to keep
In that adamant deep
Who perish'd there!

The glorious light of spotless life,
A faithful heart, pure love of wife,
Its sparkling with celestial fire
Its cross and cares to bear,
And sympathize with all its woes,
Its tears dry with the gentle hand,
And speak words of peace.

And upon Heaven's sacred land,
Its glorious rays to shine,
Its gentle hope to give,
Its comfort bring,
Its heavenly joy to live.

Some saints there are and Herod's storms,
Not once in years have swept those plains,
Its angel set,
Its cross

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 13, 1881.

SONG OF SORROW.

BY J. WHITTIER.

O wind that wailest, cease thy cry
What is thy anguish unto mine?
Ye naked woods that moan and sigh,
My loss is greater far than thine
For flowers and leaves will bud once more
But joy that's past comes never more

The autumn fields lie sere and dead,
The leaden sky weeps cheerless rain
Yet spring shall come again to cheer,
And fill its new their glad refrain
But joy comes not when hope has fled
And hope lies not where love is dead

O nature! Still for thee are gains
For all the loss is thou must heal
The flower may fade, the seed remains
The dead to life shall still send the air
But what of gain can life impart
To one who bears a broken heart

Thou seem'st to mourn, but canst thou know
The grief that deeps for hope or dread
Thy garb and voice are those of woe
But fills the heart within thee dead
Ah no, thou grieve'st a little while,
But coming May will see thee smile

But I, though blossom bud and bloom
And rippling rills kiss grassy banks,
Though earth her grassy robes resume
And birds roll out their morning thanks
I seem to see, but only know
That these were scenes of long ago.

New York Evening Post

Missionary Report.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, December, 1880.

DEAR BRETHREN: In requiring me to report on our home and foreign missions, indulge with me in a moment's grief at our sad bereavement in the loss of our beloved Bishop, the lamented Davids Doggett. Our Conference, our church, our country, has felt the loss of a great and good man. A trail of supernal light lingers behind him, kindling upon the high places of the earth like golden sunbeams on the mountain peaks after the great orb of day has disappeared from our eyes. Being dead he yet speaks. May his virtues and labors incite us to the diligence and success which he showed to the end of his long and useful life.

When our blessed Saviour left this world He commanded His disciples to go forth and preach the gospel to every creature. They were to wait in Jerusalem for a little time, but for a particular purpose, "until they were endued with power from on high." Those ten days were spent in prayer, and, when the day of Pentecost was come, the Holy Spirit came down upon them to fit them for their work.

This is the ground of our call to the missionary enterprise. We must have the Holy Spirit. We do not need the miracles of the Pentecost, but we must have the Pentecost itself. The absence of the Spirit is death. The presence of the Spirit is life.

It is a happy truth that God has never withdrawn the banner of the Spirit from the Christian camp. Some churches have, indeed, deserted it, renouncing its shelter and rejecting its sway, while others have straggled from the line of march, and, seeking easier quarters, have shrunk from the heat of the onslaught for the deliverance of the world.

With others it is preserved, furled up in a creed as a sacred relic, the boasted memorial of what Christianity was, not the triumphal standard of what it now is; nor is it as yet in its right place, an elevated flag streaming gallantly at the head of an advanced host, who will know no fatigue, or give any pause, till it be lodged in the torrents of the foe, and wave over a converted world. Oh! how vast is the territory to be covered before the desires of the church can be fulfilled.

The army is yet only on the frontiers, and many a battle must be fought before the desired victory can be obtained. The light is only just gathering, which is to dissipate the darkness spread around the world, and change the whole to brightness and beauty.

We are too apt to triumph; we are prone to forget the present state of things. We rejoice that there has been progression, and we delight to look forward with hope; but yet tears should mingle with our joy. The groans of the whole creation are before us. The roll of human condition is exhibited to our view, and is full of mourning, lamentation and woe; we despair not; no; a thousand times no; let this feeling never be known by Christians; but we do not feel enough; we do not carry out the real state of man to all its awful results.

Would to God this were fully attended to, and that not merely spasmodically, but in all the thoughts and movements of life. Thousands of your countrymen around you are starving for the bread of life, all over those lands and prairies, up and down those rivers and bayous, corruption rolls like a flood, and virtue seems almost destined to defeat and extinction, and there is no remedy except the pegs of Sinai and the wailing and weeping of Calvary. Those people cannot go to you, in these sparse settlements, support their own ministers. They are scattered. Their farms are not yielding returns of profit. But it requires no prophet's eye to see that if these fields are assisted they will in a few years yield abundant fruit in return.

Our home missions are as extensive as our home territory. Within the bounds of our own Conference we have four missions. The French mission, in Attakapas, was served by Rev. W. J. Picot. He reports seventy-two members, one local preacher, fifteen adults and six infants baptized, one parsonage, value $100, under repairing, and repairs, $32, three Sunday-schools, six teachers, sixty-nine scholars, $16 collected for Sunday-schools, $400 paid to mission.

Lafourche mission was served by Rev. Thomas H. Jones; has sixty-three members, four churches, value $1,000; paid, $150.

Logansport mission, served by Rev. John Pipes, has one hundred and thirty-one members, five churches, value $2,00. Paid $12 to presiding elder, $12 50 for domestic missions, $240 for church building and repairs.

Calcasieu mission, no report.

In our foreign field we have our missionaries in China, Mexico and Brazil, together with our Mexican Border Mission, and the mission to the Indians in our own country. Ours is a very small department of the aggressive army of the Lord, but we are grateful that we have any part in the glorious scheme of recovering the Saviour's promised inheritance, grateful to know that it is demonstrated that there is power in the gospel of Jesus Christ to convert whole nations from idolatry to Christianity, to uproot the fiercest cannibalism, to bring the degraded savage, who delighted on feeding on human flesh, to repentance toward God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. It is the duty of every individual "to come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty." Nay, it is the duty of every individual to unite in the great work of spreading Scriptural holiness over all these lands.

Has the gospel been a blessing to you and yours? And would it not be an equal blessing to others who are destitute? The living preacher must go to them. Even in the days of miracles you never hear of a Bible being carried through the air to a distant land, and there expounding itself, nor of an individual taught without a human teacher, for the Scripture saith: "Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved. And how shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent?"

As we gaze around us, we cannot but lament and sigh, and weep as we behold the dishonor offered to God, and the misery and vice which everywhere prevail. Shall the victory over sin and satan ever be obtained? Shall the cause of Jesus Christ ever prevail? To all these inquiries the answer is universal. It is conveyed by the appearance of the dawning light chasing away the shadows, by the leveling of the mountains, and by the filling up of the valleys!

It is a great mistake to suppose that the world is growing worse, or that the heroic days of God's servants are passed. The world was never so good as now, and the heroes of this age will compare favorably with those of the sixteenth century, and that of the Wesley's, Nelson's and Asbury's not excepted. Answer ye Lambuth's, Allen's, Morrison's, Dwight's, and your compeers from the Asiatic lands of wooden gods, ye aliens from civilization, home and friends. Answer ye Patterson's, from the land of Montezuma; answer ye hosts of missionaries from India, Madagascar, Hindustan, and from all heathendom; answer ye noble band of itinerant preachers in our own country, landless, homeless, penniless wanderers, whom neither heat, cold, wind and water, poverty, weight of years, parting tears, angel wives and doting children can hinder nor stop; answer, are ye heroes? All ye lack is for some one to write your history when you are gone.

The age in which we live is an aggressive one. The world is moving at a more rapid rate than at any former period of its history. The march of the arts and sciences is increasingly gratifying to the lovers of learning, as it is beneficial to commerce and the agricultural interests of nations and men.

While whole continents are spanned and checkered by railroads, the magnetic telegraph has annihilated distance, and brought the nations into such close proximity that they may and do interchange the civilities and courtesies of life as though separated only by an ordinary street of a city. Have these wonderful developments no significance beyond the scope of a worldly philosophy?

The palities of this world are a disconsolate chaos, where all sorts of contrarieties are blended together, and it is the voice of God alone that can bring order out of confusion and harmony out of chaos. Is the Christian philosopher at a loss to interpret the signs of the times as they rise upon the political horizon? He is terribly shaking the nations of the earth. Thrones and dynasties are successively disappearing from the face of the earth. The crash of one throne reaches to the fall of another.

"The nations melt, the tumult dies." We stand amazed as we gaze on the dark stream of time, and see drifting the wrecks of human ambition, blasted hopes and ruined fortunes. In our day we have seen kingdoms wax and wane, empires rise and fall, princes, kings, emperors, and the Pope himself, have been hurled from their thrones.

Can ye not discern the signs of the times? For many years the Christian world have been sunk in profound slumber in regard to their duty. But, thank God, they are waking up. He beheld the desolations of Zion, and has come to rebuild her ruined walls. He heard the groans of His people, as with harps on the willows they were weeping by the rivers of Babylon, and has come to bring them again to Zion, with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. Countless millions are shortly to awake from the sleep and darkness of a hundred ages to hail the day that will never go down.

I see the darkness rolling upon itself, and passing away from a thousand lands. I see a cloudless day following, and laying itself over all the earth. I see the nations coming up from the neighborhood of the brutes to the dignity of the sons of God, from the sty, in which they had long wallowed, to the purity of the Divine image. I see the meekness of the blessed gospel assuaging their ferocious passions, melting down a million contending mults into one, silencing the clangour of arms, and swelling into life a thousand budding charities, which had died under the long winter. I hear the voice of their joy. It swells from the valleys and echoes from the hills. I already hear, on the Eastern breeze, the songs of new-born nations. I already catch, from the Western gale, the praise of a thousand islands. I ascend the Alps, and see the darkness retiring from the papal world. I ascend the Andes, and see Mexico and South America, and all the islands of the Pacific, one altar. I ascend the mountains of Thibet, and hear from the plains of China and Japan, and from every jungle and pagoda of Hindustan, the praises of the living God. I see all Asia bowing before Him who, eighteen centuries ago, hung in the midst of them on Calvary. I traverse oceans, and hear from every floating bethel the songs of the redeemed.

"The dwellers in the vales, and on the rocks
Shout to each other, and the mountain tops,
From distant mountains, catch the flying joy,
Till nation after nation taught the strain,
Earth rolls the rapturous hosanna round."

Come that blessed day. "For Zion's sake, hold not your peace; for Jerusalem's sake, rest not until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth, and until the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea." The time is to come when God shall give His Son the heathen for His inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for His possession." The time is to come when the Greenlander shall come from his eternal snows, and the Indian from his scorching suns, and the Kalmuck Tartar from his burning sand, when the Hindoo shall burn his slipster and the Mohammedan his Koran, and the gospel of Jesus Christ shall fill every soul with joy and peace.

His temples shall be rebuilt, His altars shall be repaired, the fires rekindled, His worship restored, and men shall bring their offerings to Him "who is God over all, and blessed forevermore." "The trampling of His horses shall be heard as He goes forth to take possession of the earth, and then the song of praise shall burst forth in every direction; the glad sound shall at length be heard: "Alleluiah! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." And the sound of the seventh trumpet shall usher in this glorious fact: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever."

H. S. TRIPPETT, Sec.

Injudicious Protestants.—No. 1.

"The Kingdom of Christ," by Archbishop Whately, of Dublin, was first published about fifty or sixty years ago. My copy is of a later edition. Dr. Whately was Archbishop of Dublin in the Established Church. In that work he took very strong ground against the so called "Apostolic Succession." This question of "church authority" was just then becoming rife in England and this country. The ground taken on this question by the Archbishop, opposing as it did the Archbishop of Canterbury, and other high and strong men of the church, attracted attention. From the time of the publication of this essay the Archbishop became the acknowledged leader of the low church party in the United Kingdom. And of course the book was seized hold of by Methodists and other low church men in this country.

While the Archbishop's book has undoubtedly done good and timely service in the anti-High Church controversy, it has not circulated, even among its friends, without hints that its influence was owing more to the high position of its author than to any logical or argumentative strength found in its pages. This is by no means a new or strange thing in the book world. Of course Whately's "Kingdom of Christ," as a whole, became popular with low church men, and has served as a model for many a writer and speaker.

These arguments have been rewritten, republished, rehashed and restated by scores and hundreds of writers and speakers who have not shown a tenth of ability to distinguish between the sound and the unsound, the judicious and the injudicious.

In connection with Whately's "Kingdom of Christ," and before I invite attention to the inside of it, I wish to cite another book, viz.: "Points of Controversy," by Rev. C. E. Smarius. Mr. Smarius is, or was, a Roman Catholic, and wrote, about thirty years ago, in defense of that hierarchy. His book evinces high scholarship, and no mean logical strength.

The object of this, and one or two following papers, is to show the close and remarkable similarity in the arguments of those two writers, and others who may have followed them, the one a non-prelatical Protestant and the other a Roman Catholic. In this I will hope to show the logical suicide of some prominent Protestant writers. A false step at the first is generally irrecoverable. I wish to show the falsity of this first step, which so many Protestant writers have unwittingly taken.

Archbishop Whately's second essay is on "The Constitution of a Christian Church; Its Powers and Ministry." It opens on this wise:

"Of all who acknowledge Jesus of Nazareth as their Master, 'the Author and finisher of their faith,' there are scarcely any who do not agree in regarding Him as the Founder and permanent Head of a religious society also, as having instituted and assigned for permanent continuance a community, or system of communities, to which His disciples here on earth were to belong."

The terms "society" and "community" are used in the primary and rudimental sense of a personal compact or cooperation, consisting of individuals with common rights under a charter or constitution of government. This religious society consisted "first of the twelve and afterward of the seventy," and then whomsoever was added afterward under the prescribed rules of admission. He explains:

"It is worth while, therefore, to pause at this point, and inquire what are the inherent properties and universal character naturally and necessarily belonging to any regularly constituted society, as such, for whatever purpose formed.

"It seems to belong to the very essence of a community that it should have: 1. Officers of some kind. 2. Rules enforced by some kind of penalties. 3. Some power of admitting and excluding persons as members.

"For, 1. Whatever may be the character, and whatever the proposed objects, of a regularly constituted community, officers of some kind are essential to it. In whatever manner they may be appointed, whether by hereditary succession or by rotation, or by election of any kind, whatever be the number or titles of them, and whatever be the distribution of their functions, all of which are matters of detail, officers of some kind every community must have. 2. It seems equally essential to every community that it should have certain regulations or by-laws binding on its own members.

"Since, therefore, this point, and also those others above-mentioned, seem naturally and necessarily to belong to every regular community, since, in short, it must consist of regularly constituted members, subject to certain rules, and having certain officers, it follows that whoever directs or sanctions the establishment of a community as our Lord certainly did in respect of Christian churches, must be understood as thereby sanctioning those institutions which belong to the essence of a community.

"He appointed or ordained the first officers. He recognized the power of enacting and abrogating rules, and He gave authority for the admitting of members."

This is too plain to be misunderstood. What is now called the Christian church began in a nucleus, "first the twelve and then the seventy." This so constituted the entire church at the first. The Saviour formed them into a community, or religious society, appointing the first officers and prescribing rules of government for the body by which new members might be admitted and unworthy ones excluded.

Now, according to the Archbishop, we have, for the first time, a Christian church; small, indeed, as to numbers, as it must necessarily be, but possessing all the functions, attributes and characteristics the church has now or can have. The church was thus founded. This was its beginning.

If the reader should feel a little of the interest in this subject that I do he might do well to preserve this number to refer to for the better understanding of what may follow. I expect to show that, according to the facts stated by the Archbishop, the Church of Rome is the only Christian church; that it is an infallible church; that there can be neither Christianity nor salvation outside its communion, and that the facts and arguments of the Archbishop are exactly those of Mr. Smarius, and all other papal writers, and indeed that his argument and facts are the only ones relied upon by all Romish writers known to general literature, or that the nature of popery admits of.

H. ABNEY.

Sabbath Meditation.

"And on the seventh day God ended His work which He had made, and rested on the seventh day from all His work which He had made, and God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it," and afterward He commanded man universal to remember it and keep it holy. And I am glad of it, and thank Him in heart. And notwithstanding this is a very dark and gloomy day in the outer world, yet there is light within, and rest and peace.

O! what a subject for thought, namely: the infinite wisdom and love of our Father. Wisdom in that He knows what is in man, his universal needs and necessities; how meanly he will become in seeking to gratify his greed of gain; how he would destroy himself in trying to gratify himself with the world, to say nothing about losing his soul, or of employing this holy day with the means of saving his soul. Nay, I leave religion out of these meditations, and think of nothing beyond the grave. I thank Him in my soul that, notwithstanding the wickedness of the age, the almost universal disregard of the Almighty's command to remember this day, to keep it holy, the law of the wicked land restrains me from violating God's Sabbatical law on fear of penalties. And that though not only outsiders regard not the command, and many church members desecrate it every time it is fair weather—keeping livery stables, and hiring out horses and carriages to encourage Sabbath breaking, yet it is a blessing to me, and all of God's few people who love Him and His ordinances."

Even the cars may whistle past us a dozen times a day, as they do, and buggies raise a cloud of dust in all streets, yet cannot they remove the Divine impress of God's holy day, nor make me to fear that He will take it away from the weary and sighing ones. I want no better evidence that the Bible is true than to know that God ordained this as a day of rest, for I experience infinite wisdom and love in the gift of the Sabbath. I feel as much need of it as I do of daily food, and when my Saturday evening comes I am glad, whether I have gained much or little.

O! our Father, still give Thy holy Sabbath of rest to the weary pilgrim on his way, and may the time soon come when men shall love and sanctify it and keep it holy. Amen.

J. W. JOHNS.

WITHHELD STATISTICS.—How it would startle some of our congregations to have the pastor follow the reading of the annual report of his church with a few of the withheld statistics, somewhat after this sort: Of the thirty-two who have joined our church the past year, I find that five of those who came in on profession have unmistakably fallen into former evil ways, while of those who were received by letter, three were certainly lacking in good character in the churches they left, although by the record they were in 'good and regular standing.' One of our elders is popularly reported to have swindled a neighbor outrageously in a notorious business transaction. We have lost one of our more prominent members by his transfer to the county jail on conviction of crime. A careful examination of our record has convinced me that fully one-third of our members can be counted on the 'dead-head' list. They do nothing in the line of Christian activity. As to their example, they are not bad enough to be a warning to the outside world; nor good enough to be taken as an example by anybody in or out. Our benevolent contributions look pretty well for our members, but I learn that nearly one-third of their full amount has been given by four persons; and that of the other members of the church, more than one-half gave to religious causes than they pay toward public amusements, while there are not a few families which gave more for peanuts during the year than they put in the contribution-box. A first estimate of the tobacco bills of the congregation is twice and three-eighths the amount given by the church to home and foreign missions combined." Such a supplement as this, in kind and in degree according to the particular community, could be truthfully made in many a church where the annual report just presented is spoken of as "every way encouraging."—Sabbath School Times.

Marriages.

HARDIN FARMER.—At the residence of the bride's mother, near Hazlehurst, Scott county, Miss., December 22, 1880, by Rev. Irvin Miller, Mr. Johnnie Hardin to Miss Ida Farmer.

YOUNG STARKS.—At the Methodist Church in Como, Miss., December 28, 1880, by the Rev. C. N. Percy, Dr. A. A. Young to Miss Mollie C. Starks. Both of Como, Miss.

COWAN-IOMAS.—At the residence of the bride's father, Bastil, Clarke county, Ala., December 21, 1880, by Rev. El. E. Cowan, of the Alabama Conference, Mr. John E. Cowan to Miss Ella Dumas.

HAMM-RIALS.—At the residence of the officiating minister, Rev. Dunlin W. Cooper, in Beauregard, Miss., December 22, 1880, Mr. James Hamm to Miss Lucy Rials.

PACE-HOLLIDAY.—At the Methodist Church, in Sharon, Miss., December 23, 1880, by Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicut, Mr. J. M. Pace and Miss Sallie J. Holliday.

WESTBROOK-CLARK.—At the residence of the bride's mother, December 16, 1880, by the Rev. Joe Nicholson, Mr. Edd e Westbrook and Miss Hattie Clark. All of Ocean Springs, Miss.

KEELY-WALKER.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Harrison county, Miss., December 30, 1880, by the Rev. Joe Nicholson, Captain Henry Keely, of New Orleans, La., to Miss Eliza A. Walker.

Obituaries.

MRS. RACHEL F. PETTIT, nee Knight, of Warren county, near Vicksburg, passed away to her home in Heaven on the morning of December 11, 1880. She was the loved of the Rev. Absalom Pettit, who died in 1878, a beloved and Christian gentleman to whom she was married in February, 1844, in the city of Natchez. They removed at once to his plantation, where they both breathed their last away to God.

She was born in Brookville, Indiana, April 5, 1818, where also was born her sister Susanna F., and together they were inseparable companions from the cradle to the day of her death. The ties of friendship that held David and Jonathan was a feeble bond compared to the threefold cord that united these sisters.

Their parents were from Maryland. They were left orphans, three brothers and three sisters, four of whom have entered their heavenly home, true followers of Christ, while two only remain to tread the weary path of life a little longer.

Mrs. Pettit was the happy mother of fourteen children, five of them God perfected here to the skies. And such a mother! So intelligent, so wise, so energetic, yet so gentle, so sweet tempered. Here was a Christian!

Miss Pettit was a Christian, not to forget church membership only, which, alas! too many deem sufficient, but she had been soundly converted in an early period of life while at school. The Bible was her guide. She loved the book of books. She enjoyed peace with God. Her heart eagerly aspired after the full image of the Master. Never have we known any one more in earnest to build up the church in the holiest. Her presence, her influence, her intelligence, purse and care, her prayers and labors were all a cheerful offering to the prosperity of Zion, the object of her highest regards. The Bible was the clear exponent of her thought and heart, and she could sing, with more truthfulness than one in hundreds, "I love Thy kingdom, Lord."

Few professors of religion more fully realized the "none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth unto himself, for whether we live we live unto the Lord, and whether we die we die unto the Lord; whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's." Old Bethel church was the home of her worship for forty-six years. She has been one of its real pillars. Her peers in age have nearly all vacated their seats in that dear old sanctuary, and soon another generation will possess the sacred trust and tread the pathway of those who have gone before. As here she was strong [illegible] hospitality; to entertain the friends of Christ, the genial neighbor to minister to the sick, the poor, the needy, were duties few knew better how to discharge, and none could perform them with greater delicacy or greater satisfaction.

How old Warren circuit will miss the dear sainted one! Many of the ministers of the city, and the circuit will read these few lines with moistened eyes, remembering the experiences of near a half century under that consecrated roof. In his lifetime the departed husband had in all these matters harmonized and promoted with princely generosity the purposes and aims of his wife.

It may be mentioned that having many children to educate, Mr. Pettit built ample rooms upon his premises and employed the ablest teachers, both male and female, to instruct them. The quiet of the situation the tastiness displayed, the discipline adopted soon attracted general attention, and many parents sought the privilege of entering their children in this home and charming school. At one time there were as many as forty pupils and nearly every boarders in the family. Never will those pupils forget the animating spirit, or the refining and religious influence, the formative and elevating piety, the ladylike dignity, diligence and devotion of her noble life. Her sickness was not protracted. She died of a low form of pneumonia. Her work was done. Her faith was triumphant and her resignation absolute. Loving friends laid her in the grave beside her husband and children who sleep in the family graveyard; while affectionate children joined in the reminiscences of the sainted one. It was my happiness to have known the excellent woman, nearly all the time of her residence in this country, and was able to minister to her consolation in her last hours and close the final memorial rask. May the writer and reader meet the glorified one in the blessed abode of the just and pure. She was buried it took on Monday, December 20, 1880.

After the reading of the solemn and beautiful service, a few Christian friends joined their voices in the sadly sweet and appropriate hymn:

"Cover thy bosom, faithful tomb,
Take this new treasure to thy trust,
And give these sacred relics room
To slumber in the silent dust."

Cole. Messenger.

LEROY C. MORRIS was born in Raleigh, N. C., February 8, 1850, and died in [illegible] Miss., the 27th in Baton Rouge, at the residence of his brother-in-law, Rev. Dr. Deems. He was married to Miss [illegible] D. C. Heath, April 2, 1879, and to Miss [illegible] Deems, daughter of Rev. Thomas Deems, of Baltimore, Md. He became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the year [illegible] the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Deems.

Bro. Morris was a man of [illegible] nature, kindly in his intercourse with [illegible] and a sincere friend. [illegible] her he was a loving husband, [illegible] thoughtful husband and kind [illegible] he was [illegible] adopting [illegible] Whatever [illegible] Bro. Morris as my friend, I [illegible] know that Morris as my highly valued friend, and my dearly loved brother in Christ. As I have labored with him, and always felt better for the friendly salutation and the pleasant conversation. He seemed thoroughly in [illegible] of body, to have within him a green, young heart that made him a pleasant companion and cheerful friend.

But I prize him most as a brother beloved, as one who had known him for years testifying to the long thoroughly changed man. What the grace of God had done for him was manifest to all, but to none more than to his pastor, whose habits of [illegible] to study his people. I noted in him a steady [illegible] growth in Christian character, and that he had attained to that state in which he relied most implicitly upon his heavenly Father. He was a patient, trustful child of God. He loved God's house, and like his wife who is left to battle on a little longer, he was to me a marvel of punctuality and constancy. He was one of those hearers who receive the message of God's servants to their edification and spiritual profit. Fond of all the meetings of his church, he was particularly fond of the class meeting. This in any mind was one of the best evidences of a regenerated state. He prayed in public and was constant in his private devotions. He always related his experience, which unfeignedly struck those who heard it as being that of a true child of God, seeking his way to heaven.

During his sickness I found that he clung to Christ, and that he had that best of all faith, simple child-like dependence. I [illegible] that he could not take with. Trusting the Lord. No [illegible] could have been more full of peace, and perhaps in nothing could be more indicative of the happy state of the soul. Living as he had [illegible] his conversion a year or two ago, and dying with such blessed words on his lips, there can be no doubt of his having fallen asleep in Jesus. He said to his wife a few hours before he died, "Gone but not lost."

God has promised to be the Husband of the widow and the Father of the fatherless, and so may God prove Himself to be unto the long partner of our brother and the children he has left. The sympathies and prayers of hosts of brethren and friends they surely have; but best of all, is the certainty that the God of all consolation will make himself known in great comfort to their sorrowing hearts.

J. L. S.

MRS. PENELLA HILLEY.—The providence of God frequently develops those graces and characteristics so beautiful in the Christian character, which show the true spirit and power of our holy religion.

While the dear sister of whom I write showed a marked decline in her health, which more than usually displayed the presence of the Holy Spirit, there was yet going on the ever expanding fruits of a heavenly character for further developments under affliction and in death.

She was the only daughter of Tatum M. Walker, of precious memory, and Frances Cole, born December 7, 1846, married to F. A. Hilley, May 30, 1867, professed religion in 1857, and died November 18, 1880. She was raised under the influence of proper religious precept and example, the force of which, as it unfolded, was exerted over her entire life. From the time of her conversion to her death, she was [illegible] who is sometimes derisively said of our people "a shouting Methodist."

Some ten or twelve days before she died, believing the hour was rapidly approaching, she sent for the writer, who [illegible] her bedside about midnight. When I entered the sitting room, opening into her private room she saw me, and in the midst of the strongest exhibitions of pride, bade me "walk right in here." Resting me at the same time of her happiness in the assurance of the divine presence. She continued in this frame of mind, hardly passing a moment without expressions of praise, in words and deeds, to the expiration of which there were symptoms of improvement in her physical condition. But as she knew her case, and from the nature of her disease knew that recovery was impossible, she became restless, and for several days and nights spent her time in prayer for a spirit of submission. After four or five days of struggling we saw signs of the coming of the final struggle, and when informed of the fact, that death had commenced its work and she was sinking, her reply was "I am ready. Glory to God."

From this she again began her songs of praise, and calling her three little girls up, beginning at the youngest, she commended them to God, and with her hands upon their heads, pronounced a fervent and dying blessing. Then she kissed and bid her friends each in turn come at her call, to her exactions and recollections.

She was both concerned for the conversion of several relatives, which grand work she was privileged to see around her dying bed. Eight or ten souls were there converted to God.

The last hours were hours of such pain that it became necessary to keep her constantly under the influence of chloroform. Rallying between the effects of the anæsthetic and the paroxisms, she would sing and shout, giving assurance of divine support.

About four hours before she died, the last utterance of her lips, in answer to the question: "Is the Lord still with you as you cross the river?" was: "Yes. Glory to God!" Unable to articulate or exert in many syllables. She recognized her children and husband, and gave them the last the dying kiss, whispering words of which we could catch only "Go to Go." So she died.

As to how she had lived, I need say no more than has already been said, as no such death could follow any but the most exemplary life.

May the children, the husband, the brothers and friends remember their vows and meet her in heaven.

BEN PARTON.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 13, 1881

"I COME QUICKLY."

"When ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars, see ye not troubled, for such things must needs be," MARK 13:7.

He is coming—coming quickly,
To this sorrow-stricken earth;
Though the shadows fall so thickly
O'er the land which gave Him birth;
Though the vine-clad hills of Judah
Lie in misty darkness dim,
Stretching out no hands of greeting
Eagerly to welcome him.

He is coming—coming quickly,
And his feet once more shall set
On the dusky hill-top shaded
Purple-crowned Olivet;
For where once despised, rejected,
Where, for man, as man He trod,
He shall stand the manifested,
Mighty Saviour, Son of God.

He is coming! Like the lightning,
Shining out from east to west,
He will come—through clouds of darkness
Sun of Righteousness confessed;
For these wars, and darkening rumors,
Are but thunder claps before;
Lord Jehovah's voice is speaking,
"Jesus Christ is at the door!"

He is coming! They who listen
Hear the rushing golden bells;
See the distant white robes glisten
Which the High Priest's advent tells:
Smell the sweet pomegranate's fragrance
Floating on the laden air:
Know the spotless feet are pressing,
Lingering, willing still to spare.

Dim though waves of sea are roaring,
Men's hearts failing them for fear,
Looking for the things wicked coming,
Cast for shadows dark and drear
We will trust that our redemption
Promised long, is drawing nigh,
For they say to patient watchers,
"Christ the Lord is coming by

[illegible] And the trumpet
Mightily shall sound,
Calling to the wondrous meeting
All who rest in Christ around
Watching Him any moment,
Collecting all his ransomed home.
He is coming, coming quickly
Then shall dead arise, come.

London Christian

Our Pulpit.

The Buried Talent.

[illegible] kingdom of heaven is [illegible] man travelling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods."—Matt. xxv. 14.

The utterance of the words in this and the preceding chapter was occasioned by an incident which took place during one of our Lord's last days in Jerusalem. The rebuilding of the temple, begun by Herod, was being still carried on; and it would appear from xxiv. 1, that some important additions to the temple buildings had just that time been made. Jesus had, however, passed in and gone out again without seeming to have noticed them; and His disciples called His attention to them as He was departing. Jesus turned and gazed, but with a look of sorrow that must have awed the hearts of all beholders. "See ye not all these things?" He asked; "verily I say unto you, there shall not be left here one stone upon another that shall not be thrown down." The impression which the reply had made could not be readily effaced, and as Jesus "sat upon the Mount of Olives the disciples came to Him privately, saying, Tell us when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of Thy coming, and of the end of the world?" These two chapters form the answer. He lifts the veil from the future, but through all His words there breathes and burns the intensest, most anxious care for them. It is not the world's future only on which they gaze: it is their own. In the scenes that are unfolded they themselves are moving. In parable after parable He sets forth the sure and unalterable connection which exists between that future and the present, between the reaping then and the sowing now. Far off though that future of ours may be, and glorious or terrible the things it brings with it, we are its makers. With hands that reach down through that mighty lapse of time we are fashioning it daily, and giving to it the form which it then shall wear.

In this parable of the talents the picture is clear and strikingly appropriate as a representation of Christ and His Church in their present relationship: "A certain man has occasion to travel to a far country. Intending to return again he does not remove his possessions, and his goods must meanwhile be put under care and management. This is the more easily arranged that he leaves behind him not only goods but servants also—"his own servants." If, on the one hand, his affairs need to be looked after, his servants, on the other, require to have employment given them that the master may have the fruit of their labor. To one, therefore, he entrusts five talents. The talent was equal to three thousand shekels, and a shekel to four denarii. If we take the denarius as equal to seven-pence-halfpenny of our money, the five talents would amount to £1875. To another he committed two talents, or £750; and to a third one talent, or £375, which, though only one-half of what had been given to the second, was still a very considerable sum. Having made these arrangements the master went on his journey. Two of the servants, realizing the power of which they were now the possessors, entered into the markets and bought and sold, and made gain. But the other, putting his own ease before the joyous consciousness of power and loyalty to his master, went and digged in the earth and hid his lord's money. A long time elapsed, but at last the day came, eagerly anticipated by the diligent and successful, and dreaded by the idle. The master stood once more among his own, and there was joy for him and them. Seven talents had become fourteen. He that had received five brought ten, and he to whom two had been given brought four. But, when the time came for the third to speak and the master's eye rested on him, there was no gladness. During all these years he has done nothing, and his talent is returned just as it left the master's hands. He gives it back, not with shame and lowly confession of his fault, but in a spirit of utter self-complacency and with what is practically an accusation of his lord. "And while for them there is honor and higher trust, for him there is deprivation and darkness, and anguish.

That is the story of the parable. In the present attempt to read its teaching we shall limit ourselves to the unprofitable servant and his failure. We shall look on the buried talent rather than on the seven which were so faithfully employed. It is evident that on this point the main interest of the parable hangs, and that if this error be escaped the purpose with which the parable was spoken will then only be fulfilled. Where then among the realities of the Christian life shall we find what is pictured in the talent hid in the earth?

To answer this question we must break it into two, and before showing how the talent may be buried, determine, first of all, what the talent is. It is true this latter point might be left inquirable without robbing the parable of all its force. There is nothing we possess which is not a trust committed to us. We might lay our hand at random upon any one of those things as the talent of which the Lord speaks, and thereby strike a chord which would sound deeply and long in almost every heart. We might identify it in turn with the powers of mind and body with which He has endowed us; with the means and opportunities He has given us of self-culture and of service; with the light shed upon us by experience, by science, and by revelation; with the place we fill and the circle we move in; and in each identification we should compel the acknowledgment that the parable had not been spoken in vain. But though this mode of interpretation could not but be fruitful of better thought and purpose, the great lesson of the parable might after all be missed. It is evident that the treasure committed to the servants cannot possibly mean all of those things. Many of them are at once excluded by the statement that the talents were distributed "to every man according to his several ability." It is clear therefore that the talent is something different from ability. The ability was already there, and the talent was something which enabled it to render this high service. Had the servants not received the money the field in which they won their triumphs would have been closed against the ablest of them all. They could not have bought and sold and made gain. The master had first to give them of his own, that it might be given back to him again with increase.

But even where the emphasis has been placed upon the statement that the talents were distributed according to the measure of a pre-existing ability, different replies have still been given to the question, what the talent is. One answer has been that it is our place and standing in the church; a second is, that the talents are the gifts of the Holy Spirit. We have only to notice another feature in the parable, however, to have the answer sieved up within still narrower limits. The talent is something that can be buried. Position in the church may be misused or its duties neglected, but I do not know that it can be said in any circumstances to be buried. The Holy Spirit may be resisted and grieved; we may despise and refuse the gifts He brings; but if these be slighted with, the talents given this part of the parable is not only meaningless, but must prove a stumbling-block in the way of any rational interpretation. We cannot bury the Spirit's gifts and, when the Lord deals with us, dig them up again and present to Him His own. But there is one question which will lead us to a decisive answer. What kind of goods is it which this man has to leave behind him? We lift the veil of the parable and look on Jesus whom it shadows forth, whose servants these disciples were, and of whose goods they were about to receive. What then was it which constituted the wealth of Christ, the wealth with which He himself traded, and with which He left His servants enriched when He went away into the far country? It was not silver or gold or houses or lands, for He had not where to lay His head; and His apostles, when asked for an alms, had to reply "silver and gold have we none." It was a grander possession. It was untold wealth to the spirit, boundless enrichment to the heart, a deep, exhaustless well-spring of joy and power to all the life. It was the consciousness of sonship to God, the knowledge of present and full salvation, the possession of all things in God now and for ever. This was the joy of the Lord Jesus, and He died that we might share it. It was the gospel of the kingdom which He declared, and which in His name is being proclaimed to-day. The light of this truth had been dawning upon those men who listened as Jesus spoke with them there upon the hill-side. They had not yet seen its full unshed glory. But when His own activity was ended, and the cup, tasted in Gethsemane, had been drained on Calvary, and the Mediator must needs depart for the far country, He did then what in the parable He represented himself as doing. He divided unto them His goods. During those forty days in which He appeared only to "His own servants" the meaning of the cross was made plain, and the assurance of the mighty love of God was made to burn like a perpetual altar-fire within their souls. It was the possession of this treasure which separated between them and all others: "He came to His own and His own received Him not; but as many as received Him to them gave He authority to become the sons of God." It is the distinguishing mark of the servants of Christ to-day. They rejoice in sins forgiven, in reconciliation with the Father, in acceptance in "the Beloved." They are God's sons and daughters, once far off, but now brought nigh, and made to stand by the side of the stainless and glorious Son of God, who loved them and gave Himself for them.

This, then, we believe to be the talent of the parable. It is the redemption through Christ's blood, the assurance of sonship, the heirship of the promises which are all yea and amen in Christ Jesus. Paul speaks of this as the trust committed to him: "We were allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel" (1 Thess. ii. 4); "the glorious gospel of the blessed God which was committed to my trust" (1 Tim. i. 2). It is the deposit which he implores Timothy to keep, "avoiding profane and vain babblings and oppositions of science falsely so called" (1 Tim. vi. 20). The possession of this talent is power for all service. Till our heart is kindled with the fire of that joy our sacrifice lies cold and dead upon God's altar. We yearn but we do not attain; we purpose but we never fulfill. There are times when some better thing discovers itself in us, but, like rocks left bare by some far-receding tide only to be swiftly covered and hidden again, this is soon submerged beneath the waters of the heart's impurity. But when the joy of sonship flames up within the bosom it is as if the soul were claimed by its rightful Lord and Master. The heart is touched and changed. The darkness of sin is swept away before the brightness of God's glory. On this changed heart the Spirit's anointing can be bestowed as it was upon the believers on the day of Pentecost. It can believe all the goodness of God, and receive the outpouring of His power. The treasure is neither our place in the Church nor the gifts of the Spirit, but that which goes before both and makes both possible. And it is distributed according to each man's "several ability." One is able to receive the trust more fully and readily than another. There are some to whom that love is akin, and whose whole life is at once flooded with the light of its glory; and there are others to whom it is so strange and unreal that they can but catch a ray struggling through the darkness. The question is not how much Christ can give, but how much we are able to receive; we are not straightened in Him but in ourselves. This is a treasure also which can be buried. It may be known by the intellect, but not grasped to the heart. It may be [illegible] ed, rejoiced in, used. It may even be talked of and yet kept very far from the inmost thought and the daily life. While the words that speak of it may be upon the lips, the thing itself may lie hid in the ground beneath the feet; it may be cast out from the place of the living and set, as it were, in the place of the dead.

We have attempted to show what the talent is; we have now to look at the other question, the answer to which has just been hinted, how the talent may be buried in the earth. It is by no means necessary to suppose that the unprofitable servant came to the determination to hide his Lord's money the moment he received it. It is possible that it was once a possession livingly held and rejoiced in, but that a time came when that joy passed from his heart as the cloud of God's glory removed from the midst of the congregation of Israel. If it was so, a hint may be given as to the cause in the Lord's words; "Thou wicked and slothful servant." Sin came in with its estrangement and darkness, and the joy of the Lord was cast out together with the strength which it yielded. It might have been recovered. The truth remained, and it spoke of mercy. It told that there was forgiveness with Him that He might be feared, and that "if any man sin we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous." But no attempt was made to cleave a path through the darkness into the light of God's favour. No earnest cry was lifted that God might restore to him the joy of His salvation. And this was done, not because the man had come to disbelieve that the message was from God, or that he doubted God's sincerity. The truth was still known, and in a sense believed in; but it was no longer like a sun in the soul's firmament shedding brightness and warmth over the whole life, and making it fruitful of all good. It was believed in and occasionally remembered, but kept away from all contact with the life. Or, it may have been, that the reception of the truth had never been so thorough as we have now supposed. The gospel may have come in for a moment, like a body impinging on some elastic substance only to be swept out again by the inevitable rebound. Sin was loved too dearly in the parable with, and though the gospel was known, remembered, spoken of, it was not a joy and a hope. For him it changed nothing, it touched nothing. His life was in one sphere and this in another. The talent was hid in the earth and laid among the dead.

We might marvel at the madness of the man who could thus deal with earthly treasure which had been committed to him to use and to increase. But who needs to be told how far this madness is outstripped in the action of many in relation to the things of the kingdom of God! How many are there in the churches of this land whose talent is to-day lying buried in the earth. No man needs to tell them of the love of God; there is nothing they know better than they do the gospel. They believe that the Son of God came into the world and that He died, and why He died they know. They believe that His soul was made an offering for sin, that He died for the world and for them. They listen with cordial approval to the words which tell of a full and free forgiveness through His blood, and that all may be "accepted in the Beloved." They are not among those who doubt or despise these things. What difference, then, is their belief making between them and others, or between their own past and their present? Is that faith within them to-day a living joy and glory? Was it yesterday? Will it be to-morrow? Is it from hour to hour making the heart a well-spring of sweetness and pureness and love? Is it girding them with a strength for God's service, and bowing the whole life under the conviction that to the Father who hath so loved us, a son's, a daughter's loving service must be continually given? If the treasure be in the heart, if the love of God be realized, it must be so; if it is not so, then the talent has been put away. They have looked at it and scanned it and then removed it from all contact with the life. They have buried it in the earth. They may take it up at a communion season, or on some occasion when the heart is touched and softened for a moment, but is it not put away again into distance and concealment? They may recall it on a dying bed, they may dig it up and carry it with them as they enter their Master's presence, and plead, "Lord Jesus, Thou hast died for us;" but will He then receive His own with usury? Will they take with them a life that has been changed, purified, ennobled, because that treasure had been hid within it; or will they take back the talent just as they received it, having accomplished nothing?

We glance, in closing, at the unprofitable servant in the judgment. He, too, has to speak and tell his tale. The others have heard words of commendation and of promise; what awaits him? He lays down the one talent which he had received and as he had received it. It has been carefully preserved; there is nothing of it lost; and he explains now why it has been so jealously guarded. I do not think that we are to take what he says as an excuse for his having done so little, but rather as an excuse of his having done so much. He has kept the talent so very carefully because of an overwhelming fear. "Lord, I know Thee, that Thou art an hard man, reaping where Thou hast not sown, and gathering where Thou hast not strawed, and I was afraid, and went and hid Thy talent in the earth; there Thou hast that is Thine." A sense of the demands of Christ upon the life, weighs like a terrible nightmare on the hearts of hundreds, and makes some sort of relationship to the gospel an absolute necessity. These demands they have never yet complied with, and they know themselves too well to believe that they ever can fulfill them. Harder to them than the demand of the Egyptian taskmasters is the call for the heart's full, unwavering love, and for obedience to the holy will of God. There is no perception of the new way that is opened up, and that the gospel is the breath of life which will recreate the soul. They hear the demand for the fruits without observing that He who asks for them brings in His hand both the seed and the power which will lift it up into fruitfulness; and the reply of such a spirit ever is: "I know Thee, that Thou art an hard man, reaping where Thou hast not sown, and gathering where Thou hast not strawed." But what, then, is made of the gospel? It is taken, not as a means of rising into the life of righteousness, but as an alternative. The kind of belief that is accorded is not a belief unto holiness, but a belief which it is supposed will be accepted instead of the holiness without which it is said no man shall see the Lord. And in order that nothing of the intellectual apprehension of the gospel may be lost—that the talent may be kept entire—there is an earnestness displayed, real though sinful, that might make one weep to think how much there is to justify it, and how little results from it. How earnestly are meetings attended, and the Scriptures read! How strictly is the ear closed against the whisperings of doubt, and with what regularity and [illegible] observed! The gospel is guarded. So far as a merely intellectual grasp can preserve it, it is kept perfect and entire, though lying there dead and powerless in the midst of the earthly life. And why is all this care taken? Is it love? Is it because the gospel is a fountain of life, and an earnest of the inheritance which is to be? No! of all this there is nothing felt. It is fear. There is the conviction which cannot be escaped that these are God's words, and hence this outward devotion to the truth and honoring of the Lord with the lip while the heart is kept far from Him. Can we not conceive of them entering Christ's presence with this very cry: "We have jealously guarded and preserved Thy gospel truth, we have lost nothing of it; for we knew Thee, and Thy terror lay upon us; there Thou hast that is Thine—the word Thou gavest us?"

The Lord's words are like lightning flashes. The man stands there with the very wisdom and power of God made resultless with a soul on which the seed of the kingdom had been cast, kept barren and fruitless. His own lost life and the lost lives that were about him, which might have been reached and won for God, are witnessing against him. "Thou wicked and slothful servant"—thou didst not wish to break with sin and to quit the world's ways. Thou wast not earnest enough to cast off sloth and to bestir thyself to lay hold on God. Thy very fear was superficial, else thou hadst not stopped at what was merely external; thou wouldst have seen the heart's need of change and cleansing, and cry should have been forced from thee in anguish, but in truth, which I would have answered with light and salvation. "Thou shouldst have put My money to the exchangers, and then at My coming I should have received Mine own with usury." Had that truth been taken into the heart, and the heart been brought in prayer to the footstool of God, the Spirit's influences would have descended as the rain. He would have made the soil of the heart soft with showers, He would have blessed the springing thereof, and the fruit thereof would have shaken like Lebanon. Christ cannot miss receiving His own with usury, no matter when or how these tidings of love are received, if they are received in truth. He obtained it that day in Paradise from the thief who had died upon the cross. But now the love which this man has denied will deny him. The mercy which had waited so long before that closed door shall arise and depart for ever. It will enter now into the opened door of a loving heart to which it can bring an added blessing: "Take, therefore, the talent from him, and give it unto him who hath ten talents. For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance; but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath." Mercy has spoken her last word, and now gives place to judgment: "And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

The parable, it may be noticed in conclusion, points to one of the gravest dangers of the Christian life. The failure occurs not with him who had received the five talents, nor with him who had received two. He fails who had received the least. The little joy is apt to become in time no joy. Israel did not possess all the land, and those who were left undisturbed in it soon ensnared and oppressed them. Our safety lies in our advancing; our present possession in the joy of God is secured by its becoming an ever fuller possession. The life we leave unconquered by the might of love will conquer love; the talent which does not till and cover the earthly life will itself be covered and buried by that earthly life.

The English Baptist missionaries of the Congo Mission have visited Sanda, on the route between San Salvador and Stanley's Pool, their objective point, three times. The people of the towns which they have visited, though generally very suspicious, and ready to oppose their coming at first, generally desire to hear fully the Gospel message. In some instances they have asked the missionaries to remain and teach them. The roads are much better than those from the coast and donkeys are much more useful. The missionaries are anxious to push on at once to Stanley Pool.

Mrs. Mossell, wife of the African Methodist missionary at Port au Prince, Hayti, writes that all the churches are augmenting the missionary forces. Twenty Jesuits arrived the other day. Five Wesleyan ministers are expected within one month. Two Episcopal ministers will also be added to the strength of the Episcopal Church here. She asks for two other missionaries to be sent out for the African mission, and also for one hundred dollars to be divided among the two native preachers, so that they may be able to devote themselves exclusively to their work.

—The Free Church of Scotland Missionaries are about to publish a grammar of the languages spoken at Lake Nyassa. At Tanganyika Lake the mission post has been in great peril from an attack upon them by one hundred and twenty Arabs, who pointed their guns in the windows, and said, "Let us finish them before we go," but it was not so to be. The Congo Mission at San Salvador, five hundred miles from the mouth of the Congo, has become the center of a missionary work of great interest.

—The Board of United Hebrew Charities held its annual meeting recently, and reported receipts of $58,208, a much larger amount than was expected. The money was expended in relief of the distressed, by distribution of coal, clothing, medicines, and medical aid, etc. Emigrants and immigrants, wives and children, and others were helped, and an industrial school carried on. The school was opened in January, with five pupils. It has now a daily average attendance of sixty-nine.

—The Baptists are strongest in Southern cities, in Richmond first, Atlanta second, and Raleigh third. In Raleigh there is one Baptist to every seven of the population. In Richmond there is one Baptist to every four and three-quarters of the population.

—The Christian Vernacular Education Society for India is doing a great work in that country. It expended last year $53,000 in training teachers and printing books. It gives religious instruction to 7,000 children.

—Mark Firth, a prominent Methodist in Great Britain and a princely benefactor of various charities, is dead. It is said that he has given $1,000,000 to the various Evangelical Churches.

—There are 44 Evangelical churches in Philadelphia.

Our Young People.

CHILDHOOD'S GOLD.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

They need not go so far away,
Through heat and cold, to look for gold
They sought beside us all or stay,
Our hands are full as they can hold.

Gold! Gold is poured out of the sky
From rise of sun till day is done;
While falling leaves it flashes by;
In light gold the rivers run.

'T was scattered all the way from school,
In stars and bells adown the dells
We children gathered aprons full,
Where little dandelion dwells.

And yellow Cowslip in our feet
Came like a king, his beard to bring,
And Columbine, while nod so sweet,
Shook gold upon our path gay thing!

What goblet glistens with such wine
As the bee sips from the buttercups
What gold beads on the wet grass shine,
Sparkling to breezy downs and ups!

Our homes are sweet apart the hills,
Where love is spee, and life is pure
And sunshine every season fills:
How can a country child be poor?

No soldiers scare our midnight homes,
No coffers hold our treasures hold
Dewdrops and sunbeams, stars and flowers
Gold! Gold! Who shares our childhood's gold

St. Nicholas.

A Blessing in a Poem.

Religious newspaper poetry has its use, though in literary quality it may be very humble. A Christian lady, gone many years since to the better land, once copied some verses, by an unknown author, upon the blank leaves of a little Bible. The Bible she gave as a present to her oldest son, then a child. The boy became a sailor. He roamed all over the world, and carried the Bible with him in his "sea-chest." One day the news of his mother's death was carried to him. This recalled to his mind the good Book she had given him, and also the lines traced by the hand of love upon its fly-leaves. He faithfully followed the counsel they gave him, and gave Christ his service and his love.

These facts came to the knowledge of the editor of a religious journal in New York city. He published the poem, introducing it by repeating its history in connection with the sailor. The poem makes no pretension to merit, but its excellence is in its pure and holy sentiment. It is entitled "A Mother's Gift" lines addressed to my Charlie," with a Bible," and the following is the opening stanza:

So young, you enter life's same race
In this—but, for your mother's sake,
The gift you will not spurn
And, O my child, in after years,
When faithful friends shall point out errors
Then to this volume turn.

Not long ago an elderly clergyman, the widowed father of the same young sailor, sat by the dying bed of a Christian sea-captain. One of the sick man's last acts was to point to his little Bible, that he carried with him through all his voyages, and call the minister's attention to a soiled slip pasted inside one of the covers.

It was a little poem, "A Mother's Gift," clipped from that religious journal. The captain's own mother had cut it out and placed it with her gift to her son, whose name, too, was "Charlie"—and it had been blessed to him.

During the late war a young Christian soldier from western Massachusetts lay sick in a hospital at Baton Rouge. His comrades had gone forward into action, and the brave boy chafed so bitterly in his home sickness and forced confinement as to aggravate his fever and threaten the worse consequences.

While his spirit was sinking into the gloom of despair, a draught of air tossed a bit of torn newspaper near him. He picked it up, and his eye caught two lines of a poem—the only lines legible on the paper—

No night so dark but Mercy brings
Some solace home on starry wings.

The consoling verses revived his hope and courage, and he began to recover. He carefully saved the lines, but it was not till long afterward that he knew they were part of a New Year's hymn written by his own father. The northern paper in which it was, printed had found its way to the army, directed to some soldier friend.—Youth's Companion.

Young Diamond Merchants.

A noted traveler, who wrote about the diamond mines of India a very long time ago, describes the work done by the children. In speaking of a visit to the principal mine of Golconda, he says: "A very pretty sight is that presented every morning by the children of the master-miners and of other inhabitants of the district. The boys—the eldest of whom is not yet over sixteen, or the youngest under ten years of age—assemble, and sit under a large tree in the public square of the village. Each has his diamond weight in a bag, hung on one side of his girdle, and on the other a purse, containing sometimes as much as five or six hundred pagodas.

"Here they wait for such persons as have diamonds to sell, either from the vicinity or from any other mine. When a diamond is brought to them, it is immediately handed to the eldest boy, who is tacitly acknowledged as the head of this little band. By him it is carefully examined, and then passed to his next neighbor, who, having also inspected it, gives it to the next boy. The diamond is thus passed from hand to hand amidst unbroken silence, until it returns to that of the eldest, who then asks the price, and makes the bargain. If the eldest boy is thought by his comrades to have given too high a price, he must keep the stone on his own account.

"In the evening the children take an account of their stock, examine their purchases, and class the diamonds according to their water, size, and purity, putting on each stone the price they expect to get for it. These children are so perfectly acquainted with the value of all sorts of gems that if one of them, after buying a stone, is willing to lose one-half per cent. upon it, a companion is always ready to take it."

"The diamond mines of Brazil were discovered by a curious circumstance in 1730. Some miners in searching for gold found some curious pebbles, which they carried home to their masters as curiosities. Not being considered of any value, they were given to the children to play with. An officer who had spent some years in the East Indies saw these pebbles, and sent a handful to a friend in Lisbon to be examined. They proved to be diamonds. A few were collected and sent to Holland, and were pronounced to be equal to those of Golconda. The news soon reached Brazil, and those who possessed any of the "pebbles" soon realized large sums of money. The Portugues Government laid a claim on all diamonds that might be found thereafter, a search was made, and riches were discovered."—Harper's Young Folks.

Egyptian Wonders.

[illegible] dreamed one night of an obelisk, and when he awoke ordered his engineers and his workmen to carve in solid stone the strange and useless device. An obelisk resembles nothing so much as the fanciful figure of a dream. It is a tall square pillar of a peculiar form, often carved with hieroglyphics, and commemorating the name and exploits of its founder. These solitary pillars of stone, sometimes more than a hundred feet in height, are formed of one block or piece, and must have been cut in the quarry with incessant labor. They abound in Egypt, and were a common decoration of its immense temples. Later, several of them were transported on great rafts or ships to the city of Rome. There are in all twelve in that city. One of them is one hundred and nine feet high without the base a solid piece of red granite. Europe has despoiled Egypt of its obelisks. Paris has one; London another, crumbling away on the banks of the Thames; and we have one in New York. The dream of the Egyptian prince seems to have a strong interest for all ages.

All Egypt, its history, its cities, its buildings, its mummies, gods, cats, hawks, hills, sphinxes, the Memnonium, resemble the fancies of a dream. The Nile flows through its sandy plain, and covers it with fertility. Late discoveries have shown that it is one of the longest rivers in the world, rising among the high mountains of Africa, and fed by immense lakes. In Egypt it overflows its banks every year, and covers the land with a rich deposit of mud. On its shores are the ruins of the strangest of all architecture, the works of the ancient Egyptians—immense, grand, awful. They are the largest of all buildings. St. Paul's cathedral, in London, or the Cologne cathedral or even St. Peter's, at Rome, would be lost in the vast circuit of the colonnade of Luxor and Karnak. As one passes them by moonlight on the smooth stream, they seem, it is said, the palaces of giants. One temple was a mile and a half in circumference. The Pyramids exceed all other buildings in strength, height, and durability. Some of them are four or five thousand years old.—Harper's Young People.

Power of a Child's Kiss.—In a prison at New Bedford, Mass., there now is a man whom we shall call Jim, and who is a prisoner for a life sentence. Upon last spring he was regarded as a desperate, dangerous man, ready for rebellion at any hour. He planned a general outbreak, and was given away by one of the conspirators. He plotted a general mutiny, or rebellion, and was again betrayed. He then kept his own counsel, and, while never refusing to obey orders, he obeyed them like a man who only needed backing to make him refuse to. One day in June a party of strangers came to the institution. One was an old gentleman, the others ladies, and two of the ladies had small children. The guide took one of the children on his arm, and the other walked until the party began climbing the stairs. Jim was working near by, sulky and morose as ever, when the guide said to him:

"Jim, won't you help this little girl up stairs?"

The convict hesitated, a scowl on his face, and the little girl held out her hands to him and said:

"If you will, I guess I'll kiss you."

His scowl vanished in an instant, and he lifted the child as tenderly as a father. Half way up stairs she kissed him. At the head of the stairs she said:

"Now you've got to kiss me, too."

He blushed like a woman, looked into her innocent face and then kissed her cheek, and before he reached the foot of the stairs again the man had tears in his eyes. Ever since that day he has been a changed man, and no one in the place gives less trouble. May be, in his far away western home, he has a little Katie of his own. No one knows, for he never reveals his inner life; but the change so quickly wrought by a child proves that he has a heart, and gives hope that he may forsake his evil ways.—Covenant.

How to see a Seed Grow.—Many little folks wonder how a seed grows. Some boys and girls have taken up the seed after planting it in the ground, and thereby prevented it from taking root. We may, however, see the roots shooting out from the hyacinths and other bulbs that we grow in glasses in our windows, and in this way we may see other seeds sprout and shoot.

A gentleman, to gratify his little sons, took a glass tumbler, around which he tied a bit of common lace, allowing the lace to hang or drop down in the center of the glass. He then put enough water in the glass to cover the lower part of the lace, and in this hollow he dropped two sweet peas. The little boys were told to look at them every day and they would learn what was going on under ground with similar seeds.

Next morn the boys hurried from the breakfast-room to look at the glass with the peas in the south window. They found that, while they were fast asleep, the little brown skins had burst, and a tiny white sprout was seen on the side of the pea. The little sprouts soon grew long enough to reach through the holes in the lace, and on the top of the peas two little green leaves were seen.

In time, the boys saw the white thread-like roots reach almost to the bottom of the glass, while the green leaves grew large and gave way to a stalk or stem. In this way most seeds may be seen to grow.—Sabbath-school Visitor.

Pick up that oyster shell. Do you see a little hole in the hard roof of the oyster's house? That explains why there is a shell but no oyster. A little creature called the whelk, living in a spiral shell, dropped one day on the roof of the oyster's house. "The little innocents," some one has called the whelks. "The little villains," an oyster would call them, for the whelk had an auger, and bores and bores and bores until he reaches the oyster itself, and the poor oyster finds he is going up through his own roof. He goes up, but he never comes down.

A writer speaks of noticing on the shores of Brittany the holes in the oyster bored by its enemy, both burglar and murderer we should call him.

"A little sin, a little sin!" cries a boy who may have been caught saying a profane word, or strolling with a bad associate, or reading a bad book, or sipping a glass of beer. "Don't make too much of it!" he says.

Young friend, that is the whelk on the oyster's back. You have given the tempter a chance to use his auger, and he will bore and bore until he reaches the center of all moral worth in the soul, and draws your very life away.—

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI, AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 13, 1881.

At the Feet of Jesus.

This is the attitude of a true disciple. It is expressive of humility, docility, dependence. The disciple has everything to learn. He is ignorant, he may be under the dominion of error, and he comprehends but partially and imperfectly the things which make for peace and righteousness. He is a learner, and is willing and anxious to be taught. He sits at Jesus' feet. His heart is open, his ear is attent, his eye is upon the gracious teacher. He is more absorbed in Him than in the outward affairs of life. The enemy occupy his hands, and make his daily hours busy with the cares of the world; but he does not withdraw himself from Christ. He may intermeddle with all knowledge, and study what the great and good have written, but Christ alone, his Master, and directly from Him he receives the word of life. The art of Christian discipleship, if such an art there be, is in this absolute deference and submission to Christ, and all real disciples are taught of God through Christ. Mary "sat at Jesus' feet, and heard His word." This is a picture of beauty, as clearly cut as a cameo, and as spirited in its lines as the most exquisite engraving. It stands for all time as the best type of the humble, worldly, reverent, studious disciple as a learner in the school of Christ. It illustrates the Master's words: "Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." All the riches of wisdom and knowledge are hid in Christ, and it is at His feet that these riches are discovered to us. The attitude of the soul toward Christ is everything. The glory of the Lord will never be seen in His face until in humility, self-abasement and faith, we sit at His feet. The glory beams only upon those who look up, and the eyes fall only upon the lowly and contrite ones. We may be sure that Jesus delights in such disciples, but how complete and satisfying is the joy of those who have come to realize that Christ is their teacher and Lord!

There is in Him the teaching of Himself. The teacher is Himself "the power of God and the wisdom of God." If He had only lived, and said nothing, the light flashing from His person would have been greater than that which shines in the words of prophets and scribes. If man never spake like this man, it is also true that never man lived like this man. In other cases the treasure is in earthen vessels, but in Him it is in a golden. His teaching life and His teaching character are absolutely perfect. At the feet of such a person we can sit, and feel that we are honored by such intimacy. Whatever He may say, the background of His personality is steadily luminous. He is Himself the great lesson, and the faultless illustration of a perfect and glorious manhood. It is not so of Moses, Paul or John. In them the ideal is blurred, and the outlines, at some points, are indistinct. In Christ the teacher Himself is perfect.

When we pass to the word-teaching of Christ we have at least the good truths of all truth, and the words which are spirit and life. Here we sit at His feet, not only when we study His own words, but also when we pour over those of Christ inspired men. It is the Spirit of Christ in them that gives authority to the words of evangelists and apostles. We sit at the feet of Paul only as he sits at the feet of Christ, and thus, whether our text be in the prophets, gospels or Epistles, we sit at the feet of Jesus, and hear His word. The Spirit of Christ is the inspiration of all Scripture, and in some sense it is true that the devout in all ages have sat at the feet of Jesus. The disposition of the heart, and the recognition of a personal Redeemer, have been the same. In this inquiring, receptive state of mind, how powerfully and clearly Christ teaches. Under the spell of His words, how the heart burns, and how the whole Bible glows with promises and consolations! The good part, once chosen at the feet of Jesus, becomes a precious treasure that cannot be wrested from us. It is there that the heart surrenders, the final choice is made, and the imperishable blessing is received.

In some degree all true believers are taught by the Spirit. How much, and how truly, depends upon this attitude of discipleship. The "spirit of truth" was given to those who sat at the feet of Jesus after He ascended. They were at the feet of their invisible and glorified Lord when the baptism of fire came upon them. It is while at His feet that the Spirit of the Son is sent forth into our hearts, "crying Abba, Father." "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." Christ teaches through the Spirit, even as He is glorified by the Spirit. This is the complement of His office as our teacher, and the completion of the work. The need of the Holy Spirit is absolute. We have sat at the feet of Christ to little purpose if we have not realized this divine illumination, and felt the presence of the Comforter. How and where is the gift of the Holy Spirit to be sought? It is at the feet of Jesus. This attitude of discipleship includes all the conditions. Divested of pride, purged of self, humble, contrite, believing, with the whole heart open and waiting, and expecting the promised blessing. The only difficulty is in coming to Jesus, sitting at His feet. It is only the upward look, the eye that gazes from the lowliest vale of humility that gets so much as a glimpse of the spirit-giving Saviour.

What fulness of blessings are for us in Christ, in Him who lived that we might learn of Him, who spake that we might hear, and who ascended that He might flood the trusting and waiting soul with supernatural light! At Jesus' feet is the only place of rest and peace. Here only have the perplexed and the sorrowing, the guilty and the penitent, found rest unto their souls. At Jesus' feet, if we can only get there, and there abide, we shall be so charmed with the sweetness and fulness of its bliss as to desire nothing more this side of heaven.

A Working Missionary.

Dr. Patterson, superintendent of our missions in Mexico, is one of the busiest and hardest workers we know of. He has under his charge thirty Mexican preachers and twenty Mexican teachers, working in more than seventy different places. To supervise and direct such a work as this, to maintain its vigorous operations, and to extend it constantly requires the best administrative ability, and great power of endurance. Then we are to remember that Bro. Patterson has been subjected to great perils in the prosecution of his arduous mission, sometimes barely escaping with his life. He has suffered much, as well as labored. Roman fanaticism is watching his movements, and its emissaries are often upon his track. In spite of the dangers and difficulties, however, the work is spreading, and it would seem to be limited only by the lack of means to build churches and schools, and to employ preachers and teachers.

In looking at this mission field, and what has been done in it, we are to consider that it is but eight years ago that our church entered it. The fruits, in proportion to time and money and laborers, have been exceedingly gratifying, and should stimulate the church to increased zeal and liberality in its support.

The business and commercial minds of the country are showing a wonderful interest in regard to Mexican affairs. Capt. Eads' Tehuantepec Ship-Railway will probably be built within a few years. Telegraph and railroad lines are under way, and will soon enter Mexico from Texas. It will not be long before we can go from New Orleans to the City of Mexico in a Pullman sleeper without change of cars. The relations of this country with the Mexican Republic are likely to grow more and more intimate and friendly, a large international commerce will be developed, and the citizens of both countries will mingle in social and business life much more extensively than in the past. Our missionary operations, while they have contributed to bring the two Republics nearer together in political and commercial intercourse, will be strengthened and enlarged by the result. A Southern Methodist Conference in Mexico is among the probabilities of the not very distant future. The work on the border and that in the center will meet, after awhile, and the whole will soon be nearer to us than some of the Conferences in the West and on the Pacific Slope.

It is not, however, merely a work of convenience, but one of mercy. Here is a large population sunk in ignorance and superstition, without God and without hope. The Protestant mission work is confined mainly to the lower and most degraded class. We are giving the gospel to the poor of that country—to those who sit in darkness and in the shadow of death. They are at our door, the door of the Southern churches especially, and the man of Macedonia is over there—the man of Mexico is calling. God, in His providence, is bringing the country nearer to us, making it more accessible.

Everything points to the present as the opportune time for a forward movement in our Mexican missions. Something has been done, much considering the amount bestowed and the number employed. But this is only an earnest of the harvest that waits for us. The wisdom of Mexican mission has been demonstrated by the results. We should now be ready to support it in a manner worthy of its growing magnitude and expanding promise. Prayer and effort have been answered and blessed. By every token we are called to this work; the Divine hand points this way. God has wrought mightily to assure and strengthen our faith, and to silence doubt and misgiving.

Hitherto our efforts, so far as the church at home is concerned, have been tentative. We have been timidly waiting to see the expediency of the movement, and what it might promise. We now emerge into the light of assurance and demonstration. This work is of God. We have now no pretext for holding back, none for distrust. No door is wider open than this; there can be no clearer or louder call to missionary duty. To be languid in our interest, or to withhold our generous offerings now, is to shut our eyes to an open vision, and to reject the plainest indications of Providence.

Bishop Kegner, we believe, contemplates visiting Mexico in a short time. If he goes he should go full handed, and with power to draw, or with letters of credit sufficient to build and to buy, and to give a new impetus and wider range to our missionary operations. Whether he goes or not, Dr. Patterson is there, the judicious, the indefatigable, the heroic superintendent, with his corps of self-sacrificing preachers and teachers.

To the Stewards.

The stewards are a most important body in our church system. I see not how we could get on without them, or some analogous body of workers. We have many faithful men in this department of church labor, and the church is greatly indebted to them for the efficiency of her ministry; but I think it possible that the methods of the stewards, in some regards, might be improved. I think, from observation and somewhat extended inquiries, that it is the custom in most towns and cities to use the money put in the hands of the stewards, first, in paying what may be called the current or running expenses of the church. For example, if gas is used, it is said the gas company must be paid, the organist must be paid and the sexton must be paid. Certainly all these claims are just, and ought to be paid; but does it follow that they must be paid first? Are gas companies, the organist and sexton more important to the church, or necessary to the spread of the gospel, than the ministry? We could and in many places do get on without gas, organist or sexton, but could we get on at all without a gospel ministry? It is quite common to pay these church house keeping expenses first, and pay to the pastors, the presiding elder and preacher in charge whatever is left, and then go before the congregation and say: "We are so much behind with our pastors, and appeal to you for help." Now, I suggest to the stewards a complete change of this programme: pay your pastors first; then, if behind with other claimants, all of whom are legally secured, and can collect their claims by law, go before the congregation and state the case. Let the representative of the stewards ask for the means to pay these just and legal debts. And here the pastor can, as he could not if the money were coming to him, speak for the stewards, and ask that these just debts be promptly paid. Let assessment collections be paid to the pastors as collected according to the pro rata of their allowance. If there must be public and special appeals, let it be for the church house-keeping expenses, which are simply business affairs, as much so as grocer's bills.

I suppose no one will object to the proposed change of method on the ground that the debts due the gas company, the organist and sexton are collectable by law, and must be paid, while the "allowance" to the pastors are only allowances of honor, and not collectable by law, and, if not paid at the end of the Conference year, are cancelled by lapse of time. I know we have in our church this "statute of limitation," in regard to the "allowances" made to pastors, but fortunately not so in relation to other laborers who give their time and labors to the church, else I fear we should be able to secure the service of but few in these departments.

As no man, with intelligence enough to preach the gospel among us, expects to accumulate money by preaching, but expects only a reasonably comfortable support, there should be in no church member's mind any indifference to the support of the pastors because it is not a legal obligation, and because it is barred demand at the close of the Conference, if not paid, by our church statute of limitation; but rather a quickened sense of honor and duty, because it is an offering to the Lord. [illegible] will I offer burnt offerings unto the Lord, my God, of that which costs me nothing." W.

Denominationalism.

The last decade was characterized by an unfair development of latitudinarianism. Formerly it was only the High Church men who sneered at the "sects" and "sectarianists," but of late even many of the so-called sectarians have grown restless and reckless, looking upon denominationalism as antiquated and superfluous. Non-sectarian is the favorite catchword of our ecclesiastical amalgamationists. Non-sectarian, hence universally commendable; non-sectarian; hence well-pleasing to God. With many slatnech denominationalism is synonymous with fanaticism and bigotry. They advocate a continuous approximation of the different denominations toward each other. Away, they say, with all barriers and exclusiveness. The true man of God, of strong convictions, of clear perception, of transparent views, is decried as wanting in Christian love, because he cannot conscientiously, with ease and cordiality, affiliate with the adherers of other ecclesiasticisms.

Arminianism, Calvinism, Apostolical Succession, etc., mean "some thing." The advocate of one cannot be the champion of the other; they may love each other as brethren in the Lord, but cannot doctrinally agree. Whenever such agreement is pretended, I cannot help but believe that said pretenders are not doctrinally informed and established, or are insincere.

I fear that many church members are lamentably misinformed in regard to the doctrines of their church. We have not enough doctrinal preaching. Too many of our torch-bearers of the Christian church are disciples of the apostles of latitudinarianism, namely, the self-styled evangelists who traverse the land. Like them they deal in sentimentalism and arrange and rearrange wreaths of attractive anecdotes.

The overgrowth of ecclesiastical latitudinarianism is a great evil, for, assuredly, it is the prolific mother of indifferentism. How intimately indifferentism is connected with infidelity I need not here set forth.

God has honored denominationalism in that, by means of its influence, the church, as a whole, has met with unprecedented success. It has long been and still is the recognized safeguard of the Divine revelation and of Christianity undefiled.

The question of greatest importance with me is whether the denomination of which I am a member comes nearest to the Biblical ideal. Readily admitting that all orthodox denominations agree in regard to the essentials of the Christian doctrines, yet in matters of my soul's salvation even the so-called non-essentials are very important. I am under necessity of weighing them in the balance of revelation, and discarding them if found wanting.

That is an expressive presentation of the church of God given in the book of Revelation, x, 2. Here Christ, "the mighty angel," clothed with a cloud and a rainbow upon His head, is portrayed as having set His right foot upon the sea and His left foot on the earth. Of the sea, His enemies to curb and check them in their maddening career of opposition to Him; the earth, the church to protect it. The church is set forth under the figure of the earth. The earth contains within its womb precious stones and metals; the church is the repository of Divine treasures. The surface of the earth, to be productive, must be assiduously tilled, the church must aggressively and self-sacrificingly go forward, bearing precious seed. The soil of the earth's surface is not equally productive. In some instances one acre of good land will produce more than fifty acres of poor and sandy soil. Why till fifty acres of land when with one-fiftieth of labor we can secure an equally abundant harvest on one acre of good land? Denominations differ as the soil of our terraqueous ball. We have the choice between the marshland of the Baptists and the soil high and dry of the Episcopalians. Allow me, as a Methodist, to till Methodist soil, my own tract of land, well fenced and in a good state of cultivation. When I can afford it I will assist my neighbor, the Presbyterian or Baptist, but do not demand that I should remove the fence separating me from them. When I need help I shall ask for it on the same condition. In the meantime I shall, as Methodist, attend to my own business, and will be pleased if others shall do the same.

A.

The Fatal Surrender.

When the decimated Army of Northern Virginia could no longer successfully resist the Federal forces, a handful of the noblest soldiers that ever bore arms surrendered to Gen. [illegible] lost. But it might have been worse, for some of those who helped to conquer us have since helped us to stay the tides of oppression and tyranny which threatened to deluge our once prosperous and happy country. This was not the fatal surrender.

I have seen a man plow and sow when his bread depended upon his success as a tiller of the soil. But when the seed which he planted sprang up the weeds and grass also put in their appearance. A battle ensued, feebly however, till Gen. Sol brought down his reserve forces upon the field of strife. It was soon manifest that the natives were masters of the situation. The poor fellow, dispirited and routed, retired to the shade to lament his defeat.

But it might have been worse. For, although he was as shy of Sol as a mouse is of pussy, he would work enough in the shade to eke out a scanty subsistance. This was not the fatal surrender.

I have seen another who invested all his capital and energy and skill in commercial pursuits. For a time his gains were satisfactory, but by and by his losses were greater than he could bear, and the wreck of his accumulations was turned over to his greedy creditors. But it might have been worse. For he lost neither his good name nor his energy.

And another I have seen sinking down in his well-worn chair, having lost home and friends, energy and health, fortune and reputation. Hopeless and forlorn, he would sit for hours with his face buried in his hands. Though his lips moved not, his outward man seemed to say: "Last times, come and take me. I surrender unconditionally."

Surely this was the fatal surrender. No, it might have been worse. For I have seen still another man, rejoicing amid wealth and friends, and supported by those who are dearer than friends, embark upon the sea of life. His voyage for a time was prosperous, but, in secret, the great battle with this man was being fought. To the surprise of his friends, his fortune slipped from his grasp. He became desperate, his brain reeled, his clinging wife and trustful little ones were dragged down with him to humiliation and want. His great energy and active brain were brought under the dominion of King Alcohol, a fit companion for demons, and ready to commit "the great transgression." This was the fatal surrender. H. M.

Signor Gavazzi.

Signor Gavazzi, from Rome, educated for a Roman priest, but Liberal in sentiment, became a soldier in Gen. Garibaldi's army of liberation, which eventually drove out the foreign and Bourbon despots who ruled over the various kingdoms and little governments into which Italy was subdivided, including the temporal sovereignty of the Pope, and ending in the establishment of the kingdom of Italy, under Victor Emanuel, with Rome for its capital.

Signor Gavazzi is about the average height, and full, without being corpulent. He looks to be in admirable preservation, rosy in complexion, quick in movement, bright-eyed and strong-voiced. He is seventy-two years old. He is on a mission through the United States seeking help for the young Free Church of Italy, of which he is one of the founders and leading spirits.

He preached in the First Presbyterian and Baptist Churches in this city on Sunday, December 26, and lectured on Tuesday evening, the twenty-eighth, at Carondelet Street Church, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. We did not hear his sermons, but hear from others that they were able, evangelical and Scriptural. It was a rare treat to hear his lecture, which was historical, ecclesiastical and autobiographical. The church he represents is intensely Protestant, without bearing the name. It is not Presbyterian, Episcopal or Papal. It has adopted none of the creeds, Gavazzi says, because when they read the Scriptures and reached their doctrinal conclusions they knew nothing about Calvin, or the Reformers of England and Scotland. Gavazzi talks about repentance, justification by faith and regeneration, and consciousness of acceptance with God, much as evangelical Christians among us would.

There is considerable foreign accent on his tongue, but he has a free and felicitous use of English, and, with attention, can be pretty well understood. His manner is vivid and various, dignified, but sprightly, and at times a little humorous. He seemed to rejoice with exceeding great joy in the freedom, civil, intellectual and religious, which he and his countrymen enjoy. Religious toleration is perfect in Italy. "Leo," Gavazzi says, "growls and roars, but lions will. Let him roar; it does us good; it shows we are doing something to disturb him." W.

President Hoss, writing to the Holston Methodist of his recent visit to New Orleans, says:

"The scenery along the road from Magnolia, Miss., to New Orleans was of a kind very strange to me, in fact a perfect revelation. I never saw anything like it before. Great forests of cypress rise up from the wide-spreading swamps, forests whose every limb is garlanded with the long moss, and the sereh palm covers the whole face of the earth. Novelty is always a source of interest. I do not think, however, that I would like a permanent residence in the lowlands. I am a mountaineer to the bottom of my heart.

"At New Orleans I find ample opportunity to fill up the space of three days with sight-seeing of various sorts. The meetings of the Health Association were largely attended by delegates from every part of the country. I heard a good many papers read, and a good many discussions. Some were wise and some were otherwise. The ablest document brought before the association was the report of the Havana Yellow Fever Commission. It was read by Dr. Chaille, a prominent physician of New Orleans. It boldly takes the position that it is useless to discuss any question bearing on the origin of yellow fever, and that all efforts should be directed toward hindering its propagation. The doctors, as a general thing, are poor readers and poorer speakers. They do not well understand the usages of parliamentary bodies, and sometimes get into a nice tangle. It does not take one long, however, to see that there is an odium medicum, quite as intense as the traditional odium theologicum. It amused me no little to see two doctors speaking spitefully of each other because they held to different theories of yellow fever. You would be astonished at the diversity of sentiment on the subject. Some favor strict quarantine as the only and all-sufficient preventive; others insist on breaking up the quarantine altogether, and relying upon sanitation; others still endorse both. What is not known on the subject would make a very large book.

"None of the sights about the city interested me as much as the French Market. It is the largest I ever saw, and about the best. Here everything of which you can think is exposed for sale, and here in the early morning congregate in vast, surging crowd of human beings, a mixed multitude, representing every nation under the sun. The Jackson Square, the Lee Monument, the old Spanish Fort, the old St. Louis Hotel—where the carpet-bagger lived and died—the cemeteries and Carrollton, are all interesting places to visit.

"New Orleans is a city of contrasts. In some parts it is grand, elegant; in others old, ugly, repulsive. One thing that a stranger notices is the balconies. They are on every house. In the summer and autumn the people almost live on them. Just now the oranges are abundant in almost all the yards, great, ripe, golden ones that melt in your mouth."

Robert Lewis Keen, aged forty-six years, died on the fifth instant, at Mobile, Ala., where he had resided for three years past. He was the eldest surviving son of Mrs. P. A. Clarke, and left his home in this city, in 1852, for a residence in Brooklyn, N. Y. Shortly afterward he became a Christian, and has adorned his profession since by his quiet, upright and consistent life. Confined to his bed for nearly two months, his illness has been marked by the utmost patience and Christine resignation, and an abiding faith and joyful hope in the Saviour, whom he loved. His sister and brother were privileged to be with him during the last week of his illness. As his last hours drew near, he expressed great anxiety to go, and be "forever with the Lord." His end was perfect peace. His remains were brought to this city for burial, funeral services being held at the residence of Mr. William Clarke, on Friday, January 7. We knew Robert from his childhood, and esteemed him. His venerable mother, who was for many years identified with the Methodist Church in New Orleans, is living in Brooklyn, N. Y., enjoying a serene and beautiful old age, and waiting in hope for her summons to the home of the blessed. God has been pleased to call the most of her loved ones before her. May all the family meet at last in heaven.

The obituary of Mrs. Rachel F. Pettit, written by Rev. Dr. Marshall, which appeared in the ADVOCATE of December 30, owing to typographical errors, is republished this week. Sister Pettit was the revered mother of Mrs. W. H. Foster, and of Dr. A. Pettit, of this city. Dr. Marshall has done only justice to the life and character of this noble Christian woman. She lived her religion, enjoyed it, and loved the work and kingdom of her Lord. Her translation leaves her church and family bereaved, but the memory of her Christ-like spirit, and of her good deeds, will long remain a precious legacy to her children and to the Church. From our personal acquaintance with Sister Pettit, we had formed a high estimate of her worth. We tender to the afflicted family our deep sympathy.

Concerning the death of Rev. J. J. Smylie, of the Mississippi Conference, and of which we gave account in our last issue, Rev. J. T. Heard, writing from Enterprise, Miss., January 1, says: "It is my sad duty to inform you of the death of our beloved brother and fellow-laborer, Rev. J. J. Smylie, of the Mississippi Conference. He died this day, in Quitman, of appendexy, and will be buried to-morrow, in Shubuta. His family is left in great sorrow and distress, but surrounded by many warm and sympathizing friends. Let the church pray for them."

—Rev. W. H. Milburn has spent a few days in New Orleans, and was expected to leave during the present week. He preached at the Felicity Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on Sunday last, and delivered a lecture on Sheridan, at the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, on Monday night. The blind man eloquent is represented as being in excellent preaching and lecturing condition, and, as heretofore, delighting and instructing his hearers. We regret that we were not able to be among his auditors.

—Rev. D. C. B. Connerly, Principal of Hamburg High School, at Hamburg, Ark., gave us a call last week. He reports his school as flourishing, having at this time one hundred and fifty students in attendance. Bro. Connerly is well-known, especially in Alabama, as a successful educator. His school is located not far from the Louisiana line, and is accessible to a fine region of country. It deserves to prosper, and is worthy of patronage. We call attention to card of Hamburg High School, in this issue of the ADVOCATE.

—National Repository, December, 1880, is of equal merit as any of its preceding numbers. This number closes the life of the publication. It has not been a financial success. The enterprise has lacked adequate appreciation and patronage. It ought to have been well sustained, but it has not been. We part with the National Repository with regret, but we are glad to know that its able and venerable editor, Dr. Curry, will continue in the field of journalism as assistant editor of the Methodist.

—We are indebted to our friend, Rev. W. Cowell Brown, of Sheffield, England, for a copy of "The Constitution and Polity of Wesleyan Methodism." This is a handsome 12mo, of over 300 pages, by Rev. Henry W. Williams, D. D., and published by the Wesleyan Conference Office, London. It is a digest of the laws and institutions of Wesleyan Methodism, brought down to the Conference of 1880. We heartily thank Bro. Brown for this valuable work.

—Rev. Z. N. Parker, writing from Tuscumbia, Ala., December 29, says: "I have entered on my third year at Tuscumbia with bright prospects. The church has already paid off a large debt of three years' standing. The whole church is greatly encouraged, and enters upon the year's work with zeal."

A CHANGE.—Rev. J. M. Boland informs us that the district steward's meeting for the Union Springs district, Alabama Conference, has been put off until the close of his first round.

—The Western Methodist begins the New Year in a handsome new dress. A happy New Year's to our Western contemporary! May its shadow never grow less, and may it abide in strength and power for generations to come.

—The Mississippi Methodist is now published by J. J. Dement and W. P. Andrews. Rev. R. J. Jones, editor; Rev. W. P. Andrews, assistant editor. We wish the new editors a useful and pleasant career in journalistic experience.

—We have received a copy of the Minutes of the forty-first session of the Memphis Conference, November 17-22, 1880. It is a very handsome pamphlet. Printed by Rogers & Co., Memphis, Tenn.

EFFECTS OF THE FREEZE.—Most fortunately, says the Louisiana Sugar Bowl, of January 8th, the bulk of the cane crop had been converted into sugar, when last week's freeze came, so that in any event, the loss will not be heavy. In the Atakapas parishes little cane was left standing, but in Terrebonne and Lafourche there was more, and on the Mississippi river a greater percentage. However, as the weather has continued cool, with little sunshine, no cane has as yet spoiled, and we hope that the bulk of that frozen will yet be saved without material loss. We see no reason to change our estimate of the year's crop, made at the beginning of the grinding season, and still think it will reach 225,000 hogsheads—notwithstanding the Picayune's assertion that the crop has suffered a loss of twenty per cent.?

Some fears have been expressed regarding the condition of the seed cane and the rattoons; but we have conversed with sugar-planters of large experience, and they are of the opinion that neither were injured by the freeze, unless in cases of round mats which were too small.

The orange trees seem to be uninjured, excepting the burning of the leaves, most of which will probably drop. This exemption from injury is owing to the cloudy weather which followed the freeze, and the gradual moderation of the temperature.

A Liberal Proposition.

The Publisher is willing to furnish the ADVOCATE to those who are unable to pay for it when it may be ordered by churches raising a collection for the purpose, or by benevolent individuals who remit money for the object, at one dollar a year. That is to say, the ADVOCATE will give one-half of the amount of the regular subscription price in order that many poor and worthy people may be supplied with a religious paper. A pastor in the Mississippi Conference recently took up a collection in one of his congregations for the purpose of giving the ADVOCATE to those who were not able to subscribe for themselves, and, as the result, he has forwarded sixteen names with the money. There are many congregations that could do as well, or better, and thus confer a great benefit upon many who would otherwise be without a church journal, and a great blessing upon the church itself. There are not many people who cannot pay $2 a year for a paper, but there are a few in nearly every pastoral charge. In making the proposition above, we are doing all in our power to meet the destitution. Will the preachers and liberally-disposed laymen cooperate with us in this laudable work of benevolence?

SENATORIAL REPORTS.—If the secretaries of the Mississippi and Alabama Conferences will forward us such Conference reports as they desire published we shall take pleasure in giving them early insertion in the ADVOCATE. This reminds us of some things that it may be of general use to publish before the Conference minutes can be printed. Will the secretaries be kind enough to forward items?

SOUTHWESTERN BIBLE SOCIETY.—The thirty-first anniversary of the Southwestern Bible Society will be held in the First Presbyterian Church, on Lafayette Square, on Sabbath, the sixteenth instant, at half-past seven o'clock P. M. The address will be delivered by Rev. R. M. Balfour, D. D. All friends of the Bible cause, of all denominations, and the public generally, are invited to be present.

SECRETARY, January 1st.

Mississippi Conference, Assessments for 1881.

Vicksburg	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Jackson	50	400	85	485
Hazlehurst	50	200	215	415
Meridian	500	210	100	310
Rosedale	[illegible]	200	200	400
Woodville	[illegible]	200	40	240
Scobey	200	100	100	200
Williamsburg	200	80	40	120

Rev. Dr. Crosby, of New York city, has been elected to fill the place of Dr. Nelson on the Version Committee of the American Bible Society, and Rev. Dr. Crooks, of Drew Seminary, to fill the place of Dr. Hurst. The committee now stands as follows: Rev. Drs. Woodsey, J. Cotton Smith, Chambers, Kraith, Howard Osgood, Crosby and Crooks.

Personal and Other.

The people, says the New York Independent, know "George Eliot" as they do not know Miss Evans, or "Mrs. Lewes," or Mrs. Cross. We have spoken in another column of her literary character. As to her personal character, we would be glad to say nothing more, did the case allow, than that she was greatly respected by her friends; but it must be said that she was not only an unbeliever in the Christian religion, and wrote mercilessly, but that no sophistry can acquit her of the guilt of striking a deadly stab at the holy institution of marriage. She lived for years, in relations which wedlock only would have justified, with the renowned husband of another woman. She was a genius, but genius will be held of God accountable, whatever literary flunkeys may say, to his moral laws.

General Sherman is one of the happiest of talkers. His language is that of a soldier—quick, rapid, decisive; like that of a man used to instantaneous processes of thought, who knows what he thinks on any subject brought to him, and does not hesitate, if he so chooses, to express his opinions. They are not timid, polished, but evolved with the rapidity of a charge of musketry. The General of the Army sat, during a recent interview, in a large arm-chair, dressed in a jaunty, short sack coat; and, as he spoke with that quick, impulsive utterance so entirely his own, he kept nervously tapping his feet on the floor, changed his position rapidly, and during the latter portion of the conversation, when some friends joined him, he rose and paced the floor. To the listener the General's strong, rugged, characteristic face; the deep, heavy lines drawn round his eyes; the keen, piercing look out of his clear blue eyes, impart a striking force to whatever he says.—New York Independent.

—An American Archæological Society has been organized in Boston, which will as soon as possible send an expedition to excavate the site of Assos, where there are some of the best preserved Greek ruins extant. Assos, lying out of the line of ordinary travel, has been little studied by travelers, and there is reason to hope for discoveries that shall amply repay the labor and expense. A satisfactory firman has been obtained from the Turkish Government.

Mr. W. E. Forster, secretary of state for Ireland, although over sixty years of age, displays extraordinary physical vigor, and in the execution of his office seems indifferent to fatigue and impervious to its effects. His manner of answering questions is short, pungent, and in extreme cases somewhat imperious. His ordinary voice, however, falls pleasantly upon the ear and is that of a scholar and a gentleman. When roused to an effort of oratory, as during the House of Commons debate, more impressive than the rough but accomplished Yorkshire man and worsted manufacturer.—New York Independent.

Rev. Henry A. Buttz has been elected president of Drew Theological Seminary, as successor of Bishop Hurst. He has filled the chair of exegetical theology for a number of years, having been first employed as a teacher in the Seminary. President Buttz is a graduate of Princeton; in the prime of life, a fine scholar, especially in the Greek of the New Testament. He is a magnetic preacher, and is very popular where he has labored as a pastor or instructor. Drew is now well balanced with both comparatively young and mature minds in its faculty, and has a list of professors of which it may well be proud.—Zion's Herald.

Louis Auguste Blanqui, one of the leaders of the French Socialists, died last week, in Paris. He was seventy-five years old, and had spent thirty-five years in prison and ten in exile, and had been twice condemned to die, but had the sentence commuted both times literally at the last minute. He was a man of great learning and many accomplishments; he did not howl for blood or want war, but wanted to make great social changes in the world through political reforms. His book, "Eternity of the Stars," is an authority among astronomers.

The English New Testament revisers held their final, the one hundred and third session, November 9, when fifteen members were present, and sat for three days. The company has sat in all 107 days, and the average attendance has been sixteen on each day of meeting.

Amos Tappan Akerman, Attorney General during the greater part of General Grant's first term in the Presidency, died at his residence at Cartersville, Ga., on Tuesday evening last, Dec. 21. He was a prominent member of the Presbyterian Church.

It must be confessed that the building of a stable for twenty horses on top of a private mansion, access to which is obtained by a lift, is calculated to awaken a feeling of astonishment even in these days of nerves. Yet this is the case in a house just erected in Bolsover Street, London, by Mr. Sassoon.

The recorder of London, Sir Thomas Chalmers, M. P., made a good point, the other day, at Sunday observance. While he still bore testimony of Sunday-school teachers, that they were the very dullness of London on that day was a great comfort to a Christian man.

There was something significant in the remark of a speaker at the last Reunion convention, who said, "The only time I felt that I ever wanted to be a bishop was for an hour, was the hour in which I noted the great missionary triumphs of orthodoxy."

Mr. James Anthony Froude, the historian, is a regularly ordained deacon in the Established Church of England, and was a writer on Cardinal Newman's "Lives of the Saints."

M. Anderwert, who was recently elected President of the Swiss Confederation for 1881, committed suicide last week, in the public promenade, by shooting himself with a revolver.

Lord Beaconsfield says the London World, received $70,000 for fifty thousand dollars for his new novel, "Endymion."

One leaf of the royalty water lily, in bloom not long since at San Francisco, was seven feet across, and six others were about equal size.

Literary News.

The history of Baron Nordenskiold's voyage to the North East Passage is being published in no less than twelve different languages. Andrew Lang is preparing a volume on "The Library," for the "Art-at-Home Series." The life of Sir Rowland Hill, with the history of the penny postage, has just been issued in London by De La Rue & Co. T. B. Peterson & Bros. have ready a new edition of Mrs. Forrester's "My Heroine." N. Tibbetts & Son are bringing out "The Bible Student's Cyclopedia," written by A. C. Morrow. Madie Smith is seribed for three thousand copies of "Evolution" for his circulating library, and Smith for seven hundred and seventy-five for a similar purpose.—Watchman.

Apropos of the new revision of the New Testament, soon to be published in this country and in Europe, Scribner's Monthly will contain three articles; one of these, by Rev. Charles S. Robinson, D. D., on "The Bible Society and the New Revision," in which the record of the Society on this subject is briefly told; the second, by Professor George P. Fisher, of Yale College, showing "How the New Testament Has Come Down to Us," and the third a review of the revision itself, in which the excellence and thoroughness of the work of the American scholars will be pointed out. The first article appears in the January number.

Mr. Goldwick, says the London Athenæum, already known as a writer on German literature, is preparing for publication a book entitled "German Culture and Christianity." It is intended to give a complete history of the moral controversy in which, for more than a century, German culture has been engaged in opposition to certain Christian tenets. The chief aim of the book is to show that the attack, masked at times by various auxiliary movements, has always been directed mainly against the central tenet of Christianity. The history begins shortly before the time of Lessing and ends with 1880.

The following new volumes are announced in the "English Men of Letters Series:" "Charles Dickens," by Professor A. W. Ward; "De Quincey," by Professor Masson; and "Charles Lamb," by Rev. Alfred Ainger. "Wordsworth," by Mr. Frederick Myers, and "Dryden," by Mr. Saintsbury, are nearly ready.

The fourth and concluding volume of the Bryant & Gay "History of the United States" will be ready next month. It covers the period from the Revolution to the present time, including the Administration of President Hayes.

Robert Carter & Brothers announce "Wise Words and Loving Deeds," by E. Conder Gray; "Leaders of Men," by H. A. Page; "Master Missionaries," by A. H. Japp, and "Ada Vane," by Rev. Andrew Reed.

Archibald Forbes, the famous war correspondent of the London Daily News, is preparing for the Youth's Companion a series of articles relating to his personal adventures on the great battle-fields of Turkey, Zululand, and in the Franco-Prussian war.

Athens has a polytechnic school and a fine astronomical observatory; and the National University has fifty-two professors and one thousand two hundred and five students from Greece and all parts of Continental Europe.

The last general educational report shows that Massachusetts, of all the States, has the highest percentage of population of school-age enrolled in the schools, and also the largest average daily attendance.

—A reply to "A Fool's Errand" has been written by Mr. William L. Royall, a member of the New York Bar, late of Richmond, Va. The book is published this week by E. J. Hale & Son, of New York.

—"Thirty Years," a series of poems, old and new, by the author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," is announced by Macmillan & Co. Also a new edition of "Etching and Etchers," by P. G. Hamerton.

—J. K. Funk & Co., of New York, are publishing a cheap edition of Godet's celebrated "Commentary on Luke," with a preface and notes specially prepared for this edition, by Dr. John Hall.

—The new Illustrated Crown Edition of Tennyson's "Poetical Works" contains the "Ballads," just published, and is absolutely complete.

Mr. Edmund W. Gosse is making a selection of the best English odes from Spenser to Swinburne, and will write a critical and historical preface to the volume.

George S. Bell & Sons are just publishing an illustrated work on "Book-Binding of all Ages," with specimen and examples of workmanship.

Fifteen thousand copies of the London edition of Dr. Smiles's new book on "Duty" were sold on the day of publication.

Books and Periodicals.

BREAKERS BROKEN.—By N. P. B. Edited by Rt. Rev. W. C. Pennyhouse, D. D. Nashville, Tenn.: Southern Methodist Publishing House. 1881.

This is a very beautiful 12 mo volume of 209 pages. We have not had time to read it, but the following endorsement of editor and publisher is sufficient. Dr. Cunnyngham says:

"This little book is well written; the style is easy, clear, and lively; the story is natural, and is very finely interesting; the incidents are excellent, and the religious sentiment pure and earnest. The element of human love, which gives several chapters to the narrative, is chastened and refined, and is made to elevate and ennoble the life. Such love is of God. We trust the book will prove as profitable as it is entertaining."

Dr. McFerrin says:

"The Book Agent indorses the editor, and very cheerfully commends this beautiful story to the attention especially of the young reader. The style is charming, and the writer well sustains the narrative. The moral and religious sentiments predominate, and the book sparkles with literary gems."

Price, sent by mail, postage paid, 50 cents. Send orders to J. B. McFerrin, Agent, Nashville, or to Lafargue and Wilkins, 112 Camp Street, New Orleans.

We have received from R. W. Shoppell, publisher, New York, from Portfolio of Bible pictures, twenty six pictures, illustrating the International Sunday School lessons for the first six months of 1881. Each picture is a wood engraving in a sheet about tix inches by ten. The price is 35 cents for the lot, and a pretty good price for such pictures.

Good Company, December, 1880, No. 6, maintains the standard of excellence which this choice magazine has always exhibited. Among the articles are: Jails by Octave Thanet; Miss Mehetable's Romance, by Sophia Sweet; The Remnant of a Lost Nation, by Alexander McLean; Rose and the Doctor, by Ellen W. Olney; The Cochers of Paris, by John Joline Ross; under the Christmas Tree, poems, 1, Elaine Goodale, 2, Mrs. D. H. R. Goodale, 3, Dora Read Goodale; A Letter from a Eagle in the Wilderness; The Chinese in Boston; Interesting Autographs. Published by Good Company, Springfield, Mass. Price $4.00 a year.

The Contemporary Review, December, 1880, George Munro, Publisher, New York, has: 1, The Unity of Nature, by the Duke of Argyll; 2, Poets Corner, by Alfred Austin; 3, Young Bengal at Home; by M. Kinghton, LL. D.; 4, Professor Green as a critic, by Richard Holgson, Jr.; 5, Nihilism in Russia, by the Rev. Moritz Kaufmann; 6, Village Life in New England, by a Non-resident American; 7, What is the House of Lords, by Professor Romany Price; 8, An Autumn Rambles, by Lady Verney; 9, The Land League and its Work, by T. P. O'Connor M. P.; 10, China and its Foreign Relations, by Sir Rutherford Alcock, K. C. B.; 11, Dr. Pusey on Everlasting Punishment, by Professor J. B. Mayor; also "The Black Robe," by Wilkie Collins.

The Fortnightly Review, December, 1880, George Munro, publisher, New York, contains the following articles: 1, Political organization in General, by Herbert Spencer; 2, Young Ireland, by P. J. Smith; 3, Short Notes on English poets, by Algernon Charles Swinburne; 4, The Relations of the Houses of Parliament, by W. St. John Brodérick; 5, Industrial Shortcomings; An Address, by Mark Pattison; 6, Spinoza, by Leslie Stephen; 7, Mr. Wallace's Island Life, by Grant Allen; 8, Home and Foreign Affairs; also The Trumpet Major by Thomas Hardy.

American Agriculturist December, 1880 closes the thirty ninth volume of this "superior agricultural monthly." We know of no periodical of the kind that is so profusely illustrated, or that contains so great a variety of useful and instructive articles. It is a needed companion of the farmer, gardner and house-keeper. Published by Orange Judd Company, New York. Price, $1 50 per annum.

Gen. Grant is writing an article for the February number of the North American Review, advocating the Nicaragua Canal Scheme. The same number of the Review will contain a contribution by Judge Tourgee, author of "The Fool's Errand," entitled "Aaron's Rod in Politics," and one by Oliver Wendell Holmes, on "The Pulpit and the Pew."

The Magazine of Art for December, 1880, is full of the latest notes on art, and is adorned with many fine engravings on wood, reproducing designs from the best artists of Europe and America. The publishers are Cassell, Potter, Galpin & Co., New York. Subscription $3 50.

The American Agriculturist for January, 1881 has been received. This popular and useful journal comes laden with more than its usual supply of valuable and interesting articles.

Publisher's Department.

☞ We shall do our best to exclude fraudulent advertisements of every description from the ADVOCATE, and ask our friends, in ordering goods from the leading merchants of New Orleans and elsewhere, as represented in our columns, will mention having seen the advertisement in the ADVOCATE. We will also take pleasure in attending personally to any commissions for our friends in the country with which we may be favored, while endeavoring our advertisers as being worthy of their patronage.

"EOF."

It foreshapes is used for concealing thought,
As one of the French philosophers taught.
We can find no fault with our English speech
For it puts the power within our reach.
And as short as this little word "fault" appears,
It is made the mask for many blears.

"Fault" as the thing may be slimy or salt
If the former, she'll make but little complaint
For the slipperiness which it turns a deceiving name
To a little which signals both ways the same.
But while we condone young "Fault" as we can,
We call the acquaintance of "Fault" the man.

There's a "fault" on Rickaby and the "fault" he pays
As "fault" in the garden with whom he plays.
There's "no fault" which is jerk, or bounce or jump.
And "fault" is the bugbear of pots and pans.
"Fault" is sometimes a beef and sometimes a clay,
And sometimes the genie of a gridiron fear.

But of all the "fault" that ever we'll know,
A "fault-finder" is the worst we know.
On a dreadful day, the twilight hung
Over all her long and gloomy path,
And in vain she tried to find a gap
To let the sunlight through.
That night she dreamed she died,
And when she came to the other side,
She found Death's self a brother, it was whisky or 12
Eighty was in the barrel, brand as I said on my oath.

But under them all does my verse show a soul
That burns for a fault's short fall
And I wonder what his love would be
If that fault-finder, he once could see
All his sins, like hungry ghosts moaning
Where fashion's crew makes its daily plaint
Let a gentle woman's love be his Then

Agricultural.

BUYING FRUIT TREES.—The tree-peddler is now abroad in the land, and his voice will be heard, like the turtle's, for a month or two to come. Beware of whom you buy fruit trees. In this, as in all other kinds of business, there are swindlers and unreliable dealers and agents. Of all things, buying fruit trees requires the utmost caution. If you make a mistake here, it is one that is always without a remedy—at least for four or five years to come. Several columns could be written on this quite important topic, but I shall confine myself to brief suggestions only, trusting to the intelligent reader to thoughtfully consider and act upon my text:

Had I known as much about trees years ago as I now do, my orchard of seventy trees would have been worth four or five times as much as it now is. I knew almost next to nothing about fruit trees or varieties, and relied solely upon the statement of the tree peddlers in the selection of varieties. I thought then that a tree that bore well in the north would bear well anywhere that a tree would grow.

Fatal delusion! Here in Central Kentucky my Rhode Island Greenings, Pryor's Red and some others, now fifteen years old, are only fit for firewood or shade. I have never plucked a sound apple from them, nor a green one either for that matter, as they fall off before maturity. No orchard is better kept than mine, either. You ask, what is the moral to all, then, if he desires to plant an orchard? The answer is, go to some of your neighbors who know from experience or observation what kind and varieties of fruit succeeded in your locality, and they buy none others, from a known and trustworthy nurseryman, and a home one at that, if such there be in your State; and the nearer home the better.

Do not be misled and deceived by the flaming and beautiful pictures of fruit the tree agent carries around with him, nor the "dappled loveliness" that he carries in his trunks, swelled to twice or thrice their natural size by the alcohol in the bottle. The marvelous tales these agents will tell you about the wonderful fruits he has to sell, will entrap you to your own ruin in purse and prospects. Here is a specimen of their promises:

"The Baron Munchausen plum? That, sir, is a plum grown only by our firm. The seed was picked up off the coast of Spain, by a shipwrecked sailor in 1850, and planted by him, and the tree grew into a beautiful shape in three years, and at the fifth year each yield of fruit thirteen bushels, which sold in the Madrid markets at $6 a bushel; it was tried in every State in the Union by grafts and buds, and has been found universally fruitful and excellent everywhere. See! here is a fair specimen in this pint bottle of alcohol; you see, the seed them almost fill the bottle. We have less than five hundred of these trees, one year old, left. You may have them at $2 a tree. By all means take six of them, as you may not have another chance to get them, and in five years from now you can sell plums enough to buy a small farm.

Of course, if the man who wants trees is not "up to snuff," he will, consulting only the size of his bank account, order an extra large number of the "Baron Munchausen" plum trees, one year old; but, alas! only to find in the end that "a fool and his money soon part."

There are many honest tree dealers, of course—men who are as reliable as those in any other business; but that fact does not militate against my advice. Beware of whom you buy fruit trees, and of the kind you plant in your locality.—Fruit Recorder.

FERTILIZERS ON POTATOES.—Prof. Lazenby, of the Cornell Experiment Station, Ithaca, N. Y., gives the result of a number of experiments he tried with fertilizers on potatoes, the seed consisting of medium sized tubers cut into halves, dropped a foot and a half apart in the row, and covered five inches deep. The fertilizers were strewed along the furrows and well mixed with the soil before planting. With no manure, the product was at the rate of one hundred and thirty-nine bushels per acre; and with the Stockbirds fertilizer only one hundred and thirty-five bushels, probably a natural variation from no manure, and showing it of no value on that soil. Hen manure gave one hundred and forty-five bushels, Peruvian guano one hundred and fifty-eight, Lister's super-phosphates, one hundred and eighty-four, and ground bone two hundred and twelve. Farm-yard manure, spread along the bottom of the furrow and the seed dropped on it, gave only one hundred and sixty-three bushels, but placed above the tubers the result was two hundred and seven bushels. This difference might have been owing to several causes—as the greater depth of the seed under the manures, more moisture, and a wider spread of the manure.—Ex.

WINTER RYE FOR HAY.—We have repeatedly alluded to this crop as being worthy of far more attention than it has received in the past, except as a grain crop. Our experience with it this season, has only increased our estimation of its value. The dry fall of last year found our hay mows, like most others in this part of the country, quite too short for either pleasure or profit; and after we had bought baled hay for carrying the stock through the last few weeks of March and April, it was with no small degree of satisfaction that we struck into a four-acre field of winter rye, just as the heads were coming in sight. It is contrary to rules to change cattle suddenly from dry to green feed, but in this case the temptation was strong to try the experiment, and as the animals were perfectly healthy, and were having a good ration of grain each day, the danger seemed less. The experiment proved perfectly satisfactory, not an animal being in the least discommoded by the change.

The rye was in good condition for feeding a full fortnight, and while it saved buying hay, the milk yield was increased, and the butter product improved both in quality and quantity.—American Agriculturist.

TO FATTEN FOWLS.—The season is at hand when fowls have been fattened with care find a ready sale. There is a very great difference between a bird that has been cooped for a couple of weeks and one that is caught from the general flock at night and killed at once. The best food for fattening poultry is oatmeal mixed with scalding milk. As a change in their diet is necessary, boiled barley may occasionally be substituted. Give fresh feed three times a day, as much, but no more, than can be eaten at each meal. Chopped up mutton suet or any fat trimmings of meat from the kitchen mixed with the scalded meal will produce an extra degree of fatness. Give green food, such as chopped cabbage, turnips or onions. Keep them supplied with gravel and fresh water. Milk, either sweet, sour or thick, is also most excellent. Fowls fed in this way must not be kept longer than two weeks, as if forced for a greater length of time they are apt to become diseased. Leave them without food or water for fourteen hours before killing.

SALVIA SPLENDENS.—This is a great favorite for the purposes of decoration and cut flowers in winter, when its bright scarlet flowers are most useful and attractive. Plants of it are grown in good-sized pots, in rich mold, plunged out of doors in the summer, occasionally pinched in a little and kept well syringed and growing freely. When there is danger of frost, they are set in a light, airy house, and are speedily a blaze of flowers, which remains in perfection a long time. Plants that have been flowering since October are still in great beauty. Soot water, clear and weak, given about twice a week, makes the foliage dark-colored and healthy, and flower spikes large. This fine old plant is worthy of, and amply repays good and liberal treatment.—Vick's Monthly.

It is one of the best flowering plants we have for brilliant show in the out-door gardens of the lower South. Grows readily from cuttings, and can be trimmed down and protected through winter in our pits or cellars, coming out to present us with early flowers in spring, and to continue them throughout the season.

SOIL FOR ROSES.—Good loams, such as farmers prize for wheat growing, is suitable for most kinds of roses, excepting perhaps, some of the more delicate of the tea scented kinds, which do better in a lighter soil. When preparing the ground for the reception of the roses a coating of thoroughly rotten dung should be placed over the surface and trenched in two spades deep, and the manure is placed at the bottom after the soil has been turned over roughly. If acts as drainage, and the roots of the plants will be sure to find their way down to it. If the position be a wet and cold one, drainage is indispensable where successful rose-growing is expected. In the process of trenching, the ground should be well broken with the spade and a level surface left ready for the plants.—Selected.

Agriculture is called both science and an art. The former teaches why it is necessary to plow, the latter teaches the process of plowing. The art of agriculture has reference to the planting, cultivating and care of crops; the science of agriculture teaches of what they are composed and how crops and plants are fed up from the forces of the soil and the atmosphere. The effect of the art is to wear out the soil by constant cropping. The aid of science is employed to restore exhausted fields and to give a knowledge of the means to use to accomplish it.—American Cultivator.

THE TURNIP FLEA.—The turnip flea beetle, Haltica striolata, can be kept from injuring turnips by dusting the leaves, when wet with dew, with lime in powder. Sprinkling with whale oil, soapsuds also keeps them off. These applications might do for cabbages before heading has begun. The plant lice can be killed by soaking the ground, the roots of the salsify with soapsuds or tobacco water not strong enough to kill the plants. Experiments will determine the strength.—Country Gentleman.

There are about thirty species of insects which subsist on our garden vegetables. The grape vine has about fifty insect enemies; the different shade trees have over a hundred; wheat, barley and oats fifty. The estimated annual destruction of property by insects in the United States is as high as $100,000,000. A great portion of this loss might be prevented by the preservation of different kinds of birds.

THE BEST COW FOR SMALL FARMS.—Our opinion, and also that of the principal dairymen of the country, is that the Jersey, commonly called Alderney, is above all others the best cow. They are easily kept, very docile—a point not to be overlooked—and beautiful; give milk of superior richness, from which is produced finely colored, solid butter, having an equal texture and flavor.—Live Stock Record.

Professor Witter, of Muscatine, Iowa, reports an interesting fact in regard to the distribution of species of mollusca. Helix Cooperi, a species of snail not known to be living east of Utah, was discovered in the loess formation, near Muscatine, as a fossil. Living specimens of a small shell (Physa virgata) have also been discovered. This species is common in England, but has never been found in this country, except along the Pacific coast.

POTATOES.—The average yield of potatoes in the United States, in 1877, was estimated by the Agricultural Department at ninety-two bushels, in 1878 at sixty-nine bushels, in 1879 at ninety-eight bushels, and there are but few States in which the average for the last twenty-five years will exceed one hundred bushels per acre. Thirty years ago anything less than hundreds of bushels to the acre would have been considered an inferior yield, at least in the North.

The oldest timber in the world, which has been used by man, is supposed to be that found in the ancient temples of Egypt. It is found in the dowelpins in connection with stone work which is at least 4,000 years old. These dowels appear to be of tamarisk or shittim-wood, of which the ark was constructed, a tree now rarely found in the valley of the Nile.

SEEDLESS WATERMELONS.—A Texas correspondent of the Fruit Farm, says that after the vine has grown two feet long, cover it, about a foot from the root, with dirt. When it has taken root, cut the vine between the new and old root, and seedless watermelons will be produced. It will not cost much to try the experiment.

The cultivation of pampas grass, now so much used for decorative purposes has become quite a profitable industry in California. Last year ten thousand heads or plumes of this grass were sold from that region.

It is generally conceded that sweet corn makes the most and best fodder for cows. The first seed costs more, but nothing in comparison with the benefits of the crop to the dairy.

—At the ostrich feather market in Port Elizabeth, Cape Colony, the sales averaged nearly $55,000 per week during the first nine months of the current year.

A single blackberry bush in a garden at Truro, Mass., has produced seven hundred berries, and a single branch one hundred and fifty.

Household.

EFFECTS OF EXCESSIVE TEA-DRINKING.—W. J. Morton, M. D., of New York, gives in the Journal of Nervous and Mental Disease an account of investigations which he has made on the toxic effects of tea. They were carried on in the cases of five tea-tasters suffering from disease who came under his care, and in observations of his own symptoms during a week in which he subjected himself to special treatment with tea for purposes of experiment. From the whole series of observations he draws the conclusions that—1. With tea, as with any potent drug, there is a proper and improper dose. 2. In moderation, tea is a mental and bodily stimulant of a most agreeable nature, followed by no harmful reaction. It produces contentment of mind, allays hunger and bodily weariness and increases the disposition and the capacity for work. 3. Taken immoderately, it leads to a very serious group of symptoms, such as headache, vertigo, heat and tinglings of body, ringing in the ears, mental dullness and confusion, tremulousness, "nervousness," sleeplessness, apprehension of evil, exhaustion of mind and body, with disinclination to mental and physical exertion, increased and irregular action of the heart, increased respiration. Each of the above symptoms is produced by tea taken in immoderate quantities, irrespective of dyspepsia, or hypochondria, or hyperæmia. 4. Immoderate tea-drinking, continued for a considerable time, with great certainty produce dyspepsia. 5. The immediate mental symptoms produced by tea are not to be attributed to dyspepsia. 6. Tea retards the waste or retrograde metamorphosis of tissue, and thereby reduces the demand for food. It also diminishes the amount of urine secreted. 7. Many of the symptoms of immoderate tea-drinking are such as may occur without suspicion of tea being their cause, and we find many people taking tea to relieve the discomfort which its abuse is producing.—Popular Science Monthly.

CREOSOTE FOR BRONCHITIS AND CATARRH.—When going from Switzerland to Italy via Mont Cenis, some years ago, the writer contracted a sudden severe cold, which, in the chill air of Turin, soon brought on a severe attack of Bronchitis. We hastened over to the genial air of Genoa, but it afforded little relief, and the advice of Dr. Paccioci, Professor in the noted Italian Medical College there, was called in. He prescribed a very simple remedy, which was at once effective, as it has been with many others to whom we have since recommended it. Put into a pint or larger bottle about three gills of water, and add two drops of good Wood Creosote. Shake very thoroughly, take a mouthful, gargling it awhile in the throat, and swallow it. Repeat this frequently, so as to use up the mixture in the first twenty-four hours, always shaking well before taking. After the first day, use three drops of Creosote and the same amount of water during twenty-four hours, so long as it is needed. The same mixture has often proved very useful in Catarrh. In this case a handful or two of the well-shaken Creosote and water is snuffed up through the nostrils until it reaches the throat and is spit out. A tablespoonful or more is also gargled in the throat and swallowed. As Catarrh is an inflammation of the nasal passages, accompanied with a mucus deposit, the creosote, which is largely carbolic acid, would seem to be useful here just as dilute carbolic acid is effective in cleansing any putrid sores. Catarrh is the result of weakness, and is promoted by a cold. A toning up of the system and any simple remedy like the above is effective, unless the Catarrh is severe and of so long continuance as to have permanently disorganized the nasal cavities. It is folly to spend money for the much advertised catarrh remedies, which are usually the sheerest medical quackery.

CUT THIS OUT AND SAVE IT.—A correspondent writes to an exchange as follows, about the leaves of a well-known plant:

"I have discovered a remedy for consumption. It has cured a number of cases after they commenced bleeding at the lungs and the hectic flush was already on the cheek. After trying this remedy to my own satisfaction, I have thought philanthropy required that I should let it be known to the world. It is the common mullen, steeped strongly and sweetened with coffee sugar, and drank freely. Young or old plants are good, dried in the shade and kept in clean bags. The medicine must be continued from three to six months, according to the nature of the disease. It is very good for the blood-vessels also. It builds up and strengthens the system, instead of taking away the strength. It makes good blood, and takes inflammation away from the lungs."

It is the wish of the writer that every periodical in the United States, Canada and Europe, should publish this recipe for the benefit of the human family. Lay this up, and keep it in the house ready for use.

PRESERVED GRAPES.—Grapes, partly green, will make a delicious preserve, and often the rest of the fruit will be improved by being thinned out on the vines. Take a handful at a time, and rub them gently on a coarse sieve, until the seeds become separate and drop through the wires, leaving only pulp and skin. Then drain the juice from the seeds, through a strainer; and to each pound of it, added to the pulp and skins, weigh out a pound of white sugar; mix the sugar with the fruit; put in the preserving kettle, and cook it over a very moderate fire for forty minutes, or until it is a thick jam. Put it into jelly tumblers, with papers dipped in spirits laid on the top, and then paste thick brown paper over the outside of the tumblers, and write on the top the date and the kind of jam.

POISON IN FRUIT-CANS.—The American Association for the Advancement of Science discussed the question of "The action of vegetable acids on tin." Prof. Munroe found that the ordinary fruit acids, such as those contained in apples, tomatoes, rhubarb, lemons, etc., all acted upon tin. Some cider which he examined, which had been stored in a tin fountain, contained one hundred and seventeen milligrammes of metallic tin to the litre. One case was cited where persons eating fruit preserved in tin canisters were made violently sick, and tin only was found in the fruit. The corrosion of tin pipes by well waters was alluded to, and specimens of corroded pipes were exhibited, and it was suggested that the corrosion was due to the vegetable acids in the water.

BAKED TOMATOES.—Take large tomatoes, cut the top off and remove the seeds, (taking as little of the tomatoes as possible,) fill the cavities with bread crumbs, pepper and salt, put in a baking dish, then strew the top with a little pure beef dripping or butter.

Scientific.

—At a recent meeting of the New York Academy of Sciences, Prof. C. H. Hitchcock gave reasons for believing that volcanoes, very similar to those now active in certain parts of the earth, formerly existed in considerable numbers in New England. The remnants of them have been modified from their original mineral composition into granites, porphyries, diabases, diorites, and protogenes. He described fully the physical aspects of Mount Ascutney, in Windsor, Vt., as a typical example of the first class. This mountain consists of two conical peaks, the highest rising 2,000 feet above the general high land adjacent, or 3,186 feet above the sea. This cone is found to be composed of syenite and to have the shape of the letter T; that is, the cone rests upon the summit of the letter, while the stem extends deep down into the earth. The adjoining slates run beneath the granite and have been altered by the heat generated at the epoch of eruption far fully 500 feet away from it on all sides. No other similar mass of rock is to be found for many miles. The old theory in regard to granite formation has been, that it consisted of salty rocks fused very deep in the earth, and that it could not be visable until the superincumbent mass of 30,000 or 40,000 feet had been removed by denudation. It was shown that such erosion was in the highest degree improbable; and, hence, that the shape of the mass and its position upon the adjoining rocks, corresponded precisely with the contours of lava freshly ejected from a volcano. Numerous similar examples in New Hampshire are found in the White Mountains—such as Mountains Osceola, Tripyramid, Passaconnaway, Chocorua, Pequawket, Green, Twin, Profile, Starr King, etc. Similar cones of the second type of mineral composition appear at Owl's Head, upon Lake Memphremagog, in Lowell, Jay, Fairlee, Elmore, Worcester, etc., Vt., and Orford, N. H. No minerals exist in the composition of the diabases, diorites, and dolorites found in these cones which do not occur in those igneous masses of the same name which are more usually called trap-dikes. It would seem probable, therefore, that the stratified diabases, etc., had their origin in the volcanic ashes and mud ejected at the time of eruption, which do not necessarily assume a conical form, any more than the basaltic shafts of Washington Territory or the peperina beds of Italy. The epoch of these New England volcanoes must have been in the Primordial or Cambro-Silurian. Granting their existence, we find another class of facts justifying the doctrine of uniformity and the reality of such ideal restorations of the old Silurian and Cambrian continents as appear in the popular treatises of Principal Dawson.

—Mr. S. H. Scudder has recently published a memoir on the oldest known insects, those found in the Devonian rocks of New Brunswick, in which he announces some interesting conclusions. There is nothing in the structure of these insects, he says, to interfere with a former conclusion, that the general type of wing structure has remained unaltered from the earliest times. What dissimilarities occur, can be brought into perfect harmony with a particular system of describing the wing nerves. The earliest insects were hexapods, (six-footed,) and, as far as the record goes, preceded in time both arachnids ('spiders') and myriapods (many-legged insects.) These Devonian insects were all allied or belonged to the Neuroptera, using that word in its widest sense, were very large, and judging from the modern types which are similar to them, were probably aquatic. Some of them, were precursors of existing forms; while others have left no trace. They show a considerable variety of structure, indicating an abundance of insect life at their epoch, and differ remarkably from all other known types, ancient or modern. Some of them, in fact, appear to be even more complicated than their nearest living allies. "We appear, therefore," Mr. Scudder continues, "to be no nearer the beginning of things in the Devonian epoch than in the carboniferous, so far as greater unity of simplicity of structure is concerned; and these earlier forms cannot be used to any better advantage than the carboniferous types in support of any special theory of the origin of insects. Finally, while there are some forms which in some degree bear out expectations based on the general derivative hypothesis of structural development, there are quite as many which are altogether unexpected, and cannot be explained by that theory without involving suppositions for which no facts can at present be adduced."—N. Y. Independent.

—Nature remarks that "Prof. Boyd Dawkins has lately shown in his 'Early Man in Britain' that although the neolithic men were immeasurably above the cave men in culture, they were far below them in the arts of design; and, further, that the cave man possessed a singular talent for representing the animals he hunted, and his sketches reveal to us that he had a capacity for seeing the beauty and grace of natural form not much inferior to that which is the result of long civilization in ourselves, and very much higher than that of his successors in Europe in Neolithic Age. That this faculty of design or artistic aptitude is still independent of advance or advancing civilization is shown by Dr. Holub, in a paper on the 'Central South African Tribes,' just published in the Journal of the Anthropological Institute. Dr. Holub remarks, in connection with the Bushmen, that those people, 'regarded as the lowest types of Africans, in one thing excel all the other South African tribes whose acquaintance I have made between the south coast, and 16° south latitude. I have in my possession about two hundred sketches on wood and stone, and ostrich shells by various tribes, but every one who knows any thing about drawing, must acknowledge that those which were done by Bushmen are superior to any of the others."

—At the recent meeting of the National Academy, Prof. Langley read a most interesting and important paper upon the distribution of energy in different parts of the solar spectrum. His results confirm the conclusion arrived at by the elder Draper, some years ago—that in a diffraction spectrum, formed by sunlight which has not been filtered through glass, the hottest point is just at the brightest point (near the line D.) The "Matterhorn" of obscure heat found by Tyndall and others in the red rays, and the ultra-red was due, according to Draper and Langley, to the absorption of the prisms and lenses used by the earlier experimenters and to the shortening and compression of the lower part of the prismatic spectrum. Professor Langley used in his observations the new "thermal balance," which proves itself to be vastly superior to the thermopiles formerly employed for such work.

EDUCATIONAL.

READVILLA SEMINARY,

BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA.

A home school for girls. Thorough training in all departments. Full corps of efficient Teachers. Expenses moderate. Numbers limited.
For particulars address
MRS. MARY W. REED,
Principal.

Memphis Conference Female Institute.

JACKSON, TENNESSEE.

REV. A. W. JONES, A. M., D. D., President.

This well known College of the South and West begins its Fall session the First Monday in September. Opening Concert and Address Tuesday, September 7, 1880. For thirty-six years there has been an average of more than twelve graduates annually.
The Faculty is full and efficient. The determination is to stand among the foremost in the progress of Science, Language and Art.
For further information apply to the President.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE,

AT BATON ROUGE, LA.

The next session of this school will begin September 29, 1880.
This is a family Boarding School for boys. The healthfulness of the location is unsurpassed. Instruction thorough in all that is necessary to prepare the student for any grade in college or any pursuit in life. Discipline parental. The constant personal care of the principal is given to the health, morals and manners of the pupils.
For circulars, with necessary information, apply to
W. R. N. MAGRUDER,
Baton Rouge, La.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,

JACKSON, LOUISIANA.

Opens September 6, 1880. The last session was the most prosperous one since the war. The whole cost of board and tuition need not exceed $144 in the Preparatory Department, nor $164 in College classes for the scholastic year. Send for a Catalogue.
C. G. ANDREWS, President.

East Mississippi Female College,

MERIDIAN, MISSISSIPPI.

REV. J. W. ATKISSON, A. M., PRESIDENT.

A chartered and prosperous Southern school for girls and young ladies. Few schools have grown more steadily and rapidly in public confidence and patronage. Increased in numbers during the past seven years as the following figures: 5, 6, 6 2, 8 6, 9 4, 9 6, 9 7, 14 3. Commanded patronage the first year from Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee and Alabama. Its past history, increasing facilities, accessibility and methods of close and thorough instruction assure its friends of a long and prosperous future for the institution. Send for catalogue.

HIWASSEE COLLEGE,

EAST TENNESSEE.

Founded 1849, and located where
Pure waters flow,
Sleek cattle low,
Cool breezes blow,
Ripe apples grow.

Excellent and tried teachers. Terms very favorable. The Female Department is at SWEETWATER, on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad. The Male Department, at HIWASSEE COLLEGE POSTOFFICE, seven miles out in the country. A neat monthly paper, the "Hiwassee College Reporter," at fifty cents a year. Address
J. H. BRUNNER, President.

JEFFERSON COLLEGE.

HIGH SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND YOUNG MEN.

Six miles from Natchez, Miss. Session begins September 16. Full corps of instructors. Course of study thorough and extensive. Nearly fifty boarders from abroad. Pupils from a distance board with the principal. Entire expense for ten months, $145. For catalogues address the principal,
J. S. RAYMOND,
Washington, Adams county, Miss.

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE,

SUMMERFIELD, ALA.

Will begin its forty-first session October 4, 1880. Great attention paid to the regular course. Teachers in the Music and Art departments selected with reference to special fitness. Charges moderate.
For further information address
H. M. MOSS, A. M., President.

HOMER MALE COLLEGE

THE TWENTY-FIRST SESSION

will begin the

FIRST OF SEPTEMBER 1880.

Address R. A. SMITH,
President.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE PORTABLE COMMENTARY

On the Old and New Testaments.

By JAMIESON, FAUSSET and BROWN.

Complete in One Volume.

This is the only reliable Commentary of recent date published in one volume of suitable size for ready reference, or to carry when traveling in valise or saddle bags. It is a small octavo volume of 640 pages, printed on fine paper, bound in cloth, and is considered invaluable by all who have it. Price by mail, post-paid, only $3 50.
LATHROP & WILKINS,
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

Crescent Insurance Co.,

67 & 69 Camp Street,

NEW ORLEANS.

ORGANIZED 1849.—REORGANIZED 1880.

Cash Capital $400,000.

SOLICITS

FIRE, RIVER AND MARINE RISKS.

W. R. LYMAN.....President.
S. B. NEWMAN.....Vice President.
CHAS. E. RICE.....Secretary.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS.

SIZES AND PRICES.

Diam. of Bell.	Wt. with yoke & frame	Cost. Bell & Hang's.
No. 6, 25in	230 lbs	$ 25 00
No. 6, 27in	340 lbs	36 00
No. 7, 30in	490 lbs	50 00
No. 8, 34in	730 lbs	75 00
No. 9, 38in	925 lbs	130 00

RUMSEY & CO.,
Seneca Falls, N. Y., U. S. A.

SPORTSMEN'S DEPOT,

RICHARD RHODES,

55 ST. CHARLES STREET 55

NEW ORLEANS.

Articles for Fishermen of all Kinds.

Rods, Nets, Hooks, Lines, and every desirable article for the Angler, wholesale and retail. Guns imported to order. J. R. Cooper's Breech and Muzzle Loading Guns always on hand. All kinds of improved artificial baits. Repairing of Guns carefully done by experienced workmen, and Fishing Rods made to order. Address Postoffice Box 1599.

Carpet and Oil Cloth Warehouse.

ELKIN & CO.,

100 - - - CANAL STREET - - - 100

New styles of
MOQUETTE, VELVET, BODY BRUSSELS, and TAPESTRY BRUSSELS, with border to match.
3-PLY and INGRAINS in great variety.
OIL CLOTHS of all widths.
WINDOW SHADES and CURTAINS, new patterns.
CORNICES and CORNICE POLES.
MATTINGS of every description.
CURTAIN GOODS, TASSELS, CORDS, GIMPS, Etc.
Our prices for corresponding qualities of goods are as low as any house in the South or West.

My New Illust ated Price List describing over 100 Gold and Silver Waltham Watches sent for a 3c stamp. It tells how I send watches to all parts of U. S. to be examined before paying any money. Undoubted reference. N. H. Wade, Jeweler, Newark, N. J.

EDUCATIONAL.

TEACHERS,

SCHOLARS

AND

DEALERS

Are hereby advised that the

Largest Stock and Most

Complete Assortment of

SCHOOL BOOKS

in the South-west is now in stock and ready to fill all orders, large or small at Publishers' prices at

112 CAMP STREET,

NEW ORLEANS.

All the books used in this section supplied at short notice, and prices guaranteed as low as they can be had elsewhere. Catalogues mailed on application. Also a general line of

School Supplies,

SLATED PAPER,
SLATED CLOTH,
LIQUID SLATING,
BLACKBOARDS,
BLACKBOARD RUBBERS,
CHALK CRAYONS,
MATHEMATICAL INSTRUMENTS,
NUMERICAL FRAMES,
SCHOOL SATCHELS,
BOOK STRAPS,
WRITING PAPER,
DRAWING PAPER,
BLOTTING PAPER,
WRITING BOOKS,
COMPOSITION BOOKS,
SLATES AND PENCILS,
INK, INK STANDS, PENS,
PENHOLDERS, CALL BELLS,

Kindergarten Material,

ETC., ETC.

Send for anything you want or address for prices.

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

In addition to the above we keep a complete line of all the standard religious publications, for pastors, members and Sunday-schools. Prices quoted on application.

South-western Agency for

Readers' and Writers' Economy Co.

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD & Co.,

AMERICAN CHINA HOUSE,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans

We append a few prices:

The American China Dinner, Breakfast and Tea Set, comprising 160 Pieces, for $19.

A Real French China Dinner Set, 118 Pieces, for $17.

English Stone China Dinner Set, 124 Pieces, for $10.

English Stone China Chamber Set, comprising 10 Pieces, for $2 50.

Decorated Chamber Sets, with different Colored Bands, 10 Pieces, for $2 50.

Glass Goblets, from 50 cents to $1 per dozen.

Particular attention given to Novelties and Specialties pertaining to the House-Furnishing Department. Orders promptly attended to. We have just received a full and complete stock of holiday goods. Call and examine before purchasing.

W. C. SHEPARD & CO.

Christian Advocate.

Charles Kingsley.

Mr. Kingsley was almost an ideal parish rector. He did not content himself with preaching a couple of sermons on Sunday—though his parish sermons were among the very best of their class, simple, nervous, clear, and practical, well thought out, with no affectation either of depth or of elegance, but now and then pulsing with the eloquence of real conviction. He knew every man, woman and child in his parish—their history, their trials, their little ailments; and if under his words we can occasionally detect something of the tone of the fearful superior, he was paternal in the best sense. When the epidemic fever broke out in his parish, he armed himself with comforts and disinfectants (no fear of infection restraining his ardor in the least), went into the smitten houses, advising people about methods, while he was doing the difficult part of compelling a beginning there and then. No one could resist the infection of his honest concern and practical zeal. Without hesitation he struggled always to do the duty that lay nearest him. And, in spite of much calculated to discompose and depress, he was very cheerful and hopeful. Mr. Kingsley knew well that cares and sorrows were inevitable certain to come; and therefore he rejoiced in the sunshine while it remained. All natural things had their charm for him—flowers and trees, the snow and ice of winter, the gradual green of spring; he loved all living creatures. All living creatures save one—the spider, the sight of which would sometimes almost overcome him. Very characteristic this, it was the same with men and his intercourse with them. He could find good points and traits that were worth study in the most perverse and poorly endowed of men—the human spider, the real beetle to whom the world is but a machine to aid him in his selfish aims, was his aversion.

Of the various recollections furnished by personal friends, those of Mr. C. Kegan Paul strike us as most admirable. This passage is worth quoting: "During these affection walks he would visit one or other of his very many families, or single cottages on the heaths. Those who have read 'My Winter Garden,' in the Miscellanies, know how he loved the moor under all its aspects, and the great groves of firs. Nothing was ever more real than Kingsley's parish visiting. He believed absolutely in the message he came to the poor, and the health his ministrations conveyed to their souls, but he was at the same time a zealous sanitary reformer, and cared for their bodies also. I was with him once when he visited a woman suffering from fever. The atmosphere of the little ground-floor bedroom was horrible, but before the rector said a word, he ran up stairs, and, to the great astonishment of the inmates of the cottage, bored with a large auger he had brought with him, several holes above the bed's head for ventilation. His reading in the sick room and his words were wholly free from cant.

The Dog and Child.

Mr. Elihu Burritt gives in this book, called "A Walk from London to Land's End and Back," the touching illustration of the affection of a dog in Truro:

"I was sitting at the breakfast-table of a friend, who is a druggist, when he was called into the shop by a neighbor, who had come for medical aid, for a very remarkable and affecting case.

"He described it briefly and simply, as if would tell a widow of beautiful morning. His family dog had inadvertently made the acquaintance of a neighbor's child on the other side of the street.

"While lying on the door stone, he had noticed this little thing, sometimes at the chamber window, and sometimes on the pavement, in a little carriage.

"During one of his walks on that side of the street, he met the baby, and looked over the rim of the basket carriage, as a loving dog can look, straight into a pair of baby eyes, and said, 'Good morning!' as well as he could.

"Little by little, day by day and week by week, this companionship went on, growing with the growth and strengthening with the strength of the little one. The dog, doubtless because his master had no young child of his own, came at last to transfer frequently his watch and ward to the door stone on the other side of the street, and to follow as a guard of honor to the baby's carriage on its daily airings.

"With what delight he gave himself up to all the petting and little rude romplings, and rough-and-tumblings, of those baby hands.

"One day, as the dog lay in watch by the door-stone, the child, peeping out of the window above, lost its balance, and fell on the stone pavement below. It was taken up quite dead. The red drops of the young life had bespattered the face and face of the dog as he sprang to the rescue. His heart died out within him in one long, whining moan of grief. From that moment he refused to eat. His refusal to be comforted by his master's voice and by his master's house. Day by day, and night by night, he lay upon the spot where the child fell.

"This was the neighbor's errand. He told in a few simple words: He had come to my friend, the druggist, for a prescription for his dog, something to bring back his appetite."

Teach Gentleness.

I think with regard to teachers they have two entirely different branches of labor. They have that of instructing their pupils from books, and they have that of instructing them from their own conduct and their own manners. You want to teach a child to be gentle and I must say that it is better that he should learn the gentleness that is weakness, for there is perfect gentleness which is combined with great force. You want gentleness, you want humanity. Humanity to animals, is one point. If I were the teacher of a school I would make it a very important part of my business to influence every boy and girl with the duty of being kind to all animals. It is impossible to say how much evil there is in the world from barbarity and unkindness which people show to what we call the inferior creatures.

Then there is the quality of unselfishness. Selfishness in families is the cause of misery and the cause of great injustice. Unselfishness and a love of justice—these are qualities which come if you offer them to a young person's mind. Their very nature makes them that they cannot receive it except with liking and approbation. And I have no doubt that it is possible for the teachers in the elementary schools of Birmingham during the next ten years or so, during which they will have two or three generations of children under their care, so to impress their minds on these subjects that twenty years hence it will be seen and felt over the whole town that there is a great improvement in these respects in the general population. These are things which, I think, it behooves the teachers in these schools to bear in mind. They cannot possibly have too high a sense of the responsibilities of their position and of their duties.—John Bright.

A BURIED TEMPLE AND PALACE.—The second Assyrian expedition, which was conducted by Mr. Hormuzd Rassam, succeeded in exploring a site which was regarded as forbidden ground. This was the mound of Nebi-Yunus, the supposed tomb of the prophet Jonah. In this mound he discovered remains of palaces erected by Esarhaddon and Sennacherib. His labors in the mounds of Nineveh have resulted in the recovery of a large number of inscriptions, many of extreme interest. Passing southward, he visited Nimroud, where he continued his labors in the Temple of Venus. This building, which he discovered in his former expedition, was now thoroughly examined; and found to be a large, open temple, containing shrines of several deities. There were also found a number of seals arranged in parallel rows, forming the reader aisle from the chief altar. The place now recovered seems to favor the idea of its having been a species of forum where religious and other councils were held. The explorations in Assyria have discovered many valuable monuments. Mr. Rassam extended his operations into fields untouched since the time of Sir A. H. Layard's expedition, and he was able to carry out a series of explorations on the mounds of ancient Babylon. Here his discoveries have been most brilliant. In a mound hitherto untouched, he discovered a palace of Nebuchadnezzar's, with rich, enameled columns, beams of India wood, and every indication of having been a most splendid edifice. His researches in the mound of the Birs Nimroud, the site of the supposed Tower of Babel, have proved that the destruction of this great edifice was due, not to lightning or hostile attack, but to a volcanic eruption, which had torn and shattered the edifice.—American Antiquarian.

A NEW IDEA.—The Literary Churchman gives an amusing anecdote of Mr. Hawker, who was walking one day on the cliffs near Morwenstow with the Rev. Mr. W——, when a gust of wind took off Mr. W——'s hat, and carried it over the cliff. Within a week or two a Methodist preacher at Truro was discoursing in prayer, and in his sermon he said: "I would not leave you, dear brethren, coming your supplications to spiritual blessings; but ask for temporal favors. I will illustrate my meaning by relating an incident that happened to myself ten days ago. I was on the shore of a cove near a little unfrequented place in the North Cornwall named Morwenstow, and about to proceed to Bude. Shall I add, my Christian friends, that I had on my head, at the time a shocking bad hat—that I somewhat blushed to think of entering that harbor-town and watering-place so all adorned as to my head? Then I lifted up a prayer for covering more suited to my head. At that solemn moment I raised my eyes, and saw in the spacious firmament on high—the blue, colored sky—a black spot. It approached; it largened; it widened; it fell at my feet. It was a brand-new hat by a celebrated London maker! I easily flattered beaver to the waves, my Christian friends, and walked into Bude as fast as I could with a new hat on my head." The incident got into the Methodist Recorder or some such paper under the heading of "Remarkable Answer to Prayer." "And," said the vicar, "there's a hat made out with Mr. W——'s new hat. There was no preaching from, for we were on the cliff, and would not thus end the precipice. He was fat enough, I promise you, to our shouts."

LITERARY FASHIONS.—Novels, like coats and gowns, have their seasons of "cut," and it is curious how insuperable the fated fashion makes them. That human nature craves novels just as it does the drama is a fact only the ruthlessest and most ignorant dogmatist can dispute. "Tell me a story," is about the first request made just as "Let us play at being mamma" is the earliest attempt at sentimentality. As long as lovers are good at all, Miss Austen's stories will be resorted to for amusement by the more intelligent, and probably they never were at any time to the taste of the untried youth. Sir Walter's out is, we fancy, both too old and not old enough. The new generation do not read him. But very few years (a literary lifetime). Will the people who talk of Pelham have ever read the book. Novels of society of course lose much of their point and meaning when the period on they depict has passed away, and so far all political allusions have ceased to be understood. Volumes of Peacock are probably to be found on the shelves of many libraries, but few persons now read them and not many among who have read them. Dilletanti may discern any other thought or expression in the great humorist than is on the people who want to read while dining, and that at infrequent prices. There is distinct difficulty in discovering in George Eliot's writings that there is such thinking, and people who ought to be wiser do the same as the single lines of works. They say they can't like sets, the novels, and, when a copy is to be had, spend the "drawing glance."

AN OMINOUS DEATH RATE.—"Not many years ago," a distinguished English physician, referring to the death rate from alcohol, says:

"Mr. Richardson gave it as his opinion, some time ago, that were England converted to temperance the vitality of the population would be increased one-third in value; or, in other words, nearly 227,000 lives would be saved to us every year. This is a startling statement; but, after careful investigation, Dr. Kerr thinks it is rather below the truth than many were disposed to believe. His own calculations give 200,000 as the number of deaths resulting from drinking, of which 128,000 are ascribed to drunkenness, and the rest to more or less moderate uses of alcohol."

One English correspondent, Rev. W. O. Simpson, says: While in India, I knew an old German missionary, who had under his charge a little child-man. He carried a patriarchal staff, which went by the name of "Moses," and of it he made a very sensible, though somewhat eccentric, use. When a native was brought before him, accused of misdemeanor, he was asked whether he would prefer to be judged by the missionary and punished by "Moses," or be sent on, perhaps, a long journey, to be tried before a police magistrate and punished according to law? He generally selected the former course, received so many strokes from "Moses," and "Thank you," and went away satisfied.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time, and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from the Tropical leaf of Buchu, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that arise from a disordered condition of the Kidneys or Liver, such as Pain in the Back, Kidneys or Loins, Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy, Gravel, Fever, Ague, Malarial Fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for Female Complaints. Health and Strength are guaranteed to follow its use. As a blood purifier it is unequaled, as it cures the organs that make the blood.

READ ITS RECORD.

"It saved my life."—T. B. Catlin, Surg. 15th Ill. Cav.

"It is the remedy that will cure the many diseases peculiar to women."—Mother's Magazine.

"It has passed several tests and won our editors' praise to some of the highest medical men of the country."—New York Herald.

"No remedy heretofore discovered can be relied upon one moment in connection with it."—Rev. C. H. Mead, D. D., Pastor Tabernacle Church, Chicago.

"Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure is a success, and up to the LARGE SIZED BOTTLE or any package sent out by the proprietors, it is sold at reasonable prices, and the directions are plain and explicit."—Christian Advocate.

WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE.

H. H. WARNER & CO., Rochester, N. Y.

E. HEATH,
IMPORTER AND DEALER IN
Carpets, Floor Oil Cloths,
UPHOLSTERY GOODS, Wall Paper, Window Shades, Cornices, Lace and Nottingham Curtains, Mosaic Mattings, Chromos, Engravings, etc.
Frames made to order, a specialty.
No. 99 Camp street, New Orleans.

SPENCERIAN
SPENCERIAN COMMERCIAL
STEEL PENS
of the Very Best European Make and unrivaled for Flexibility, Durability, and Evenness of Point.
REAL SWAN QUILL ACTION.
In 20 Numbers. A complete Sample card, for trial, by mail on receipt of 20 Cents.
A Sample card of 10 of the Leading Styles for trial, on receipt of 10 Cents.
IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR & Co.
138 & 140 Grand St., New York.

NO MORE RHEUMATISM OR GOUT
ACUTE OR CHRONIC
SALICYLICA
SURE CURE.
Manufactured under ... Trade Mark
EUROPEAN MEDICINE CO.,
OF PARIS AND LEIPZIG.
IMMEDIATE RELIEF. WARRANTED. PERMANENT CURE GUARANTEED. Now exclusively used by all celebrated Physicians of Europe and America. Becoming a Safe, Harmless and Reliable Remedy on both continents—the highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 90 per cent of the cases within three days. Secret. The only dissolver of the poisonous Uric Acid which exists in the Blood of Rheumatic and Gouty Patients. $1 per Box; 6 boxes for $5. Sent to any address on receipt of price. INDORSED BY PHYSICIANS. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS. Address,
DANIEL ROMMEL, Sole Proprietor,
Office 152 Fulton street, New York.
For sale by L. L. Lyons and L. J. Hatch & Co., New Orleans.

BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER
FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN.
Females suffering from pain and weakness will derive great comfort and strength from the use of Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster.
Where children are afflicted with whooping cough, ordinary coughs or colds, or weak lungs, it is the one and only treatment they should receive.
It relieves pain at once, strengthens and cures where other plasters will not even relieve.
Sold by all Druggists. Price 25 cents.
BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.
Seabury & Johnson, Pharmaceutical Chemists, New York.

THE MILD POWER CURES
Humphreys' Homeopathic Specifics
Proved from ample experience all entire success. Simple, Prompt, Efficient, and Reliable. 45 are the only medicines adapted to popular use.

	PRICE
1. Fevers, Congestion, Inflammations,	25
2. Worms; Worm Fever, Worm Colic,	25
3. Crying Colic, or Teething of Infants,	25
4. Diarrhea of Children or Adults,	25
5. Dysentery, Griping, Bilious Colic,	25
6. Cholera Morbus, Vomiting,	25
7. Coughs, Cold, Bronchitis,	25
8. Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache,	25
9. Headaches, Sick Headache, Vertigo,	25
10. Dyspepsia, Bilious Stomach,	25
11. Suppressed or Painful Periods,	25
12. Whites, too profuse Periods,	25
13. Croup, Cough, Difficult Breathing,	25
14. Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions,	25
15. Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains,	25
16. Fever and Ague, Chill Fever, Agues,	50
17. Piles, Blind or Bleeding,	50
18. Catarrh, Acute or Chronic Influenza,	50
19. Whooping Cough, Violent Coughs,	50
20. General Debility, Physical Weakness,	50
21. Kidney Disease,	50
22. Nervous Debility, Spermatorrhea,	1.00
27. Urinary Weakness, Wetting the Bed,	50
28. Diseases of the Heart, Palpitation,	1.00

For sale by all druggists, or sent by the Case, or single Vial, free of charge, on receipt of price. Send for Dr. Humphreys' Book on Disease, &c., 144 pages, also Illustrated Catalogue. FREE.
Address, Humphreys' Homeopathic Med. Co., 109 Fulton St., New York.

Ginger, Buchu, Mandrake, Stillingia and many other of the best medicines known are combined so skillfully in Parker's Ginger Tonic as to make it the greatest Blood Purifier and the Best Health and Strength Restorer ever used.
It cures Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sleeplessness, and all diseases of the Stomach, Bowels, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Urinary Organs and all Female Complaints.
If you are wasting away with Consumption or any disease, use the Tonic to-day. No matter what your symptoms may be, it will surely help you.
Remember! This Tonic cures drunkenness, is the Best Family Medicine ever made, entirely different from Bitters, Ginger Preparations and other Tonics, and combines the best curative properties of all. Buy a 50c. bottle of your druggist. None genuine without our signature on outside wrapper. Hiscox & Co., Chemists, New York.
PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM The best and most economical Hair Dressing.

MISCELLANEOUS.

25,000 SOLD!
FARMER'S AND MECHANIC'S
—MANUAL—
Edited by GEO. E. WARING, Jr.,
Author of "Elements of Agriculture," "Draining for Profit and for Health," and formerly Agricultural Engineer of Central Park, New York.
500 Octavo Pages—Over 200 Illustrations.
Worth to any Thinking, Working Farmer
$25 per Year.
This book is for the most part a work of facts and figures, practical analysis and demonstrations, about which there can be no dispute. The design was to produce a work of substantial and lasting value, and of universal application and use. This work is offered as containing more that has been proven by long use to be of value, more that is most necessary for every farmer and mechanic to know, and more of promising novelty, than any other that has ever been presented to the farmers and mechanics of America. It is complete in every particular in which it is possible for such a book to be complete, and, in addition to this, it is sufficiently suggestive in many other respects to induce its readers to read more, to think more, to experiment more, and to become more intelligent and more successful in the management of their business as well as really happier and better men.
Price, in Extra English Cloth, Gilt Back, Only $2 50.
Sent postpaid on receipt of price. Address
LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans, La., or Houston, Tex.

B. T. WALSHE,
SHIRTS,
Will open a new depot for the sale of
MEN'S FURNISHING GOODS
No. 13 ST. CHARLES STREET, New Orleans.
Country orders carefully and promptly filled.

YOUNG MEN'S Christian Association,
OF NEW ORLEANS.
ROOMS, 87 CAMP STREET.
Open from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., except Sunday, when open Sundays from 3 to 9 P. M., where may be found the leading daily and weekly papers of the most prominent cities of the United States.
SERVICES.
Tuesday, 7:30 P. M.—Devotional.
Thursday, 7:30 P. M.—Singing Class.
NOON-DAY PRAYER-MEETING.
Daily, 12 to 1 o'clock.
Rule: Prayers and Remarks are limited to five minutes.

FURNITURE
JOHN BOIS,
DEALER IN
Parlor, Bed and Dining Room
FURNITURE.
291 Camp St., cor. Calliope, New Orleans.
Repairing, Upholstering, Varnishing, etc., promptly done. Country orders promptly attended to. Spring Bed and Moss Mattresses made to order. A full line of common Furniture on hand; suitable for the country.

Unequaled Low Rates now Ruling at
JOHN GAUCHE'S
MAMMOTH
QUEENSWARE HOUSE.
We announce to our patrons that we are now offering our celebrated ROYAL SEMI PORCELAIN DINNER SETS, 160 pieces, for $13.
ENGLISH STONE CHINA DINNER SETS, 124 pieces, $10.
REAL FRENCH CHINA DINNER SETS, 134 pieces, $17.
ENGLISH PRINTED TOILET SETS, $6 50.
ENGLISH CHINA PRINTED DINNER SETS, $20.
ENGLISH CHINA GOLD BAND and FLOWERED TEA SETS, 44 pieces, $5 50.
THE BEST SELECTION OF
CROCKERY
Glassware and Housefurnishing Goods
OF ANY HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
The assortment for both city and country is very large, and the prices are guaranteed as low, if not lower than any establishment North of South.
REMEMBER THE PLACE, IT IS
JOHN GAUCHE,
AT THE MORESQUE BUILDINGS,
109, 111, 113 & 115 Camp Street,
Branch House, Nos. 108 and 110 Chartres Street.

HOLIDAY MUSIC BOOKS.
DITSON & CO. call attention to their elegant and useful music books suitable for presents, and especially to their
VOLUMES OF BOUND SHEET MUSIC.
Each of each in cloth, $2 50; Fine Gilt $3.
THE CLUSTER OF GEMS. 48 pieces of high character.
GEMS OF THE DANCE. 79 of the best pieces of new dance music, by the most celebrated composers.
GEMS OF STRAUSS. 80 splendid and brilliant compositions.
PIANOFORTE GEMS. 100 select piano pieces.
HOME CIRCLE. Vol. I. 170 easy pieces for beginners.
HOME CIRCLE. Vol. II. 160 pieces, of which 32 are for 4 hands.
PARLOR MUSIC. 2 Vols. 129 easy and popular pieces.
CREME DE LA CREME. 2 Vols. 85 select pieces of some difficulty, suited to advanced players.
FOUNTAIN OF GEMS. 97 easy and popular pieces.
WELCOME HOME. 70 easy and popular pieces.
PEARLS OF MELODY. 50 pieces of moderate difficulty.
PIANIST'S ALBUM. 102 pieces. Fine collection.
All the books above named are alike in size, style of binding and price.
OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston
C. H. DITSON & CO.,
843 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NEW DICTIONARY HOLDER.
These holders are so arranged that they press the book firmly together at any desired page. In short the desirable article for schools, offices, libraries, parlors and sitting-rooms, and will be found one of the most elegant and useful articles for holding the dictionary should have one of these patent holders, and have the muscles of the body always ready for reference. Place the dictionary in the holder and keep it there. There is no more necessity to take hold of the holder than one of its binding. Children and grown people can turn to the pages desired with equal facility. Explanation by your servant when looking or writing. The desired book for the words is just there and then forgotten, because the eye, and nearly. The holder is simple, but is strong enough for school purposes, and will last a lifetime. Ordinary treatment will not injure it. Every one who uses a

PRICES CURRENT.

REVISED AND CORRECTED WEEKLY

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
New Orleans, Monday, Jan. 10, 1881.

Our readers should bear in mind that our quotations represent prices for round lots, and that in filling small orders higher prices must be paid.

SOUTHERN STAPLES.

	7th-day.	Sat
Cotton, ₩ lb
Low ordinary	7¼	8
Ordinary	9	9¼
Good ordinary	10	10¼
Low middling	10¾	11
Middling	11¾	12¼
Good middling	12¾	13¼
Middling Fair	13¾	13¾
Sales to-day	2,500 bales.
Receipts since our last	17,462 bales.
Receipts (to-day)	854,861 bales.
Sugar, ₩ lb.:
Fair	6¼ @	6¾
Fully fair	—	6⅝
Prime	—	—
Choice	—	—
Yellow clarified	7¾	8
White clarified	8½	8¾
Powdered	—	—
Crushed	—	—
Molasses, in bbls, ₩ gallon
Common	—	—
Fair	35	37
Prime	41	42
Choice	—	47
Rice, Louisiana, ₩ lb:
Common	4	4¼
Fair	5	5¼
Prime	5¾	6
Choice	6¼	—

GROCERIES.

Butter, ₩ lb
Western	12	20
New York	17	25
Coffee, ₩ lb.:
Rio, ordinary	11	11¼
Rio, fair	13	13½
Rio, prime	14	14¼
Cheese, ₩ lb
Western	—	—
Eagle	15	16
Candles, ₩ lb.
Best Sperm	—	1.—
Corn Meal, ₩ bbl
Cadiz mills, D	3 00	3 25
Flour, ₩ bbl
Superfine	4 50	—
XX	4 00	4 —
XXX	4 25	4 50
Choice XXX	—	—
Choice family	—	—
Fish:
Mackerel, No. 1, in bbls	—	8 00
Half bbls	—	4 50
Kits	—	2 —
Mackerel, No. 2, in bbls	6 00	6 25
Half bbls	3 00	3 50
Kits	75	1 —
Codfish, ₩ lb	5½	6
Herring, ₩ box	30	35
Oils, ₩ gallon:
Linseed, raw	—	—
Coal oil, bbls	25	30
Linseed, boiled	58	60
Lard oil	55	60
Neatsfoot	70	75
Soap, ₩ lb:
Majestic	—	7
Olive	—	9½
Palm	—	6½
Castile	—	12 @
Soda, ₩ lb		5
Starch, ₩ lb	3½	4
Salt, ₩ sack
Coarse	1 05	1 05
Fine	1 40	1 45

GRAIN AND FEED.

Corn, in sacks, ₩ bushel
Yellow	—	—
White	60	60
Mixed	—	—
Oats, ₩ bushel
Western	—	—
Red rust-proof	—	40
Bran, ₩ 100 lbs
Choice	—	—
Hay, ₩ ton
Prime	—	—
Choice	—	—
Cow Peas, ₩ bushel
Extra	—	—
Choice	—	—

PROVISIONS.

Bacon, ₩ lb
Breast	—	7
Rounds	—	—
Shoulders	—	6
Plates	—	5
Hams, sugar-cured	9	10
Hams, Pork, ₩ bbl	12	12
Dry Salt Meat, ₩ lb:
Clear	6¾	—
Shoulders	4¾	—
Lard, ₩ lb
Choice leaf	—	—
Choice family	—	—

ESCULENTS.

Potatoes, ₩ bbl
Irish	—	—
Sweet	2 50	3 00
Onions, ₩ bbl	—	—
Apples, ₩ bbl	4 50	5 00
Cabbages, ₩ 100	2 25	3 00
Sour Krout, ₩ bbl	—	—

BALING STUFFS.

Bagging, ₩ yard
1¾	—	—
2lbs	—	—
Baling Twine, ₩ lb	—	17
Ties, ₩ bundle
Hoops and Buckles	—	1 85

SUNDRIES.

Poultry, ₩ dozen:
Grown chickens	—	5 00
Young do	—	3 00
Ducks	—	5 00
Geese	—	6 00
Turkeys	12 00	14 00
Eggs, ₩ dozen
West	28	30
Southern	22	25
Honey:
Strained, ₩ gallon	—	—
Comb, ₩ lb	—	—
Pecans, ₩ lb
Louisiana	12	13
Texas	12	13
Oranges:
Louisiana, ₩ bbl	—	—
Louisiana, ₩ box	—	—
Wool, ₩ lb
Louisiana	—	28
Texas	—	—
Feathers, ₩ lb
Geese	—	—
Hides, ₩ lb
Country green	—	—
Dry salt	—	—
Dry flint	—	15
Ox Horns, each	—	2
Tallow, ₩ lb	6¾	8
Cotton Seed, ₩ ton
Prime	—	16 00
Mixed	21 00	21 50
Oil cake	22 00	2 50
Cooperage, ₩ each
Barrels or sheds	—	3 00
Molasses barrels	1 40	1 60
Rice barrels	—	1 10
Kegs	—	75
Oak Staves, per 1,000
Keg	—	—
Barrels	—	—
Extra barrels	80 00	100 00
Extra hogshead	120 00	150 00
Extra pipes	100 00	125 00
Tobacco:
Low grade	—	5½
Medium	6½	7
Good to fine	7½	8
Low	—	—
Medium	8½	9½
Good	9½	10
Fine	11½	12
Smokings	10	12

AN OLD LADY writes: "I am sixty-five years old and was feeble and nervous all the time, when I bought a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic. I have used a little more than one bottle and feel as well as at thirty, and am sure that hundreds need just such a medicine." See advertisement.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE
In Dyspepsia.

I believe Horsford's Acid Phosphate is a valuable remedy in many cases of neurasthenia and dyspepsia.

C. C. HIGGINS, M. D.
CHICAGO, ILL.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Jan. 1. Right Rev. Thomas Atkinson, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of North Carolina, died at his residence in this city, this evening, aged about seventy-three years. He had been in feeble health for some months, but his death was unexpected.

GALVESTON, Jan. 4. A. J. Driver has arrived in this city en route for Brownsville, where he will take charge of the Texas department of the Mexican Telegraph Company. This line will run from Brownsville to Brazos Santiago, where a cable is to be laid to Tampico, thence to Vera Cruz, where connection will be made with the line running to the City of Mexico. Mr. Driver says the cable boats are on their way, and the line is expected to reach completion in about a month. The line will connect with the Western Union lines at Brownsville.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5. Gen. Sheridan has a telegram from Major Higgs, at Camp Poplar Grove, dated Jan. 3, saying: Two hundred hostiles are in his camp safe, and Sitting Bull is coming. He subdued the hostiles after a short attack, killing one and wounding two.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Judge Wm. B. Woods, the newly appointed Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, appeared here last night and to-day subscribed to the usual oaths of office and took his place on the Supreme next to Justice Bradley.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5. The International Sanitary Conference met to-day and was called to order by Secretary Evarts, who made a welcoming address. John Hay, Assistant Secretary of State, was chosen President and Dr. Thomas J. Turner, of the Navy and Secretary of the National Board of Health, was made Secretary. In the absence of certain specialists and experts and the lack of specific instructions from the Universities of several delegates present, adjournment was had to Wednesday next.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9. Forty-nine deaths from diphtheria in Brooklyn last week. The health authorities think the disease is slightly increasing.

EDWARDS, Miss., Jan. 9. A freight train left Edwards, Miss., about four o'clock this morning, resulting in the destruction of the Nixon House and several buildings belonging to J. H. Cheshire, of Jackson, Miss.

GALVESTON, Jan. 9. A dispatch from Palestine says: Thirteen engineers of the Great Northern Railroad are here organized, and will start Monday to make a preliminary survey of a route from Laredo to the city of Mexico. The road will be rapidly constructed from San Antonio to the Rio Grande, most of which is now under contract.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 10. On December 13, the Japanese coasting steamer with sixty passengers and crew of seventy-two, foundered in Inland Sea and seventy-four lives were lost.

SAN ANTONIO DISPATCH, Jan. 10, 1881. Gould's surveyors are here ready to start to Laredo, to survey a route to the city of Mexico, to take a six months' tour.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10. The Burnside educational bill which passed the Senate not entirely satisfactory to the House committee on Education and Labor as there would be danger of losing the bill if Logan's amendment to the Senate bill allowing the House committee to meet during the session of Congress, to report the bill without amendment, and move to pass it next Monday under suspension of the rules. The motion will probably prevail and the bill become a law at this session.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 10. The Call publishes an interview with Hon. John F. Swift, one of the commissioners to negotiate a treaty with China, who returned by Steamer Gaelic Yesterday. Mr. Swift says, in addition to the points in the treaty heretofore made public the treaty contains a clause reserving to the United States the right to terminate it any time the restrictions on Chinese laborers in this country. It was also clearly understood that these laborers could not be naturalized in the United States and that the naturalizations already accomplished shall be considered null and void. The negotiations will be concluded November 20th.

PARIS, Jan. 10. The results of the elections are reported, showing 91 Republicans, 9 Irreconcilables and 8 Conservatives, returned; 22 second ballots will be necessary. No Communists have yet been reported elected.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Jan. 4. It is stated that the late George Eliot left manuscripts which though incomplete, will yet, in part, be published.

LONDON, Jan. 4. Dr. Schliemann has presented his collection of Trojan antiquities to the Emperor of Germany, to be placed in the museum at Berlin.

LONDON, Jan. 5. Truth this afternoon states that the marriage of Baroness Burdett Coutts with Ashmead Bartlett will take place during the present month; that the clause of the will of the Duchess of St. Albans, by which the Baroness would forfeit her interest in bank in the event of her marrying a foreigner, will be contested in the courts.

LONDON, Jan. 7. The death is announced of Arnold Ruge, a German writer, philosopher and liberal politician, distinguished as father of the German revolution. His age was 79.

LONDON, Jan. 7. The Times, in a leading article this morning, says: It is not improbable that Mr. Parnell, at the moment when he has to stand trial on a criminal charge, and when he has challenged not only the British Government, but the Imperial Parliament to combat, may find popular support in Ireland crumbling under his feet.

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 7. A working cheesemaker of this city has informed the Russian Embassy, at London, of a Nihilist plot to construct infernal machines in England for use in Russia.

LONDON, Jan. 5. A Berlin dispatch to the Daily News says: At a meeting of the students, held to consider on the best means for extending the anti-Jewish agitation, deputations from the universities of Gottingen, Leipzig, Kiel, Rostock and Halle were present. Fourteen hundred Berlin students and 1022 Leipzig students, and many others, have already signed an anti-Jewish petition to Prince Bismarck. The authorities have dismissed the great agitator, Dr. Henrijo, from his post of schoolmaster.

LONDON, Jan. 7. A dispatch from Dublin to the Times says: The prosecution of the imbicted Land Leaguers and the prosjact of repressive measures in Parliament have not had any quieting effect on the lawless classes in the West of Ireland. A landlord and his wife and the wife and son of a tenant, were recently seriously assaulted at Ballinamore, county Leitrim, by parties of armed men. For the last month no petty sessions have been held at Ballinamore, but the League court sits regularly, and its authority is widely acknowledged. The three land commissioners, in their reports to the Government, recommend the adoption of the three F's—fair rents, free sales and fixity of tenure. They admit the principle of free contract, but intimate that practically such freedom does not exist. They propose that the rent be fixed by two arbitrators, one representing the tenant and one representing the Land Court, with power to summon an umpire, if necessary, and that the rent, when fixed, is to remain unchanged for twenty-one years. They would take away the power of eviction, except for non-payment of rent, subletting or waste. Occupying tenants are not to be allowed to contract themselves out of act, but non-occupying tenants are to be allowed to do so, subject to certain limitations, and limited owners should be enabled to sell, mmunit of annual payment not to exceed the present rent. The Commissioners recommending the adoption of the three F's are Lord Bessborough, Baron Dowse and Mr. Wm. Shaw, M. P. The dissenters are Mr. Kavanagh and the O'Conor Don.

CITY OF MEXICO, Jan. 9. At last accounts there was not a pound of flour in Tampico, and a cargo was anxiously expected from New Orleans. It is feared that the whole cotton crop of Awango has been destroyed. Cold weather in Chihuahua surpasses anything of the kind within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. There has been ice in El Paso del Norte two inches thick. The house of the Protestant ministers residing in Jalapa having been stoned by fanatics, the government immediately took measures for the punishment of the offenders. The yellow fever has almost completely disappeared from Vera Cruz.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR CONTINUE BUSINESS. It was understood yesterday that the embarrassed cotton firm of S. B. Newman & Co., after receiving numerous and liberal offers of pecuniary aid from powerful financial friends, had secured ing indulgences from their chief creditors, and would continue business.

The following special to the Times, from Vicksburg, shows with what interest the ban is regarded in the business community there:

NATCHEZ, Miss., Jan. 5. Late this evening the community here settled down, a dispatch having come from S. Newman & Co., New Orleans, the heir paper had been extended by the banks, and business would proceed uninterrupted.

A dispatch was sent from this city this morning with offers of assistance, asking that no assignment be made.

A very panicky feeling existed and fearful crash was looked for. That suspension resulted in a calamity the community would have been incapacitated. N. O. Times-Democrat, January 6.

CURIOSITIES OF 1881. The year 1881 will be a mathematical curiosity from right to left and left to right reads the same. Eighteen divided by two gives nine as a quotient; 81 divided by nine gives nine; 11 divided by 9 the quotient contains a 9; if multiplied by 2 the product contains two 9s; 1 and 8 are 9 and 1 are 9. If the 18 be placed under the 81 and added the sum is 99 the figures be turned thus: 1 8 8 1 it will give 99. Reading from left to right it is 18, and it is twenty-fifths of 90. By adding, dividing and multiplying 1 8 8 1 are produced, being the number for each year required to complete the century.—Utica N. Y. Journal.

Quarterly Conferences.

NORTH ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

DECATUR DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Courtland	Jan. 1
Cook circuit, at Town Creek	1
Moulton circuit, at Bethel	8
Danville circuit, at Hillsboro	8
Hartselle circuit, at Bethel	15
Decatur station	15
Cotaco circuit, at Antioch	15
Athens circuit, at Lamberts	22
Mooresville circuit, at Mooring	22
Rogersville station	29
Elkton mission, at Elkton	Feb. 5
Pulaski station	5
Lynnville circuit, at Lynnville	12
Prospect circuit, at Prospect	12
Fayetteville mission, at Fayetteville	19
Shelbyville mission, at Shelbyville	19
Tullahoma station	26
Winchester station	26
Manchester circuit, at Manchester	27
Normandy circuit, at Normandy	27
Tullahoma mission, at Hillsboro	Mar. 5
Beechgrove circuit, at Beechgrove	5
Shelbyville circuit, at Cannon	6
Murfreesboro station	12
Lebanon station	12
Smithville mission, at Smithville	13
Woodbury circuit, at Woodbury	19
Liberty circuit, at Liberty	20
Statesville mission, at Statesville	26
Alexandria circuit, at Alexandria	27

The District Stewards will please meet the Board of Stewards of Decatur station, at the parsonage, Wednesday, January 19, at 6 o'clock, P. M.

W. C. KIRKPATRICK, P. E.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

UNION SPRINGS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Greenville station	Jan. 1
Greenville circuit, at Oak Grove	8
Fort Deposit circuit, at Letohatchee	15
Troy Station, at Antioch	15
Hartford circuit, at Ruhdee	22
Elba Mission, at Rocky Mount	Feb. 5
Union Springs station	12
Tuskegee station	19
Pine Level circuit, at Hill Chapel	26
Chunnenuggee mission, at Hurt's	26
Troy circuit, at Lay's Hill	26
Mobile St. station, at Mount Meigs	Mar. 5
Tallassee circuit, at Mount Hilliard	12

J. M. GANS, P. E.

MONTGOMERY DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Auburn station	Jan. 1
Tallassee station	8
Harvilla circuit, at [illegible]	8
Elmore circuit, at Carrollton	15
Crawford circuit, at Crawford	22
Tuskegee circuit, at Union Valley	29
Notasulga circuit, at Salem	Feb. 5
Opelika station	12
Opelika mission, at Franklin	Mar. 5
Montgomery station	6
Montgomery circuit, at Dalrymple Chapel	13

The District Stewards will meet at the Dexter parsonage, at Auburn, February 15, at eleven o'clock A. M. A full meeting is very important.

E. H. DASHIELL, P. E.

MOBILE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

St. Paul	Jan. 1, 2
Whistler	8, 9
St. Francis street	15, 16
Franklin street	22, 23
Pascagoula and Gautier Mission	29, 30
Citronelle, at Mariner	Feb. 5, 6
Pensacola, at Pensacola	12, 13
Grand Bay, at Grand Bay	19, 20
St. Stephen's, at New Hope	26, 27
Bladon Springs, at Bladon Springs	Mar. 5, 6
Okatoupa, at Bethel	12, 13
Sugarville, at Sugarville	19, 20
Grove Hill, at Mt. Zion	26, 27

G. R. BRUCE, P. E.

SELMA DISTRICT.—FIRST ROUND.

Clifton circuit	Jan. 1
Rockford Hill	8, 9
Bay Minette	15, 16
Bon Secour	15, 16
Brushton	21, 23
Marion	22, 23
Uniontown station	29, 30
Uniontown circuit	Feb. 1
Livonia	6
Nobleville, at Jerusalem	12, 13
Summerfield	19, 20
Spring Hill	26, 27
Perryville	Mar. 5, 6
Cahaba mission, at Prairie Chapel	12, 13

District Stewards meet at Selma, Tuesday, March 15.

W. A. CHANEY, P. E.

MARIANA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Geneva circuit, at Geneva	Jan. 15, 16
Marianna station, at Marianna	22, 23
Cedar Grove mission, at Cedar Point	29, 30
Calhoun mission, at Shiloh's Ferry	Feb. 5, 6
Big Creek mission, at Pope's	12, 13
Greenwood circuit, at Mt. Zion	19, 20
Chipley mission, at New Britain	26, 27
Bradford mission, at Bradford	Mar. 5, 6
Holmes's Valley circuit, at Moss Hill	12, 13
Freeport and Walton, at Freeport	19, 20

The District Stewards will please meet at Caudelton, Jackson county, Fla., January 8.

Brethren please be punctual, as it is important that the whole work should be fully represented.

A. J. TOLEMAN, P. E.

PENSACOLA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Pensacola	Jan. 1, 2
Warrenton	8, 9
Milleview, at Milleview	15, 16
Milton	22, 23
Powelton, at Hot Springs	29, 30
Perdido Mission, at New Hope	Feb. 5, 6
Stockton, at Stockton	5, 6
Pollard, at Mt. Carmel	12, 13
Yellow River, at Damascus	19, 20
Evergreen, at Evergreen	26, 27
Greenville, at Greenville Station	March 5, 6
Monroeville, at Perdue Hill	5, 6
Sepulga, at Bethel	12, 13
Mosley, at Liberty	19, 20

I hope every official member will be present at these first quarterly Conferences, and every Steward will see to it that at least one-fourth of the preacher's allowance be paid by the first quarterly Conference.

S. H. LOX, P. E.

PRATTVILLE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Lowndesboro	Jan. 1, 2
Wetumpka	8, 9
Clanton and Verbena	15, 16
Bell's Landing	22, 23
Coosada and Oak Lawn	29, 30
Autaugaville	Feb. 5, 6
Prattville	12, 13
Pine Apple	19, 20
Randolph	26, 27
Maplesville	Mar. 5, 6
Pleasant Hill	12, 13
Deatsville mission	19, 20

Brierfield mission quarterly meeting will be held at the same time and place as the Randolph quarterly meeting, at Cedar Grove. I have not given the places for holding the meetings, for they are on the minutes of each quarterly Conference.

A. H. MITCHELL, P. E.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

SHREVEPORT DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Logansport mission, at Reynold's S. H.	Jan. 2, 3
Caddo circuit	15, 16
Southfield circuit, at Bethel	22, 23
North Bossier, at Red River	29, 30
Monticello	Feb. 5, 6
Shreveport	12, 13
Mansfield	19, 20
Plain Dealing and Coushatta	26, 27
Spring Hill mission, at Spring Hill	Mar. 5, 6
Pleasant Hill	12, 13
Many station	19, 20
Natchitoches station, at Natchitoches	26, 27
Natchitoches circuit, at New Hope	Apr. 2, 3
Natchitoches station	9, 10

District Stewards' meeting at Shreveport, February 15, 1881.

E. H. MELLISON, P. E.

NEW ORLEANS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Madisonville
Algiers
Louisiana Avenue
Carondelet
Plaquemine and Grosse Tete
Lafourche
Bayou Lafourche
Carondelet street
St. Charles Avenue

The District Stewards will please meet the Board of Stewards of Louisiana Avenue, at seven o'clock P. M., at the parsonage of Louisiana Avenue Church, to make the appointments for the year 1881.

J. C. WATTS, P. E.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

JACKSON DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Hinds mission, at Lodi	Jan. 1, 2
Raymond	8, 9
Pleasant Grove	15, 16
Bolton and Edwards	22, 23
Clinton	29, 30
Brandon and Morton	Feb. 5, 6
Pelahatchie	12, 13
Forest	19, 20
Carthage	26, 27
Lena	Mar. 5, 6
Canton	12, 13
Madison	19, 20
Yazoo City	26, 27

The District Stewards will please meet at the parsonage in Canton on the 1st Monday in March, 1881.

W. L. HOSKINS, P. E.

BROOKHAVEN DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Brookhaven and Meadville, at Brookhaven	Dec. 25, 26
West Lincoln, at Mt. Carmel	Jan. 1, 2
Summit and McComb, at McComb	8, 9
Crosby	15, 16
Magnolia	22, 23
Osyka	29, 30
Liberty	Feb. 5, 6
Fayette	12, 13
Natchez	19, 20
Washington	26, 27
Port Gibson	Mar. 5, 6
Rodney	12, 13
Bayou Pierre, at Bayou Pierre	19, 20
Hazlehurst	26, 27
Gallatin street	Apr. 2, 3
Copiah, at Beulah	9, 10
Crystal Springs	16, 17

The District Stewards will please meet at Crystal Springs, January 1, 1881.

E. S. WHITE, P. E.

VICKSBURG DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Rolling Fork	Jan. 1, 2
Clover Hill	8, 9
Mt. Olivet, at Satartia	15, 16
Smallwood mission, at Somerset	22, 23
Warren, at Bovina	29, 30
Yazoo City	29, 30
Fort Gibson	Feb. 5, 6
Mayersville	12, 13
Rocky Springs, at Rocky Springs	19, 20
Gallatin street	26, 27
Natchez	Mar. 5, 6
Fayette, at Fayette	12, 13
Washington, at Washington	19, 20
Meadville	26, 27

The District Stewards will meet at the Methodist Church in Meadville, January 26, at eleven o'clock.

H. J. JONES, P. E.

BRANDON DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

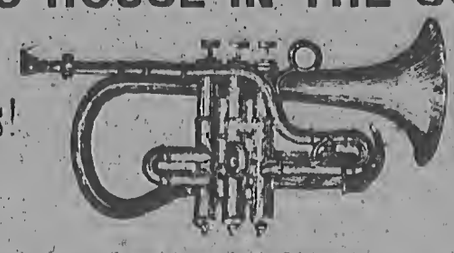
Leake circuit	Jan. 1, 2
Pearl and Lindsey mission, at Liberty	15, 16
Richland, at Richland	22, 23
Forest circuit, at Morton	29, 30
Philadelphia circuit, at Piney Grove	Feb. 5, 6
Newton Station and Mt. Hebron, at Salem	12, 13
Conehatta circuit, at Conway	19, 20
Walnut Grove circuit, at Walnut Grove	26, 27
Pearl circuit, at Bethany	Mar. 5, 6
Preston circuit, at Preston	12, 13
Newton circuit, at Newton	19, 20
Lake station and Lake	26, 27
Raleigh circuit, at Cary's Chapel	Apr. 2, 3

The District Stewards will meet at Morton, January 29, 1881, to fix the salary of Presiding Elder and apportion the collections ordered by the Conference.

JAS. M. GANS, P. E.

The remedy that will Cure the many diseases peculiar to Woman is Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. Mother's Magazine.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE CROSS STYLOGRAPHIC PEN OR FLUID PENCIL.

A pencil that writes with ink; never needs sharpening and never wears out. Made of hard rubber, gold, platinum and iridium. 14 kinds from $2 50 to $5 each. Call and see it or send for circular.

LATHROP & WILKINS, Agents for the South.
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

LEON ARLAUD
DRUGGIST,
Corner Customhouse and Dauphine sts., New Orleans.
PURE AND GENUINE DRUGS. GUARANTEED UNADULTERATED
Medicines, Perfumery, etc. Specialty of Bather's Eau de Cologne.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR
MUSIC HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

Easiest Terms! Lowest Prices

General Agency for the Celebrated
Steinway, Knabe, Pleyel, Weber, Fischer Pianos,
And the Popular Organs of
CLOUGH & WARREN AND PELOUBET, PELTON & CO.,
Everything in the Music line at rock bottom prices. Send for illustrated catalogue.
LOUIS GRUNEWALD,
Grunewald Hall, New Orleans.

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.

SOUTHERN DEPARTMENT:

OFFICE CORNER CARONDELET AND GRAVIER STREETS.

The assets of the Company is TEN MILLION DOLLARS, which all their capital is invested, and the liability of the policy holders

Fire assets (exclusive of paid up capital) [illegible]
Paid up capital [illegible]
Two mile [illegible]
Fire Liabilities [illegible]
Making the surplus for policy holders [illegible]

Losses by Chicago Fire in 1871 $38,239,021
Losses by Boston Fire in 1872 $13,120,729

BOARD OF DIRECTORS
[illegible]

P. WERLEIN,
135 Canal Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

PIANOS,
ORGANS,
MUSIC
AND
Musical Instruments.

Please send for my catalogue and prices before buying from any one, North or South.

$25 TO $35.
STEWART'S NEW IMPROVED
SINGER
Sewing Machine.

Great Reduction in Prices!

Down with Monopolies!

Hard Times Demand Low Prices.

We warrant all our Machines to be NEW, LATEST IMPROVED and PERFECT for

FIVE YEARS.

Our NEW MACHINE is supplied with a LOOSE BALANCE WHEEL, which is a great improvement over the Old SINGER, and it enables the operator to [illegible] the balance wheel, causing the machine, or removing the work from the needle. This is the most important improvement ever put on the Sewing Machine.

Also dealer in all first-class Machines, such as the

WHEELER & WILSON,
DOMESTIC,
WILSON,
GROVER & BAKER,
WEED, Etc

Cotton, Silk, Flax, Oil and Needles for all kinds of Machines. Address

M. A. PECK,
General Sewing Machine Agent.
133 CANAL STREET,
Next to Holmes' Dry Goods Store,
New Orleans.

B. J. MONTGOMERY. C. KIRSCH.
R. M. & B. J.
MONTGOMERY
FURNITURE
AND
MIRROR EMPORIUM.
Corner Camp and Poydras Sts.

After a search of over a week among the Factories North, East and West, we secured the Full and Winter Lots, with the Latest Novelties of Parisian, French and American Manufacture, in Ormolu and Brass Mounted and Cabinet Makers' Hardwood Suits, ever shown in this city. We will be pleased to have our friends and the public generally call and examine our stock, which we feel confident will compare favorably with any in the city, both in quality and prices. Our Upholstering Department is under the management of a first-class workman, and we guarantee satisfaction in all our work.

Orders by mail promptly attended to. Send for Price List.

Address
MONTGOMERY & KIRSCH,
New Orleans.

THE
NEW HYMN BOOK
Everybody is Delighted with It.

Prepared by direction of the General Conference, and authorized by the Bishops, the New Hymn Book has been received with favor by the Church, and is now in general use throughout the South. It contains all the best hymns of the old Hymn Book, and many new ones, and is adapted to congregational singing. It is the most complete Hymn Book ever published, and is the result of years of labor and experience of pastors and others, and from every part of the South comes the testimony that it is admirably adapted to the wants of public worship, both in the service of hymns and prayer, and from every pulpit and choir in the land it is commended in the highest terms.

Single Copy by mail, postpaid, Twenty-five cents. Liberal rates for introduction. Sent free by express, cash with order. Address

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

FURNITURE.

W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
New Orleans,

desires to inform the public and his patrons that his Stock of Parlor Suits, Chamber Suits and Dining-Room Suits, both fine and medium, has never been as complete as at present, with prices lower than ever.

His stock of Furniture suitable for country trade is very large, and special inducements are offered to wholesale buyers.

Orders from the country will have especial care and prompt attention.

W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
New Orleans.

D. MERCIER & SONS,
Better Known as Cheap John's,
NO BRANCH STORE IN TOWN
MEN'S, BOYS' AND YOUTH'S
CLOTHING,
HATS, BOOTS, SHOES, FURNISHING GOODS, ETC., ETC.
Cor. Dauphine and Bienville sts.,
New Orleans, La.

Orders from Country Merchants promptly executed on most reasonable terms.

DR. BLY'S CELEBRATED PATENT ARTIFICIAL LEGS AND ARMS have all the motions of the natural limbs. Perfect satisfaction in all cases or no pay. Prices reduced. Send for pamphlet.

A. McDERMOTT, Manufacturer,
158 Camp St., New Orleans.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 27.—NO. 3. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JANUARY 20, 1881. WHOLE NO. 1337.

PUBLISHED FOR THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

G. T. LATHROP, Publisher.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, ... $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE:
REV. H. D. MOORE.
REV. O. R. BLUE, D. D.
REV. J. C. ANDREW.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
REV. W. H. WATKINS, D. D.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. BUNNICUTT.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
REV. JOHN MATHEWS, D. D.
REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

THE KING'S MISS.

BY EARL SPENCER.

Go tell so many ships upon the sea
How are the merchantmen that carry
The mood of war, all dangers set gallantly
The cruiser, fishermen, and barks of pleasure
The sea of time there is not one
That sailed without the glorious name thereon.

Now is the sweep and dowry upon the sea
Ages ago they highly chase, upholding Kinsey
And what them to the port where they would be
And many ships they buried loud and lonely
And comes down to the great sinking deep
Again the shore the watchers stand and weep

And God hath in my watch within the sea
Of deep, I look in fear and wonder
To see him through shadows dark to me
Of days were to think his care is undone
That all the sunken treasure may be drawn
To storehouse where the sea is gone.

And shall no peril on the sea,
Watch, behold, when yet the waves are
And hath more than angels' care in me
And sleep than I in frozen Lapland
Yet yet we watch her on the shelf
Of from the shadow of his hand.

Astronomical Notes—January.

The interest of the month centers in Venus, Jupiter, and Saturn among the planets. Venus moves eastward across Aquarius, increases in brilliancy by evening in brilliancy, and draws nearer to the major planets. At the end of the month only a single constellation will lie between them. The illuminated surface of this lovely object decreases in area but increases in diameter, yet the planet is a rather provoking and unsatisfactory one to the observer as seen through a telescope, being enveloped in a dense atmosphere and rarely affording a distinct outline. Venus is now the brightest star in the firmament, and in about sixty days will probably become so lustrous as to be visible by day and to cast shadows by night. Six or seven years ago when Venus was at its brightest as a morning star we saw by her light the shadows of the trees on the lawn from our window with charming distinctness. At the end of two months Venus, Saturn and Jupiter will form a triangle, a glorious group in Aries, a spectacle of rare beauty.

Both Jupiter and Saturn are starting to be conspicuous for brilliancy, and neither will fall off much in that feature during the year; the former because comparatively not far from perihelion and the latter because the ring, which is more luminous than the orb, is opening out more and more, and because the planet is traveling on to perihelion. January and February are favorable months for observing these mighty orbs. The best interesting views we had of Jupiter were enjoyed in the latter part of January and during February of last year. The belts were then more distinct than we have seen them at any other time, and the very best view we had was when the planet was about thirty degrees above the horizon at an unusual circumstance. We enter now the most favorable period for observations of Saturn. The best views are obtained when three conditions are combined; namely, the approach of the planet to perihelion, its greatest northern declination, and the widest opening out of the ring. These conditions will concur between 1881-85, and will not be again combined before 1907.

Mars continues to be a morning star, rising about an hour and a half before the sun, and is slowly increasing in lustre as it returns from its long journey to aphelion. Uranus becomes visible again, almost on the ecliptic just below the bright star σ in the eastward from Regulus in the foremost hind leg of Leo. It moves apparently a short distance to the northwest during the month. It is rather indistinct, but will be perceived without much difficulty by good eyes.

The transits of Jupiter's moons, visible here before midnight, are those of No. 1 on the 9th, beginning soon after 7 o'clock; of No. 2 on the 11th, beginning a little before 8 o'clock; of No. 1 on the 18th at 5.18, and again on the 25th at 5.31 all Washington time. Jupiter affords constant evidence of great activity. The belt above the equatorial is at times quite distinct and again fades away somewhat. It is over 30,000 miles in length and averages perhaps over 1,000 miles in breadth. Other markings above and below the equatorial belt come and go constantly. Seen through a six-inch objective they appear small, but really cover thousands of miles.

The earth is apparently responding to the vast commotions within and upon Jupiter and the sun. Two magnetic storms, one of great waves, have swept around the world; atmospheric storms have increased, and the staunchest steamers have been delayed and somewhat severely tried; the internal fires of the earth are aroused to unwonted activity. Vesuvius is in eruption, Etna is thrilling and trembling, Mauna Loa is pouring out rivers of lava; a district at Agram, Croatia, is shaken by earthquakes, casting down over two hundred buildings, and mud volcanoes are thrown up; the north shore of Scotland and Ireland has also been shaken; and Mt. Baker, in Washington Territory, is giving signs of renewed activity. The theory of the sun spot period is apparently receiving confirmation. The maximum of sun spots it is supposed will be reached in 1882, and until then these commotions may increase. These disturbances, calamitous as they may be to certain localities, are nothing new, have occurred probably at regular intervals heretofore. Prof. Draper reports that his examination of such records as he has access to show a great cycle of about sixty years, including the smaller cycles of about eleven or twelve years. It is not improbable that further research will fix the great cycle rather over than under seventy years, when something like the present planetary conditions coincided with a sun spot period. It is not unlikely that the earth will be considerably disturbed during 1881-82. But this is largely conjectural. Observations this year and next year may decidedly modify the theory.

Astronomers just now are somewhat at fault in regard to some very interesting calculations. It has been supposed for some time that the perturbations of Uranus and Neptune on their orbits and those of comets traveling outside of Uranus were caused by one or more extra-Neptunian planets. Prof. G. Forbes, by reckoning the aphelia of certain periodic comets, inferred the existence of two extra-Neptunian planets, and has indicated their approximate positions. Mr. D. P. Todd, from the perturbations of Uranus, has reckoned one such planet closely agreeing with one of the results reached by Prof. Forbes. A search of the locality indicated has been made with the great Washington refractor, but in vain. The issue is rather a disappointment.

The results of the spectroscopic examination of nebulæ is giving rise to some talk. Many of the nebulæ give only three lines, one of hydrogen, one of nitrogen, and another of an unknown vapor. Now, unless it can be proved that all known substances can be resolved into hydrogen, nitrogen and the unknown gas, the nebular hypothesis will be seriously imperiled. So the matter stands at present. More powerful and better spectroscopes may give hereafter other results, but just now the evidence is rather unfavorable to the nebular theory.

Astronomers are glancing occasionally at Cassiopeia to see whether the famous temporary star, which has blazed out apparently through some vast conflagration at three previous periods, will again exhibit a similar phenomenon. It appeared in 945, in 1264, and 1572. At the last outburst it became suddenly brighter than Jupiter, was visible to the keen sight of at noon, and at night penetrated by its radiance thick clouds which hid every other star. The recorded periods of appearance have been at intervals of 314 and 308 years, so that there is no probability of a fresh blazing out during the present decade. This star is to be passed also through interesting changes of color, and disappeared at the end of seventeen months. J. M. F. in Christian Intelligencer.

Railroads and Missions in Mexico.

Rev. S. P. Craver, a missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, writing to the Northwestern Christian Advocate, from Guanajuato, Mexico, says:

A very general demand for railroads as one essential factor in the solution of Mexico's financial, social and political problems has manifested itself especially since the last revolution. American companies had long been seeking permission to build railroads, but were looked upon with suspicion. The public cry grew louder, and numerous concessions were made, two and three years ago, to state governments and Mexican companies for constructing short disconnected lines in different parts of the country. This measure only revealed more the helplessness of the country and the necessity of outside help. The demands of the progressive press became more urgent and decided, and could not be longer resisted. Last May an expiring congress passed an act authorizing contracts with foreign companies for the construction of a system of railroads upon certain conditions. Hope began to arise. After mature deliberation, two important contracts were celebrated early in September last, the signing of which marks the beginning of a new and glorious epoch in this republic.

The first of these contracts was made with Robert C. Symon, of a Boston corporation. The route includes many principle interior cities. Leaving Mexico, it passes north through Tula, Queretaro, Celaya, Salamanca, Irapicato, Guanajuato, to Leon. Thence it branches into two lines; one passing through Aguascalientes, Zegatecas, Durango, Chiauahua to Paso del Norte. The other goes through Gualalajara, Tepic to San Blas, or Mazatlin on the Pacific coast. These roads are of standard guage, and the limit of time for entire completion is ten years, with the probability of a more speedy conclusion. About 5,000 men are now at work and the number is being constantly increased. The other, the Mexican National company, represented by Jas. A. Sullivan and W. J. Palmer, has a concession for lines equally important. Leaving Mexico the road is to pass west through Toluca, Maravatio, Moredia, Urapajan, Zamora, Colima to Manzanillo on the Pacific coast. From or near Moredia the road branches and the second line passes north, crossing the central road at Celaya and running through San Luis Potosi, Fresnillo, Montigrey to Laredo on the Rio Grande. The lines of this company are to be narrow guage, and being both shorter than the corresponding lines of the Central will doubtless be built more promptly and attract the larger share of trade and travel. Eight years is the limit of time for their conclusion. The great rivalry between the companies promises rapid construction, and the hope that in less than eight years the City of Mexico will be united by steel bands with Chicago and New York. The latest papers from Mexico announce the arrival of a goodly number of American civil engineers, and the advertisement of the Sullivan and Palmer company for 5,000 men in addition to their present force. Both companies are struggling for a concession for a road from Tampico to San Luis Potosi and Zacatecas. Numerous other roads are contracting by Mexicans, but have not national importance. A few years of peace will put Mexico on the high road to prosperity and awaken dormant energies.

The prospects of a peaceful future were never better. For the first time, a living president will probably deliver his chief peacefully to his successor in December. To President Diaz belongs the honor of inaugurating the great system of railroads, and setting the example of peaceably retiring from power. Manuel Gonzalez follow the footsteps of his predecessor.

What have all these things to do with the cause of Christ in Mexico? Much, every way. Especially does the establishment of these great lines of travel place the Christian churches of the United States under new obligations to Mexico. The great heart of this country will soon be laid open to the influence of gospel truth. These railroads will put in close connection with the capital some forty of fifty towns and cities of from 10,000 to 100,000 inhabitants, in each very few of which are as yet occupied by Christian laborers. As a body and of God the Methodist Episcopal Church has a duty, here which she cannot evade. God has graciously blessed the work of her missionaries in the field already occupied, and thus beckons her forward to greater faith and more extended labors. Very few if any missions of any Church have given larger results for the labor and means employed. Much of this work has been preparatory, and future years ought to witness greater conquests than the past. Railroads are Protestant institutions, and the whistle of the locomotive will awaken the people of these inland towns and cities to a realization that there exists a spiritual and intellectual power in Protestantism that can never be imparted by the mass and the confessional. The tides of trade and travel that will soon be surging through the towns along these great thoroughfares will rapidly break down the superstition and fanatical exclusiveness of the people and open a way for the entrance of evangelical truth. The banner of Christ ought to be raised in every considerable town at the first entrance of the locomotive, if not beforehand. Our Church ought to put twenty new missionaries in Mexico within the next two years. Brethren, take your maps and study the routes indicated; think of the doors that God is throwing wide open before us; listen to the cry of hungry, starved, priest-ridden souls that long for gospel light and truth, and pray the Lord of the harvest that He send laborers in abundance into this great field.

From the Mexican Border.

Having learned through Bro. William Heiden, who may properly be called the "Father of the Mexican Border Mission," that the child of our departed and never-to-be-forgotten Alejo Hernandez was living with her mother on the other side of the river, and that it was his wish that his children be brought up by Protestants, we determined to go and see about her. Mr. Norwood and myself, feeling sure that the Society would approve of it, determined that we would add this little girl to the number already under our charge. A short walk brought us to the river's edge, where we were detained while the diligent custom-house official inspected some corn that was being unloaded. We spent the time enjoying the view of the two cities, Laredo and Nuesa Laredo, while the flowing river, the distant mountains, and the glowing western sky added beauty to the scene. Another boat finally came, and we were soon on Mexican soil. "Just up the bank, in a little frame house," we had been told we should find the family we sought. As we approached the house a group of little girls were playing in front of it, and I, singling out a bright-eyed, intelligent-looking one, declared her the child of Hernandez. We were kindly received by the child's mother and step-father, who were nursing a sick infant. Mr. Norwood made our business known, but the woman shook her head. "It seems too hard," she said, "to think of parting with my child; I cannot do it." Bro. Headen had talked with the step-father, and had inferred that they were willing to give her up to us. I was disappointed, for I had been full of interest from the first, and it seemed awful to me for a missionary's daughter to be brought up away from all religious influence, for her mother is not a Christian, though an intelligent, pleasant woman. Mr. Norwood explained to her the advantages her daughter would have, and told her that she would be so near that they could see each other often. The little girl's name is Esther, and she is very intelligent and sprightly-looking, is six years of age. Hernandez left two children, but one has since died. They finally promised to consider the matter, and to come and see us; and we left them, crossing the river after dark, and hurrying home to our little Marvin. "How sad, thought I, as I clasped him in my arms, would I be to think of this little fellow's being brought up away from the sweet influences of the gospel of Christ." As Esther is yet small, we will still hope to get her in time to teach her to love the religion for which her father labored and died. In the meantime, I am certain that the Church will feel much interest in her as it has in the father, and that they will remember her in their prayers.

A. M. Norwood.

Woman's Missionary Advocate.

Opelousas Female High School.

This institution is situated at Opelousas, St. Landry parish, in the midst of a beautiful and fertile region of this state. It is accessible by lake, steamboat and railroad to all southwest Louisiana. The locality is a guarantee of good health, being surrounded by a fine prairie swept by the gulf breezes.

The Methodists, the Episcopalians, and the Catholics have liberal and substantial, churches erected, there in which to offer their devotions to God. The Baptists have a minister there, and though they have no church edifice to boast yet they find ample accommodations in the court house. The Methodist church is to be, or has already accomplished pastor to occupy its pulpit every Sabbath, and white-gowned and young ladies will be thoroughly instructed intellectually and morally. These are most important items to parents who wish to educate their daughters very advantageously for their future stations and usefulness.

Mrs. Maggie Hoyes is the principal. She is a graduate of Columbia Female College, Texas. Several years ago she established herself at this place and opened a high school for young ladies. Combining rare scholarship with a thorough practical experience she is amply qualified to instruct young ladies in all the branches of female education usually taught in our colleges. Miss Emma H. Hoyes, a graduate of Tilton Female Seminary, Covington, Texas, is now associated with her. She is a talented and cultured lady, and those who wish their daughters instructed in the classics may commit them to her care with every assurance that they will receive all the advantages of a thorough and practical use of those languages. Mrs. M. R. Eastrapes, daughter of Judge Adrian E. King, has been employed in the musical department. Having a musical talent rarely surpassed, and possessing great facility for imparting her knowledge to others, girls put under her care will soon become expert in the practical use of the science of music. It has been said this is a religious school, a school where the principle and the assistants only illustrate the doctrines of the gospel in a practical life, but endeavor to enforce it upon their pupils by all laudable means. Why then send girls away from home to obtain religion when they can obtain all the knowledge they need, and retain a rank in scholarship equal, if not superior, to any thing they can acquire elsewhere? This school is endorsed by the Opelousas district Conference, and is heartily recommended by that dignified body to the patronage of all our people throughout Southwest Louisiana.

J. E. Stubbs.

The Outcome of Extraordinary Methods.

We call special attention, says the Baltimore Episcopal Methodist, to the letter of our valued North Carolina correspondent. It is interesting throughout. But there is one item particularly suggestive. We refer to the falling off from the Church during the past year of a large number of members brought in by extraordinary methods the year before. Evangelists of different denominations from our own, and wholly unaccustomed to Methodistic usages, had the conduct of protracted meetings in some of our charges. They directed the labors of our people. The apparent result was a large ingathering, but the crop turned out nearly all straw and but little grain. The same history has occurred elsewhere, and should teach us a lesson. We have no doubt that the Evangelists referred to were good, earnest people; but they were not Methodists, and could not be expected to adopt our plans. Methodism under God is competent to do its own work. When we go outside of its divinely accredited agencies, to call in extraneous aid, we either betray a want of confidence in the system itself, or in the God of our fathers who has signally owned it in the past. There is a growing disposition of late to resort to novel and sensational methods to attract outsiders to the house of God. This effort may be accomplished, and some temporary excitement engendered, but no substantial and permanent results will follow. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts," and when we forget this and resort to worldly expedients to accomplish God's work, we shall fail, utterly. Nothing after all draws men like the simple preaching of the Cross, and nothing will save them but the power of the Holy Ghost working through a prayerfully consecrated Church.

Mr. Mark Firth, an eminent Sheffield manufacturer, who has just died, was known in the churches, says the Methodist, as a promoter of good works and a most liberal giver. He was an active member of the Methodist New Connection, but paid very little attention to denominational lines in his giving. One of his later gifts, being of $5,000 for the Wesleyan Thanksgiving fund. This gift was one of $5,000, which he added to a gift of five times as much by his brother, for the erection of a college for the training of young men for the ministry of his church. In 1876 he built and endowed thirty-six houses for accommodating about forty aged persons, irrespective of their sectarian or partisan affiliations, except that they must be Protestants, natives of Sheffield, and of good moral character. He spent $5,000 on the Peak Park, which was opened to the public in 1875, and built Firth College at a cost of $50,000, and contributed largely to its endowment. The manufacturing firm of which he was a member, built the Norfolk works, which became famous for their steel guns and steel shot. Every gun-shot the mark, "Firth Steel."

News From China Missionaries.

The Wesleyan Chronicle of January 15, gives the following items:

Dr. Maring, after writes, under date of November 29, 1880, "He and the rest of our missionaries were on the eagle look out for the recruits. Three days between Saturday and Monday we looked in vain for the steamer coming back one steamer. They were looked for at Shanghai December 1; they should have arrived on the 28th. Dr. Allen reports that Bishop Boone, the Misses Gamble, who had gone to Japan for change of air, had returned to their posts, and were resting. Brother Albers letter shows that he is better than ever. His work is evidently growing in magnitude, character and usefulness. Profitable lessons given by him to an exceptional person of being good on a large scale.

We are in receipt of letters dated Nokoohia, Japan, December 1st, from our missionaries to Japan. They had a stormy voyage from San Francisco, of three and a half weeks, encountering strong currents, being driven back. They did not reach Japan before November 5. They were to have sailed for Shanghai, December 1.

We suppose they did so at this time, they were prospered they have been in China at least a month. We hope to have Shanghai letters from them by the next week. Our people suffered from seasickness, but none of the party had a severe sick attack. Mrs. McLaurin happily escaped entirely, from San Francisco to Japan. We hope she was as fortunate on the voyage from Yokohama to China. The missionaries of the M. E. Church, showed our friends great kindness, among them Mrs. Cooper, daughter of Bishop E. O. Haven. The missionaries make the brief stay of our friends so exceedingly pleasant, arranging various little excursions for them. They visited Tokio, saw the temples, etc. These letters we cannot print; they are letters from those who are to us as dear children, but we may say they are instinct with a living faith and a burning zeal. The little people may look out next week for a short letter to them from good Mrs. McLaurin. We should add that brother and sister Bowall were with them all going on the English steamer Gallic.

Princely Giving.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Patterson have given to the Cincinnati Hebrew Home, their country seat at Remington, thirteen miles from the city. It has thirty and a half acres of land, a large two-story residence, a large barn, a green-house full of plants, a stable, a vineyard, and an orchard all worth $25,000. It can be used either as a Summer home for the children, or rented or sold and the proceeds added to the endowment of the Home.

Judge Levi Parsons, of Port Plain, N. Y., has given to Union College $40,000, the interest of which is to be used in the maintenance of twelve or more scholarships in connection with the institution. There are to be two scholarships of $300 each, three of $200, and eight of $150. The residue of the gift is to be devoted to the assistance of worthy students of Union College who may need and deserve aid in the prosecution of their studies. The income of this fund will amount to $3,000 a year.

Mr. Reuben Springer, of Cincinnati, who is a member of the Catholic Church, made a Christmas distribution of thousand-dollar United States bonds. He gave one to St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, at Camp Hill, Pa.; one to St. Mary's Hospital; one to the House of the Good Shepherd; one to the Sisters of the Poor of St. Francis; one to the Good Samaritan Hospital; one to the Little Sisters of the Poor; one to the Foundling Asylum and Lying in Hospital, Reading Road; and one for the relief of the outside poor. He also gave $1,000 to each of his faithful household servants, and $1,000 to his coachman. Western Christian Advocate.

North Alabama Conference.

APPOINTMENTS.

HUNTSVILLE DISTRICT. John A. Thompson, P. E. Huntsville station, W. C. Dearn; Meridianville circuit, Geo. W. Hamilton; Madison circuit, W. P. Owens; Limestone circuit, E. Nicholson, B. H. Malone, sup.; Athens station, W. E. Mabry; Cambridge mission, to be supplied; W. Critcher; Pottsville circuit, T. A. Scruggs; New Market circuit, M. L. Williams; Maysville circuit, James H. Leslie; Paint Rock mission, M. L. Johnson; Vienna circuit, R. F. Mountain; Larkinsville circuit, W. L. Cameron; Deposit mission, J. C. Hunkapillar; Scottsboro circuit, W. T. Andrews; Stevenson circuit, G. F. Wilkes; President Huntsville Female College, A. D. Jones.

TALLADEGA DISTRICT. Lyon B. Evans, P. E. Talladega station, C. C. Ellis; Talladega circuit, L. F. Whitten; Munford circuit, Jos. T. Morris; Oxford circuit, W. R. Kirk; Alexandria circuit, V. O. Hawkins, C. A. Whaley, supply; Chatooga circuit, R. A. Walker, supply; Chatooga circuit, R. A. Thompson; Cross Plains circuit, Jos. T. Curry; Ball Play mission, J. N. McLeod; Cross Valley circuit, C. S. D. Lassiter; Harpersville circuit, E. K. Brindley; Columbiana circuit, M. E. Bell; Fayetteville circuit, F. C. J. Brandon; Pleasant Site circuit, A. S. Whitehurst; Childersburg circuit, T. W. Hayes.

TUSCUMBIA DISTRICT. W. C. Wright, P. E. Birmingham station, J. W. Christian; South Birmingham, to be supplied; Birmingham circuit, John B. Gregory; Mount Springs circuit, J. E. Andrews; Jones Valley circuit, B. C. Lee; Murphree's Valley circuit, R. J. Wilson; New Castle circuit, J. W. Spencer; Ashville circuit, S. M. Patterson; Pelham circuit, J. C. Curley; Johnston circuit, T. P. Roberts; Tuscaloosa circuit, R. D. Carver; Montevallo circuit, J. W. Bell; Bethany circuit, N. H. Self; Oxmoor and Helena circuit, R. Blake; Cahaba mission, to be supplied.

FLORENCE DISTRICT. Z. T. Nolen, P. E. Decatur station, J. K. Coleman; Trinity circuit, James E. Mabry; Courtland station, H. Brown; Town Creek circuit, John B. Sharpe; Leighton circuit, W. M. Elgin; Russellville station, A. C. Copeland; Littlefield mission, to be supplied; Newburg circuit, W. Williams; Danville circuit, G. F. Boyd; Moulton circuit, R. J. Sampler; Somerville circuit, H. P. Berry.

FLORENCE DISTRICT. S. M. Hosmer, P. E. Florence station, J. M. Green; Oakland circuit, L. M. Blanton; Waterloo circuit, A. M. C. Franklin; Lexington circuit, D. W. Ward; Shoal circuit, E. T. S. Roberts; Lexington circuit, C. C. Nance; Leighton circuit, R. A. Speer; Columbia station, Z. N. Parker; Cherokee mission, John S. Mack; Valley Station, M. N. Morris; Chickasaw circuit, A. W. West; Frankfort circuit, E. F. Rundell; Barbecue mission, to be supplied; Bluegrass circuit, to be supplied.

LAFAYETTE DISTRICT. A. W. Nolen, P. E. Lafayette station, John S. Davis; Oak Bowery circuit, J. Dobbs; Camp Hill circuit, Thos. J. Day; J. N. Rogers, supply; Roanoke and Alexander City, George T. Leigh; Sapaugaw circuit, M. W. Cross; Hatchet creek mission, T. B. Mercer; Hackneyville circuit, E. W. Jones; Tallapoosa mission, E. E. Meason; Lineville circuit, M. H. Evans; Abbeville mission, P. T. McWhorter, one to be supplied; A. W. Nicholson; Wesleyan institute, John T. Lupo; Bowdon circuit, W. Mc Howell; L. M. Jones, supply; Roanoke circuit, M. L. Whitten; Fredonia circuit, R. N. Le Master; District High School at Ashland, W. T. Kettle.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT. Z. T. Cook, P. E. Greenville station, Thos. H. Davenport; Tombigbee Valley circuit, James M. Dobbs, W. D. Nicholson, sup.; Island creek mission, C. W. Jacobs; Valley Head circuit, Jas. L. Mullins; Rockford Mountain mission, Jas. A. Neeley; Cedar Bluff circuit, L. A. Bell; Center circuit, T. A. Ivey; Caledonia station, C. F. Rivers; Alpha circuit, Jas. H. Cameron; Van Buren circuit, Isaac G. Mellon; Bristol's Cove circuit, to be supplied by J. M. Morton, Chas. Smith, A. N. Lowrie, supp.; Bonnieville circuit, J. W. Tucker; Warrenton circuit, A. J. Hall; Summerville District High School, M. V. Clements.

TRANSFERRED. H. D. Hill, to Alabama Conference, and appointed to Pikeville; W. T. Kettle, to Arkansas Conference.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 20, 1881.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

THOUGHTS ON DEATH AND HEAVEN.

[illegible]

Why [illegible]
To [illegible]
Why I would ask why [illegible]
When the [illegible]
Unto his [illegible]

Sweet Spirit, [illegible] stood the touch
The [illegible]
The [illegible] victory of the grave.
No [illegible] power [illegible] to save,
The [illegible] good.

Then, to the christian's eye of faith,
It [illegible] the pearly gate,
It looks [illegible] heaven's fold,
To walk the streets of pure gold,
Reject the throne to wait.

Angels do gladly welcome call,
Sent from our Father's hand
To [illegible] in our exile lot,
And [illegible] with Him in mansions [illegible]
Amid the angelic band.

We have a world of sense and trance,
Behind sophistry and show
Of [illegible] and sorrow, toil and care,
Sadness and partings, strife and fear
Can [illegible] to mock at frame.

We [illegible] a home forbidding, bright,
With Jesus and the Lamb,
Eternal in the Lord above,
Pure with the presence of his love
All ours through Jesus' name.

No [illegible] disease can enter there,
No gloom from sorrow's [illegible]
No [illegible] tongue, thought of pain
No [illegible], with evils in its train,
[illegible] that were to-day.

Then with the joyful [illegible]
We'll stand before the throne,
[illegible]
[illegible]
Now [illegible] sing [illegible]
[illegible] ever known.

The [illegible] harps, well strung
Sweet in [illegible],
[illegible]
[illegible] prepared,
For those to [illegible] entered,
Across the [illegible]

[illegible] of golden fretted work
[illegible] of priceless worth,
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 20, 1881

CONTRASTS.

Contrasts! they take it as a graceful theme,
Gay children, playing at the feet of song;
For young hearts only knowing change and wrong
As the dark shadows on the dancing stream;
Or the vague terrors threatening in a dream,
Where the thick-coming fancies mating throng.
Death morning's steady glow to-night ere long
So to sink youth life's clouds and sunlight seem.
But we, outwearied by the march of life,
Faint with the burthen, fearful of the goal,
Battled and beaten in the endless strife
That tires the heart and crushes down the soul,
Disappointed, worn thwarted, and broken thus,
How does the hard word "contrasts" sound to us?

Have we not shivered at the garish light
Dazzled across our darling's death cold brow,
And shrunk to see the crimson summer rose
Glowing and flaunting where the cross stands white,
And all we love lies buried out of sight?
Have we not felt how hard the task work grows,
When loud and shrill the victor trumpet blows,
And our last battle dies away in flight
Have we not yearned for fortunes least, worst gift,
While her crowned favorites waste their lavish store?
Have we not learned dawn's light's black stream to drift,
While they laugh careless on the flatter shore?
What sorer contrast—please for pastime given
To be "the rubbish to be read in heaven"

All the Year Round.

Our Pulpit.

Glorying in the Cross.

BY BISHOP DAVID S. DOGGETT, D. D.

But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world.—Gal. vi. 14.

The Cross is another name for Christ crucified. It was originally the instrument upon which he expired; the altar whereon he offered his sacrifice for the sins of the world; and which his death has forever consecrated to the memory of the church.

Associations the most affecting cluster around it; interests the most tremendous hang upon it; and immortal glory rises from it. In its true import, it is a pledge, the watch-word, and the hope of the sevens; their joy in prosperity, their solace in affliction, their victory in conflicts, and their support in death.

The weakness of human nature, too slow to comprehend its real significance, has managed to comply with its habits and institutions, has perverted its use, has turned its value to account, has even made out of it both a convenience and a charge. The very [illegible] into the service of [illegible].

Pagan Christians have worshiped at the foot of the cross, have bowed before the image of the crucified, have invested themselves with its mysterious sign; have embellished their churches with the figure, gleaming in the splendors of the setting sun; have adorned their persons with miniature representations of it, and worn them as charms in the midst of danger.

Imagination has seen the cross in the flowers of the field, in the beauties of the sky, and in the constellations of the heavens.

Because the cross has given legal sanction to the basest of purposes, and to the worst passions, as an indemnity for innocent guilt, it has been painted upon banners, and borne in triumph, as the signal of victory, by invading armies.

Constantine the Great is reported to have seen a vision of the cross, adopted it as his standard, in his campaigns against Maxentius, his brother and rival, and inscribed it with the motto, "In hoc signo vinces" "by this sign thou shalt conquer." We, too, my brethren, abolish the cross; we too conquer by means of the cross; not by the wood of the cross; not by the sign of the cross; not by the cross itself; by the doctrine Christ crucified; by salvation through the blood of the Cross; by that of which the apostle exclaims, as if challenging the competition of the universe "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world."

In consideration of this sublime subject to-day, I propose to notice both the false and the true objects of human glory. Let us contemplate:

I.

THE FALSE OBJECTS OF HUMAN GLORY.

There is an insatiable propensity in human nature to seek its distinction; to emblazon itself by devotion to some worldly object. In the absence of the true, it allies itself with the false.

I propose to-day to analyse the misdirection of this tendency, and to unfold the only object which can satisfy the desires of the soul.

In a word I wish to set forth the claims of the Cross, by contrasting them with the fallacies of human conduct.

Some persons, for example, glory in personal superiority. There is confessedly a very wide difference amongst mankind in native mental endowments, and in acquired knowledge. No human creature can be greater than this difference which from its very nature is dependent on forms of the creature.

Those who possess this superiority instinctively feel a jar in its elevation above the weak and ignorant. They glory in it, especially when it is conceded to them by others; often vain enough, at least, by indirect methods, to boast of it.

But is there any essential merit in superiority, considered in itself? Were ever intelligent creatures to be valued according to their intelligence, and arrogate to themselves a corresponding importance, whether they merely feel, or foolishly display, the sentiment of pride, they certainly glory in wealth as a very high attainment.

But is there any merit in wealth? When honorably acquired it confers nothing more than a fictitious value upon individual, and even then it is often associated with a thousand moral deeds. What shall we say of it, when its acquirement has been effected, as it frequently has been, by the most infamous measures? Wealth, it must be acknowledged, is no ground for boasting.

3. Some persons glory in power; that is, their ability to control their fellow-men. They subject others to their will. They exert this power either by constraint upon their minds or by force upon their persons.

Such a prerogative is intoxicating to the pride of the human heart; more so, perhaps, than any other form of achievement; because the more men possess it the more absolute they imagine themselves to be, the more servile they render others, and the farther removed they seem to be from the mass of humanity around them. This attainment, therefore, is one of the chief sources of glorying in the world to which so many aspire, and which so few have ever gained.

But how stands its acquisition with the question of merit? Almost any one can answer. The most powerful have been, in general, the most detestable. The love of power is itself the bane of virtue.

Hence vice, in its greatest deformity, has often sat upon the throne, "clothed in purple and fine linen," while virtue, in rags, though covered with the brightest charms, has been crushed at its footstool. There is manifestly no merit in power.

4. Some persons glory in their pedigree; in their family connections. To have descended from sires renowned in history, or to be associated with those whom the world honors, is confessedly not the lot of all. Those to whom it falls are usually exalted in the public estimation, and are treated with a peculiar degree of deference.

We need not be surprised that they think more highly of themselves, on that account, than they ought to think; that they inhale with satisfaction the incense of flattery, when it is offered so willingly at their feet. Genealogies and relationships are traced by them, with pleasure, to eminent sources; are preserved with care in the family and transferred with pride to posterity, as if they conveyed through the most subtle gradations some tincture of foreign greatness. The will sensibly dilate, whatever may be his personal deficiencies, if he can persuade himself that his ancestors, or his relations, were distinguished by the greatness of their successes. And what is strange, still others will aspire to [illegible] indignity of origin.

Is there any merit in [illegible] circumstances?

Alas! the love of the truth [illegible] blood, is not the love for the [illegible] virtue. Hence [illegible] sin, and mourn [illegible] have sprung from virtuous and honorable parents.

5. Some persons glory in their religious attainments; in the beauty of their conversation, the refinement of their sentiments, and the elegance of their manners. These are usually the results of [illegible] and society; the polish which they [illegible] some individuals, and which [illegible] guishes them from the vulgar and coarser specimens of the race. The contentedness of Christianity upon this ground is [illegible] and tendency to foster and imbue the sentiment of pride, and to superinduce contempt for the uncultivated and the rude.

But true merit and accomplishments do not necessarily co-exist. Merit belongs to the substance, while accomplishments spread over the surface. Merit may dignify a peasant; accomplishments may adorn a reprobate.

6. Some persons glory in their exploits; in those fortunate events, in those rare occurrences which fill the world with their fame.

Many have thus emerged by accident from absolute obscurity, either into partial or universal notoriety; and on the wings of popular applause have soared above the heads of their bewildered contemporaries, so high as to be reached only by the shouts of their admiring adulation. From their dizzy height they look down upon others as inferior beings, and are swelled with the conception of unrivalled greatness.

Discoverers and adventurers, and heroes, however, as a class, are not remarkable for their virtuous qualities, otherwise the code of morals would become inverted, and avarice, ambition, and rapine, when successful, could be converted into virtues.

7. Some persons glory in their crimes; in those deep and daring vices which dishonor their natures, and give a vicious popularity to their names.

One shudders to think that human nature can become so perverted as to seek distinction in guilt itself.

To outstrip others in drunkenness, in debauchery, in lying, in profanity, in murder, is in the opinion of many to signalize themselves.

Many boast of their skill in the arts of treachery and seduction, as if secondary were desirable, though to be gained in a contest with devils.

These, my brethren, are some of the false objects of human glory. And it is worthy of remark, that whilst in themselves, they are destitute of all real merit, the influence they exert upon those who pursue them, is the basest to degrade, debase and tyrannize. They [illegible] the soul, extinguish [illegible] of reason and dishonor [illegible] to the world in proportion [illegible] the passions, unbrute the entire [illegible] and render [illegible] created by God and [illegible] to [illegible] him.

We proceed now to contemplate

II.

THE TRUE OBJECTS OF HUMAN GLORY.

Christianity, as we have seen, renounces certain objects as grounds of glorying.

It does not, however, abandon human nature to the absence of every object of the kind. It recognizes its constitutional necessity, and in the place of the false, substitutes the true; that is "the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."

In the unregenerate the Cross is not only divested of all attraction, but covered with every species of reproach.

To the believer, it is replete with charms. It meets all the necessities and supplies all the wants of the soul; and contains those essential and extinctless resources which furnish the grounds of everlasting exultation. It was these grounds which the apostle apprehended. It was these which justified his exclusive devotion to the Cross. It is these which we propose to contrast with the world's empty delusions.

1. The Cross contains the glory of true wisdom; that wisdom in which a man should glory and by which he is glorified. It displays to his wondering mind "the manifold wisdom of God." It imparts the highest possible conception of the character and purposes of God, as they are illustrated in the plan of redemption. Truly says Dr. Watts:

"Here the whole Deity is known,
Nor does a creature guess
Which of the glories in it most shone—
The justice or the grace."

It inculcates, on the other hand, the highest wisdom in man; a wisdom derivable from no other source; a wisdom which solves the great question of existence; a wisdom which teaches him how to live and how to die; how to thread the labyrinth of life; how to discharge its duties, to encounter its trials, bear its burdens and gain its eternal prize. It makes him "wise unto salvation." It invests him with those qualities which verify the maxim of Jesus Christ—that "Wisdom is justified of her children;" a wisdom, whose celestial traits are thus described by St. James; "It is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy." Such is the wisdom comprised in the Cross, and which would alone justify the exclamation in the text.

2. The Cross contains the glory of true riches. The real wealth of a human being consists "not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth," but in his moral and spiritual resources; in the faith, affections and hopes of the gospel.

In the possession of these qualities, of whatever else deprived, he enjoys an empire more ample than the earth, more valuable than the Indies, more lasting than time, and as inalienable as his immortality. He is rich, indeed, who has obtained "the pearl of great price;" who has "laid up his treasure in Heaven;" whose "life is hid with Christ in God."

He is poor, of whatever else possessed, who has not been enriched by the Cross of Christ, obtained "without money and without price." Alike may the "heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ." A casket of poverty may enclose the jewel of paradise. A Lazarus may rest in Abraham's bosom, while a Dives may lift up his eyes in hell.

Says an apostle: "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?"

These are the "true riches;" this the imperishable wealth of the soul, the possession of whose will aggrandize their possessor forever.

3. The Cross contains the glory of true power. The human mind, with an unchangeable idea of power, is perpetually grasping at its shadow. The reality is in the Cross. It unfolds on the one hand, the power of God, more than all his other works. It illustrates, more conspicuously, his analogy to himself, [illegible] of his moral image. It [illegible] energy of the [illegible] principles [illegible] derivable [illegible] pulsations [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] the [illegible] of

Christian Advocate.

Organ of the Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences of the M. E. Church, South.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 20, 1881.

From the Publishing Committee.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate held their regular annual meeting at the office of the Advocate, in the city of New Orleans, on the twelfth of the current month. The committee were gratified to find that the publishing department has been managed in a very satisfactory manner during the past year by Mr. G. T. Lathrop. The paper is free from debt, and is paying its own current expenses. The cash system has worked well, and will work better when the preachers, who are agents for the paper, and the subscribers generally, learn to appreciate its many and great advantages. The paper on which the printing is done, the typography, and the entire make up of every issue, will, we think, compare most favorably with those of any other periodical of the day. Indeed, the editorial pages of the New Orleans Christian Advocate usually present the appearance of a well-printed book, rather than that of an ordinary newspaper.

The conduct of the editorial department has been highly satisfactory. No similar journal, more elevated in its tone or more excellent in the quality of its articles, issues from the press of the day. The maintenance of a periodical literature of commanding intellectual power, and of decidedly Christian spirit, is certainly to be ranked among the most essential evangelistic functions of the church at this time. We think the Advocate ought to be in every Methodist family, at least, within the bounds of the patronizing Conferences. To this end, the committee would urge the preachers, who are its authorized agents, to increased activity in circulating the Advocate. Pastors might readily avail themselves of the assistance of some judicious lay helper where they cannot conveniently canvass in person for the paper. The Advocate will be found, in every instance where it is read, a mighty aid to the work of the pulpit.

With a view of extending the influence of the paper, and giving greater variety to its contents, the committee elected the following corresponding editors: Rev. J. A. W. Bish, Rev. H. D. Moore, of the Alabama Conference; Rev. W. L. C. Hammett, Rev. C. B. Galloway, of the Mississippi Conference, and Dr. C. W. Carter, of the Louisiana Conference. It is to be hoped that these brethren will represent especially the various interests of their Conferences in the columns of the Advocate.

We expect and bespeak for the Advocate a cordial support and an increasing circulation this year.

We would not close without expressing the heartfelt regret of the committee on account of the absence of Dr. W. H. Watkins, kept away by the extremely feeble state of his health, he having been for many years a regular attendant at the meetings of this body, and a zealous and efficient promoter of all the best interests of this Advocate.

In behalf of the committee,

W. L. C. HAMMETT.

The report on temperance, adopted by the Louisiana Conference, at its recent session, is published on our second page. Reports on this subject have been adopted by the Conference nearly every session since we can remember. This last report is one of the best, and will well repay a careful reading. Bro. Pipes, the chairman of the committee, and the author of the report, is among our oldest and best preachers, and he has done special service in promoting right views on temperance. At the next session it is proposed to prepare a memorial to the Legislature to pass a prohibitory law.

The temperance movement in the South is generally assuming this form. We have a law now which authorizes the police juries of the parishes to prohibit the sale of liquor, and to close stores and business houses on Sunday. In some parishes where this has been done the result has been most gratifying. In the city and parish of East Baton Rouge the business houses and saloons are closed on Sunday, and the town has peace and good order, and the churches are well filled. It is truly wonderful how the closing of the saloons on Sunday changes the whole appearance of a place, and how much it does for the welfare of all classes. Could these whisky shops be closed on all days, and the sale of inebriating liquors be prohibited altogether, what a revolution in the morals and in the material condition of the people would be effected?

Repressive legislation is demanded. At first it may be no more than a general Sunday law, or the enforcement of local option, but in the end the liquor traffic will be shorn of its power, and be stamped by law as a crime against society, and as the most disreputable of all pursuits. Patient, persevering and united effort on the part of the friends of temperance is necessary. They may not soon accomplish all they desire, but they will gain ground steadily if they labor earnestly and wisely.

The Ecumenical.

Exceptions have been taken to the manner in which the appointments to the Ecumenical Congress were made. The General Conference, at Atlanta, adopted the following resolution, which had been prepared and reported by a special committee:

Resolved, That the Bishops of our church be and are hereby authorized and directed to appoint a committee of seven, consisting of two of the Bishops, three other ministers and two laymen, who shall be fully empowered to arrange for such a Conference, and to represent our church in the correspondence necessary thereto, and to appoint delegates to represent the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the Ecumenical Conference, whenever it may assemble.

The committee, provided for in this resolution, was duly appointed, and, we believe, its duties thus far have been performed, the only complaint being that the committee, instead of appointing the delegates to the Ecumenical, left this work to be performed by the Bishops. How this came about we do not know. The resolution of the General Conference might bear the construction that the Bishops were authorized to make these appointments, but it seems that this was not the intent of the members of the committee who reported the resolution. The committee of seven may have so understood the resolution, however, or they may have regarded themselves as within the spirit of the other construction in turning over the appointment of delegates to the Bishops.

So far as we know, neither the committee of seven nor the Bishops have explained the grounds of their action. We have no doubt, however, that the church at large is perfectly satisfied with the course pursued. The Bishops, on account of their more thorough acquaintance with the ministers and laymen of the various sections of the church, were better qualified to select the delegates than the committee. It is a question in which the great body of preachers and laymen probably feel but little interest. They will generally agree that the appointments ought to have been made by the Bishops, and that the delegates appointed fairly represent the different sections of the church. It is certainly unnecessary to suppose, as has been insinuated, that the members of the committee had an eye to their own appointment as delegates. We are unwilling to believe them capable of this, especially when their course is open to a better construction.

It is unfortunate that any dissatisfaction should exist in regard to these appointments. It was a difficult and delicate task to pick out just nineteen preachers and nineteen laymen from a great church of nearly a million of ministers and members. Those of us that were left out can comfort ourselves with the reflection that the vast majority of the good and great men of Southern Methodism are in the same company. Some of the younger ones will have a chance, perhaps, at some future Ecumenical, and for the rest, let them be content with the hope of one day getting to heaven. Let there be peace and good will, and let our honored brethren go to Loodon feeling that the prayers of the whole church go with them. It is not our of place here to remind our people that the delegates will have to pay their own expenses, including, we suppose, their entertainment at the seat of the Congress. Some Annual Conferences, from which delegates have been selected, have ordered a special collection. Let the liberal bear the matter in mind, and see that none go at their own charges.

System in Preaching.

We take it for granted that the preacher preaches the gospel. But has he any system in his own mind—a system which embraces any orderly presentation of the doctrines, duties and experience? A hap-hazard way of selecting texts and topics may lead to the neglect of subjects on which the people need instruction. Every pastor should feel a personal responsibility for the proper indoctrination of his hearers, and, in order to meet this responsibility, he should, of set purpose and at proper times, state and enforce the essential doctrines of the Bible.

Baptism is a divinely-instituted ordinance, and yet some pastors never preach on it, and their people are left to the inroads of error, or to habitual negligence of it. Because some unduly exalt its importance, there is no reason why we should ignore it. The Lord's Supper is administered regularly, but there are many of our congregations who have never heard a sermon on its nature and observance. The Sabbath may be often alluded to incidentally, but in a year, or two years of preaching, has one sermon been devoted to this most vital institution of our religion? In like manner we might refer to repentance, justification, regeneration and entire sanctification. These may be touched upon in many sermons, and the knowledge of them assumed, but does the pastor take up these subjects separately, and give the Scriptural exhibition of them with fulness and strength? There ought to be a system marked out in the mind of the preacher which should include special sermons upon these fundamental truths, and upon the most prominent Christian duties. Among other things, prayer, beyond what may be said about it in the prayer meeting, should be presented and enforced from the pulpit.

We indicate these topics as illustrating what we mean by system in preaching. The object of such system is to inform and to thoroughly instruct our hearers for their edification and salvation, and that we may develop an intelligent and stable type of piety. There is generally among our people a lack of definite views in regard to doctrine, and also in regard to experience. Not one in ten can give any clear or just account of the atonement, of the witness of the Spirit, or of the distinction between justification and sanctification. We assume too much when we imagine that the Sunday-school makes this work of definite teaching unnecessary. The average Sunday-school scholar knows something in a general way about the Bible, something of the geography, biography and history, something possibly of the plan of salvation, but he is still abundantly ignorant of spiritual truth. For religious instruction, especially in matters of doctrine and experience, our dependence is upon the pulpit, and probably will always be.

In entering upon a pastoral work, the preacher who realizes his own accountability, and the needs of his hearers, will reflect that he must compass the main and vital topics of the gospel in each year of his ministry, so that the souls committed to his care may have the whole counsel of God declared to them. The young people and the old, the converted and the unconverted need this. The object will not be to get up sermons merely to entertain and please, on novel and sensational themes, or on texts that merely excite curiosity, but that by warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom, he may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus. The pastoral preacher cannot afford to be a specialist. He must give to every subject its due place and emphasis. While he preaches repentance, and insists upon the new birth, he must also enforce the duty and necessity of "perfecting holiness in the fear of God." The only admissable hobby in the pulpit is "Christ and Him crucified," and yet this white light of the gospel is to have its varied and beautiful rays revealed in the prism of many-sided truth. No single ray or color is to disorb our attention, but we are to look upon the entire spectrum, and to take in every shade and tint. We are to preach the whole gospel, and as fully as possible, in every year of our pastorate. The object should be to present every man perfect in Christ Jesus, a well-rounded and well-balanced Christian man, complete and symmetrical in all the attributes of a holy character and a consecrated life.

This, however, is not likely to be done unless there is some order in our preaching. Without it many things will be overlooked, and the flock of God will be poorly fed. It will also be serviceable to the preacher himself. He will have to review his course of study, post himself more thoroughly on theological questions, and acquaint himself more intimately with the spiritual condition and lives of his people. In doing his whole duty to those whom he is sent to build up in the faith, he will build himself up, become an abler preacher of the New Testament, and a holier and happier man.

In commending system in preaching, we have no reference to announced serials, nor to the announcement of topics. Only this: let the preacher have some system in his own mind, and let his aim be to preach, from time to time, on the great, distinctive and essential doctrines, and in such measure as to thoroughly furnish his people for every good work. Whether such preaching will draw or not, it is certainly needed. And we believe the people are getting hungry for instruction. Try an occasional sermon on baptism, on the observance of the Sabbath, on temperance, on entire sanctification, on the doctrine of justification by faith, and see. We do not believe that the hearers would be fewer; but, if they should be, possibly more good would be done. We do not here contemplate philosophical, metaphysical or specially profound preaching, but a plain, simple, earnest Scriptural exposition of the faith once delivered to the saints, and "to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us."

Funeral Reform.

This subject is commanding consideration and discussion. Though delicate, it is important. In some places ministers of the several denominations have counseled together and advised, by resolution, wherein reform should be instituted. Some thoughts on the general subject may not be without value in this latitude, hence the following:

1. The funeral address.—A minister has no duty to discharge more difficult and delicate than conducting funeral services. If, according to prevailing custom, an address or sermon is to be delivered, he is in danger of saying either too much or too little—too much for truth and too little for the gratification of the bereaved. Should he indulge in extravagant eulogy, unless the deceased was conspicuous for piety, he lowers the standard of religion and makes his warnings of none effect. Much harm has been done just here. It has at times even provoked the ridicule of the irreligious and given plausibility to the Universalist's taunt that "no matter how orthodox ministers may preach, they are all good Universalists at funerals." On the other hand, families have been alienated from a church because the pastor did not glorify and canonize their dead. This double danger indicates our duty. Only in extraordinary occasions should any address be delivered. If the deceased has been a useful, well-known and tried Christian, or an exemplary and faithful office-bearer in the church, a public tribute to such worth and character may be demanded. And even then our aim should be more to commend the bereaved to the gospel for consolation than to indulge in fulsome eulogy of the departed. Happily in this respect we are improving. Years ago ministers were expected to preach an elaborate funeral sermon at the burial of every infant, saint and sinner. And if this presence could not be secured on the day of interment, a memorial service was appointed weeks or months afterward. During the first year of this writer's ministry he was requested by a brother to "preach the funeral" of his mother. "Said I: 'Brother, how long has your mother been dead?' He replied: 'About ten years; but her funeral has never been preached. And I've got a good many kinfolks, cousins and uncles and aunts, who've died; I want you to preach their funerals, too.' Much to the good brother's disgust for new-fangled notions and preachers, his request was kindly but positively refused. We have outgrown those days, but further reform is yet needed.

2. Eulogical excess.—This matter has become both alarming and iniquitous. In many cities it costs a man more to die than to live. Families have been financially embarrassed, if not bankrupted, by expensive funerals. The floral display alone at one such occasion in New York compelled an outlay of $1,000. Among the aristocratic a large number of gaudy carriages are employed to lengthen the procession while passing through the principle streets. The poorer, in their endeavors to imitate, become ruinously involved. This is not only folly, but a sinful waste of the Lord's money. The vast sums thus annually squandered for the gratification of a ridiculous vanity would support and educate the orphans of our land. Why these magnificent caskets, with costly mountings? They do not make any more peaceful the sleep of our dead. A long line of carriages, filled often with those who want a free ride to the cemetery, is but an empty pageant, which cannot add one flower to the chaplet of the departed, or assuage one pang of grief in the bosom of the bereaved. All this is not so much a tribute to the memory of the dead as to the pride of the living. From the Jews we might learn an important lesson. All their burials are conducted with the utmost modesty and inexpensive, unostentatious simplicity. Rich and poor are buried with equal honor and display. The Rothschilds, or other Jewish bankers or merchant princes, are carried to the grave as quietly and inexpensively as the humblest peddler. But another wrong in funeral expenses is chargeable to those engaged in the business, to undertakers, hackmen, etc. The per cent. charged for service, materials, etc., if report be true, is absolutely shameful. In most of our towns and cities a carriage engaged for a funeral costs $5, but for any other occasion can be employed for $1 an hour. A writer in a prominent religious newspaper has investigated this subject thoroughly, and makes the following statement: "A casket for which $15 is ordinarily charged costs the dealer $8. Those sold for $150 he purchased for $50, and soon with an increased per cent. for the more costly." If true, this is a shameless extortion—a mean speculation in human tears and sorrow. Of course time and means employed in the business should have adequate remuneration, but not the graspings of iniquitous greed. This, I know, is a very delicate subject. The bereaved, though imposed upon, have not the heart to utter complaint. Others hesitate to speak, and so the wrong continues. But its delicacy should not prevent discussion, and an appeal to the public to inaugurate a reform.

3. Funeral proprieties.—Here, of course, will be diversity of tastes, which cannot be disregarded. Whatever may be the fancies or eccentricities of grief, they will be sacredly respected. But a few observations may not be altogether profitless. 1. Funeral services should rarely be appointed on the Sabbath, and then never to interfere with regular public worship. 2. The custom of opening the coffin at the close of the religious services in the church should be discouraged and discontinued. It only gratifies an idle, curiosity to gaze at the dead and their adornments, which is offensive to the sacredness of grief and the stillness of death.

C. B. G.

An Anomaly.

While visiting Hampton Courts, in Great Britain, you are shown the great Cardinal Wolsey's private room, which to this day has the appearance, as it must have had when he gave it up to that huge debauchee, the papal "defender of the faith," and subsequent founder of Episcopalianism, King Henry VIII. Near this apartment is found the chapel where Wolsey, the wily aspirer to the triple crown of the papacy, daily repaired for prayer. Wolsey's character and life are well known. Even an historian like Abbott, whose biographies are but fulsome panegyrics, could find but little wherewith to remove the stench attaching to the scheming cardinal's fame. Let it stimulate our youth that, though poor the son of a butcher in Ipswich, he, with diligence and perseverance attained to the highest honors of Oxford, to the Archbishopric of York, to the purple of a cardinal, and to the portfolio of prime minister. Morally, he was thoroughly corrupt. It is well known that it was his intrigue which induced the king to put away his faithful wife, Catherine, of Aragon, and wed fair Anna Boleyn. It is worthy of note that this same Anna Boleyn was subsequently one of the principal advocates of the cardinal's official decapitation.

What Wolsey's life must have been in its totality is left for us to infer from the woeful lamentation to which he gave utterance on his death-bed: "Had I served my God as diligently as I have served my king He would not have forsaken me now in my gray hairs. But this is the just reward that I must receive for my indulgent pains and study, not regarding my service to God, but only to my prince."

The anomaly which the case of this faithless schemer, this unscrupulous conspirator, this bribery-floated Archbishop, presents to my mind is that, notwithstanding his demoniacal life, he should have "daily repaired to his chapel for prayer." Is, indeed, the human heart so deceitful that a man can voluntarily, and without being influenced by hypocritically sinister motives, daily commune with God in prayer, and yet lead a life of which devils might justly be proud? Can a man pray to God and yet live knowingly in sin? When Ananias hesitated to visit Saul, who had been recently converted from the error of his way, the Lord, in order to dispel the fears of the disciple, remarked: "Behold, he prayeth." Beyond all doubt a truly praying man is a harmless man. "Being born of God," he "doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." By prayer we partake of the divine nature. A truly praying man's life is faultless. He is upright and true, a duplicate of our great Exemplar.

How, then, shall we account for this manifest anomaly of a corrupt worldling daily engaging in prayer?

1. I suppose he prayed as a formalist. His office and station required of him such supplicatory routine. It was part of proper decorum. But the formalist's prayer is not communion with God; it is but little more than a mechanical procedure, a mere recital of utterances laid down by other men. Such prayer cannot, does not influence conduct.

2. May be that he was a backslider. May be that in his youth he walked with God, being spiritual; but, as honors and riches increased, his spirituality decreased, ceased. Owing to the deceitfulness of the heart, he did not realize the calamitous change that had come upon him. But in the course of years his prayers had become customary; the force of habit led him to continue a practice which had lost its value.

I fear that the lives of many of my readers present a similar anomaly to the one here indicated.

A.

The Pint Law.

The last Legislature of Mississippi perpetrated a great wrong upon the State by passing what is known as the "Pint Law." Before that law went into effect some counties in the State were entirely free from whisky shops, but now everywhere, in all our towns, both large and small, and at every available country cross-roads, these "Pint Shops" have opened to curse the land with a deluge of whisky. You need not be surprised to hear of murders in Mississippi now. We are sure to have them in great abundance. The criminal dockets of our courts will now be filled with cases even in the best counties of the State. The revenue brought in by these "Pint Shops" will not pay one-tenth part of the increase in court fees. It was bad enough under the old law, but it will be tenfold worse every way under this law. In some places, under the old law, the devil was chained, but the last Legislature turned him loose to roam at will, and he will not be slow in wandering up and down in Mississippi seeking whom he may devour, and he will find not a few ready to be devoured this way. We pass laws against crime, and then pass "Pint Laws" to create crime. That may not have been the object of the legislators, but every man of them knew or ought to have known that such would be the effect of this legislation. A man who has not observed enough to know that is not old enough, and has not sense enough, to legislate for a great State. It may not have been so intended, likely it was not, but this legislation has been in the interest of evil, of crime and of whisky men, and it has been to the injury of sober, honest, hard-working, law abiding men. The law is a curse to the State, an unmitigated evil, and the legislators who favored it will have to share the wrong that grows out of it, and all the people, both good and bad, will have to suffer for the wrong doing, or perhaps mistake only, of their representatives. How long, O Lord, how long will we have to endure this? It is one year yet till the Legislature meets, as we have only biennial sessions. We have seen more drunken men the few months this "Pint Law" has been in force that we saw in five years previous, and that, too, in places where drunken men were rarely seen. Towns twenty years old, that never had a dram-shop in them, only the dark back rooms of drug-stores, now have two and three "Pint Shops." What a shame! Whisky sold here by the pint stares you in the face everywhere you go. The "Pint Legislature" of Mississippi allows it and provided for it. This Legislature made its mark over the doors of many dark dens of infamy and shame.

G. H. DEROY

The Future of the Negro in the South.

Howell Cobb, closing a series of articles in the Christian Union on the above topic says:

The South firmly believes that God overruled the coming of the negro from Africa to America; his slavery here; his drifting to a genial Southern clime; the political agitation about slavery; the war; the desolation of reconstruction more searing than war; the slave suddenly freed and then enfranchised. In all this the South bows submissively to the will of an overruling God. The Christian faith of the South explains her resignation, her patient endurance, her cheerful adaptation to changed conditions, her hopeful spirit, her activity amid desolation. The South, through exercise of this faith, has even born meekly the charge against her by the North that all this patient resignation, hopeful spirit, and active industry only evidence the perverse cunning of willful barbarism. Candor compels the confession that at times this just infliction of Providence is very irksome. Yet through faith we live in the hope that even this continuous chastening, though for the time it seemeth grievous, will eventually yield the peaceable fruits of righteousness. No one can deny that we have been sorely exercised thereby.

If the North will recognize that God reigns over the South; that the South has a conscience guided by a Christian faith; that the primary duty to the negro devolves upon the conscience of the South; that interest unites with conscience; that the duty of the North to the South is to leave the white and black man to work out together, under God, their common destiny; that any aid from the North which may be needful must be proffered through the white man of the South—through the institutions of the South born of the conscience and interests of the white—then the future welfare of the negro in the South is assured. The white and black citizen of the South will remain friends forever. They were never alienated other than by unwise aid to the negro, tendered by the North directly to the negro upon the false assumption that enmity of the white to the black citizen existed.

Do you still doubt the wisdom of trusting the negro's future to the conscience and interest of the South? God has so trusted the negro's future, and philosophy and experience demonstrate that his only hope lies here. Will the North assume to be wiser than God? Will the North turn a deaf ear to argument founded on faith in God, and sustained by philosophy and fact!

Let us see what the conscience and interest, under God, of the South has done and is doing voluntarily in Georgia: a negro college at Atlanta, permanently endowed by the Constitutional Convention of 1877, when the incisive policy was dead; a common-school system being steadily perfected, throughout the State of Georgia, with equal privileges and facilities to the negro and white; municipal common schools in Savannah, Augusta, Macon, Atlanta, and smaller towns in the State, with equal privileges to white and black; the impulse felt in almost every town in the state to inaugurate common-school systems, with equal privileges to white and black—no outside pressure, but the voluntary action of the conscience and interest of white citizens of Georgia. Who pays the tax? The white citizen bears nearly the whole burden. Has God trusted the negro to barbarians?

Trust the negro, under God, to the conscience and interest of the South, and his future in the South is hopeful.

Inaugurate an incisive policy, trail or other, based upon the assumption that he must be protected against the white man of the South, and his future is hopeless. The first will guarantee fresh and rapid development of the negro's race and manhood. The second will be the repression of the negro and the paralysis of the South.

We have purposely discussed this question from a non-political standpoint. It is too grave a matter to be settled upon mere business interests or political advantage. The true view is seen only from the standpoint of Christian charity, the duty of man under God's law, binding upon all mankind.

If I am correct in my conclusions, and preferred the negro of the South to all other than through the channels of the good will and cooperation of the southern white will be unwise and fatal. And political leaders for party ends which again organizes white and black will be an unpardonable crime.

The Government.

One of the most thoughtful and able religious journalists in the country is beginning to see the danger and tendency to centralization on the part of certain statesmen and politicians. They will find, when it may be too late, to avert the disaster, that the doctrine of equal rights, prudently and firmly held, was the people's only safeguard against the loss of their liberties. We sympathize with the Christian at Work in the sentiments expressed, but we cannot but believe that Northern religious press have largely contributed to obliterate the South and the people, and to substitute the Government in their stead.

The Christian at Work says: "Now there is a manifest tendency on the part of some statesmen, editors, politicians, and others not given overthinking to extend the powers of the Federal Government in direction and, to an extent not dreamed of by the founders, and certainly not contemplated by the Constitution. This we are told" the Government "must take the matter of public education under its immediate control; "the Government," look after all the potatoes and corn and wheat and rye and barley and cotton; in short, all the agricultural products of the country, and must have a Department of Agriculture, with the secretary having a seat in the Cabinet. And now comes the postmaster-general and tells us that the country "the Government" should own the old postoffice employés. "Government" should establish postal savings bank—after the manner of the Freedmen's bank; we suppose "the Government" should go into the telegraph business; "the Government" should monopolize telephones; "the Government" should give great gifts to our American steamship companies for carrying the mails, in order that they may save money. We are beginning to wonder what "the Government" will not yet be called upon to do. Why shouldn't it buy up all the railroads and the canals, and do all the express-carrying, and all the coal-mining and the gold-mining, and the sewing? And why shouldn't there be a Department of Journalism, with a secretary of newspapers having a seat in the Cabinet, and official government gazettes published in every city, town, village and hamlet in the country, all edited by locally appointed editors? We are almost tired of hearing the changes rung on "the Government;" we would like to hear a little more, if you please, about the people.

Death of Mrs. J. M. Boland.

We deeply sympathize with Rev. M. Boland, presiding elder of the Union Springs district, Alabama Conference, in his great sorrow. In a brief note from Bro. Boland, dated Greenville, Ala., January 13, he says:

"My precious wife fell asleep in Jesus last night, at ten o'clock. She has been an invalid for eight years. She suffered a great deal during those long years, but her prayer was answered—she died without a struggle. How lonely I feel; the wife of my youth, the mother of my children, is now 'sleeping in the valley;' but she sleeps in Jesus.

We believe Bro. Boland came to south Alabama with the hope that a milder climate would benefit his wife's health. The change may have prolonged her life, but the hoped for restoration was not realized. Truly, she now sleeps in Jesus, and hers is the crown of the faithful and self-sacrificing wife of a Methodist itinerant. The church owes much to her preachers' wives. We presume that a suitable memoir of Sister Boland will be furnished us for the columns of the ADVOCATE.

Dr. W. H. Watkins still lies very ill at the parsonage in Jackson, Miss. His people are very considerate of his welfare, and render him every possible attention. As a general solicitude is felt for Dr. Watkins, we give the following private note received from his son, Alexander F. Watkins, who has been called from Vanderbilt by his father's critical condition:

JACKSON, MISS., Jan. 13, 1881.

DEAR DOCTOR: Your kind letter to my mother, assuring her of your sympathy and prayers, was received on yesterday. It was gratifying to my father, who was able to hear it read, as well as to my mother. She bids me thank you for it.

My father says: "Tell Bro. Parker that I am lying here upon my bed; what the end will be God only knows; but I am trying to be submissive." And he succeeds, doctor, for he is happy and contented. Speaking of Bro. H. A. Harris, he says: "Tell Bro. Harris that my way is not obscure; I know in whom I have put my trust."

He suffers but little, and rests quietly and comfortably upon his bed. His only trouble seems to be nervousness and an occasional sickness of the stomach. The latter soon passes off, and the former is relieved by rubbing his limbs.

Thanking you once more, my dear doctor, for your kind letter, and hoping that your prayers may continue to ascend in our behalf, I am your young friend and brother,

ALEX. F. WATKINS.

Meeting of the Publishing Committee.

The Publishing Committee at its meeting, January 19, extended its accustomed supervision over the affairs of the ADVOCATE. The sub-Committee was authorized to continue the contract with Mr. Lathrop, the same editor is left in charge of the editorial department, and earnest pending editors to represent the interests of the patronizing Conferences were elected. We suppose these brethren, besides such articles as they may contribute from time to time, are expected specially to furnish such information as they may be able to gather, and to represent the educational, and other institutions of their Conferences. They in this helps to help their various Conference enterprises. This we desire to do as much as possible. We regretted the absence of our Alabama brethren from the meeting of the Committee, and also that Dr. Watkins, of Mississippi, was hindered by a long and critical sickness. Rev. James A. Godfrey and W. L. C. Huguenin, of Mississippi Conference, and the representatives of the Louisiana Conference were present. Bro. Huguenin was appointed to write the accustomed address which appears on our fourth page this week. In this connection we reiterate the request that our brethren continue to write for the ADVOCATE, and to furnish us with notes from their fields of labor. We wish to give our readers the Church and other news from all parts of the country.

Missionaries to Mexico.

Rev. Rola. W. MacDonell and wife reached this city on Friday, January 14, and left for Mexico early on the morning of January 16. Their course was by rail to Morgan City, where they were to embark on the steamship Whitney for Vera Cruz. Bro. MacDonell is from the South Georgia Conference, a son of Rev. G. N. MacDonell, educated at Emory College, and a young man who seems to be well adapted to the work. He and his youthful and accomplished bride have devoted themselves to this missionary field. They go out as true missionaries, imbued with the spirit of self-sacrifice for the sake of Christ and for the salvation of souls. We believe that the Savannah District, South Georgia Conference, has assumed their support. This with the missionaries themselves, is a noble contribution from Georgia to the Mexican Mission. The example should provoke other Conferences and Districts to like efforts and to the devising of liberal things.

A Visit from Our Missionary to Brazil.

Rev. J. J. Ransom, superintendent of the mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Brazil, writes us that he is to be in Louisville January 16, in Mobile Sunday, January 23, and expects to reach New Orleans Thursday, January 27, remaining over Sunday, January 30. On Monday, January 31, he will leave for Texas, hoping to be in Houston Wednesday, February 2, and in Galveston Sunday, February 6. In view of Bro. Ransom's visit here, the Preachers' Meeting advised the following appointments for him:

1. A union meeting, to be addressed by him at the Felicity Street Church, Friday night, January 28, at seven o'clock.

2. Preaching by Bro. Ransom at the Carondelet Street Church, on Sunday morning, at eleven o'clock, January 30, and at night, at seven o'clock, at St. Charles Avenue.

We urge the members of all our churches in the city to attend the meeting at the Felicity Street Church, on Friday night, January 28, and give Bro. Ransom a cordial and Christian greeting. Bishop Keener and the pastors of our churches are expected to be present, and the services will doubtless be of an interesting character.

DEATH OF A FATHER IN ISRAEL. Rev. George Nicholson, writing, Holmesville, Miss., January 14, 1881, says: "A father in Israel has fallen asleep." Bro. Quinea Lewis, father of the Revs. H. P. and W. B. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference, fell asleep on the morning of the thirteenth instant, at one o'clock, in his eighty-seventh year of age. Bro. Lewis died as he lived full of faith and hope of a glorious resurrection. A suitable obituary will be furnished in due time.

A BEGINNING. Rev. Christian Keener informs us that the amount of forty dollars assessed his charge—Louisiana Avenue of this city—for the education of young men studying for the ministry, at Centenary College, La., was raised on last Sunday morning. We hope this important collection will be attended to with like promptitude throughout the Conference. The collection, besides the money raised, will afford an opportunity to enlarge somewhat on the subject of education, and will be a timely advertisement for the college.

OUR NEW PASTORS.—Rev. Felix R. Hill, for the past four years pastor of the St. Ethiers Street Church, Mobile, and the newly appointed pastor of the Carondelet Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of this city, has entered fully upon his work. His people have given him a cordial reception, and he is preaching to large and interested congregations.

Dr. Carter, the new pastor of the Felicity Street Church, is expected this week, and will open his ministry there on Sunday next, January 30.

Our successor in the district, Rev. Dr. Walker, begins his first round at Morgan Street next Sunday. We are sure that every charge will welcome him, and that his quarterly visits will be hailed with pleasure.

Bro. Daves, of Baton Rouge, has been well received, and, we learn, is getting under way auspiciously. Bro. Butler has also reached his work, Plaquemine and Gros Tete, and is moving forward hopefully.

Bishop Keener had thought of going to Mexico, along with Bro. and Sister MacDonell, but the state of his health has induced him to postpone his trip for a few weeks. Possibly he may be able to leave in the course of a fortnight. His labors during the past three months, have rather overtaxed his strength, and a period of rest is needed.

The anniversary of the South Western Bible Society, at Dr. Palmer's Church last Sunday night, was, we are informed, an interesting occasion. The President of the Society, W. H. Foster, Esq., presided with his usual dignity, and the address by Dr. Palmer was most able, instructive and eloquent.

—Southern Crusader is the title of a new monthly publication, devoted to the interest of the Temperance Reformation. It is published at Richmond, Va., Rev. W. W. Bennett, D. D., editor and publisher. Price $1.25 per annum. Dr. Bennett is widely known as the former editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, and as the present president of Randolph Macon College. Success to his weekly enterprise. Dr. Bennett's address is Ashland, Va.

—We acknowledge the reception of a complimentary ticket, to the Monday evening Concerts during Lent, of the Upper Bethel, New Orleans. These weekly entertainments are for the benefit of the sailors, and are highly enjoyed by crowded assemblies. The Board of Directors will please accept our thanks.

—We are indebted to Miss Alma Ivy, for a copy of "Alma Mater," a very neat monthly, published by the Lee and Jackson Literary Society, Wesleyan Female Institute, Staunton, Va. The young ladies who edit this tasty sheet, bid fair to become first class journalists. We wish them and their institution, long life and great prosperity.

—Woman's Missionary Advocate for January, is replete with original and select articles on missionary subjects.

—Rev. W. D. F. Hatford, of the Memphis Conference, and stationed at Sommerville, Tenn., died Dec. 23, 1880.

—Rev. Frederick James Johson, an eminent English Wesleyan minister, died in London, January 4.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate of January 8, brings us the unwelcome intelligence of the critical illness, of Rev. J. E. Evans, of the North Georgia Conference. The Wesleyan says:

We are pained to learn that this devoted servant of the Church had a partial attack of paralysis on last Friday, at his home in Rome, Ga. He was critically ill at last accounts. The prayers of the Church will go up earnestly in his behalf.

A note from the Rev. W. B. Foster brought us, says the Western Methodist, the sad intelligence that the Rev. R. M. McAllister died December 17, while on his way from the White River Conference at Helena. He had been appointed to the Indian Bay circuit, but his work was done—he has gone to his reward.

The Southern Christian Advocate of January 13, says: Bishop Wightman is in a fair way to improve. With the return of clear, pleasant weather, we hope to chronicle his rapid improvement.

—Mr. J. T. McKinsey, of Ind., announces in the daily papers that he will, during the winter, gratuitously furnish coal to all the poor of that city.

Periodicals.

The quarterly Review of Methodist Episcopal Church, South, January, 1881, has been on our table for some time.

The first article: Pre-Adamites, by Rev. C. W. Miller, D. D., is searching and demolishing review of Professor Winchell's work. Dr. Miller's Style is adamantine, pungent, and sufficiently flavored with scientific facts and conclusions. The Rev. Elijah Steel, an apostle of the Southwest, by our contributor and friend, Rev. C. B. Galloway, brings to the notice of the church a name that will not soon be forgotten in this section. In this article a good service has been done for the cause of Christ and for the heroism of Methodist preachers. The spirit of Steel still abides.

The True Manhood of Christ is the strongest article in this number and the best. The subject is one to call out the noblest powers of a writer and thinker, and it is worthily handled. The author is to us unknown. But whoever he is he is a workman not to be ashamed.

Ecclesiastical Immorality: Rev. John Armitage, editor of the New Zealand Wesleyan, is a brief statement of the views of the Constitutionalists, and of objections to their theory.

Modern British Methodism is, we suppose, by the editor, Dr. Summers, and reveals to us a pretty thorough knowledge of the constitution and polity of Wesleyan Methodism and of its defects. It is a readable and suggestive article.

Osiandrianism and Zinzendorfianism, also by the editor, is a clear statement of these two of the errors of sanctification, and also a statement and vindication, in brief, of the Wesleyan doctrine of Christian perfection. Dr. Summers is in perfect accord with our standards on this subject, and the spirit and temper of the article are admirable.

Pliny's Letters; Physical Fatalism; Witness of the Spirit; Death of Bishop Doggett, are the titles of the remaining articles, all brief, and well considered. "Pliny's Letters" is especially entertaining and instructive.

Literary Notices and Notes and Queries fill eighty pages of this number of the Review. They are generally excellent, and enough. Evidently the worthy editor is doing his best to give the Southern Methodist a first-class Review. His success will depend upon the financial support of the enterprise, and upon his ability to procure articles of a high standard of excellence. The financial support will perhaps secure the articles. There is, however, no excess of review writers among us. It is a type of literary workers yet to be developed in Southern Methodism.

—The Southern Pulpit, January 1, 1881, conducted by Rev. H. M. Jackson, rector of Grace Church, and Rev. J. A. Lafferty, Editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, Richmond, Va. The contents are: SERMONS. The Elements of Prevailing Prayer; Rev. J. B. Jeter, D. D. 2. Christ and His Church; Rev. W. S. Plumer, D. D. 3. Glorying in the Cross; Bishop David S. Doggett. 4. A Memorial Discourse; Rev. M. D. Hoge, D. D. OUTLINES OF SERMONS. Lessons from the Life of Jonah, Rev. A. Z. Tyler. 6. Religion in Politics; Rev. A. F. Granberry. 7. Abraham's Vision, Rev. B. B. Tucker. 8. The Godlessness of the World; King's Thoughts, Rev. T. C. Alexander, D. D. 9. The Brotherhood of Christ, Rev. J. T. Whitley. Homiletical Illustrations. 10. Subject, Affliction, fifty-two illustrations. Book Review. This initial number is printed in handsome style and the contents are of the highest order of excellence. The sermons and outlines it will be seen, are from master-builders. The Southern Pulpit will be published monthly. Subscription price $1.20 per annum. It is issued in magazine form, and suitable for binding. The twelve numbers will make a volume of great value, containing, as it will, some of the first sermons of the Southern preachers of every evangelical denomination.

—Scribner's Monthly is now publishing two series of papers on religious subjects of special and timely interest. One of these is in connection with the forthcoming revision of the Bible; one paper in this series has already appeared, by Dr. Charles S. Robinson, on "The Bible Society and the New Revision;" another by Professor Fisher, of Yale, will be given in the February number. The second series is on "The Old Catholic and Evangelical Movement in Italy, France, and Germany." A sketch of Gavazzi appeared in December; a paper by Rev. Washington Gladden on Protestantism in Italy" will be printed in an early number. Bishop Doane, of Albany, has written for Scribner a paper on "Father Hyacinth," and Dr. Dollinger will be the subject of an essay by Professor Fisher.

Publisher's Department.

We shall not knowingly admit to our columns fraudulent advertisements of every description from the ADVOCATE, and we ask our friends, in ordering goods from the leading merchants of New Orleans and elsewhere, as represented in our columns, will mention having seen the advertisement in the ADVOCATE. We will also take pleasure in attending personally to any commissions for our friends in the country with which we may be favored, while endorsing our advertisers as being worthy of their patronage.

"Why, how do you do?" and there was a cordial but brief kissing season. "I haven't seen you for ever so long. You haven't called, you know." "I know it. I don't go anywhere. Last week I was at the shore, next week I'm off to the mountains, September is so delightful, you know, and I am over to sisters or up to mother's about every day, and so much shopping to do. I really don't go anywhere." And they smiled and said good-bye this time a-piece.

A certain Scotch minister, one Sunday "exchanged" with another minister. At the close of the service an elderly woman inquired what had become of her "ain minister." "O, we exchanging," he replied, he's with my people to-day." "Indeed, indeed," said the matron, "they'll be gettin' a treat the day."

"Why, Jennie, you foolish girl, come into the house, what are you out in the snow for without wraps?" "Oh, nothing much, ma! You see Augustus has just called, and here are his footprints in the snow. I'm deferring to get the right size for those slippers, and do you know I don't believe I've got half enough cloth in them."

He stood with his back against the front door of the street car. Every one else had a seat, and he anxiously watched each face for symptoms of getting out forever there-from. It grew wearisome, and he finally slunk through the door to the other end, and examined by the soft flame of gas my hopes to go to."

There are many people in every mid-dle who do not understand some of nature's unusual words. A preacher who, in addressing a country congregation, spoke of drawing an inference, was startled next day to hear one of his auditors remark: "I don't just know what an inference is, but it sounds to me like a mighty mean kind of a thing to do."

What a monotonous sort of life must Jesse lead in Edom, without the excitement that now everywhere greets the eye on the landscape during every rock, tree and fence is covered with those splendid patent advertising posters, and the "Chew Spherical Fine Cut" Consumption Cure."

"Adolphus, my dear," said she, "it's nearly a year since you first [illegible] And were you [illegible] Well, I [illegible] think a change will [illegible] was a change in [illegible] pastor [illegible]."

Mrs. Plainclaine, after looking long and thoughtfully at a picture of Shakspeare in a garret, "Don't you" How pale he was! It could have been when [illegible] Ah, that [illegible] it," said Mrs. Bradbrown, a superficial [illegible].

The bashful young man who asked a lady in the back seat of the car [illegible] if she would [illegible] to [illegible] her [illegible] if he thought [illegible] and see if she wanted to [illegible] the ride, thank her father would [illegible] and then walked out with [illegible] dignity.

An old Yorkshire woman described what happened at a [illegible] "I'a [illegible] little [illegible] of [illegible] and [illegible] if we [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and Agricultural.

SUGAR-REFINING.—Mr. Edward Hurd of Salford, has lately introduced a new method of clarifying, decolorising and purifying sugar and saccharine solutions, by the employment of a strong solution of a very basic sub-sulphate of alumina, to which he gives the name of "Aluminous water." This solution is thus obtained: A saturated solution of sulphate of aluminia in water is made of the temperature of 150° F. To this is added, by small quantities at a time, so much chalk, in the form of "milk of chalk," or lime, as "milk of lime," that the color first produced may just still fall of a specific gravity equal to 1°, supported on hydrometer, heated to a temperature not exceeding 150° F.; or, in other words, to every 100 pounds of pure crystallized sulphate of alumina contained in solution in water saturated with the salt at 150° F., 24 pounds of pure dry chalk, or 13 pounds of pure burnt lime, (lime mixed with sufficient water, so that it can be added in the form of thick milk, and not in lumps. Lime, chalk and the commercial sulphate of alumina vary somewhat in composition, and the method given above is the best practical guide to a manufacturer to obtain a liquor of suitable and uniform character. The aluminous water may be obtained in a state still more basic than is produced by means of the above proportions. For this purpose the solution of sulphate of alumina must be saturated with the salt at a temperature above 150° F., and more chalk used. The nitrate of silver will become turbid at a lower temperature, in proportion as the alumina salt in solution is more basic; and the point to be noted is, that if the strength of solution made sufficient, of the acid of the sulphate held in solution to maintain the whole of the alumina in a state of solution under such varying conditions of atmospheric temperature as may prevail. With a smaller proportion of lime or chalk, a liquor may be made less basic than the above, to effect which, with proportionate portion of alumina on being added to water or to other liquids, but the proportion of alumina that will fall out of solution is less as the amount of acid left in it is greater. The lime or chalk, being added to the liquor as filtered from its solution of sulphate of lime, and is then put into a lead-lined wooden vessel, and mixed with the aluminous solution by means of a wooden paddle. The vessel is then filled up with water, and the whole well washed out. The wash-waters are used again for preparing a new quantity of aluminous water, and so on. The precipitate is then washed with pure water, or a solution of soda in water, or a solution of soda in water will be used when cold bleaching is required, owing to the colored compound formed by the action of the soda on the coloring matter in solution. As this alumina separates, it attaches to itself and throws out of solution much of the coloring matter and coloring matters which may be contained in such solutions, and thereby greatly facilitates, decolorizes and purifies them. When applied to the decolorizing and purifying of sugar solutions, such a quantity is used as may be just adequate to produce a noticeable precipitate. The lime is then treated to about 10° of F., to facilitate the separation and consolidation of the precipitate, and it is then filtered. If the sugar solution is too acid in the first instance, such a quantity of aluminous water only is used as may be shown on trial of a small sample to produce the maximum decolorizing effect. When the sugar solution is so impure, or contains so much uncrystalizable sugar, as to need the employment of more than one part of aluminous water of specific gravity 1.150 to 100 parts of sugar solution of specific gravity 1.25, a quantity of lime in the form of milk of lime may be added in the proportion of iron one to two parts of dry lime to every 100 parts of aluminous water used; but the lime is not required when due care has been taken to make the aluminous water sufficiently basic.—Louisiana Sugar Bowl.

CELERY.—The Weekly Herald has had a good deal to say about the growing of celery, what we have said being based wholly upon Eastern experience. We are glad to give the Western experience of the Prairie Farmer. It says that celery is one of the things that must have special care, soil, manure and treatment, and is one of the surest crops to grow, when we know how, if the conditions are right. If we do not know how, and cannot give it the necessary special care and conditions, it is useless to try to produce a good crop. Furthermore, it is a very uncertain crop to grow as far south as Central Illinois, except on the sea shore, and especially west, where our autumns have such extremes of heat, cold, wet and drought. For the best success with this plant we must have a cold, moist, rich soil or a cold soil made rich and wet. A heavy loam, clay or peat, or a heavy moist loam. The trouble with our correspondent appears to be that he has rather too far south, transplanted into the trenches too early, with too early plants and furthered up too early and too much at a time. We believe the practice of the most successful celery growers to be, to first grow the celery, the more so as it grows vigorous and strongly the better, at least to a considerable size, and then, after good weather, to earth it up for blanching. If we are not right, will some successful Western grower tell us what portion we are wrong? That this delicious vegetable can be very successfully grown far south by a few gardeners, while rather good and well-pitched market gardeners continually fail, is a fact well known to us, and we have endeavored thus answer, hoping to have a chance to give our views of those successful ones, but have not been able to do so. The fact will be that in the rich soil bordering Chicago, as a natural celery garden, with every facility at hand for the highest culture, to wit, the right soil, plenty of the best manure, and perfect facilities for watering, for water is a prime factor in its culture, and here a great mistake is often made; many when watering, rowing plants, merely give them a sprinkling, resulting in more harm than good, often killing the plants. When plants need water they should have a copious supply at one time enough to last a week or ten days at least. Peter Henderson, the great New York gardener, whom we all know to be successful, says: "When we water celery or growing plants in a drought we should deluge them, as it were, a large bucket of water to a plant, and then let them rest until they need it again." This coincides with our experience. "Salt is a necessary fertilizer for celery, for it is a plant of the sea shore, and although it can possibly be grown without it, if manures rich in salts, such as night soil are used, it is best to give the plants about all they will bear. Salt would certainly have a good effect in preventing rotting, but science shows us conclusively that organic matter does not rot. Only heat, cold, chemical decomposition and parasites destroy it, especially living organic matter. Instead of rotting, the celery was destroyed by a parasitic fungus. Since writing the above, we have seen and interviewed a successful [illegible] Ill., and after giving him a thorough questioning we have but little more to add. He is on a light upland clay, has not used salt, sometimes fails, but generally has a fine crop, competing in quality with Chicago celery. He says no one can learn to grow celery or any other difficult plant from books alone, especially in the west from Eastern books. He must study his own climate and soil, have intelligence and industriously use it. We can get broad principles from books, but the manipulations and small cares necessary for success must come from experience and good sound sense. N. Y. Herald.

SOWING SEEDS.

TRICKS OR "THIN SOWING."—A great deal of discussion is going on in agricultural papers in regard to the benefits of thin sowing of seeds. The only point necessary to settle is, what is thick or thin sowing? Many sow about a bushel of seed to an acre, and it can be easily proved by any one who is anxious to try how much less than this will give results as good or better than that obtained from a bushel. There is no rule to be given in a matter of this kind, as soils vary so that what would seed one person's acre might be insufficient for a neighbor's whose land was of a better nature. The fertility of the ground will have to be considered before deciding on the quantity to sow. Without doubt there is much waste in sowing, judging from most fields seen.

As a general thing in clean, rich, well tilled land, a plant of wheat could well occupy a foot square. Yet it is by no means uncommon to see a half dozen plants in the space named. In this case the two plants are rather worse than useless, for if the sixth plant, if not crowded by the others, would yield as much as the whole lot of plants, besides having plumper grain which would sell more readily in the market than the produce of plants crowded in closely together. What this subject needs is for every farmer to observe what his land will produce and act accordingly. It is useless for writers to attempt to give rules applicable to all lands.

SOWING SEEDS TOO DEEP.—Many failures of seeds come from sowing too deep. Especially is this the case where the ground is still and becomes hard, as in such cases the germ can't push up. [illegible] the ground.—Prof. Collingwood has by experiments proven to his satisfaction that wheat, rye, barley and oats should not be covered deeper than two inches. If drilled five inches deep they will not come up. At a depth of three inches, the sprout from the grain, when near the surface, forms a bulb, and from this bulb roots were sent out, and the stalk took a new growth from the bulb upward. He says wheat should be covered from an inch to an inch and a half, instead of being covered deeper as usually done. It is not only always possible to hit the right depth. Seeds after sowing may be subject to a heavy rain, burdening the ground and preventing their growth.

SAVE GOOD SEED FOR HOME.—Now that most all the crops are harvested and the products in the barn or under cover, it will be in order to see that the best of everything is saved for next season's sowing. Good sound seed is especially desirable to all looking for good crops. In putting aside corn for seed select even rowed ears, and with the rows straight and not irregular on the cob. Ears that taper are best, because better protected by the husk, and then, too, the silk, the female part of the plant, remains alive longer. The reason for selecting the top ear for seed is that it is always more fully developed, more uniform and more vigorous in its germination, having been better fertilized when in the silk. Some kinds of corn have large cobs and but little grain in proportion. The cultivation of the best kinds adds materially to the number of bushels to the acre.—Tribune and Farmer.

DUTCH FRISIAN CATTLE.—A correspondent writes to the Ledger of the Dutch Frisian cattle at the State Fair, at Philadelphia, which belong to the Unadilla Valley Association of New York. He says: "The Frisians are not only very large animals, but their general air indicates a great superiority for the dairy, and purer blood. The points by which a good judge of dairy cattle selects are prominent in this breed. The hair is remarkably soft and silky, and the skin is very fine for such large cattle, while their escutcheons or yield marks are mostly of the flanders or curve line order, indicating the greatest capacity for producing good milk and plenty of it. Then their remarkable lightness of bone and general wedge-shape indicate fine breeding and a strong contrast to the heavier, more lumpy character of the Holsteins. Their general intelligence and great docility is a very pleasing feature in their character. This is derived from their ancestral training. For hundreds of years they have been brought up as a part of the family in Holland. Their stable being one of the rooms of the house, and kept just as clean and sweet; they are handled, brushed and washed, and their tails tied up with ribbons, and as much cared for as a poodle dog by its mistress. Therefore, these great large-sized bulls are as gentle as the cows. Their yield is wonderful, from 14,000 to 16,000 pounds a year, ten times their own weight. When we consider that 1000 pounds is the yield of a good cow, and 6000 pounds is always considered a very large yield, the great merit of this breed is perceived, one cow doing the work of four, and not eating more than the feed of one or one and a half.

POTATOES UNDER STRAW.—I have been very successful in raising potatoes under straw in the following manner: Put the land in good order by plowing, rolling, harrowing, etc., lay off rows two feet apart, and put one piece in a place, one foot apart; cut small—not more than two eyes. Cover in the usual manner with plow or hoe, and when the potatoes first begin to come up, cover them ten inches deep with straw or prairie hay. In the fall, when you go to dig, rake off the straw from a few rows at a time with a horse-rake. After the digging is done, plow the straw in for manure.—Country Gentleman.

A New Jersey cranberry grower has lately been receiving eleven dollars per barrel for his cranberries, and made no sales under nine dollars this year. His fruit commands a high price on account of the rejection of imperfect berries in packing.

GRAHAM BISCUITS.—To a quart of Graham flour, add sufficient thick, sweet cream to make a stiff dough, beat until light, and bake in a moderately hot oven.—F. J. B. Paris, Ky., in Country Gentleman.

Household.

HORSE HAIR AND ITS USES.—Horse hair is a valuable material, which is largely [illegible] others for making hair cloth for seating, horse hair gloves, brushes, sieves, and stuffing mattresses. The hair as received in bales is first sorted, the different colored hairs being placed in separate heaps. The bundles are then combed, care being taken not to break the hair, and when finished the hairs are sized to exactly the same length, and the separate tufts are ready either to be made into curled hair, to be sold to the brushmakers or to be woven into hair cloth. The preparation of this damask hair cloth for chairs and sofas consists essentially in steeping it in an alkaline liquid, after which it is dyed. It is then woven in an ordinary loom and not calendered. The cloth is made in widths of from fourteen to thirty-two inches. Formerly the warp was made of linen, but now cotton is found better suited. A worsted warp is, however, sometimes used.

A carpet made entirely of horse hair was invented by a Worcester firm a year or two ago, which has succeeded and shown itself to be one of the most durable carpets made.

Curled hair is the material generally used for stuffing mattresses, cushions, etc. The hairs found too short for other uses are twisted into a cord, when finished, is reeled up into large coils. It acquires its permanent tortuous springy character by boiling, and is then afterwards baked; this process, settling the "kink" in the hairs, renders them thoroughly elastic. In this condition curled hair is sold to the trade. It only remains to untwist and pull out the rope by hand to obtain the desired quantities.

Tea, whether black or green, English breakfast or Oolong, should never be allowed to boil. English-breakfast will bear a little longer steeping, but any delicately flavored tea, to be enjoyed in perfection, should be made as quickly as possible. Have at the head of the table over an alcoholic lamp, a tea-kettle filled with fresh boiling water just as the tea-bell rings. While the family are taking their seats, the lady of the house should pour from the tea pot—an earthen one, of course—the hot water which had been put in, to heat it, and from the caddy put into it the proper amount of tea for the number at the table. "One teaspoonful for each person with one for the pot," the old rule says, and it is a very safe one, except when English-breakfast tea is used, when a smaller quantity will be found quite enough. The tea in the pot, a little more than enough water to cover it should be poured on from the boiling kettle, and if the cover of the kettle can be raised and the tea-pot set over the steam it is a good plan to do so. The lamp can now be extinguished, and in less time than it has taken to read the description the tea will be made. As soon as the blessing is asked, which should always be a short but earnest one, a sufficient amount of water from the kettle should be put into the tea-pot, and the tea immediately poured into cups well heated and rinsed. With good tea to begin with, this makes a royal drink for the tea lover.—Christian Union.

BOUQUET MAKING.—There are certain laws, or usages, or fashions which govern the construction of bouquets. A bridal bouquet is invariably wholly composed of white flowers. Fragrant gardenias, white roses, the sweetly scented, wax-like stephanotis jasmine, Lapageria alba, pincharis, lily of the valley, Roman hyacinth, white clover, pinks that have no dash of color in the snowy petals, orange blossoms, bouvardias, double Chinese primulas, chaste orchids, etc., are the leading subjects made use of. Birthday bouquets are composed of white and pink blossoms or such as have pale tones. Ball-room bouquets depend on the mode and color of my lady's dress. As a rule, the bouquet should match the dress; and this necessitates confidence between my lady, or her modiste, and the artist who constructs the bouquet. Sometimes it is deemed necessary to have the bouquets in harmony with the hangings or prevailing decorations of the ball-room, and occasionally it happens that bouquets of a peculiar kind of flower or particular hue of color are indispensable.

LINEN PIE.—"Mamma," said Alice, "did you ever hear of linen pie? Cousin Kate makes it in this way: Instead of filling her crust with apple or other fruit, she fills it with pieces of old white linen and bakes. Meanwhile on the range she prepares the fruit, if it is desirable to cook it. And, when the crust is baked, she slips it on a plate, lifts off the upper crust, takes out the rags, and fills their place with the juicy fruit, which couldn't possibly be baked in the pie without losing a large portion of the juice, and spoiling the looks as well as the taste of the pie. At dinner every one who doesn't understand the trick, wonders how so juicy a pie was so perfectly baked. And no one can imagine how the upper crust was baked so rich and brown without being stained with juice, and the undercrust so crisp without being soaked or heavy. To the uninitiated it is no doubt as great a marvel as the apple inside the dumpling was to the bewildered king, who asked, amazed, 'How got the apple in?'"

TREATMENT OF HOUSE-PLANTS.—In watering plants in rooms, discretion must be used. Cactus, cereus and, in fact, all the so-called succulents require but little water in winter; simply enough to keep them growing. Callas and all that class of aquatic or semi-aquatic plants will bear watering to saturation. As a rule, smooth-leaved and hard plants require less watering than pubescent and soft-leaved plants. Many small pots require water every day, sometimes twice a day—they dry out so fast—unless plunged into some moist material. The difficulty with amateurs is, they usually give small pots too little water and large pots too much. Until the true habit and necessities of a plant are learned, it is better that it dry sufficiently to droop a little rather than that the soil be kept saturated. Over saturation kills more plants than too much dryness.—Prairie Farmer.

MUSTARD THAT WILL KEEP.—Take four ounces of the best mustard, one ounce salt; mix thoroughly, and into it stir six ounces of water that has been boiled and allowed to cool. Mix well and keep in small jars well covered.

CORN CAKE.—One quart of sour milk, three eggs, one teacupful of flour, yellow corn meal, enough to make a batter as thick as for pancakes. Bake quickly in pans well buttered.

Some cooks will throw out the water in which meats have been boiled, without letting it cool to take off the fat. This is not economy.

Scientific.

—The work done by the seaside zoological laboratory of the Johns Hopkins [illegible] under the care of Prof. W. K. Brooks, is highly creditable to the liberality of the trustees of that institution, who supplied the money to maintain it for three years. During the past season discoveries have been made which are important additions to our knowledge of the mode of development and structure of the lower animals. These researches demand great patience, skill in the use of the microscope and pencil, and a general knowledge of comparative anatomy. Work of this sort is much more difficult than describing species, or monographing families and orders of animals, or studying their geographical distribution. There are few persons or institutions in the United States which are able or have the desire to promote these higher studies in biology, and every encouragement should be given to the endowment of biological research. It is the attention given in Germany by a large number of medical students and naturalists to researches in the higher departments of anatomy and physiology that places her in the front rank of science. At present Germany is foremost in the work of investigation, and her example has, and is stimulating the better class of observers in England, Russia, France, and other European countries to work upon the higher problems of life. The ultimate question which all biologists are endeavoring to solve is, What is life? and, second, what is its origin? Hence the natural avenue to the doorway of this arcana of mysteries, in the science of life, is the study of the evolution of an individual plant or animal—some living organism and its relations to other life-forms. Researches such as are carried on by the laborers in our seaside laboratories, connected more or less with Harvard, Yale, and Johns Hopkins, and some of our other colleges, and in connection with the United States Fish Commission and the United States Entomological Commission, where everything connected with the, origin, life-history, environment, and habits of organisms is studied, are throwing fresh light on these ultimate problems of life, however much natural[illegible] are groping in the dark.—N. Y. Independent.

The brick-clays of Philadelphia and vicinity are likely to play an important part in determining the age of the gravels at Trenton, N. J., in which paleolithic implements are found. In the first place, it is evident that these clays belong to the glacial age, since they contain great numbers of bowlders, from the upper Delaware basin, many of large size, and which could only have been brought to their present position by floating ice. Secondly, this bowlder-bearing brick-clay is limited to the valley of the Delaware and its tributaries. Thirdly, it reaches a height of about one hundred and fifty feet in the lower part of the valley and a somewhat greater height in the upper part of the valley, below the Blue Ridge. Fourthly, it rests unconformably upon all the other formations where it occurs, except the present flood-plain of the river and the high level gravels in which paleolithic are found. It is conspicuous for its absence over these two formations, which shows that these are later deposits. The bowlder-bearing brick-clay rises more than a hundred feet higher than the implement-bearing gravel of Trenton. Instead of marking two distinct glacial epochs, these deposits probably took place during successive stages of the same epoch. The clays would be deposited where the melting of the ice in the upper region was proceeding at its most rapid rate, and so flooded the valley below to an enormous extent. The gravels might well have been deposited when the ice had shrunk back, so as to consist only of local glaciers in the southern valleys of the Catskill Mountains. The time separating these two periods may have been of long duration.—N. Y. Independent.

—Granite was for a long time regarded as a fundamental rock in the structure of the crust of the earth. It is now known not to be chiefly by the occurrence within its mass of numerous fragments of more ancient rocks. Mr. Arthur Phillips has described in the Journal of the Geographical Society of London, such of those fragments as he has observed in England. They appear to be of two kinds: the first kind are generally of an ovoid form, often polyhedric, with a concretionary structure, of the same mineralogical composition as the ambient rock, except that they are more feldspathic and finer grained, and may be regarded as simple segregations of the mass. The other kind are of schistous form, evidently foreign, and of very variable composition. Mr. Phillips has recognized among them fragments of gauiss, mica, schists, amphibole schists, granotite. These fragments, always angular, bear no traces of alternation, and therefore tend to refute the opinion of those who consider granite a metamorphic rock.

Mr. J. Delauney, an ingenious French student, believes that he has discovered that the commotions of which earthquakes are one of the signs are chiefly caused by the passage of the planets through the swarms of meteoric bodies that exist in the solar system, particularly through the groups that give off the August and November meteors. The passage of the smaller planets, Venus, the Earth, and Mars, is followed by seasons of light earthquakes, that of the larger ones by heavier earthquakes; and seasons of severe commotion succeed the passage of two large planets. Upon the basis of this theory M. Delauney has predicted a series of earthquakes for several years head. The next important commotion, he asserts, will take place when Jupiter passes the August meteors in 1883.—N. Y. Independent.

Prof. C. F. Chandler asserts the prevailing impressions, concerning the adulteration of food are exaggerated. As an officer of the Board of Health, it has been his business to make extensive examinations of substances sold for food for the purpose of detecting adulterations, and has found them in nearly all cases trifling and harmless. The most flagrant case which he observed was that of the addition of a salt of tin to granulated sugar to give it brilliancy. Generally, sugar is but little adulterated, and that with glucose, which is harmless; milk is only weakened with water; and the worst substance is adulterated liquors is the alcohol. The common adulterations weaken the substances to which they are added, and are frauds on the buyer, but are not otherwise deleterious.

—The officers of the Royal Observatory, at Greenwich say that great magnetic disturbances are likely for some time to be more frequent than they have been in recent years.

EDUCATIONAL.

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE,
ABINGDON, VA.

In point of grounds, buildings, apparatus and faculty, this is one of the most thoroughly equipped schools in the South. It is located in one of the finest sections of Virginia, 2,000 feet above the sea.

Bishop McTyeire, Dr. Garland, Dr. Summers and Dr. A. W. Wilson give it their cordial endorsement.

Music is a specialty. The director of this department, Prof. C. Kneringer, is a noted teacher and composer, and his assistants are thoroughly cultivated musical artists.

A full course of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Natural Science, and Mental and Moral Philosophy is taught with great care.

The fare is good, and every care is taken of the health of the young ladies.

Parents living in the South would do well to send their daughters here to spend the summer.

$200 paid in advance will cover board, tuition, fuel, washing and lights for forty weeks. Music is extra additional.

Spring session begins February 4, 1881. A discount of twenty per cent. to Methodist preachers and Publishing House hands taken from them at par.

Send for catalogue to

REV. E. E. HOSS, President.

HAMBURG ARK. HIGH SCHOOL,
Thirty Miles North of Rastrop, La.

[illegible]

READVILLE SEMINARY,
EATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA.

A home school for girls. Thorough training in all departments. Full corps of efficient Teachers. Expenses moderate. Numbers limited.

For particulars address,

MRS. MARY W. REED,
Principal.

Memphis Conference Female Institute.
JACKSON, TENNESSEE.

REV. A. W. JONES, A. M., D. D., President.

This well known College of the South and West begins its Fall session the First Monday in September. Opening Concert and Address Tuesday, September 7, 1880. For thirty-six years there has been an average of more than twelve graduates annually.

The Faculty is full and efficient. The determination is to stand among the foremost in the progress of Science, Language and Art.

For further information apply to the President.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE,
ATHENS, ROUGE, LA.

The next session of this school will begin September 20, 1880.

This is a family boarding school for boys. The healthfulness of the location is unsurpassed. Instruction thorough, of what is necessary to prepare the student for any grade in college or any pursuit in life. [illegible] The constant personal care of the principals is given to the health, morals and progress of the pupils.

For circulars, and any necessary information, apply to

W. N. MAGRUDER,
Baton Rouge, La.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,
JACKSON, LOUISIANA

Opens September 15th. The first session was the most largely attended since the war. The whole cost per month, including [illegible] is $14.44 in the Preparatory Department and $24.44 in College classes for the scholastic year. Send for a Catalogue.

G. ANDREWS, President.

East Mississippi Female College,
MERIDIAN, MISSISSIPPI.

REV. J. W. ATKINSON, A. M., President.

A chartered and prosperous Southern school for girls and young ladies. These schools have grown more steadily and rapidly in public confidence and patronage, during the past seven years, as the following figures show: '74, 62; '75, 84; '76, 97; '77, 147. Cabinet and pictures, the last year from Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee and Alabama. Its past history, increasing facilities, accomplished methods of close and thorough instruction assure the friends of a long and prosperous future for the institution. Send for catalogue.

HIWASSEE COLLEGE,
EAST TENNESSEE.

Founded 1849, and located where
Pure waters flow,
Sleek cattle low,
Cool breezes blow,
Ripe apples grow.

Excellent and ideal teachers. Terms very favorable. The Female Department is at SWEETWATER, on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad. The Male Department, at HIWASSEE COLLEGE POST OFFICE, seven miles out in the country. A neat monthly paper, the "Hiwassee College Reporter," at fifty cents a year. Address

J. H. BRUNNER, President.

JEFFERSON COLLEGE,
HIGH SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND YOUNG MEN.

Six miles from Natchez, Miss. Session begins September 10. Full corps of instructors. Course of study thorough and extensive. Nearly fifty boarders from abroad. Pupils from a distance board with the principal. Entire expense for ten months, $145. For catalogues address the principal,

J. S. RAYMOND,
Washington, Adams county, Miss.

CENTENARY
FEMALE COLLEGE,
SUMMERFIELD, ALA.

Will begin its forty-first session October 4, 1880. Great attention paid to the regular course. Teachers in the Music and Art departments selected with reference to special fitness. Charges moderate.

For further information address

H. M. MOSS, A. M., President.

HOMER MALE COLLEGE
THE TWENTY FIRST SESSION will begin on the
FIRST OF SEPTEMBER 1880.
Address R. A. SMITH,
President.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Crescent Insurance Co.,
67 & 69 Camp Street,
NEW ORLEANS
ORGANIZED 1849. REORGANIZED 1880
Cash Capital $100,000.
SOLICITS
FIRE, RIVER AND MARINE RISKS.
W. R. EYMAN.....President.
S. H. NEWMAN.....Vice President.
CHAS. E. RICE.....Secretary.

SPORTSMEN'S DEPOT,
RICHARD RHODES,
55 ....ST. CHARLES STREET.... 55
NEW ORLEANS.

Articles for Fishermen of all Kinds.

Rods, Nets, Hooks, Lines, and every desirable article for the Angler, wholesale and retail. Guns imported to order. J. R. Cooper's Breech and Muzzle Loading Guns always on hand. All kinds of improved artificial Baits. Repairing of Guns carefully done by experienced workmen, and Fishing Rods made to order. Address Postoffice Box 749.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS.
SIZES AND PRICES.

Diam. of Bell.	Wgt with yoke & frame.	Cost. Bell & Hang's.
No. 6,	250 lbs	$ 25 00
No. 6½,	270 lbs	30 00
No. 7,	300 lbs	50 00
No. 8,	370 lbs	75 00
No. 9,	500 lbs	100 00

RUMSEY & CO.,
Seneca Falls, N. Y., U. S. A.

My New Illustrated Price List describing over 100 Gold and Silver Waltham Watches sent for a 3c stamp. I ship this new 1 and watches to all parts of U. S. to be examined before paying for same unseen. Unbounded reference. N. H. White, Jeweler, Newark, N. J.

EDUCATIONAL.

TEACHERS,

SCHOLARS

AND

DEALERS

Are hereby advised that the

Largest Stock and Most

Complete Assortment of

SCHOOL BOOKS

to the South-west is now in stock and ready to ship all orders, large or small at Publishers' prices at

112 CAMP STREET,

NEW ORLEANS.

All the books used in this section supplied at short notice, and prices guaranteed as low as they can be had elsewhere. Catalogues mailed on application. Also a general line of

School Supplies,

SLATED PAPER,

SLATED CLOTH,

LIQUID SEATING,

BLACKBOARDS,

BLACKBOARD RUBBERS,

CHALK CRAYONS,

MATHEMATICAL INSTRUMENTS,

NUMERICAL FRAMES,

SCHOOL SATCHELS,

BOOK STRAPS,

WRITING PAPER,

DRAWING PAPER,

BLOTTING PAPER,

WRITING BOOKS,

COMPOSITION BOOKS,

SLATES AND PENCILS,

INK, INK STANDS, PENS,

PENHOLDERS, CALL BELLS,

Kindergarten Material,

ETC., ETC.

Send for anything you want or address for prices.

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

In addition to the above we keep a complete line of all the standard religious publications, for pastors, members and Sunday-schools. Prices quoted on application.

Southwestern Agency for

Readers' and Writers' Economy Co.

LATHROP & WILKINS
New Orleans

W. C. SHEPARD & Co.,

AMERICAN CHINA HOUSE,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

We append a few prices:

The American China Dinner, Breakfast and Tea Set, comprising 160 Pieces, for $12.

A Real French China Dinner Set, 115 Pieces, for $17.

English Stone China Dinner Set, 134 Pieces, for $10.

English Stone China Chamber Set, comprising 10 Pieces, for $2 50.

Decorated Chamber Sets, with different Colored Hands, 10 Pieces, for $2 50.

Glass Goblets, from 60 cents to $1 per dozen.

Particular attention given to Novelties and Specialties pertaining to the House-Furnishing Department. Orders promptly attended to. We have just received a full and complete stock of holiday goods. Call and examine before purchasing.

W. C. SHEPARD & CO

Christian Advocate.

Mr. Spurgeon's Reminiscences of Cambridge.

At a meeting of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, on Wednesday night, Mr. Spurgeon said when he became pastor of a Baptist chapel at sixteen years of age the people could do very little for his support, and therefore he was usher of a school at Cambridge at the same time. After a time, he was obliged to give up the latter occupation, and was thrown on the generosity of the people, and they gave him £15 a year, but as he had to pay for two rooms which he required, 12s. a week, the salary was not enough; but the people, though they had no money, had produce, and he did not think there was a pig killed in any one of the congregation that he had not some portion of, and one or other of them would bring him bread, so that he had enough bread and meat to pay his rent with. There was an old miser in that place who was a great miser, and it was said of him that he never gave anything to anybody, but one afternoon he gave him three half-crowns; and, as he was wanting a new hat at the time, he got it with the money. The following Sunday the old man came to him again, and asked him to pray for him that he might be saved from the sin of covetousness, and he said, "The Lord told me to give you half a sovereign, and I kept half a crown of it, and I can't rest a night for I think of it." In the early part of his ministry he was rather popular, and he was often asked to take part in anniversary services. On one occasion he was asked to preach to a neighboring church, and when he called on Mr. Brown, the pastor, on the Sunday morning, Mr. Brown said to him, "I don't know you were such a boy, or I would have asked you to preach." "Well," he said, "I can go." "But," said Mr. Brown, "the people have come from all parts, in all kinds of vehicles;" and then he put his hands under his coat tails and asked if the world was coming to when he had not got rid of the taste of mother's milk went about preaching. However, he did preach, and Mr. Brown planted himself on the pulpit stairs. He read a lesson from the Prophet Isaiah, and coming to the passage, "Grayheadedness is a crown of glory to a man," he thought that, for he knew a man who had a gray head and who should be civil. But the passage did not say, "If it be found in the way of righteousness," and that, he said, was a different thing. When he came from the pulpit Mr. Brown said, "Bless your heart! I have been 25 years a minister, and I was never so pleased with a sermon; you are the sanctifying thing that ever was in a pulpit," and they were always good friends afterwards. Mr. Spurgeon went on to relate a number of other stories, relating to other ministers, including Merle d'Aubigne, the author of the "History of the Reformation," the Claytons, of York Chapel, Walworth; Mr. Clay, of Mr. John Howard Hinton; Mr. Kennedy, formerly of Bloomsbury Chapel, &c., giving illustrations of the subject which incited roars of laughter among the audience. On one occasion he was dining at a gentleman's house at Bath, when the orphanage was in course of erection. A thousand pounds were wanted to pay the builder next morning. He did not know what to do to come from, but he said a friend of his would get it; but Mr. Brook thought they ought to speak to God about such matters. During dinner, however, a telegram was handed to him, stating that a gentleman had called at the Tabernacle, and gave one thousand pounds for the object. With the anecdote Mr. Spurgeon closed his address, and the meeting sang the hymn commencing "In some way or other the Lord will provide," the proceedings were closed with prayer.—Cambridge (Eng.) Independent Press.

A Holland Home.

I had no difficulty in finding the house, and when I saw it, I exclaimed, "That is what I want." It was a small house at the end of a street opening on the canal, of one story only, red, with a white façade, planted on the edge of the road, as if looking at itself in the water, with a fine spreading linden tree before it, and drawbridge directly in front. There were the white curtains, the flowers, the little green door; it was the small model of a Dutch home.

The street was deserted; before knocking at the door, I stood a moment to look and muse. That house gave me a better idea of Holland than I could have known by books. It was at once the type and the effect of the family affections, the modest desires, the independent character of the Dutch people. In this country, the real home does not exist; there is nothing but an apartment, a portion of a great barrack, in which lives concealed, but not isolated, hearing a thousand noises of other people, who disturb our griefs by shouts of their joy, or mar our joy by echoes of their grief. The true Dutch home is in Holland, the perfect home, distinct from others, modest, neat, and, precisely because it is distinct from others, inimical to envy and intrigue; cheerful when only that inhabits it is cheerful, and sad when they are sad. In these houses, with the canals and drawbridges before them, every modest citizen, a little of the solitary dignity of a stellar, or the commander of a ship; and, sees, indeed, from his windows, as from the deck of a merchant, a uniform and beautiful sea, which inspires him with the sentiments and thoughts, grave and tranquil, as are inspired by the sea. The trees surrounding his habitation, like a garment of verdure, allow a broken and discreet light to penetrate the bark indeed with meridian heat before his door; he hears no sound of horses' feet, nor crack of whip, nor shouts; around him all the movements of life are slow, and everything breathes peace and happiness; and the neighboring steeple marks the hour with a flood of harmony sweet and constant as his affections and his labor.

I knocked; the door was opened by the sister of the house in person, who, having read my letter, gave me a serious welcome, and invited me to enter. Dutchmen, as a rule, are diffident. Hence, the first comer who brings a letter of introduction is received with cordiality, as if he were our most intimate friend; and very often we do not wait for him. The Hollanders, on the contrary, receive you coldly, as much so as to be sometimes rather mortifying; but then they offer you all their services, with the best will in the world, and without the least appearance of laying you under an obligation.

"The inside of the house corresponded perfectly with the outside; it seemed like the interior of a ship. A winding staircase of wood that shone like glass led to the upper rooms. Mats and carpets covered the stairs and landing-places, and lay before all the doors. The rooms were as small as cells; the furniture exquisitely clean; all the knobs and bolts and ornaments of metal shone as if they had just been made; and on every side there were numbers of china jars, vases, and cups; lamps, mirrors, little pictures, brackets, toys, and objects of every use and form, attesting the thousand small needs created by a sedentary life, the provident activity, the constant care, the love of small things, the taste for order, and the economy of space: the residence, in short, of a quiet, home-loving woman.

"We went down to see the kitchen; it was splendid. When I returned to Italy and gave a description of it to my mother and the servant, who prided herself on her neatness, they were annihilated. The walls were as white as untouched snow; the saucepans reflected objects like mirrors; the mantlepiece was ornamented by a species of muslin curtain, like the canopy of a bed, without a trace of smoke; the fireplace beneath was covered with chimneys that looked as bright as if no fire had ever been lighted there; the shovel, tongs, and poker, and the chains and hooks, seemed made of polished steel. A lady in a ball-dress might have gone into every hole and corner of that kitchen and come forth without a smirch upon her whiteness."—From "Holland and its People," by E. de Amicis.

Her Majesty's State Crown.

The Imperial State Crown of Queen Victoria, which Her Majesty wears at the opening of Parliament, was made in 1838, with jewels taken from old crowns, and others furnished by command of her Majesty. It consists of diamonds, pearls, rubies, sapphires, and emeralds set in silver and gold; it is a crimson velvet cap and ermine border, and it is lined with white silk. Its gross weight is 39 ounces 4 penny-weights troy. The lower part of the band, above the ermine border, consists of a row of 129 pearls, and the upper part of the band of a row of 112 pearls, between which, in front of the crown, is a large sapphire, partly drilled, purchased for the Crown by Her Majesty King George IV. At the back is a sapphire of a smaller size, and 6 other sapphires, 3 on each side, between which are 5 emeralds. Above and below the 7 sapphires are 14 diamonds, and round the 5 emeralds 28 diamonds. Between the emeralds and the sapphires are 13 trefoil ornaments, containing 90 diamonds. Above the band are 5 sapphires, surmounted by 5 diamonds, between which are 8 festoons, consisting of 148 diamonds. In the front of the crown, and in the centre of a diamond Maltese cross, is the famous ruby said to have been given to Edward Prince of Wales, son of Edward III., called the Black Prince, by Don Pedro, king of Castile, after the battle of Najera, near Victoria, A. D. 1367. This ruby was worn in the helmet of Henry V. at the battle of Agincourt, A. D. 1415; it is pierced quite through, after the Eastern custom, the upper part of the piercing being filled up by a small ruby. Around this ruby, in order to form the cross, are 75 brilliant diamonds. Three other Maltese crosses, forming the two sides and back of the crown, have emerald centres, containing, respectively, 122, 124 and 126 brilliant diamonds. Between the four Maltese crosses are four ornaments in the form of French fleurs-de-lys, with four rubies in the centre, and surrounded by rose diamonds, containing, respectively, 85, 85 and 87 rose diamonds; from the Maltese crosses issue four imperial arches composed of oak leaves and acorns; the leaves contain 728 rose, table and brilliant diamonds; 333 pearls form the acorns set in cups containing of rose diamonds and 1 table diamond. The total number of diamonds in the arches and acorns is 1,187 brilliant, 116 table and 559 rose diamonds. From the upper part of the arches are suspended 4 large pendant pear-shaped pearls, with rose diamonds caps, containing 12 rose diamonds, and stems containing 14 very small rose diamonds. Above the arch stands the mound, containing in the lower hemisphere 301 brilliants, and in the upper 221 brilliants; the zone and arc being composed of 33 rose diamonds. The cross on the summit has a rose-cut sapphire in the centre surrounded by 4 large brilliants and 106 smaller brilliants.—Silversmiths' Trade Journal.

An Observatory on Mount Etna.

It is in contemplation to establish an observatory on Mount Etna, and the work of constructing it will probably be commenced in the month of June next. The scheme originated at the instance of Prof. Tacchini, of Palermo. His suggestion was adopted, and the expense is to be defrayed by the Italian Government, the municipality of Catania, Catania and the province of Catania. A site has just been selected at the Casa degli Inglesi, 9652 feet above the level of the sea, where there is now an oblong building, originally erected by the English when occupying Sicily in 1813, and repaired, after having fallen into decay, when the present King of Italy visited the locality in 1862. Both astronomical and meteorological, as well as seismological, observations are to be carried on at this new observatory, which will be the property of the University of Catania. For the prosecution of the former a refractor will be provided, for which Messrs. Merz of Munich, have undertaken to supply, at a comparatively small charge, an object-glass 12 inches in diameter. But in order to render the selenic to some extent international, facilities will be afforded for enabling astronomers of other countries who may wish to do so to bring over and apply their own optical appliances to this instrument. Thus will opportunities be furnished for practically ascertaining what additional advantage can be secured for astronomical research with powerful instrumental means in the clearer atmosphere of a considerable elevation. Prof. Langley, Director of the Allegheny Observatory, in a recent visit to Etna, formed a very favorable opinion, (which he expressed first in a letter to Prof. Tacchini, and afterward at the meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society of London last March,) of the superior light-gathering power obtained at stations on the slopes of that mountain.

One of the New York wholesale dry goods houses has a new clerk, who on his father from the country went in to see him the other day and was surprised to learn that all the salesmen had nicknames. He asked the floor-walker why his son was called "Dicky." "Oh," was the reply, "he is always sitting on cases."

MISCELLANEOUS.

WARNER'S SAFE KIDNEY & LIVER CURE

The Leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time, and for years people suffered great agony, without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical fruit, of rare value in containing just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial Fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is a sure, excellent and safe remedy for Females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb. As a blood purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

READ ITS RECORD.

"It saved my life."—F. P. Latchaw, Selma, Ala.

"It is the remedy that will cure the many diseases peculiar to women."—Mothers' Magazine.

"It has passed severe tests and won endorsements from some of the highest medical talent in the country."—New York World.

"No remedy heretofore discovered can be held for one moment in comparison with it."—Rev. C. A. Bikerer, D. D., Washington, D. C.

This Remedy might have done such wonders, is put upon the LARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by druggists and all others at $1.25 per bottle. For pamphlets enquire for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy.

H. H. WARNER & CO., Rochester, N. Y.

E. HEATH,

DEPOSITOR AND DEALER IN

Carpets, Floor Oil Cloths,

UPHOLSTERY Goods, Wall Paper, Window Shades, Cornices, Lace and Nottingham Curtains, Mirrors, Mantles, Chromos, Engravings, etc.

Frames made to order—a specialty.

No. 60 Camp Street, New Orleans.

SPENCERIAN

SPENCERIAN COMMERCIAL

STEEL PENS

Are the Best European Make, and unrivaled for Flexibility, Durability, and Evenness of point.

REAL SWAN QUILL ACTION.

In 20 Numbers. Available to Sample Card, for Circulars, &c., by mail, post-paid, 20 Cents.

A sample Gross, 144, by Express, $1.40. Leading Styles for trial on receipt of 10 Cents.

IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR & CO.,

138 & 140 Grand St., New York.

NO MORE RHEUMATISM OR GOUT

ACUTE OR CHRONIC

SALICYLICA

SURE CURE.

Manufactured only under the above Trade-Mark by the

EUROPEAN MEDICINE CO.,

OF PARIS AND LEIPZIG.

IMMEDIATE RELIEF WARRANTED. PERMANENT CURE GUARANTEED. Now exclusively used by all the celebrated Physicians of Europe and America, for combining Singleness, Promptness and Reliable Remedy on both continents. The highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 60 cures out of the cases within three days. Secret. The only dissolver of the poisonous Uric Acid which exists in the Blood of Rheumatic and Gouty Patients. $1 a box delivers for $5. Send to any address on receipt of price. INDORSED BY PHYSICIANS. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS. Address,

DANIEL KOMMEL, Sole Proprietor,

Office 162 Fulton street, New York.

Depot for L. L. Lyons and E. J. Hart & Co., New Orleans.

BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER

FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

Females suffering from pain and weakness will derive great comfort and strength from the use of Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster.

Where children are affected with whooping cough, ordinary coughs or fall sore or weak lungs, it is the one and only treatment they should receive.

It relieves pain at once, strengthens and cures where other plasters will not even relieve.

Sold by all Druggists. Price 25 cents.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

Seabury & Johnson, Pharmaceutical Chemists, New York.

THE MILD POWER CURES

Humphreys' Homeopathic Specifics

Proved from ample experience all entirely successful, Simple, Prompt, Efficient, and Reliable, they are the only medicines adapted to popular use.

LIST OF NUMBERS AND CURES. PRICE.

1. Fevers, Congestion, Inflammations, 25
2. Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic, 25
3. Crying Colic, or Teething of Infants, 25
4. Diarrhœa of Children or Adults, 25
5. Dysentery, Griping, Bilious Colic, 25
6. Cholera Morbus, Vomiting, 25
7. Coughs, Cold, Bronchitis, 25
8. Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache, 25
9. Headaches, Sick Headaches, Vertigo, 25
10. Dyspepsia, Bilious Stomach, 25
11. Suppressed or Painful Periods, 25
12. Whites, too Profuse Periods, 25
13. Croup, Cough, Difficult Breathing, 25
14. Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions, 25
15. Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains, 25
16. Fever and Ague, Chill Fever, Ague, 50
17. Piles, Blind or Bleeding, 50
18. Catarrh, acute or chronic, Influenza, 50
20. Whooping Cough, Violent Coughs, 50
21. General Debility, Physical Weakness, 50
27. Kidney Disease, 50
28. Nervous Debility, Spermatorrhœa, 1.00
30. Urinary Weakness, Wetting the Bed, 50
32. Disease of the Heart, Palpitation, 1.00

For sale by druggists, or sent by the Case, or single Vial, free of charge, on receipt of price. Send for Dr. Humphreys' Book on Diseases, &c., 144 pages, also Illustrated Catalogue, FREE.

Address, "Humphreys' Homeopathic Med. Co., 109 Fulton St., New York.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC

Ginger, Buchu, Mandrake, Stillingia and many other of the best medicines known are combined so skillfully in PARKER'S GINGER TONIC as to make it the greatest Blood Purifier and the Best Health and Strength Restorer ever used.

It cures Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sleeplessness, and all diseases of the Stomach, Bowels, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Urinary Organs and all Female Complaints.

If you are wasting away with Consumption or any disease, use the TONIC to-day. No matter what your symptoms may be, it will surely help you.

Remember! This TONIC cures drunkenness; is the Best Family Medicine ever made; entirely different from Bitters, Ginger Preparations and other Tonics, and combines the best curative properties of all. Buy a 50c. bottle of your druggist. None genuine without our signature on outside wrapper. Hiscox & Co., Chemists, New York.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM The best and most economical Hair Dressing.

MISCELLANEOUS.

25,000 SOLD!

FARMER'S AND MECHANIC'S MANUAL

Edited by GEO. E. WARING, Jr.,

Author of "Elements of Agriculture," "Draining for Profit and for Health," and formerly Agricultural Engineer of Central Park, New York.

500 Octavo Pages—Over 200 Illustrations.

Worth to any Thinking, Working Farmer $25 per Year.

This book is for the most part a work of facts and figures—sound analysis and demonstrations, about which there can be no dispute. The design was to produce a work of substantial and enduring value, and of universal application and use. This work is offered as containing more that has been proven by long use to be of value, more that is most necessary for every farmer and mechanic to know, and more of promising novelty, than any other that has ever been presented to the farmers and mechanics of America. It is complete in every particular in which it is possible for such a book to be complete; and, in addition to this, it is sufficiently suggestive in many other respects to induce its readers to read more, to think more, to experiment more, and to become more thrilling and more successful in the management of their business as well as really happier and wiser men.

Price, in Extra English Cloth, Gilt Back, Only $3 50.

Sent postpaid on receipt of price. Address

LATHROP & WILKINS,

New Orleans, La., or Houston, Tex.

B. T. WALSHE,

SHIRTS,

Ready-made Stock always on hand. Prices moderate. Assortment complete.

MEN'S FURNISHING GOODS.

Very Complete.

Nos. 13 ST. CHARLES STREET, New Orleans.

Country orders carefully and promptly filled C. O. D.

YOUNG MEN'S Christian Association,

OF NEW ORLEANS.

ROOMS, 87 CAMP STREET,

Open from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M., except Sundays, and on Sundays from 3 to 10 P. M., where may be found the leading daily and weekly papers of the South, periodicals of the United States.

SERVICES.

Tuesday, 7½ P. M. Prayer-meeting.

Thursday, 7½ P. M. Singing class.

NOON-DAY PRAYER-MEETING.

Every day, 12 to 12:30.

Daily Prayer-meeting Rooms are limited by Act of Congress.

FURNITURE

JOHN BOIS,

DEALER IN

Parlor, Bed and Dining Room FURNITURE.

291 Camp St., cor. Calliope, New Orleans.

Repairing, Upholstering, Varnishing, etc., promptly done. Country orders promptly attended to. Spring Hair and Moss Mattresses made to order. A full line of common Furniture on hand; suitable for the country.

Unequaled Low Rates now Ruling at

JOHN GAUCHE'S

MAMMOTH

QUEENSWARE HOUSE.

We would call to our patrons that we are now offering our celebrated ROYAL SEMI PORCELAIN DINNER SETS, 130 pieces, for $17.

ENGLISH STONE CHINA DINNER SETS, 124 pieces, $16.

REAL FRENCH CHINA DINNER SETS, 124 pieces, $21.

ENGLISH PRINTED TOILET SETS, $6 50.

ENGLISH CHINA PRINTED DINNER SETS, $20.

ENGLISH CHINA GOLD BAND and FLOWER BUTTEA SETS, 44 pieces, $6 50.

THE BEST SELECTION OF

CROCKERY

Glassware and Housefurnishing Goods

OF ANY HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

The assortment for both city and country is very large and the prices are guaranteed as low, if not lower than any establishment North or South.

REMEMBER THE PLACE, IT IS,

JOHN GAUCHE,

AT THE MORESQUE BUILDINGS,

109, 111, 113 & 115 Camp Street.

Branch House, Nos. 108 and 110 Chartres Street.

HOLIDAY MUSIC BOOKS.

DITSON & CO. call attention to their elegant and useful music books suitable for presents, and especially to their

VOLUMES OF BOUND SHEET MUSIC.

Prices of each in cloth, $2 50. Fine Gilt $3.

THE CLUSTER OF GEMS. 43 pieces of high character.

GEMS OF THE DANUBE. 79 of the best pieces of modern music, by the most celebrated composers.

GEMS OF STRAUSS. 80 splendid and brilliant compositions.

PIANOFORTE GEMS. 100 select piano pieces.

HOME CIRCLE. Vol. I. 170 easy pieces for beginners.

HOME CIRCLE. Vol. II. 142 pieces, of which 22 are for 4 hands.

PARLOR MUSIC. 2 Vols. 120 easy and popular pieces.

CREME DE LA CREME. 2 Vols. 85 select pieces of some difficulty, suited to advanced players.

FOUNTAIN OF GEMS. 87 easy and popular pieces.

WELCOME HOME. 70 easy and popular pieces.

PEARLS OF MELODY. 50 pieces of moderate difficulty.

PIANIST'S ALBUM. 102 pieces. Fine collection.

All the books above named are alike in size, style, binding and price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston

C. H. DITSON & CO.,

843 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NEW DICTIONARY HOLDER.

These holders are so arranged that they press the book firmly together when it is closed, in short the Dictionary Holder is perfect in its form, finish and operation, and will be found one of the most elegant and desirable articles for schools, literary or professional reference and library use. Every one who owns a dictionary should have one of these patent holders, and have the unwieldy bound, cumbrous book reduced. Place the dictionary in the holder and keep it there. Then you need not open it by the middle but can open it at any page you desire, and the book does not become cracked, soiled and spoiled. You have fair access to the last word of the last page when open, as when closed. If placed by your side when reading or writing, the back of book open upon it is not deformed and then forgotten, but done neatly and easily. The holder is high enough for you, and low enough if you sit, and has received unlimited praise from clergymen, and teachers, and all others who have used it. The Unabridged Dictionary, either of Worcester or Webster, fits in them exactly.

Price finished in hand jet black lacquer, $2 00
" " white, or nickle wash, 2 50

Address LATHROP & WILKINS, Agents for the southwest, 142 Camp street, New Orleans.

D. H. HOLMES,

155 Canal Street, 15 Bourbon Street.

Our Stock of Spring Goods is now complete, consisting of the latest novelties in Silks, Laces, Dress Goods in Worsted Fabrics, Black Grenadines in Silk and Wool, Linen Lawns, Organdies and Percales.

HOSIERY in all Styles and Colors. A Complete assortment of MATTINGS.

SAMPLES SENT FREE OF CHARGE. D. H. HOLMES, 155 Canal Street, New Orleans.

WHEELER & PIERSON,

(Successors to Darcy & Wheeler and Pierson & Hewes.)

CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS,

Nos. 13 & 15 CAMP STREET, New Orleans.

Black Cloth Suits, $20 to 40. Business Suits, $12 to $25

6 Shirts for $9. Collars, $1 50 per Dozen.

Orders from Clergymen solicited, and liberal discount made to them.

Rules for self measurement sent on application, and goods sent to all Plantation Clothing for Country Stores at very low prices. [illegible]

CATARRH

Is a Terrible Disease. Its fearful effects—corruption running down the throat, weak eyes, deafness, loss of voice, loss of smell, disgusting odor, nasal obstructions, and health, consumption. From first to last it is ever aggressive. Ordinary treatments are worse than useless. It matters not where it is located, the whole system is poisoned, and unless checked, ends in consumption. The most thorough, successful and pleasant treatment is

Dr. M. W. CASE'S CARBOLATE of TAR INHALANT

FOR CATARRH, ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION, Bronchitis & Deafness.

It does not require years to demonstrate the value of Carbolate of Tar, the [illegible] Balsams and Cordials of the most healing and soothing properties ever combined with Pine Tree Tar, that the mere breathing converts them into a dense smoke of vapor. This is inhaled, takes right to the diseased parts. No Heat, no hot water, simply exhausts or breathes it, and you feel its change at once. It is now in use and endorsed by physicians everywhere, and highly commended by thousands, who have used it with perfect satisfaction. FULL TREATMENT—Circulars, etc., Sent Free—Sent. Satisfaction Always Guaranteed. Address, DR. M. W. CASE, 933 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

HOW TO PAINT.

A 32 page book for Practical Painters designed for the use of every one, Mechanics, Merchants, Farmers, and as a Guide for Decoration of Painters. It contains plain common sense directions by which any one can produce perfect results, including fine graining, painting of every description, mixing the materials for any kind of paint or color, and is required, as it is the best book ever issued by which every person living anything to paint and makes

Every Man His Own Painter.

Full directions for using such lead, lime, black, green, yellow, vermillion, brown, whiting, ultramarine blue, asphaltum and varnishes of turpentine oils, varnishes, consisting furniture, milk paint preparing, kalsomine &c.

Paint for Out-Buildings.

Whitewash, paste for paper-hanging, hanging paper, graining, oak, maple, rosewood, black walnut, staining, [illegible] making rustic pictures, painting flower stands, imitating marble, rosewood polish, varnishing furniture, waxing furniture, cleaning paint.

Paint for Farming Tools,

and for machinery and household fixtures.

To Paint a Farm Wagon,

or to varnish a carriage, to make plaster casts.

The work is neatly printed with illustrations where they are needed, and makes the subject plainer, and it will save many times the cost yearly. Every family should possess a copy.

Price by mail, post paid, $1.

LATHROP & WILKINS,

New Orleans, La., and Houston, Tex.

Good News! Good News!

Mammoth Furniture House

OF

McCRACKEN & BREWSTER,

33 & 35 Royal Street,

Now have the largest stock of Fine and Medium Chamber Sets, Elegant Walnut Parlor Sets, Dining Room and Hall Furniture to be found in the South. Also a large and various stock of cheap and durable Furniture suitable for the country trade.

THONET BROS., VIENNA,

BENT WOOD FURNITURE

Our motto: small profits and quick returns.

McCRACKEN & BREWSTER.

P. H. KELLER,

MANUFACTURER OF

CARBOLIC,

Office, 110 Gravier St. ESTABLISHED 1870.

All Kinds of Laundry and Toilet Soaps.

Send for Circular.

BEST WASHER AND WRINGER

in the World. Guaranteed to do perfect work in minutes refunded. Warranted for 5 years. Price one Washer, $8. Samples to parties, $3 50. Price of Wringer $7 50. Samples to P. O. Circulars free.

ERIE WASHER CO., ERIE, PA.

MENEELYS' BELLS.

For Churches, etc., Known to the public since 1826. are made only at "THE MENEELY BELL FOUNDRY," West Troy, N. Y. Catalogues free.

WATCHES.

LADY'S GOLD WATCHES, $30 and upwards

GENT'S GOLD WATCHES, $45 and upwards

GENT'S SILVER WATCHES, $12 and upwards

BOY'S SILVER WATCHES, $12 and upwards

All guaranteed.

A. BERGSWORTH & CO., Cor. Canal and Royal Sts.

BUCK'S IMPROVED

BUCK'S

BRILLIANT STOVES

BRILLIANT STOVE

Is acknowledged to be the Best Cook-Stove Made.

SOLD BY

H. HALLER,

NEW ORLEANS.

DEALER IN ALL KINDS OF

Cooking and Heating Stoves of the most Improved makes, Stamped, Plain and Japanned Tinware, Planished and Enameled Hollow Ware, Fenders and Fire Irons, Tinners' Stock, Grignon Iron Pumps, Lamps, Burners and Wicks of all kinds, Tinned Iron Spouting and Forks, Copper Mills of all kinds, Planished-ware, Sad Irons, Fire Grates, Plating Machines, etc.

H. HALLER,

No. 55 Camp St., New Orleans.

Price lists mailed on application.

GRATEFUL COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

[illegible] Also makers of Epps's Chocolate for Invalids and Travelers.

AGENTS WANTED.

AGENTS WANTED for the Finally Reliable Machine [illegible] will sell for less money, and do better work than any other machine in the world. HEMMER and TUCKER complete in one machine. It will also run backwards, and do all kinds of work required in a family. Every machine warranted for five years. Agents wanted in every town and city where we have not a dealer. Special inducements to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 409 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

AGENTS WANTED for Dr. [illegible] Pulpit Cyclopedia and Bible Dictionary. Over 20,000 sold in 3 months. You [illegible] Address for Terms and Circulars, The Bible Houses of [illegible]

$777 A YEAR and expenses to agents. Outfit free. Address P. O. Vicker, Augusta, Maine.

AGENTS WANTED.

Brilliant, Rapid Selling Articles. Sample free. Address, with stamp, [illegible]

PRICES CURRENT.

REVISED AND CORRECTED WEEKLY.

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
New Orleans, Monday, Jan. 17, 1881.

Our readers should bear in mind that our quotations represent prices for round lots, and that in filling small orders higher prices must be paid.

SOUTHERN STAPLES.

	To-day.	Sat.
Cotton, ₱ lb.
Low ordinary	7¾	7¾
Ordinary	8¼	8
Good ordinary	8¾	9
Low middling	10⅜	10¼
Middling	11	11
Good middling	12⅛	12¼
Middling fair	13¼	13¼
Sales to-day	4,250 bales.
Receipts since our last	9,445 bales.
Receipts to this day	850,355 bales.
Sugar, ₱ lb.:
Fair	6 @	6¼
Fully fair	— —	6⅝
Prime	— —	6⅞
Choice	— —	— —
Yellow clarified	7⅛	7⅜
White clarified	8	8¼
Powdered	— —	— —
Cubified	— —	— —
Molasses, in bbls. ₱ gallon
Common	33	35
Fair	35	36
Prime	39	41
Choice		46
Rice, Louisiana ₱ lb.
Common	4	4¼
Fair		5¼
Prime		6c
Choice	6¼	— —

GROCERIES.

Butter, ₱ lb.
Western	12	22
New York	17	21
Coffee, ₱ lb.
Rio, ordinary	11c	11¼
Rio, fair	14	13¾
Rio, prime	14	14¼
Cheese, ₱ lb.
Western factory	— —	— —
English	15	16
Candles, ₱ lb.:
Sperm candles	— —	12¼
Corn Meal, ₱ bbl.
Choice (Kiln)	3 30	3 25
Flour, ₱ bbl.:
Superfine	3 50	3 50
AX	4 25	4 50
XXX	4 75	5 00
Choice XXX	— —	— —
Choice family	— —	— —
Fish:
Mackerel, No. 1, in bbls	— —	8 00
Half barrels	— —	4 50
Kits	— —	2 25
Mackerel, No. 2, in bbls	— —	6 50
Half bbls	— —	3 50
Kits	— —	85
Mackerel, No. 3, in bbls	5 50	6 75
Half bbls	3 00	3 70
Kits	75	— —
Codfish, ₱ lb.	5c	5c
Herring, ₱ box	30	35
Oils, ₱ gallon:
Linseed, in cases	55	55
Linseed, in bbls	49	50
Sperm, raw	85	90
Linseed, boiled	58	63
Cotton seed	35	40
Lard	75	80
Soap, ₱ box:
Magnolia	— —	1 95
Olive	— —	2 40
Palm	— —	1 80
Castile	— —	2 40
Soda, ₱ lb.	— —	— —
Starch, ₱ lb.	3½	3½
Salt, ₱ sack:
Coarse	1 02½	1 05
Fine	1 40	1 45

GRAIN AND FEED.

Corn, in sacks, ₱ bushel
Yellow	— —	63
White	— —	64
Mixed	— —	64
Oats, ₱ bushel
Western	— —	55
Red rust-proof	60	65
Bran, ₱ 20 lbs.
Prime	— —	1 05
Hay, ₱ ton
Prime	— —	26 00
Choice	— —	27 00
Cow Peas, ₱ bushel
Mixed	— —	— —
Clear	— —	— —

PROVISIONS.

Bacon, ₱ lb.
Breakfast	9	10
Shoulders	6½	5¾
Sides, clear rib	8	8¾
Sides, clear	8¼	8
Hams, sugar cured	9	10¾
Mess Pork, ₱ bbl	12 87½	13 75
Dry Salt Meat, ₱ lb.
Long Clears	— —	7
Clear sides	— —	7½
Shoulders	4¾	5
Lard, ₱ lb.
Choice leaf	9¾	10
Choice to prime	8½	9¼

ESCULENTS.

Potatoes, ₱ bbl.
Irish	2 65	3 00
Sweet	— —	— —
Onions, ₱ bbl	— —	4 25
Apples, ₱ bbl	2 50	3 00
Cabbages, ₱ doz.	— —	— —
Sour Krout, ₱ bbl	— —	12 00

BALING STUFFS.

Bagging, ₱ yard:
Jute	— —	— —
Jute	— —	— —
Baling Twine, ₱ lb	— —	17
Ties, ₱ bundle:
30 lbs and buckles	— —	1 85

SUNDRIES.

Poultry, ₱ dozen:
Grown chickens	4 00	4 50
Young do	3 00	3 00
Ducks	3 00	3 00
Geese	3 00	3 00
Turkeys	— —	12 00
Eggs, ₱ dozen
Western	30	35
Southern	— —	30
Honey:
Strained, ₱ gallon	— —	— —
Comb, ₱ lb.	— —	— —
Pecans, ₱ lb.:
Unshelled	— —	16
Shelled	— —	— —
Oranges:
Louisiana, ₱ bbl	— —	5 00
Havana, ₱ box	— —	— —
Wool, ₱ lb.:
Louisiana	— —	28
Texas	— —	— —
Feathers, ₱ lb.
Geese	— —	— —
Hides, ₱ lb.:
Green, salted	— —	8
Dry salted	— —	11
Dry flint	— —	13
Ox Horns, each	— —	6
Tallow, ₱ lb	6c	6
Cotton Seed, ₱ ton:
Hulls	— —	10 00
Meal	— —	26 00
Oil cake	— —	24 00
Cooperage, ₱ bbl:
Sugar shook	— —	3 50
Molasses barrels	1 40	1 60
Half barrels	— —	1 10
Kegs	— —	55
Oak Staves, per 1,000:
Kegs	— —	— —
Bbls	— —	— —
Extra clear	180 00	190 00
Extra barrel	150 00	175 00
Extra pipe	160 00	175 00
Tobacco:
Low grade	— —	4c
Medium	— —	— —
Good to fine	— —	— —
Fine leaf	6½	6½
Medium	6½	7
Good	7½	8
Fine	7½	8
Selections	10	12

—Miss Anna E. Dickinson still keeps at play-writing. The title of her last work is "A Test of Honor."

AN OLD LADY writes: "I am sixty-five years old and was feeble and nervous all the time, when I bought a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic. I have used a little more than one bottle and feel as well as at thirty, and am sure that hundreds need just such a medicine." See advertisement.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE should be used when you are suffering from mental or physical exhaustion.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Senator Logan, in the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, this morning called up his bill to place Gen. Grant on the retired list, with the rank and full pay of General of the army. After a warm discussion, further consideration of the subject was postponed until the next meeting.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The population of Louisiana, according to the schedules returned to the census office by the enumerators, is as follows: Males 368,911, females 471,352; native born 886,119, foreign born 54,144; white 455,063, colored 485,200.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The House Committee on Military Affairs to-day agreed to a favorable report upon the bill to place Gen. Ord upon the retired list, with the rank of Major General, and Gen. Johnston was instructed to report the bill to the House and ask its passage.

NASHVILLE, Jan. 12.—Both branches of the Legislature met in joint convention in the House to-day and counted the vote for Governor, who stood as follows: Hawkins, Republican, 103,961; Wright, State Credit Democrat, 78,781; Edwards, Greenbackers, 3159. Total vote cast 243,389. The Presidential vote stands: Hancock 128,191, Garfield 107,677, Weaver 5010, Dow 13.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The House Committee on Railways and Canals agreed to-day to report favorably to the House bill making an appropriation to complete the Charenton Canal in the parish of St. Mary, Louisiana, fixing the amount to be expended at $25,000.

The House Agricultural Committee unanimously agreed to-day to ask suspension of the rules to take from the calendar and put upon its passage the bill to make the Agricultural Department an independent department and its head a Cabinet Officer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The Senate Committee on Railroads to-day instructed Chairman Lamar to prepare and report a bill granting the right of way through the Fort Bliss, Texas, Military Reservation to the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe and Southern New Mexico Railroads.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The House Committee on Military Affairs to-day, by a vote of six to three, instructed Representative Sparks to make an adverse report to the House on the bill to place Gen. Grant upon the retired list with the rank and pay of general.

Representative McCook will present a minority report.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—The committee appointed by the World's Fair Commission, called upon Gen. Grant to-day, and tendered him the office of President of the World's Fair, to be held here in 1883. Gen. Grant accepted the position, but said that owing to prior engagements, he would not be able to give personal attention to its duties at present.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The funding bill was nearly perfected to-day by the House, and by Tuesday will probably go to the Senate. It provides for the issue of $100,000,000 of three per cent. bonds, payable at the option of the Government in five or ten years, and also for the issue of $300,000,000 three per cent. certificates in denominations as low as ten dollars, payable at the option of the Government in one or ten years.

An amendment was adopted to-day that the Secretary of the Territory shall apply fifty millions of coin now in the Treasury to the redemption of five and six per cent. bonds to that amount, and shall thereafter apply all the surplus in the Treasury to the redemption of the outstanding debt. This is intended as a substitute to the Sanford amendment, which was adopted in Committee of the Whole, but which will probably be stricken out in the House.

Under the amendment adopted to-day the Secretary of the Treasury would use gold coin to pay these bonds.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The Republicans are playing for an extra session, at both ends of the Capitol, and they have the power to obtain their object. They want to secure the House and Senate offices.

At a Senate Republican caucus to-day it was resolved to oppose the resolution instructing Kellogg by filibustering methods, and it is not improbable the same method may be employed to defeat the new apportionment bill in the Senate and the electoral count joint resolution in the House.

If the Democrats were firm they could get a vote on the Kellogg case by sitting it out, but the vote to-day against Sansbury's motion to lay aside prior orders and take up the Kellogg case is generally considered as an indication that Kellogg will retain his seat.

Senators Thurman, Pendleton, Whyte, Groome, Lamar, Voorhees, Bayard and Butler voted against laying aside the Holliday case. One or two of these Senators are known to favor Kellogg's expulsion, but also to care a great deal about Holliday's case, but most of them are not at all interested in Ben Holliday, and their vote to-day proves that they are either disposed to uphold Kellogg's title or are really unprepared by vote on the case.

The vote was not absolutely a test vote, but is a strong indication.

As soon as the Holliday case is disposed of, the Kellogg case will be pressed to a vote.

FOREIGN.

PANAMA, Jan. 1.—Three Chilian divisions are on the Peruvian side, and advancing on Pajnal Lima. The first and second divisions landed at Pisco, and marched northward, ravaging the country as they passed. The third division landed at Curayaco, and took Lima at the point of the bayonet, dislodging the Peruvians. The division is estimated at 9000.

DUBLIN, Jan. 13.—A threatened disturbance at Drumrish has been averted. The parish priest addressed the people, whereupon some had aside their weapons. The magistrates read the riot act and the police forced back the crowd with their bayonets. The cavalry was ordered up and processes were served without further difficulty.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 13.—The Grand Duke Michael telegraphs as follows relative to Gen. Skobeleff's investment of Geok Tepe: "On the morning of the 4th inst. the first Russian parallel was opened at 800 paces from the chief fortifications. The fighting was most desperate and sanguinary. The Russians were victorious, but Gen. Petrusspwich, three majors and 19 men were killed, and 3 officers and 45 men were wounded. The Turkomans, who were reinforced by 7 or 8 picked men from Mery, lost 600 killed in the engagement with the Russian right wing alone. This wing was commanded by Gen. Petrusspwich. The Russians behaved gallantly, and were splendidly handled. It is intended, between the 5th and 9th insts., to reinforce the first parallel and strengthen the works.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—A Berlin dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company says: The anti-Semitic petition to be presented to the Reichstag has already received 40,000 signatures. The petition will be presented to the Prince about the middle of March.

A dispatch from Berlin to the Times says: The anti-Jewish agitation is spreading in the provinces. It has extended to Saxony, Bavaria, Leipsig and Breslau.

MANCHESTER, Jan. 15.—An attempt has been made, it is believed by Fenians, to blow up the Armory of the Infantry Barracks, at Salford, where the rifles of the volunteers were deposited. A meat store near the armory was blown to atoms. The explosion is believed to have been effected with dynamite, which was smuggled into the barracks by some one having business with the regiment.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—A dispatch from Berlin says: The sum of 50,000 marks has already been subscribed towards the founding of an anti-Jewish newspaper, the majority of the Berlin journals being decidedly against anti-semitic movement.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—M. Trinquet, returned Communist, and three others Rochefort candidates were defeated on second ballot on the supplementary municipal elections yesterday. The Reactionaries only carried one seat.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—A dispatch from Durban, dated, to-day, says: It is rumored that the British troops made two sorties from Pretoria and were both times repulsed by the Boers.

The Chinese Treaty.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The text of the Chinese treaty has not yet been made public, but there is good authority for stating that the following are its principal provisions:

1. The Emperor of China consents that whenever in the judgment of the United States, the immigration to this country for residence of Chinese labor injures, or threatens to injure the interests of the country, our government may restrict and suspend such immigration.

2. The treaty does not provide for an absolute prohibition of the immigration, but is understood to be couched in more courteous terms, so as not to offend the Chinese government. Practically, however, the power to suspend immigration is left with the United States.

3. It is also understood that the treaty will contain the stipulations that the power to suspend immigration shall not extend to the Chinese coming to this country for the purpose of travel, or for curiosity, or education, or trade, and it especially excludes tourists, merchants, teachers and students.

4. The treaty reiterates in some stringent form a guarantee or protection for Chinese now in this country.

5. The commercial treaty forbids any discriminating duties on vessels and commerce of the Chinese, and puts into effect the present statute as expressed by the President's proclamation.

6. The immigration treaty does not abolish, but supplements the Burlingame treaty.

7. There are no obstacles placed in the way of commerce or travel. The restrictions go solely to the importation of Chinese laborers or coolies.—Chicago Tribune.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The District Stewards for Williamsburg District, Mississippi Conference will meet at Williamsburg, Saturday, February 5, 18[illegible]. Ferriel, Columbia, Rev. Stephens, Augustus L. R. Welsh, Stafford Creek, and J. Wetherby are having stewards. I have not learned the others yet. Brethren please attend. My address is Williamsburg, Covington county, Miss. H. A. LITTLE, P. E.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

UNION SPRINGS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Greenville station	Jan.	1, 2
Greenville circuit, at Oak Grove		8, 9
Fort Deposit circuit, at Leighacher		15, 16
Oaky Streak circuit, at Midway		22, 23
Rutledge circuit, at Rutledge		29, 30
Rocky Mount circuit, at Rocky Mount	Feb.	5, 6
Union Springs station		12, 13
Troy station		19, 20
Pine Level circuit, at Hill's Chapel		22,
Hayneville circuit, at Hill's Chapel
Bridgeridge circuit, at Clay Hill
Mount Meigs circuit, at Mount Meigs	Mar.	5, 6
Union circuit, at Mount Hilliard		12, 13

J. MCLELAND, P. E.

MONTGOMERY DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Auburn station	Dec.	25, 26
Tallassee station	Jan.	1, 2
Hurtsville circuit, at ———		3, 4
Elbert circuit, at Calvary		15, 16
Crawford circuit, at Crawford		22, 23
Tuskegee circuit, at Union Valley		29, 30
Salem circuit, at Salem	Feb.	5, 6
Loachapoka circuit, at Notasulga		12, 13
Tuskegee station		19, 20
Opelika station		26, 27
Franklin mission, at Opelika	Mar.	4
Montgomery station		5, 6
Tallapoosa circuit, at Trauna Chapel		7, 14

The District Stewards will meet at the District parsonage in Auburn, February 6, at eleven o'clock A. M., at which meeting a full meeting is very much desired.

T. C. MANGUM, P. E.

MOBILE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

St. Paul	Jan.	1, 2
Whistler		8, 9
St. Francis Street		15, 16
Dauphin Street		22, 23
Eastern Shore, at Bay Minette		29, 30
Citronelle, at Mariville	Feb.	5, 6
Toulminville, at Four-Mile Post		12, 13
Grand Bay, at Grand Bay		19, 20
St. Stephens, at New Hope		26, 27
Bladon Springs, at Bladon Springs	Mar.	5, 6
Okatuppa, at Bethel		12, 13
Suggsville, at Suggsville		19, 20
Grove Hill, at Mt. Zion		26, 27

W. E. HUNT, P. E.

SELMA DISTRICT.—FIRST ROUND.

Clinton circuit	Jan.	1, 2
Randolph Hill		3
Choctaw Corner		8, 9
Lower Peach Tree		12
East Selma		15, 16
Brush Creek		21, 22
Marion		22, 23
Putnam town Station		29, 30
Uniontown circuit	Feb.	1
Orrville		5, 6
McKinley, at Bethlehem		12, 13
Summerfield		19, 20
Spring Hill		26, 27
Perryville	Mar.	5, 6
Cahaba mission, at Ivy Chapel		7

[illegible] District Stewards meet at Selma, Tuesday March 15, 18[illegible].

W. A. MCARTY, P. E.

GREENSBORO DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Havana circuit, at Havana	Jan.	1, 2
Forkland circuit, at Salem		22, 23
Livingstone and Eutaw, at Livingstone		29, 30
Demopolis, at Demopolis	Feb.	5, 6
Forkland circuit, at Forkland		12, 13
Gainesville circuit, at Gainesville		19, 20
Belmont circuit, at Wesley Chapel		26, 27
Cedar Grove, at York	Mar.	5, 6
Eastern circuit, at Cole's Chapel		12, 13
Butler circuit	Wednesday,	16
Chickasaw circuit, at Talley's		19, 20

H. CHEEHART, P. E.

MARIANA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Geneva circuit, at Geneva	Jan.	15, 16
Marianna station, at Marianna		22, 23
Cottondale mission, at Cherry Pond		29, 30
Calhoun mission, at Shady Grove	Feb.	5, 6
Big Creek circuit, at Bowlton		12, 13
Greenwood circuit, at Mt. Zion		19, 20
Hopewell mission, at New Hudson		26, 27
Campbellton station	Mar.	4
Bellview's Valley circuit, at Moss Hill		12, 13
Freeport and Walton, at Freeport		19, 20

The District Stewards will please meet at Campbellton, Jackson county, Fla., January 8.

Brethren please be punctual, as it is important that the whole work should be fully represented.

A. J. COLEMAN, P. E.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

ALEXANDRIA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Bayou Boeuf and Evergreen	Jan.	15, 16
Alexandria and Pineville		22, 23
Rapides		29, 30
Jena	Feb.	5, 6
Castor	Tuesday	8
Columbia		12, 13
Winnfield		19, 20
Harrisonburg and Trinity		26, 27
Shelly Island	Mar.	5, 6
Little River		12, 13
Carlile	Thursday	17
Spring Creek		19, 20
Sunsport		26, 27
Avoyelles French mission	Apr.	2, 3

F. G. ROCUET, P. E.

HOMER DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Homer, at Homer	Jan.	8, 9
Tulip, at Salem		15, 16
Sparta, at Sparta		22, 23
Vernon, at Douglass	Feb.	5, 6
Indian Village, at Indian Village		12, 13
Rochester, at Rochester		19, 20
Haynesville, at Haynesville		26, 27
Minden, at Minden	Mar.	5, 6
Arcadia		12, 13
Downsville		19, 20
Farmerville, at Shiloh		26, 27
Webster, at Andrew Chapel	Apr.	2, 3

District Stewards will meet at Tulip, January 29-30. Preaching on each day. R. W. Greer, Homer, B. F. Bird, Tulip, Lovick Wynn, Meridian, C. T. Wynn, Haynesville, E. L. Holland, Vernon, W. P. Kimball, Webster, — Norton, Arcadia. The Stewards from Sparta, Farmerville, Downsville, Indian Village and Rochester, together with the brethren named, will please meet by the above time and place.

A. V. PARKER, P. E.

SHREVEPORT DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Logansport mission, at Reynolds's H.	Jan.	8, 9
Caddo circuit		15, 16
South Bossier, at Bellevue		22, 23
North Bossier and Red River		29, 30
Mooringsport	Feb.	5, 6
Shreveport		12, 13
Mansfield		19, 20
Coushatta, at Coushatta		26, 27
Springville, at Springville	Mar.	5, 6
Pleasant Hill		12, 13
Many, at Negreto		19, 20
Anacoco, at Holly Grove		26, 27
Natchitoches circuit, at New Hope	Apr.	4
Natchitoches station		10, 11

District Stewards meeting at Shreveport, February 22, 18[illegible].

J. O. MCLINDON, P. E.

NEW ORLEANS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Marigny street	Jan.	25
Algiers		30
Louisiana Avenue	Feb.	6
Lafayette		13
Phillippine and Cross Town		20
Felicity street		27
Baton Rouge	Mar.	5
Carondelet street		13
St. Charles Avenue		20

ASSESSMENTS FOR NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT, 1881.

The District Stewards met at the Carondelet street Church, New Orleans, January 11, and made the following appointments and assessments:

	Education.	Presiding Elder.
Carondelet street	$100	$100
Felicity street	75	75
St. Charles Avenue	50	50
Louisiana Avenue	25	25
Morgan street	10	10
Algiers	10	10
Baton Rouge	15	30
Phillippine and Cross Town	5	10
Lafourche	10	10
	$300	$300

J. W. ADAMS, Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

JACKSON DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Hinds mission, at Lane's	Jan.	1
Canton		8, 9
Sharon, at Long Pine		15, 16
Thompsonville, at Long Pine		22, 23
Madison		29, 30
Soule Chapel		30
Edwards	Feb.	5
Dalton		12, 13
Jackson		19, 20
Brandon		26, 27
McCarmont	Mar.	5, 6
Florida's Chapel		12, 13
Silver Creek		19, 20
Lodi		26, 27
Yazoo City		27

The District Stewards will please meet at the parsonage in Canton, at 10 A. M., on Tuesday, January 25.

W. L. MCSWEEN, P. E.

BROOKHAVEN DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Brookhaven and Wesson, at Brookhaven	Dec.	25, 26
Crystal Springs station	Jan.	1
Smithland and McComb, at McComb		8
Hazlehurst station		15, 16
Brandywine, at Reliedeth		22, 23
Magnolia, at Magnolia		29, 30
Adams's Bogue Chitto, at Bethel	Feb.	5, 6
Scotland, at New Hope		12, 13
Leatherwood, at Bahala		19, 20
Spring Ridge, at Byram		26, 27
Bayou Pierre, at Union Chapel	Mar.	5, 6
Georgetown, at Bellesda		12, 13

H. H. JOHNSON, P. E.

WOODVILLE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Jackson station	Jan.	1, 2
Clinton station		8, 9
Minne City, at Minne City		15, 16
Pipkins and Port Hudson, at Pipkins		22, 23
Williams at Williams		29, 30
Bayou Sara, at New Hope	Feb.	5, 6
St. Helena, at Pine Grove		12, 13
Wilkinson, at Bethel		19, 20
Woodville station		26, 27
North Wilkinson, at Hopewell	Mar.	4
Amite, at Liberty		12, 13
Franklinton, at Franklinton		19, 20
East Feliciana, at Olive Branch		26, 27
East Baton Rouge, at Bella	Apr.	2, 3
Livingston, at Bayou Barbary		9, 10

J. W. COLLINS, P. E.

VICKSBURG DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Rolling Fork	Jan.	1, 2
Clover Hill		8, 9
Mt. Olivet, at Suburbia		15, 16
Sunflower mission, at Sunflower		15, 16
Warren, at Bovina		22, 23
Vicksburg		29, 30
Port Gibson	Feb.	5, 6
Martin		12, 13
Rocky Springs, at Rocky Springs		19, 20
Cayuga, at Utica		26, 20
Natchez		26, 27
Fayette, at Fayette	Mar.	5, 6
Kingston, at Kingston		12, 13
Meadville		19, 20

District Stewards meet in the Centenary Church, Vicksburg, January 29, at 10 A. M.

JOHN A. LILLY, P. E.

MERIDIAN DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Lauwood, at Lauwood	Jan.	1, 2
DeKalb, at DeKalb		8, 9
Lauderdale, at Lauderdale		15, 16
Meridian station		21
Marion, at Union Grove		22, 23
Rhinesville, at Old Scooba		29, 30
Enterprise, at Chunkey	Feb.	5, 6
Winchester mission		11
Waynesboro, at Waynesboro		12, 13
Paulding, at Paulding		19, 20
Wayne, at Liberty		26, 27
Enterprise and Quitman, at Enterprise	Mar.	5, 6
Shubuta, at Shubuta		12, 13
Shady Grove mission, at Shady Grove		19, 20

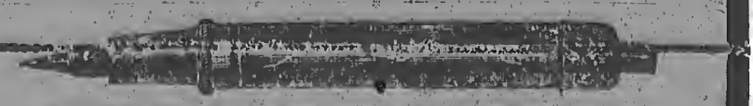
The District Stewards will meet at the Methodist Church in Meridian, January 30, at eleven o'clock.

J. A. MCNEIL, P. E.

BROOKHAVEN DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Brandon station	Jan.	8, 9
Fannin and Ludlow mission, at Liberty		15, 16
Marion circuit, at Richland		22, 23
Forest circuit, at Morton		29, 30
Philadelphia circuit, at Piney Grove	Feb.	5, 6
Beech Springs and Mt. Hebron, at Salem		12, 13
Carthage circuit, at Conway		19, 20
Walnut Grove circuit, at Walnut Grove		26, 27
Cato circuit, at Bethany	Mar.	5, 6
Trenton circuit, at Trenton		12, 13
Newton circuit, at Newton		19, 20
Lake circuit, at Lake		26, 27
Raleigh circuit, at Carr's Church	Apr.	2, 3

The District Stewards will meet at Morton, January 29, 1881, to fix the salary of Presiding Elder and apportion the collections ordered by the Conference.



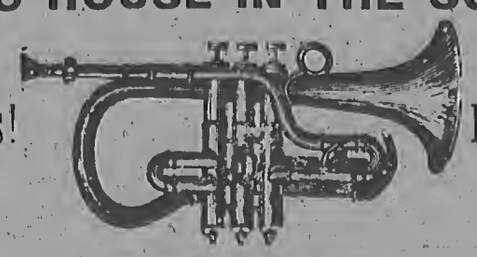
JAS. M. GANN, P. E.

A Pastor Made Happy.

I have been greatly troubled with my kidneys and liver over twenty years, and during that entire time I was never free from pain. My medical bills were enormous, and I visited both the Hot and White Springs, noted for the curative qualities of the water. I am happy to say I am now a well man; and entirely as the result of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. With such glorious results I am only too glad to testify regarding the remedy which has made me so happy.

(Rev. M. F. HARKLEE,
Coal Run Crossing, Arkansas.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE CROSS STYLOGRAFIC PEN OR FLUID PENCIL.

A pencil that writes with Ink; never needs sharpening and never wears out. Made of hard rubber, silver, gold, platinum and iridium. 14 kinds from $2 50 to $5 each. Call and see them or send for circular.

LATHROP & WILKINS, Agents for the South-west.
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

LEON ARLAUD
DRUGGIST,
Corner Customhouse and Dauphine sts., New Orleans.
PURE AND GENUINE DRUGS. GUARANTEED UNADULTERATED
Medicines, Perfumery, etc. Specialty of Bather's Eau de Cologne.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR
MUSIC HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

Easiest Terms! Lowest Prices

General Agency for the Celebrated
Steinway, Knabe, Pleyel, Weber, Fischer Pianos,
And the Popular Organs of
CLOUGH & WARREN AND PELOUBET, PELTON & CO.,
Everything in the Music line at rock bottom prices. Send for Illustrated catalogues.
LOUIS GRUNEWALD,
Grunewald Hall, New Orleans

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.

SOUTHERN DEPARTMENT:

OFFICE: CORNER CARONDELET AND GRAVIER STREETS.

The capital of the Company is TEN MILLION DOLLARS, to which there must be added the unlimited liability of the proprietors.

Fire assets, excluding the paid-up capital	$9,841,426 21
Paid-up capital	1,278,200 00
Total fire assets	$11,119,626 21
Fire liabilities	3,941,358 23
Making the surplus for policy-holders	$7,165,267 98

Losses by Chicago Fire in 1871 $3,239,021
Losses by Boston Fire in 1872 $1,129,729

Fire risks of all kinds respectfully solicited. The Board of Directors is fully empowered to adjust and pay all losses from this city, thus placing the Company on an even footing with the local companies chartered under the State laws.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:
J. F. SCHRODER, Esq., Chairman, of Leopold Christ & Co.
NEWTON BUCKNER, Esq., of Buckner & Co.
PERRY NUGENT, Esq., of Nugent & Lallande.
PETER ANDERSON, Esq., of Anderson and Stompoine.
HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary.
JULES P. ROUX, Assistant Resident Secretary.
NEW ORLEANS, October 26, 1880.

P. WERLEIN,
135 Canal Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

PIANOS,
ORGANS,
MUSIC
AND
Musical Instruments.

Please send for my catalogue and prices before buying from any one, North or South.

$25 TO $35.
STEWART'S NEW IMPROVED
SINGER
Sewing Machine.

Great Reduction in Prices!
Down with Monopolies!
Hard Times Demand Low Prices.

We warrant all our Machines to be NEW, LATEST-IMPROVED and PERFECT for

FIVE YEARS.

Our NEW MACHINE is supplied with a LOOSE BALANCE WHEEL, which is a great improvement over the old SINGER, as it enables the operator to wind the bobbin without running the machine, or removing the work from the needle. This is the most important improvement ever put on the Sewing Machine.

Also dealer in all first-class Machines, such as the
WHEELER & WILSON,
DOMESTIC,
GROVER & BAKER,
WILSON,
WEED, Etc.

Cotton, Silk, Flax, Oil and Needles for all kinds of Machines. Address

M. A. PECK,
General Sewing Machine Agent
153 CANAL STREET,
Next to Holmes' Dry Goods Store,
New Orleans.

B. J. MONTGOMERY. C. KIRS

R. M. & B. J.
MONTGOMERY
FURNITURE
AND
MIRROR EMPORIUM
Corner Camp and Poydras Sts.

After a sojourn of over six weeks among the Cities North, East and West, we open the Fall and Winter Trade with the largest and best selected stock of Furniture, French and German Plate Mirrors, Ornamental and Fancy Goods, Upholstery Goods, Cabinet Makers' Hardware ever brought to this city. We select our goods in person from the best factories and are determined not to be undersold. Our assortment, being too extensive and varied to be enumerated in detail, we request our customers and the general public to call and inspect for themselves.

On hand a full line of the celebrated Vienna Bent Wood Work and Thonet Wood Chairs.

Goods packed and delivered F. O. B.

THE
NEW HYMN BOOK
Everybody is Delighted with it.

Prepared by authorization of the General Conference of 1878, and especially adapted to revival and social meetings. The arrangement in the Standard Hymn-Book has been preserved, as well as the most common hymns in that work, so that it can be used in connection with it. It contains 341 hymns, besides benedictions and doxologies, etc., the order of public worship, baptismal service of Infants and adults, and form of reception of which members is strongly bound in cloth, stitched with wire, the low price at which it is supplied renders it peculiarly available for general use, in all choirs for congregational singing.

Single copy by mail, postpaid, twenty-five cents. To quantities of twenty-five or more, by express, twenty cents per copy. Address

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

FURNITURE.

W. G. TEBAULT
47 Royal Street,
desires to inform the public and his patrons that his Stock of Parlor Suits, Chamber Suits and Dining-Room Suits, both fine and medium, has never been as complete as at present, with prices lower than ever.

His stock of Furniture suitable for country trade is very large, and special inducements are offered to wholesale buyers.

Orders from the country will have especial care and prompt attention.

W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
New Orleans.

D. MERCIER & SONS,
Better Knowing us, Cheap Jobbing.
NO BRANCH STORE IN TOWN.
MEN'S, BOYS' AND YOUTH'S
CLOTHING
HATS, BOOTS, SHOES, FURNIS

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 27.—NO. 4. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JANUARY 27, 1881. WHOLE NO. 1338.

PUBLISHED FOR THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

G. T. LATHROP, Publisher.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, . . . $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorised Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.
REV. H. D. MOORE.
REV. O. R. BLUE, D. D.
REV. J. O. ANDREW.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. H. WATKINS, D. D.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. JOHN MATHEWS, D. D.
REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

THE LORD MAY COME TO-DAY.

Weary servant in the vineyard,
Largest soldier in the fray,
Cheer your heart, and upward glancing,
Think—the Lord may come to-day.

Weak and weary troubled mourner,
Fearing danger in the way,
Be no longer sleeful, caring,
For the Lord may come to-day.

Are you busy—all too busy,
With the things that fade away
Wealth, or fame, or gain or pleasure
Long them, He may come to-day.

Or an idler in the vineyard,
Ofttimes pass you on the way,
Wake, and live as in the world,
Lest the Lord should come to-day.

Is the blood upon your garments
Have you on his pure array
Naught can bide a godly shamer,
Than light He come to-day.

Are you waiting for the Master,
He is surely on his way
We can almost hear His footfall—
Blessed Jesus! come to-day.

London Christian.

All for Dignity.

Rev. Leonard Woolsey Bacon, writing in the New York Independent, on "What Shall be Done for General Grant's Dignity?" says:

I suppose that there were people who voted for Grant for president in 1868 because he "deserved" it, or was "entitled" to it, or it was "conferring an honor" on him. In every election, great and small, there are fools who give their votes for such reasons. But good citizens, worthy of the trust of citizenship, voted for him not for Grant's sake, but for the country's sake. We thought he had the qualities that were needed in the presidency—the simple straightforwardness; the devotion to public duty, without regard to personal interest; the faculty and the will to find the right man for the right place; the set resolution that would fight it through on a well-considered line of policy, in spite of opposition in front and back-door influence in the rear. We thought we knew our man, and were voting for things like these when we voted for Grant as president. We thought we were doing a good thing for the dignity not of Grant, but of the office, by putting a worthy man into it.

Well, there is no denying it, the country was partly disappointed. Without repeating Sumner's overstrained indictment against Grant's administration, we have to acknowledge that at the very points at which we most relied on him he failed us. The faculty of picking his subordinates, which had been conspicuous in the field, was conspicuously absent in the presidency. The dogged tenacity of purpose gave way on the one policy on which he committed himself most resolutely—the civil service reform. And the superiority to all self-seeking where was the most lamentable lack. No citizen since Washington refused a crown, no president since presidents began to be had, had so many and such noble opportunities for acts of personal dignity. So many occasions there were when, with the highest propriety, he might courteously have declined gifts from persons who might be candidates for official favor; but he missed these opportunities. The "Salary-Grab" Bill, in which Congress, for substance, offered Mr. Grant, then president, some $50,000, more or less, for himself, as a reward for his signing the bill that was to enrich them, might have been returned to the House in which it originated, with a sharp rebuke for the insult it implied. But it was not. He pocketed the insult and the cash.

It was part of the dignity of General Grant's character, as we first knew him, that he "did not like the show business." But, after eight years in the White House, he found that there was hardly anything else in the world that he liked so much, and straightway set out, like a Mrs. Jarley's wax figure, for a "tour among the crowned heads of Europe." The tour of the world to see and learn is a worthy thing for any one to undertake; but a tour to be seen is different. The spectacle of this brave, honest soldier, carried about like a circus, and engaged in squabbles about his place at table, under the idea that he was defending the honor of his country, is among the things which have impressed his particular friends with the conviction that something needs to be done for his dignity.

It is safe to say that the reason why the American people did not re-elect General Grant for president was that, on the whole, they did not like him for president and thought they could do better. It could not have been on account of the "flapdoodle" about "Cæsarism" that was fed out so profusely to their readers by the Herald and the Sun. I will not say that nobody believed this stuff; for I once met an honest and sensible man who declared, with every appearance of being in earnest, that he believed there was a deep-laid plan to subvert the republic and make Grant emperor. But this was an individual eccentricity. The reason against electing him, with most of us, was not that we could not have him for a third term if we wanted him; but that we did not want him. We wanted a better man. And the reason why he was not nominated was that the engineers of the machine had reason to suspect how many of us there are who are only waiting for so just an occasion as such a nomination as either Grant's or Blaine's would have been to give some practical expression of our disapproval by sacrificing the next election, if necessary, to the interests of the next generation.

But he was not nominated nor elected, and now behold his friends presenting this to the public, with a most grieved expression of countenance, as a very hard case, and pleading, with tears in their voice, to have something done for his dignity. The Cincinnatus business is played out, your correspondent thinks. The Cincinnati business is the only thing that suits these times; and, that failing, we must have an act of congress to meet the case.

I admit the need. Ex-president Grant is not in a dignified position. John Quincy Adams was. Mr. Polk was. Mr. Fillmore was. Mr. Hayes will be. But Mr. Grant is not. What can be done about it?

Giving him some more money and the equivalent of a peerage will not help the matter. This method was tried and tried out in the case of the Duke of Marlborough, and is a demonstrated failure. It served the dignity neither of the Duke nor of the nation.

The remedy lies with Mr. Grant himself. A few lines from his pen, in that terse and direct style which he knows how to use, would do something toward setting the matter right. For example:

To the Editor of the New York Times:

"SIR: I must beg you to desist from further advertising me in the character of a mendicant for the charities of the public. On my retirement from public office, I became entitled to all the immunities which belong to any private citizen, one of which ought to be that of managing my own private affairs, without intrusion. The implication which, doubtless, you do not intend that I have been thriftless while in office and am unable or ashamed to earn an honest living now, I beg leave to repudiate.

"Yours respectfully, U. S. G."

To the President of the United States:

"SIR: I have observed in your Annual Message a gratifying allusion to the public services that it has been my privilege to render to the country, with which you join a proposal to create a new office in the army for my honor and emolument. In point of honor, it seems to me that nothing is gained, after having held for eight years the supreme command, to accept an inferior title and station; and, in point of emolument, I submit to your attention that, during my own administration, in the face of much unfavorable comment, I signed a bill for the very large increase of my own salary, the argument for which was that it would make a sufficient provision for my present circumstances. It seems due to my own dignity, as well as to the interests of the army service, which are seriously involved in the matter, that the proposal should not be pressed.

"Yours respectfully, U. S. G."

If General Grant has any such letters as these in his portfolio, they might be published just now with the greatest advantage to his dignity.

Meeting of the Board of Missions.

The Board of Missions held a meeting on Wednesday and Thursday, January 12, 13.

The first session was mainly occupied with consideration of affairs of the Brazil Mission. Rev. J. J. Ransom was present, and made a brief statement of the work he had done in presenting the claims of this mission at various Annual Conferences, and in some of the principal charges of the church. His visit has undoubtedly been of service in giving a better view of the condition of that country and of the prospects of that mission. The project of building a church at Piracicaba, and supplying it with a preacher, was taken in hand by the Northwest Texas Conference, the preacher to be sustained by that Conference, and funds for the building to be furnished by others. The amount necessary has been subscribed, and most of it is in hand.

There were several candidates for foreign mission work, of whom the Board accepted Revs. J. W. Koger, of South Carolina Conference; James L. Kennedy, of Holston; H. C. Tucker, of Tennessee; and J. W. Grimes, of Memphis. These brethren will be assigned work, and sent to their posts as soon as practicable. Rev. J. W. Grimes goes to Mexican Central Mission, supported by the Memphis Conference.

Favorable reports were received from the work in the Denver Conference.

The Treasurer reported receipts to the amount of about $100,000. This will be enlarged before the financial year shall close, so that it may be reasonably expected that the whole amount appropriated will be provided for. The finances of the Board were never in better condition. It is a good indication of the increased interest of the Church.

This enlargement of our work requires more careful and thorough regulation of business details, and measures were taken to guard these at all points and prevent complications.

It was, on the whole, a meeting of great interest, the most important held since the last annual meeting. Some of the members from other sections of the Church were present.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

To the Preachers of the Alabama, North Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas Conferences.

DEAR BRETHREN: Believing that we ought to have a published History of Methodism in the large territory heretofore occupied by the Mississippi Conference, the Conference, by formal resolution, December, 1872, requested me to write "A Complete History of Methodism in the Mississippi Conference" for the Conference to have published. I presume I was selected for this work because, in addition to being brought up in the country, and a descendant from one of the earliest Methodist families, I had been a member of the Mississippi Conference without a break since 1824, and could more readily collect the materials for such a history than any other member then living. I betook myself to the task, and by the fall of 1876, I had completed manuscript enough for four volumes about the size of "McFerrin's Methodism in Tennessee," covering the time from 1799 to 1869. The first volume embraces the time from 1799 to 1817; the second from 1818 to 1830; the third from 1831 to 1854; and the fourth from 1852 to 1869. In writing this history, I have taken as much care and labor to write a true and full history of the origin and progress of Methodism in territories which formerly belonged to our Conference, up to the time they were set off in separate Conferences, as I have in writing the history of our own Conference. I give the history of Methodism in Alabama from about 1803 up to 1822; in North Mississippi from its first settlement by the white race up to 1840; in Louisiana, from early in this century, to 1847, and in Texas, from the first visits of Rev. Henry Stevenson, about 1824, to 1840, when the Texas Conference was set off. It will be borne in mind, that, in addition to all other available sources for correct information, I had the written Journal of the Mississippi Conference, as it had been from 1813, before me all the time. The materials of our history are original, rich, racy and rare, and, I believe our book will be read with much interest, and profit by all lovers of church history; and the Conferences above mentioned ought to patronize it liberally, because it will give them information about the origin and progress of Methodism in their own territory, which, in many instances, they can get nowhere else.

Our publication has been delayed solely for want of funds to make a cash advance, but Bro. McFerrin, our agent, after looking carefully into the matter, proposed to our late Conference, that if, in addition to some funds on hand, we would get five hundred subscribers who will agree to pay for the first volume as soon as it is placed in their hands, he will publish it immediately, and if it meets with a fair sale, he thinks we can realize enough to publish the second volume, and so on to the fourth. The Conference resolved to obtain the required subscribers, and requests that all who will subscribe for the book, or who will obtain subscribers, send their names and post-offices, plainly written, by mail, to Rev. J. A. B. Johns, secretary of our late Conference, Port Gibson, Miss., who will make out a fair copy and send it to our book agent as soon as he gets the five hundred. And now, dear brethren, what we request is that you help us in this matter of getting subscribers, that we may have our history published at an early day. We not only owe it to the memory of the sainted dead of former generations, but to ourselves and our posterity, to record what God has wrought since the first few young ministers came as missionaries to what was then a wilderness country.

The price of our history will be about from one dollar and twenty-five to one dollar and fifty cents per volume. The preachers for selling and remitting the money to the agent will be allowed the usual discount. Some of the preachers subscribe for a large number of copies, believing they can sell them to profit.

I have been asked several times, if I could not condense the work. I say emphatically that I cannot and do justice to the truth of God's dealings with us. I was careful to condense as much as I thought allowable when I was writing the work. Brethren, please let us hear from you soon.

J. G. JONES.

PORT GIBSON, MISS., January 15, 1881.

P. S.—Editors of church papers circulating within the Conferences named at the head of this article will confer a favor on the Mississippi Conference by giving the above one insertion.

J. G. J.

Form of Excommunication.

The subjoined extraordinary document was translated for the Advocate from the Courier des Etats Unis, of Paris, France, under date of Nov. 2, 1880, by a well-known citizen of Galveston, but of French parentage and education. The National gives the text of the form of Excommunication, such as is actually registered in the chancery of the Vatican. Heaven help the man who falls under the power of a church that pronounces such a curse on a mortal. It has not in it a trace of the spirit of Christ. It is as cruel as death, as pitiless as perdition:

"By the authority of God the all-powerful, the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost; and by the canons and by the fidity Immaculate Virgin Mary, mother of God and by all the celestial virtues, angel and archangels, thrones, dominions, powers, cherubims and seraphims; by all the holy patriarchs, prophets and evangelists, innocents, who in the sight of the divine Lamb alone are worthy to chant a new hymn, and also by the authority of the holy martyrs and holy confessors; and the female saints, and of all the other saints, together with all the elect of God:

"We excommunicate and anathematize this malefactor, who is named, the name of the person excommunicated, and we expel him out of the holy Church of God. Curse him! God the Father who has created man. Curse him! the Son of God, who has suffered for mankind. Curse him! the Holy Ghost who has regenerated in by the baptism. Curse him! the holy cross upon which Christ was nailed for our salvation, and who triumphed over his enemies. Curse him! the holy and eternal Virgin Mary, mother of God. Curse him! all the angels and archangels, principalities and powers, and the whole celestial militia. Curse him! the glorious phalanx of patriarchs and prophets. Curse him! St. John, the precursor who baptized Christ. Curse him! St. Peter, St. Paul and St. Andrew. Curse him! All the Apostles together, as well as the other disciples of Christ. Curse him! the four Evangelists whose preaching has converted the universe. Curse him! the holy and marvelous cohort of martyrs and confessors, who, by their good works have found grace before God. Curse him! the holy choir of Virgins, who, for the glory of Jesus Christ, have despised the vanities of this world. Curse him! all the saints who, from the beginning of the world to the end of centuries, are the loved of God. Curse him! Heaven and earth and all the holy things contained therein. Be he cursed, wherever he may be; in his house, in the country, on the highway, in the path, in the woods, in the water, and even if he enters the church.

Be he cursed! during his lifetime and at the hour of death. Cursed be he, in all his acts; when he eats or drinks; when he hungers or thirsts, or when he fasts; when he sleeps, slumbers or wakes; when he is seated or lies down; at work or at rest; when he is satisfying nature's needs, or in his voluptuous acts, and even when he loses his blood by wounds. Cursed be he! in all the faculties of his body. Cursed be he! in all that constitutes his being, internally and externally. Cursed be he! in his skull, in his temples, in his forehead, in his ears, in his eyebrows, in his eyes, in his cheeks, in his jaws, in his nose, in his large and small teeth, in his lips, in his throat, in his hands, in his fingers, in his breast, in his heart, in his stomach, in his entrails, in his back, in his groins, in his thighs, in his genital parts, in his hips, in his knees, in his legs, in his feet, in his toes, in his nails.

Cursed be he! in all the joints and articulation of his limbs! That from the top of his head to the plants of his feet, sickness gnaw his body!

May Christ, the Son of the living God, curse him with his whole power and with his whole majesty!

And may heaven and all the powers therein raise against him, to damn him, unless he repents and gives us all the desired satisfaction!

Amen, so be it; so be it, amen!—Texas Christian Advocate.

LIBERIA.—The pioneer visit to the west coast of Africa was made in 1818, by the missionary, Samuel J. Mills. From this first effort for the evangelization and civilization of this part of the globe, the republic of Liberia has grown. It was at first a colony formed by Americans for the reception of emancipated slaves, and to be an asylum for negroes re-captured by American cruisers under the law of 1819 for the suppression of the slave trade. In 1845 the colony was elevated into a distinct republic.

From the first it has sustained peculiar and intimate relations with the United States. Her political organization, originally modelled after ours, the United States has also furnished Liberia with systems of money, weights, measures, and with various social and civil institutions, and, like a big elder brother, has from the first exercised protectorate powers over this sister republic. The treaty with Liberia of 1862, stipulates that the United States shall not interfere between the aboriginal inhabitants and Liberia, unless solicited by the republic. Four years ago, our government, "solicited by the government of Liberia," did send a ship of war to assist in suppressing a native revolt.

Liberia proper has an area of 10,000 square miles and a population which, with that of the Kingdom of Medina, amounts to 1,500,000. The chief commercial products of the country are palm-oil, ginger, gum, coffee, dye-woods, sugar and ginger.

The Senegal and the Niger are the great water-ways that lead into the interior, and attract trade to that part of the west coast, of which Monrovia is the chief seaport. With a railroad to the Niger valley, Liberia would command a large share of the commerce that approaches Africa from the west. An English company have such a road in contemplation. The French have established commercial communication with the interior by way of the Senegal and Niger.

Both these powers—England and France—look with wishful eyes on this little republic and would gladly assume its protection. Liberia doubtless feels sufficiently protected already, and, at any rate, the United States, most likely, would not look complacently at the annexation of Liberia annexed to either of these, or any other foreign power.—African Repository.

A Catholic journal makes this statement that 10,000 students are at this time in the different Roman Catholic colleges in the United States. Will every Protestant parent pause and ponder that fact? The power of the Vatican is declining in Europe; the Bible is openly sold in the streets of Rome, France, Spain, Portugal and Austria are beginning to recognize the right of man to freedom of conscience and speech, while Protestant Christianity is planting itself alongside the venerable cathedrals built by that powerful hierarchy; yet while the unfettered gospel is thus spreading over Papal Europe, Catholicism is entrenching itself in Protestant America. With characteristic sagacity, the means the Catholic church employ are wisely adapted to the ends in view. She may accomplish little among the adult population of this land, but she seeks to appropriate the youth. Her children, coming from Ireland and Continental Europe, may accept the Bible offered by the Protestant churches, but if she can mould the minds of the coming generation, she will more than regain the ground she has lost. Of these 10,000 students in her colleges, many are from Protestant families. Of the hundreds of Protestant girls being educated in her convents, but few will leave their walls without the impress of Rome on their hearts. And yet, under the impression that their daughters are safer in a convent than with Christian educators of their own faith; or under the mistaken notion that they may secure equal educational advantages at less cost, Protestant parents and guardians commit their sons to the charge of the priests and their daughters to the care of the nuns, whose religious vows require them to leave the seal of the Vatican on the intellect and heart of each student. If their sons leave the church of their fathers, and if their daughters take the veil, who is to blame?—Texas Christian Advocate.

Catholic Methods.

In the Cascade Presbyterian appears a letter from a converted priest, exposing the secret ways of the Church of Rome, which we quote.

To the Right Rev. M. Heiss, D. D., Coadjutor of Milwaukee:

MY LORD: Born of Catholic parents in Canada in 1812, I was ordained priest in Marquette by the Right Rev. J. Mark. During several years of my priesthood I sincerely believed that the Church of Rome was the true Church of Christ. It is true that I had very often to witness a corruption which I may call inadmissible, in the priests and bishops of the Pope, but I succeeded to persuade myself that it was due more to the depravity that has flowed from the veins of Adam and Eve to their children, than to nature and inherent system of which I was an agent and the victim. I fancied myself that the Church of Rome might be holy and its ministers depraved, just as Judas was possessed by the devil, even in the company of Jesus Christ.

But, in the year 1875, I became pastor of the Cathedral of Marquette, and I began then to see everything in a higher point of view. It was when in that high position that my eyes began to plunge in that boundless horizon of duplicity, idolatry, hypocrisy and profound depravity in the subalterns, and incredible price and insolent tyranny in the bishops, which constitute the body of that Church. It is then that I began to hear, in the inner part of my soul, the voice which Saul of Tarsus heard: "Why persecutest thou Me?" Like the blind apostle, I was often prostrated to the ground by the cries which were almost day and night in my conscience, and I did not know what to do. It was from that time that it became evident that the Church of Rome could not be the true Church of Christ. Her incurable corruption, her diabolical hatred of all rights and liberties of man, her false miracles, her lying traditions were becoming more apparent every day; but, like Saul, I was blind, not knowing what to do or where to go to find the true Church of Christ.

At last, having in the good Providence of God, lived in the vicinity of Green Bay, I was the witness of such a corruption and degradation in the low clergy, and heartless tyranny in the bishops, that it became evident that the Church of Rome was an abyss of iniquity. However, there I did not know what to do or where to go, to find the truth. It is there that, by the mercy of God, I met the Rev. Mr. Desraches, of Detroit, who told me that the Rev. Mr. Chiniquy had opened a home and asylum for the priests who could no longer bear the chains of Rome. This came to me as a ray of light in the darkness of the night. Knowing that Mr. Chiniquy had been, likewise, a priest of Rome, my hope was that he would understand the anxieties and troubles of my mind. I have not been disappointed. In that beautiful and peaceful retreat of Ste. Anne, I have found what I wanted, the light of my path, the life of my soul.

Now, by the great mercy of God, I know and feel that Jesus alone is the only hope, the only Saviour and life of my soul. In order to follow Christ I give up my friends, and everything that is dear to me. I give up the priesthood of Rome, of that Church so great, so rich, so high in the eyes of the world, to take the cross and follow the Lamb whose blood is the pure, wholesome Words guide me here. Truly yours,

O. CONTOIS.

STE. ANNE DE KASKASKIA, Ill., Sept. 1, 1856.

Field Notes.

MOBILE, ALA., Jan. 21, 1881.

DEAR BRO: Rev. J. W. Landrith and his wife were at St. Paul's Methodist Church, and addressed the Sunday school, yesterday, January 23. We were much pleased to see and hear them. Their visit did good. Dr. Landrith preached for my people at 11 A. M., and Sister Landrith has an appointment for the Woman's Missionary Society, in connection with St. Paul's Church. She has already met the Societies of Franklin and St. Francis Street Churches, in the city. We had an excellent love-feast in my church January 2, and one in Franklin Street Methodist Episcopal Church, January 23. Bro. Ranson was with Bro. Andrews at St. Francis Street Church, and preached at 11 A. M.

C. R. WILLIAMSON.

INDIAN VILLAGE, LA., January 19, 1881. Severe cold, snow and rain have stopped almost all kinds of outdoor business for the past four weeks. The streams are constantly swollen, and the roads difficult of travel, so that many of the appointments can not be reached either by people or preacher; but we are trying still to keep the fires of Divine grace burning upon our hearts, though the clouds lower and the cold pinches. We expect to do what we can, and leave all in the hands of God.

R. T. PARISH.

GOODMAN, MISS., January 19, 1881. We are now in our parsonage, well pleased. Weather dark, rainy, and cold; people blue, health good, except colds and coughs. We have recently been favored with a visit from Rev. J. F. Butt, in company with his son, who is exhibiting his paintings of St. John's Visions in the Isle of Patmos. These paintings are truly grand, and no one might to let them pass without seeing them.

J. R. EVANS.

Rev. T. K. Faunt Le Roy, writing from Franklin, La., January 23, says: "I am pleased to state that things seem to be moving up here. Congregations large, and increasing, and the membership promise to help and sustain me; altogether the outlook is hopeful, and with God's help this work will come up all right. The family all comfortably housed and cared for in the parsonage; people kind and attentive. $52.50 Quarterage paid to date. Have had on account of the bad weather but one prayer-meeting, but I was told that was well attended, though I did see sitting room for more. Am at work for the ADVOCATE, and hope soon to send you a list of new subscribers.

John B. Eldredge, of Hartford, Conn., has given $25,000 to insure the success of a memorial hall at Hartford, which the Congregationalists of the State have had in hand for several years past. The hall and connected rooms are to be the business and literary headquarters of the Connecticut Congregationalists.

The late Sir Francis Lycett, of London, left a fortune of $1,250,000, bequeathing $125,000 to the Wesley Chapel Building Fund, of which he was the founder, and making it his residuary legatee after the death of his wife.

Mr. W. W. Corcoran, the Washington banker and philanthropist, has given away in all $8,000,000 in public benefactions, and $1,000,000 in private charities. His present wealth is estimated at $3,000,000.

Three towns or cities in Northwestern Ohio offer each over $20,000 bonus to the Presbyterian Toledo Synod for the establishment of a synodical academy.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 27, 1881.

THREESCORE AND TEN.

Threescore and ten! How the tide rolls on,
Nearing the limitless sea.
Bearing the youngest over life's flood
To boundless eternity.
On, through the childhood's sunny hours,
On, through youth with its golden flowers,
On through manhood's ripened powers,
Till age appears,
With its crown of years,
And the toil-worn mariner, sighing for rest,
Anchors at last in the port of the blessed.

Threescore and ten! How the rolling years
Are checkered with sunshine and shade!
The calm closed away by the pitiless storm,
Earth's joy into sorrow must fade,
Spring with its bloom and perfume spent,
Fruit-laden Summer quickly fled,
Autumn come with weary tread,
Bent with the load
Of treasured food,
And then stern Winter, with frosty breath
Throws over the fields the pall of death.

Threescore and ten! And if we shall reach
The bound to life that here is set,
How few of the comrades of early years
Around us will linger yet!
Father and mother, their journey is o'er,
Brothers and sisters, we greet them no more;
Our loved ones stand thronging the further shore
They beckon us on,
They point to the crown,
And with longing hearts they wait
To lead us through the pearly gate.

Threescore and ten! And the snows of years
Are resting upon that brow,
But, as backward we glance o'er the way we have trod,
Before God our Father we bow,
And joyous we bring Him our song of praise,
His mercies have cheered us through all our days,
And we fervently pray that life-seeing rays
Through love divine
May cloudless shine
Melting away in purer light
That illumines the land which knows no night.

Threescore and ten! Stand firm in thy lot
Faithful and true to the end,
Bending thine ear to catch every word
Of the message the Master shall send.
Wakeful thine eye, for far spent is the night
Burnished thine armor, thou soldier of light,
Ready to march, for the day star is bright
Bold on the fight
For truth and right
Thou a conqueror shalt stand
With they rolling blood-bought band.

Threescore and ten! And what shall we say
To measure the earthly strife?
How many sands are left in the glass,
Counting the years of life
One by one they steadily fall;
One by one till I have fallen all;
One by one till thy Lord shall call
Thy race is run,
Servant, well done,
Faithful in thy Lord's employ,
Enter now into thy joy.

New York Independent.

Injudicious Protestants.—No. 3.

In the last paper of this series, No. 2, the question of a divinely-revealed church was somewhat inquired into as it is set forth by Archbishop Whately. And it was held that a divine revelation, whether in the form of an organic corporation or written Scriptures, must be infallible. Whether we have such a revelation or not is another question. A formidable Protestant objection by some to church infallibility is that the history of the dogmas of the Romish church is, in many instances, inconsistent with the written New Testament, and it was promised that this question should be looked at a little.

It is claimed by Romanists that the divine church, being older than the divine New Testament writing, it must have the predominance, and by the church-making Protestants it is claimed that the written revelation must always govern. But reason for this I have not seen stated by any writer. It is difficult to see why divine inspiration, given to Mathew, Mark, Luke and the others to write the divine will, has superior authority to divine inspiration given to the apostles to administer a perpetual church government. There can be no superiority or inferiority as between different forms of divine revelation. Archbishop Whately's church, if there ever was such a thing divinely revealed, is of precisely equal authority and force with any other form of revealed truth. The decisions of the church are divinely authorized, just as the writings of Peter or James were divinely authorized.

The supposed discrepency, therefore, between the church and the New Testament must be merely imaginary, and cannot be real. It is possible for men to be mistaken in interpretation, exegesis, etc., but it is not possible for revelation to oppose revelation. A revealed church cannot oppose a revealed epistle. They are co-ordinate.

For instance: John was inspired and authorized to write a biographical outline of the Saviour, and he did write such a book. We are, therefore, obliged to presume that he wrote as directed. And, according to Whately, Smarius, and all other papal and Protestant church-makers, the apostles were inspired and authorized to organize and govern the church to the end of time. And, in like manner, we are obliged to presume the plan is being carried out undeviatingly, or otherwise we make the Saviour form a defective church plan—a plan which He is unable to execute.

The papal and Protestant church-makers are in harmony as to the revealed church. Smarius says, page 110: "This supposes and assumes that Christ established a church, but one church, and that church still exists."

"You find besides this Universal or Catholic Church smaller bodies, that call themselves Christian, though separated from the society of Roman Catholics in doctrine, sacraments and government, and yet agreeing with us in the belief that Christ established a society of followers called His or Christ's church"—page 112.

"Christ was the founder of an Institution, which He called His church, and which the world has continued to call the Christian church, or the church of Christ."

"He founded a church, or society of believers, perfect in all its parts, having all the conditions, all the essential constituents of a real, external, visible association, corporation or living organic body, with which, moreover, He promises to abide until the consummation of the world, and of which He was to be the Head and vital principal forevermore"—page 115.

"Every society must have laws, by which it is regulated; these laws must be administered. For that purpose there must be a government and officers; there must be a constitution, an executive and a judiciary. How can all these be found in an invisible church?"

"The idea of Christ in founding His church excludes, therefore, all self-constituted churches, all congregationalism, such as we find in our day"—page 129.

Such quotations could be multiplied by scores. The agreement throughout, even to the letter, oftentimes, is striking between Whately and Smarius. Indeed, all church-makers, papal or Protestant, advocate the same doctrine of church-making. The Roman Catholics resort to it for the purpose of showing their church to be a divinely established hierarchy. In this they are undoubtedly successful; it seems to me, if the church-making doctrine be true in fact. But for what purpose Protestant church-makers resort to the same argument I cannot imagine. I have never seen it stated, though I have looked for such a reason in several hundreds of them. See Ecclesia, and city of God.

The Rev. R. J. Willberforce, a well-known pervert to Rome, in his "Principles of Church Authority," in giving his views on the origin and nature of the church, on the first page of his book, begins the second paragraph thus: "Now that a paramount authority was possessed by our Lord Himself, and that He committed the like to His holy apostles is admitted, probably by all Christians."

This is the exact idea, and almost the exact language of Whately on that point. It is exactly the place where all High Church arguments do and must begin. A divine hierarchy can have no other beginning place. And so let the arguments of Milner, in his "End of Controversy," Bishop Spaulding's "Lectures," Bishop Lyns', "Trials of a Mind," Father Burke's "Lectures," or any Roman Catholic or other High Church arguments, be looked into, and it will be seen they begin, or assume as a starting point, that Jesus Christ organized the first church, and, as incumbents died, others succeeded. So that we have now, not only a church of the same religion as formerly, but, the identical organization which was divinely framed and officered, and with the same constitution of government.

Now, if such a "society" was so divinely framed, it has either resulted in a failure or it exists now, and, in the latter case, any other than that, in exact fact and form by regular descent, is an apostasy. If Christ has revealed to us an exact form of church government, with such and such functions, then be it so. If we have a revealed form of church government, be it so. We cannot change it.

On that question, whether Christ framed a church government or not, two things might be said:

1. The New Testament books were written at different times, from ten to thirty years thereafter, and they contain not the slightest allusion to such a transaction. A vitally important movement it must have been, and the New Testament writers seem entirely ignorant of it!

2. No Christian church or branch thereof ever did, in fact, recognize such a divine church-model. On the contrary, every church, Rome and all, have always framed their own church laws, and modified them from time to time at pleasure, conforming them to the then condition of things according to their judgment and sound discretion. Are either of these statements questionable?

R. ARNEY.

Galvanizing and Cramming vs. Teaching.

Three methods of "keeping school" obtain in this country: teaching, cramming and galvanizing. All right-thinking people prefer and adopt, as far as practicable, the system of teaching principles and their relations; fudging, however, from the mental dyspeptics and superficial graduates to be met with, the patrons of the cram and galvanizing theories are largely in the majority. Why is this? We answer that many are trying to teach what they have never learned, while others, striving for public favor, hurry their pupils through a course of instruction.

As to the first of these reasons, we will but make the prophecy that the time is coming soon, we hope, when to none but tried and approved teachers will the education of our children be intrusted. But, as we cannot make the same prophecy in regard to the second reason, we ask the indulgence of a few observations.

However listless teachers may seem to be, they are not slow "to discern the signs of the times," and the system that accords with public sentiment is the system they enthusiastically adopt. Who dares not do it? He that has the courage to stem the tide of popular feeling and prejudice, when his friend descends upon it, is a hero indeed.

But the real question is still back of this. It is this: "What gives rise to the sentiment that forces the pedagogue to become a grammar or galvanizer instead of a teacher?" The following four are, we think, the chief sources of this evil:

1. The parent is so anxious that his child should excel others. The infant must walk before its little limbs have sufficient strength to bear its weight. Not unfrequently when the child is stammering along in the Second Reader the parent wonders why his bright and precious little hopeful is not in the Fourth. A hint to this effect is given to the teacher, and the little prodigy is at once advanced to higher studies. Why not, if the doting father desires it? He gets just what he pays for. We were once organizing the classes of a school when a bright and pert little eight-year-old presented herself with an abstruse treatise on natural philosophy, saying: "Mamma wants me to study philosophy this session." We were rash enough to suggest in a note to her that Comstock's Philosophy is not a proper study for a child of tender age. Of course we lost a scholar.

2. And the pupils are so impatient to get on in their studies. The teacher must, of course, ponder to their whims. He knows better than to appeal to their parents. The children must have their way in this little matter. What must the teacher do in his extremity? They must go through the text-books, and stand a satisfactory examination. The teacher's skill is, therefore, brought into requisition in the class room, not, indeed, in imparting the facts and principles of the lessons, but in helping his pupils over the long, unstudied lessons in such a way as to impress them that, after all, they have a pretty fair knowledge of the books they pass over. And who would not be an expert in this business when it pays doubly. For he endears himself to his pupils, and makes them believe they are well instructed in what they are not. But the end is accomplished; the examination is satisfactory—to the pupils—and the teacher maintains his reputation.

3. Another source of this evil is that many parents send their children to school but a short time, and expect them to go through a four years' course in one year. The father enters his son, saying to the teacher: "Push him; for he can't go to school long. But I want him to go through; show him his best." The teacher is just the man for a quick job. He makes a trial of the boy's cramming capacity, and finds, to his relief, that his pupil is a good case. Poor boy! It had been better for him if his retentive faculty had been less tenacious. He is crammed with whole pages and chapters and volumes until he expands sufficiently to make a splendid show. The father is not only satisfied with his son's progress, but is astonished that so much mental pabulum could be consumed by so small a boy in so short a time. Many predict his future greatness, but, a mental dyspeptic, he lives for no good, and dies unknown and unregretted. And why should Mr. Pedagogue care about the future of the young man? He only did what the father requested and paid him to do.

4. The most prolific source of defective teaching is that many parents seek to accomplish their children at the expense of thorough teaching. They have not the time, and perhaps not the means, to receive a thorough and finished education. Nevertheless, they must do it, or make the world believe they have accomplished this wonderful task. The father sees the dilemma, and soliloquizes after this manner:

"What branches shall we neglect in the education of our daughter? There's arithmetic. Why should my daughter puzzle her head and waste her time with knotty problems. She will never teach or be an accountant. Then there is algebra and logic and chemistry and physiology, and a dozen other ologies. I don't see a particle of need for my daughter to study any of these things; but, if they must be in a liberal course of instruction, I must find a teacher who understands his business so well that he can carry her over these hard and useless studies without losing any time from the essential things of a polished education. Let me see what she must learn thoroughly. Composition and rhetoric! Yes; it's essential that she should have a brilliant essay for graduation. But this will consume a great deal of precious time. Can't she get through without this preparation? If she is to be galvanized as to the rest of the curriculum, why not have the womanliness to appear on the stage with a counterfeit essay? Yes, and I will find the teacher that will put up this job himself, or get some friend to do it. Well, what else is there? Why, music and art, of course. But these need not consume much time. Time is everything now. Why has not the methods of teaching improved so as to save time? My father traveled one hundred miles in three days; but I can go the same distance in three hours."

The teacher smiles assent, and says: "If there is no logic there as cents in this. I can galvanize to suit him or a T. The galvanized article looks just as well as the pure gold. It is allowed by all that I finish admirably, and this is the essential thing in this world of bogus and show. For he that can make the biggest show and blow the loudest is the greatest man."

H. M.

"Porcupine Christians."

Are there any professors of religion who deserve such a name? A recent writer speaks of "porcupine Christians," bristling all over with the sharp quills of prejudice, bigotry, censoriousness, exclusiveness, and all manner of unlovely things; and further says: "I have personally come in contact with more than one porcupine Christian." So have we. Sometimes, even when making the most friendly overtures, we have discovered bristling quills. Chronically combative, many people so habitually assume the offensive, that their fellow-Christians soon come to dread association with them, and their unamiable attitude excites fears which repel advances, and make it perilous to meet them. If approached, it must be very warily, or up fly their quills, and, to avoid harm, it is found prudent to keep them at a distance. They meet every opinion and measure with a sharp criticism, and dissent from every view and plan which they have not originated. While showing no disposition to affiliate with others, they are continually complaining of the want of love in the church, and, instead of showing any sympathy with their brethren in Christian work, they manage to embarrass and obstruct every benevolent enterprise with objections to plans or with their chronic carping.

These "porcupine Christians" are especially annoying to their pastors. We heard one, only recently, referring to a no uncommon experience among ministers, who, upon making a call, met with one of this class. Instead of a cordial welcome, such as a spiritual shepherd might expect from one of his fold, he came upon a "fretful porcupine," and, with the quills bristling up, he had to hear the sarcastic remark: "I supposed you had forgotten I was a member of the church." We were not surprised that, with the impression made by such a reception, this pastor was led to say that he did not "hanker" to make many or lengthy visits to such people. We have too many of these "porcupine Christians" in all our churches.—Baptist Weekly.

Mr. Moody's Text.

BY REV. T. L. CUYLER.

Turning over a volume of valuable autographs this evening, I came across the bold, manly signature of my old friend of many years, Dwight L. Moody. Underneath was his favorite text, which he calls up in an emergency—as Napoleon used to call up Ney at critical times, when he wanted some hard fighting done. The text is Isaiah l. 7: "For the Lord God will help me. Therefore shall I not be confounded; therefore have I set my face like a flint; and I know that I shall not be ashamed."

This passage has the ring of a bugle. Let every new beginner in the Christian life not only mark it in his Bible, but write it on his very heart. It will do two things for him; it will cheer him when he gets discouraged; it will rebuke him when he gets puffed up with self-confidence and pride. The idea that we ever get beyond the need of help is insane. The richest merchant becomes such by the help of his employees and his customers; the successful lawyer rises by the aid of his teachers and his clients. Nobody succeeds in secular affairs who is fool enough to care nothing for the good-will and assistance of his neighbors. If entire independence of others is folly in things secular, in religion all attempted independence of divine aid is self-destruction. I have watched some presumptuous young Christians whose idea was "I will do it," but very soon, like Bunyan's Pilgrim, when he undertook to "show off" before Faithful, they are flat on the ground. The secret of the failure of more than one young minister has been overweening self-confidence. By and by failure has chastised him into humility and reliance on God. He has discovered to his own sorrow that "he that trusteth his own heart is a fool."

This is a timely text to discouraged ministers; they are very abundant now-a-days. One is disheartened by the difficulty to gather and hold a congregation. Another by the lack of backing-up in his efforts to do good. Another is heart-sick over his thin, lifeless prayer meetings. Another mourns over the decline of conversion. Whatever the cause of discouragement, there is but one resource, and that is to draw on God. Our extremity is his opportunity. When a child of God honestly and fervently cries out, "Lord, I am weak; without Thee I can do nothing; pity my weakness, and give me help in trouble," then the worst is over. The daylight is at hand. These are especially trying times with Christ's ministers, for the very atmosphere is charged with skepticism and worldliness. The lesson we are all being taught is that in God is our only help. And I do not believe that any faithful servant of His ever came to Him in an humble, self-renouncing spirit with a sincere cry for help and was left unheard and unhelped.

"What shall I do to promote a revival in my cold church?" inquires some anxious pastor. We would answer: Preach the word boldly and thoroughly, and keep hold of Moody's text. I once heard a godly minister, whose soul was distressed over the condition of his church, and who was longing for the outpouring of the Spirit. He sent for one of his elders, and they besought God in wrestling prayer. Wrestling with their own unbelief, not with God. Presently one or two other elders came to the pastor's study and joined them. They imitated the pious negro in Virginia, who "laid hat down on de promises and prayed straight up." Into their own souls came a great blessing; soon it spread through the church, and there was such a work of quickening and conversion as that church had never known before. As soon as they cut loose from man, and risked everything on God, He helped came gloriously.

This favorite text of our great evangelist gives us the clue to all his successes in Europe and America. He has tethered himself to God, and never makes an arm of flesh his trust. His motto is "not I, but Christ, who liveth in me." What a contrast with a certain other evangelist, who once came into this neighborhood boasting that "a revival was as certain to follow his preaching as the sun to rise every morning!" The self-confident boaster soon withdrew amid the pity of some and the scoffs of others.

Here lies the real conflict of life with every one of us. Shall I trust myself or God? Shall I try to help myself and fail, or shall I seek help from the Almighty and All-loving and succeed? God says: "In Me is thy help." It comes in the shape of supernatural grace; it comes sometimes in unexpected ways and through unlooked for channels. Faith gets some sweet surprises. Even those who at John Mark's house were praying for Peter's deliverance from prison, were astonished when he stood outside their door knocking.

Moody's text suffuses three things. The first one is the believer's security. "The Lord * * * will help me; therefore shall I not be confounded." The Hebrew word signifies: I shall not be put to rout or discomfited. He who has the Lord Jesus on his side, and at his side, can never be defeated. That fortress has never been captured: "None shall pluck them out of My hands." As long as His help is bestowed I am safe.

The second result is steadfastness. "Therefore I have set my face like a flint." John Randolph coined the word "dough-face," and applied it to certain compromising politicians. But this text describes a fearless, steadfast dependent on God as flint-faced. He is not afraid of a bough or a lash, of a scroll or a scourge. If God be for him he cares not how many may be against him.

The third blessing wrapped up in this precious passage is serenity of soul. "I shall never be ashamed." Paul was a wonderfully calm and composed man. He never worried, never turned purple in the lips, and never apologized for his plain, heaven-sent truth. Neither should we. What a triple coat of mail this passage is; it gives us security, steadfastness and serenity of soul; it makes us safe, strong and peaceful. What a wealth of blessings! They are all assured to the man or woman who trusts God alone as their helper. This is a happy text for the new year. It is the motto for every young convert. It is a golden watch-word for the walls of our prayer-room. Therefore let us come boldly to the Throne of Grace for help in every hour of need. The bell-rope of the prayer of faith reaches up to the throne.—Christian Intelligencer.

THE RELIGIOUS PRESS IN THE FAMILY.—A well-arranged religious journal is designed to have something for every member of a household. Its lessons, drawn from the Scriptures, are not only for the instruction of children, but for those who, more advanced in age, find more and more the need of Christian faith and hope. For these, how many messages of comfort are brought every week, and what inspiration is furnished by the eloquent and stirring words of the great preachers and teachers of Christendom! It is because in these points the religious is so different from the secular newspaper—because it is confined to special interests and associations, to the religious, and moral, and social, and educational aspects of life and the world—that it meets a want which no other agency supplies. It is the silent preacher, the voiceless messenger of good, not only in populous cities, but on the prairie and in the forest, in thousands of scattered homes, which no pastor visits, and where even the intrepid circuit rider never comes. It carries comfort and cheer to the sick and aged and infirm. It strengthens the moral principle of men in business and women in society. It interests the young, and strengthens those who are in the prime of manhood or womanhood, and just entering upon the duties of life. In these manifold ways it is one of the potent instrumentalities of Christian influence. If this be so, of course, the wider its circulation the greater its influence and its power for good. At this season, when families are making their arrangements for the year to come, they may well consider whether in any other way they can bring so much sunshine into their homes as by securing the weekly visits of a good religious newspaper. It is the testimony of tens of thousands, that the influence of such a paper has done more to "educate the family," to furnish useful topics for thought, and to quicken the religious life, than any other influence, save only that of the preaching of the gospel.—New York Evangelist.

A clergyman, after preaching on the "Recognition of friends in heaven," was accosted by a hearer, who said: "I liked that sermon, and I now wish you would preach another on the recognizing of people in this world. I have been attending your church three years, and not five persons in the congregation have so much as bowed to me in all that time."

Marriages.

PEEBLES—HARPER.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Raymond, Mississippi, by Rev. W. L. C. Hamilton, at 7 P. M., January 6, 1881, Mr. Sterling W. Peebles, of New Iberia, La., and Miss Jennie Harper, daughter of Geo. W. Harper, Esq.

TERRY—WARD.—At the residence of the bride's father, Dr. T. M. Ward, December 22, by Rev. W. D. Dunlinick, Mr. Samuel D. Terry, of Leake county, to Miss Idelle Ward, of Madison county, Miss.

HALES—HALES.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Smith county, Miss., December 29, 1880, by Rev. J. H. Evans, Mr. B. J. Hales to Miss Almeda Hales. All of Smith county, Miss.

FREEMAN—EVERETT.—At the residence of the bride's step-mother, November 3, 1880, by Rev. A. D. Miller, Mr. A. M. Hannan to Miss Sarah E. C. Everett.

HAMILTON—BENTON.—At the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Cobb, in Beauregard, Miss., January 5, 1881, by Rev. R. H. Turner, Miss Delilah Hamilton, of Beauregard, to Dr. Joseph M. Benton, of Lauren county.

WHITE—PEELER.—At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Samuel Peeler, December 16, 1880, by Rev. Thomas W. Adams, Mr. J. V. White to Miss Fannie E. Peeler, all of Anguilla county, Miss.

RIMMER—PEELER.—At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Samuel Peeler, December 16, 1880, by Rev. Thomas W. Adams, Mr. Robert W. Rimmer to Miss Nina A. Peeler, all of Attala county, Miss.

GREGORY—HARRIS.—December 22, 1880, near Kosciusko, Attala county, Miss., by Rev. Thomas W. Adams, Mr. W. B. Gregory to Miss Kittie Harris.

SPIVEY—THOMSON.—At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Leroy P. Thomson, near Canton, Madison county, Miss., January 5, 1881, by Rev. Thomas W. Adams, Mr. C. Eugene Spivey to Miss Maggie P. Thomson.

TALLEY—MARTIN.—At the residence of Mrs. Martin, Dallas county, Ala., December 23, 1880 by Rev. F. A. Liles, Mr. W. C. Talley to Miss A. S. Martin.

COBERN—FULFORD.—At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Joseph Fulford, Dallas county, Ala., December 16, 1880, by Rev. F. A. Liles, Mr. L. F. Cobern to Miss M. E. Fulford.

TAVEL—MILLING.—At the residence of the bride's mother, November 3, 1880, by Rev. F. A. Liles, Mr. John Tavel to Miss Rebecca Milling; both of Dallas county, Ala.

HANEY—LEE.—At the residence of the bride's mother, in East Feliciana parish, La., December 22, 1880, by Rev. C. E. Reed, Hon. John P. Haney to Miss Virginia Lee.

ALLRED—WRIGHT.—At the residence of Dr. Applewhite, in Lincoln county, Miss., January 7, 1881, by Rev. W. W. Grafton, of the Presbyterian Church, Mr. Archie Allred, of Pinquemine, La., and Miss Alice Wright, of Lincoln county, Miss.

MCKETHEN—PORTIS.—At the residence of the bride's father, Col. J. H. Portis, Saggaville, Ala., January 5, 1881, by Rev. J. H. James, Mr. J. H. McKethen and Miss Lucy B. Portis.

ELLIS—AGEE.—At the residence of the bride's father, near Magnolia, Ala., January 12, 1881, by Rev. J. H. Simpson, Mr. J. C. Ellis, of Lindeo, and Miss M. L. Agee, of Magnolia.

BARBER—BUSHING.—At the residence of the bride's father, near Walnut Grove, Miss., January 5, 1881, by Rev. Irvin Miller, Mr. Isaiah Barber to Miss M. C. Bushing.

EDMONSON—ROBINSON.—At the residence of the bride's mother, December 23, 1880, by Rev. John A. Miller, Mr. J. H. Edmonson, of Minden, La., to Miss Maude V. Robinson, of Claiborne parish, La.

BUTLER—MONTZINGO.—At the residence of the bride's mother, January 13, 1881, by Rev. John A. Miller, Mr. G. C. Butler to Miss Nell Montzingo, all of Webster parish, La.

Obituaries.

JAMES E. BUNTYN was born in Abbeville District, S. C., in Georgia in January, 1830; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1852; was married to Miss M. M. Johnson, daughter of Judge David Johnson, of Henry county, Georgia, 1852; moved to Greenville, Alabama, in 1856, where he lived until the fall of 1865, when he moved to Mississippi, and died at his residence, near Bunlyn Springs Camp Ground, Neshoba county, May 25, 1880, in the seventy-fifth year of his age.

Father Buntyn was a man full of faith, and delighted in the service of God, and for almost a half century made a useful member of the church of his choice, filling faithfully the different stations of class leader, steward, etc., in the church.

He took great interest in camp meetings, having been converted at a camp meeting in Henry county, Ga., and was largely instrumental in building up the camp ground near his home, at which he was always a regular tenter, and at the camp meeting since his death he fondly occupied his tent.

In his death the church, as well as the community, sustains a great loss. But having lived faithful he was ready when the messenger came, and was often quite happy during his last illness, which lasted only nine days, this disease being pneumonia, and he frequently called his family around him and told them he was ready, and would soon be at rest.

Thus has passed away one of the pillars of the church; but our loss is his "eternal gain." He leaves a wife, the companion of his youth and old age, and six children, all grown, and most of them in the church—he had four children that preceded him to the glory world. His life was so consistent that none of his children ever heard him utter even a by word, thus setting before them an example worthy of imitation.

It was the pleasure of the writer to be intimately acquainted with him several years before his death. His house was always the preachers' home; and to be delighted in talking on the subject of religion. One of the most prominent traits of his character was his devotion to the church. He was an affectionate husband, a kind and loving father, and his death has cast a gloom over his household. His companion is now well-stricken in years, and will not have long to wait for the Master to summon her home, where she can rejoin with her sainted husband in the song of the redeemed.

Father Buntyn was also an honored member of the Masonic fraternity; and the largest procession in many years in this part of the State attended the funeral ceremonies, thus attesting the high position he occupied in Masonry. This writer preached a funeral discourse to his memory to the largest audience he has addressed on a similar occasion in a number of years.

Farewell, father dear! May we all meet you in heaven.

DAVID MILLER.

MRS. FANNIE REID died at her residence near Lake Charles, Calcasieu parish, La., October 25, 1880, aged thirty-seven years.

She was a native of Louisiana, and spent most of her life within its bounds. She was married twice, and at her death left the son of her first marriage and her second husband to weep over their bereavement. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in October, 1878, during a protracted meeting held, assisted by Revs. J. D. Harper and Patrick Gaynes. As she was brought up a Baptist, she could not accept Baptism by immersion, which received her into full membership, she came forward and with deep solemnity received the ordinance of baptism by affusion. Her Christian life, though brief, was consistent. In age she found the Lord made known Himself to her waiting soul, and claimed her as his disciple, and from that moment she increased in the knowledge and love of God.

On Monday, the twenty-fourth I visited her, and conversed with her about her future state and then prayed. After prayer she asked me to sing her a hymn. I sang, "Come thou fount of every blessing," to the tune of Coronation. While singing she broke out into a rapturous shout, praising God for the astounding grace.

Two brief years closed her religious pilgrimage and having crossed the Jordan of death she entered with the promised inheritance, a foretaste of which she enjoyed while on the way.

The lot of the Christian is a good one, and the end the reign thereof in peace.

J. J. GRIER.

MISS. SARAH ANDERSON was born in the State of South Carolina, on the fifteenth of July, 1801. When she was about three months old her parents moved to Kentucky, and from there to Marengo county, Alabama. In 1827 during the year she was married to Vincent Anderson, and moved with him to their last residence, near Romulus Station. In 1837, under the ministry of Rev. C. C. Calloway, she was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church at Liberty Chapel.

These are the prominent events in the life of our departed sister. Only the revelations of the last day can produce the many instances of goodness and the every-day proofs of ability to her Lord, with which her life was so full. Kindness, meekness, gentleness, patience, faithfulness and love were prominent traits in her character. Kind to the poor, hospitable to the stranger, merciful in her dealings with her servants, charitable almost to a fault. She adorns the holiness of those who live lives adorned by such graces. During the war her home was frequently almost a hospital, and no soldier was ever turned from her gate empty as long as she could provide for them. Her faith in God and love to the Saviour were abiding sources of peace and comfort to her soul.

For some years past she has been sorely afflicted, constantly expecting the messenger to come and bear her away. Just before her death, recovering from the state of unconsciousness into which she and many afflictions had brought her, she was left in the clearness of intelligent vision, and with the bright immortality just ahead, in rejoice exceedingly and also bidding all be faithful, and exclaiming, "How almost home! Oh, what a beautiful home!" she fell asleep in Jesus.

J. A. PETERS.

WILLIAM M. RICHARDSON was born December 16, 1841; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, July 6, 1873; and died at Grand Jurish, Louisiana, October 15, 1880.

Of his short life much might be said. As a man in all the various walks of life he was honest and reliable, and always to be trusted; as a friend he was constant and sincere; as a brother he was affectionate and kind; and as a son he was tender and dutiful, constantly evincing the deepest solicitude to relieve by every devotion to the wishes and welfare of his parents. He was a zealous member of the church, taking an active interest in all its plans for the good, and never wavering in the path of duty.

He was one of the most patient and happy sufferers the writer has ever known. Through six months of suffering, which he never murmured, but seemed to be always resigned to God's will. The last time I saw him he said: "I have not a cloud in it," and that he had constant peace. When dying he raised his eyes to heaven and exclaimed, "O, my Lord Jesus, come quickly!" He exhorted those near him to live for God, and said to his sorrowing friends: "Why weep for me? Don't you see I am happy?" Then with triumph beaming in his face he closed his eyes in death, and the rejoicing emancipated spirit took its flight.

J. D. HARPER.

MRS. NANCY ANN SISTRUNK was born in South Carolina August 29, 1790, and with her husband, Daniel Sistrunk, settled in Copiah county, near Crystal Springs, Mississippi, about forty-five years ago.

Sister Sistrunk's husband was a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, but lived but a few years after their settlement in Mississippi. Sister Sistrunk was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in early life, and also in the early life of the Methodist Church, and was therefore trained up under the old and strict regime of early Methodism, which she maintained until her death, which occurred at the residence of her daughter, on Pearl river, a few miles from the old homestead, January 3, 1881, in the ninety-first year of her age.

To say that she was a consistent member of the church does not express the true idea of her life. She was a joyful Christian. Frequently in her regular business of life, and sometimes in the silent watches of the night, she would shout aloud the praises of God. And as she approached the hour of her final dissolution, her prospects brightened for a glorious and happy eternity. The cross grew lighter as she neared the crown. In her last illness she was frequently heard singing her old time Methodist hymns and songs of alleluiahs, and finally sweetly fell asleep in the arms of Jesus.

E. T. PEARSON.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 27, 1881

MOTHER'S WORK.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Dear patient woman, o'er your children bending
To leave a good-night kiss on rosy lips,
Or list the simple prayers to God ascending,
Ere slumber veil them in its soft eclipse,
I wonder, do your dreams that seraphs love you;
And sometimes smooth the pathway for your feet;
That all their silvery pinions float above you,
When life is tangled and its cross roads meet?

So worn and tired, the whole long day so busy,
To laugh or weep, at times, you hardly know,
So many trifles make the poor brain dizzy,
So many errands call you to and fro;
Still garments stitching, wearing fairy stories,
And binding wounds, and hearing little cares,
Your hours pass, unheeded all the glories
Of that great world beyond your nursery stairs

One schoolmate's face has written words of beauty,
Her poems sing themselves into the heart.
Another's brush has magic; you have duty;
No time to spare for poetry or art,
But only time for training little fingers,
Yet teaching youthful spirits to be true;
You know not with what tact the unseen lingers,
With art alone to fill her watching eye.

And yet I think you'd rather keep the babies,
All of their heads grow heavy on your arm,
Than have the poet's fair enchanted may-bes,
The artist's visions, rich with dazzling charm.
Secure the troubles of the happy hours,
For even in weariness your soul is blest,
And in contentment all your being flowers
That years to fed a hushed and empty nest.

Christian Union.

Our Pulpit.

The Impulse of Missionary Zeal.

BY R. S. STORRS, D. D.

"Having the same spirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed, and therefore have I spoken; we believe, and therefore speak." II Corinth. iv. 13.

The apostle Paul quotes from a psalm written centuries before, in another tongue. It was fitting for him so to do, as those words represent an experience, as old as human society—a fact which has entered into human civilization everywhere. That obvious fact is this: he who has convictions of any truth which is important to others, is ever moved to make that truth known. Your knowledge of the sincerity of one's convictions is by the ardor of his proclamation. There is, doubtless, at the political hustings now going on in our land, a vigor of argument and appeal on either side; yet there are very many men fully believe in this or that policy, and from disinterested motives are ready, at their own charges, to enter the present canvass and push their cause in hope of victory. In the greater crisis—twenty-five years ago—when fundamental principles were at stake, men were led to espouse an unpopular reform, and to give toil and time, with pleasure and enthusiasm, to its promotion. So in the Reformation, men battled for liberty of conscience and for the central truth of justification by faith in Christ, because their own hearts were fired with zeal. They believed, and therefore they spoke. Pre-eminently in the early Church was this fact illustrated. Men of no wealth or social prominence were ready to carry the tidings of salvation to those who had not heard them, for their own souls had been stirred, and they could not but speak, for the truth was a fire in their bones. The dungeon and the stake did not deter; incessant opposition did not discourage; but, crossing turbulent seas and lonely wilderness, they went forth, impelled by the strong, repulsive force of truth within. They believed on Christ, the Son of God, Redeemer of the world; therefore they must give men this knowledge. This phenomenon is explained on no other hypothesis. This controlling belief was their impulse and power: this the cause of their victory.

So in the mediæval missions of the Papal Church. The ardor of the missionaries that went forth to Hind and Cataya, as well as to Goth and Teuton, was the ardor inspired by truth. Neither an austere climate nor violent opposition could quench their zeal. They civilized the north of Europe. The oldest Christian community on the globe is a missionary church: the fruit of those who went out under the inspiration of the cross of Christ. Emphatically is this true of American missions. From the barrenness of New England came the grand impulse of missions which has brought such rich fruitage in our land and over the world. Sweeter flowers are sometimes found along the sterile uplands than in the rich meadows below. From beneath some mighty rock, too vast to be removed from the field, the roots of a sapling sometimes spring, and throw out into the crevices of the stone its tenacious tendrils, driving on what of soil they may, perchance, find, till at length the tree rises in stateliness of trunk and wealth of verdure, an object of beauty and a source of fruitfulness. For our fathers, in their rockiness and indigence, to attempt what they did, might have seemed to an unbelieving mind, as preposterous for a child to attempt to lift a mountain or to stay the stars. Men may say that they were mistaken, but there is one fact they believed, and therefore spoke. They believed in the sinfulness of man's nature—a fact affirmed in all regions of the earth, the settled experience of mankind. They believed in the atonement of Christ, the regeneration of the soul by the Holy Ghost, and the judgment to come, the issues hereafter eternal. Under the pressure of these truths they wrought, as men in early days, in what are often called "ages of faith." Those ages, and not their most significant expression in monasticism, nor in the rearing magnificent cathedrals—such as that at Cologne, the completion of which, a few weeks ago, has made this year memorable—but in those missions to which Christendom has been made, out of which have come the vital elements of Teutonic and English life. We see, therefore,

1. The strength of convictions, as to truth, in any community may be measured by the zeal that is shown in giving that truth to others. In this there is something peculiar or arbitrary. When Gustavus Adolphus flung his life, his army and his kingdom into the contest which he waged with Germany for the maintenance of the reformed religion, he illustrated the magnitude of his loyalty to it. When Vienna was imperilled by the Ottoman, all Europe rushed to her defence and drove back the infidel foe. This was no military parade of two centuries ago, called forth by a display of energy. There were principles at stake.

As in national, so in personal history. The astronomer discovers a star; a new moon, or some nebulous stain upon the firmament. He desires to give the readers of the world his discovery. A medical man finds a sure prophylactic during the progress of an epidemic. He would be insanely selfish if he did not proclaim it. Just so soon as any conviction of important truth becomes central and vital, there comes the desire to utter it—a desire which is immediate and irresistible. Sacrifice is gladness, service is joy, when such an idea becomes a commanding power.

II. Here is seen the only real danger which imperils our missionary enterprise—the secularized temper of the Church. Those truths, which inspired the ardor and gratitude of the early heralds, are disbelieved by too many. It is only in this subsistence of faith that we have any cause for discouragement. Facilities for communication are multiplied. New York touches Bombay and Hong-Kong. A Christian civilization is impressing paganism. The Bible is read in all languages; Sabbath-schools are everywhere established, and a religious literature is widely circulated. From all the past successes of Christianity, we may argue its progress in the future; only this looseness and dubbiness of conviction, on the part of Christians, hinders. This arises, in part, from current scepticism; from a lack of serious thought on themes of transcendent and sublime importance, and from undue absorption in worldly matters. You may scratch a pane of glass with your ring, and hit a trifling mark is made; but continue to cover the glass with scratches, and you so blur the transparent medium that your view of tree, of lake, of mountain, of fertile intervale, or even of the face of man, is shut out. So it is in religious thought: we, scar and dim the medium. The cross remains—God and immortality; but we fail to see them as august realities. Our intense worldliness during the week, our secular reading on Sunday, lectures and amusements—all combine to dull our vision. So we find, even in pulpits called Christian, men who say that there is no blood shed for remission of sin; that the doctrine of a carnal mind is but a Hebrew myth, and that there is no immortality. By such subtle poison faith is weakened and convictions paralyzed. But for this obstacle, we should say that the world's salvation is at hand. This temper is a secret peril, just as the little worm that gnaws the cabin timbers of a ship that, lissoing, plowed the sea unharmed by tempest, till, all at once, it breaks into fragments and sinks beneath the waves. It is like the insidious malaria that saps, unlike the dagger or bullet, and stealthily coming to us, shining and secure as the summer's sky. This practical unbelief is the dreaded influence under which faith dies into languor. Is it in our heart?

III. The strength and promise of the Church is in its missionary spirit. This will vitalize and quicken her own life. Schiller says that, if we spread the thunder in separate sports, it becomes a lullaby; but, compacted into one quick peal, it shakes the heavens. So the proclamation of missionary tidings, we do not analyze and distribute, but compact the truths of the gospel. We present them in their fullness and majesty. In Vienna there is an outline of the Transfiguration by Raphael, done in pencil, which interested me much. It is a careful and curious thing, and could not, perhaps, be bought for millions; but how different from the completed picture of the victorious Christ, rising in glory, while his disciples bend at his feet! We need thus to see the gospel, not in anatomical detail, but in full vision. Thus conceived and thus presented, it becomes an antidote to scepticism.

Work, therefore; pray and give and labor in his service whom scepticism would shut out and reject—whom even Christians often obscure. What we fervently seek for is the spirit which our fathers had. Let their gospel be ours, and let us foster the same resolute, unwavering convictions of its truth and its adequacy to meet the world's necessities. Let us take heart in all missionary work. Give, not only from our abundance, but give so that we shall feel it. We shall not only bless the Hindoo and the savage, but benefit ourselves in the development of our own faith and love, and in the invigoration of our own work here, in all time to come. May God grant it!—Preacher and Homiletic Monthly.

A Child's Library.

Our own experience has convinced us that, for the average child, the element of possession of a book is of great importance. The borrowed book, however attractive, is never read with the loving enthusiasm with which the child devours the volume that is his own. Try the experiment of loaning to your pupil Scott's Lady of the Lake, Robinson Crusoe, Arabian Nights. Give to another pupil the same book as his own property; in nine cases out of ten, the borrowed book will be read on the gallop, hastily taken in and forgotten. The book owned by the child will be read leisurely, returned to, and lingered over with loving fondness; taken out under the trees in summer; taken down from the shelf for consultation; really assimilated into the mental and moral being. It is the most common place truism that the value of reading does not depend half as much upon the quantity gone over as the quality of the book and the deliberate and thoughtful method of using it.

Now the natural way to interest a child in reading is to give it a book, suitable to its years and mental condition and leave it to its own way of appropriating its contents. Every child, now-a-days, even the poorest in the public schools, should be encouraged to found a library. The boy who sees a growing book-shelf every morning, when he gets out of bed, will have a constant reminder to save his pennies to buy some favorite book, rather than spoil his stomach with candy or buy a ticket to the "Black Crook." Now-a-days, when readable editions of the English classics can be bought for fifty cents a volume, almost every child is able to buy a few good books every year. It is surprising how soon such a library assumes respectable dimensions, and amazing how many beautiful books and valuable magazines are destroyed by children now-a-days, for want of some definite plan of keeping them together. And any body who knows child-nature can understand how much more thoroughly the books of that home-library will be read than the volume borrowed from any source.

Teachers and parents, set your children to this good work of founding a child's library, and keep them at it till they need no pushing from you. And it may turn out that a few shelves of good books will educate your child more than all the schools and universities.—N. E. Journal of Education.

The Appeal, an organ of the Reformed Episcopal Church, says that statistics received show a greater addition to its membership during the past year than in any preceding one, not excepting the first year of its organization.

Religious Intelligence.

MISSIONARY.

—A Presbyterian missionary in Alaska, Mr. W. H. H. Corliss, gives, in the Presbyterian Home Missions, a striking account of the evils of drunkenness among the Tuceo tribe, on the Tuceo River. Mr. Corliss was the first missionary to visit them. At first he was received with caution; but when his errand was once known the poor Indians opened their hearts to him and desired him "to sit down among them." Mr. Corliss was with them nearly three months, teaching them six days in a week. There was much which encouraged him; but the evils of hoochinoo, or native whiskey made from molasses, made him sick at heart. The Indians are well aware of its hurtfulness, but they seem to have no more strength to withstand temptation than children. The chiefs and influential men came to Mr. Corliss repeatedly and begged him to write to Washington, to prevent the traders from importing molasses. The Indians buy the molasses by the barrel and make hoochinoo out of it. Mr. Corliss gives some incidents of the effects of the vile liquor. On one occasion the Indians, who are a peace-loving people when sober, brought Mr. Corliss their guns before going on a spree, to keep for them, so they would not injure one another. A few days later the head chief, Chilane, invited another chief to drink with him. For a time all went merrily; but suddenly the scene changed, "and it seemed as if hell had been let loose: men and women fighting and cursing, biting great pieces of flesh out of each other, like wild beasts; rolling over and over each other, kicking down their bark houses, in their frenzy. The soldiers, by dragging and pulling, separated the combatants; who would hold on with tooth and nail, like bull-dogs." The chiefs became embroiled, and fortified their houses for battle. Then the head chief entered Mr. Corliss's house to get his gun; but Mr. Corliss caught him around the waist and whirled him away. New York Independent.

—In his annual report for the station at Zuni, among the Pueblos, the Rev. T. C. Ewe, of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, writes that the Zunis are making little progress; but if left to themselves they would recede. They send some of their children to school, and are losing some of the Egyptian sort of civilization. There was one sad event of the year, the trial and death of an Indian accused of witchcraft.

"The charges had against him were: As to their custom, they all plead guilty; but this old man was charged of having painted owl feathers, and of feathers are used only by witches. Another charge was that he had bewitched two young girls of the village, who afterward died of rheumatism. By his own feathers he caused all the assembly high wind. This wind raised the sand, and killed their corn by its blowing over the fields.

"At two o'clock in the night an alarm was raised in the town. At sunrise next morning the witch was caught, and tied with his hands behind his back to a pole above his head. While in this position his life was threatened, and there and then they made him confess the charges laid against him. I told them that if they killed him I would report the whole matter to the agent, who was expected in Zuni in a few days. Everything was quiet until the agent came and went. One morning the old witch was reported dead and buried."

Some of the children have been sent, he says, to Carlisle Barracks, the government school in Pennsylvania, to be educated, the first of the Pueblos to go East for that purpose, and, it is to be hoped, if all goes well with them, not the last.—New York Independent.

Bishop Steere, of the Universities Mission Central Africa, writes of a sudden and large accession of ex-slaves at the station in Zanzibar. A slave dhow was captured near the south end of Zanzibar Island, with seventy-nine slaves from the interior on board. Says the Bishop:

"The history of their journey will show how changed the times are, since it was the custom to ship some 20,000 slaves from Kilan every year. These people were never in Kilan itself, but were bought in various country plantations near it. They were then brought by land to within about forty miles from Zanzibar, but not by the usual route, having passed further inland, and came to Mji Mwema, an insignificant place near Dar-Salaam, where they were shipped in a dhow, which passes very commonly backward and forward with firewood. In this dhow Mr. Smith has made the greatest prize that has been taken for years. There were ninety-seven on board in all. Some of them were concerned in the transport and were sent to the fort. Some were so much at home in Zanzibar that they had their free papers given them and went off to their friends. Those who were sent to us were the newcomers from the interior, seventy-nine in all. Among them were eleven girls and twelve boys, two of the last so small that they were given into Miss Mill's charge at the hospital. It is a great strain upon our resources; but who can see these poor creatures wanting in everything and not try to do something for them?"

The Bishop also writes that the Rev. W. P. Johnson has left Masari, on a journey to Lake Nyassa, with the purpose of establishing a station at Malaka's Town.

—The Roman Catholics have a mission among the lepers of Molakai, in the Hawaiian group. The government gathers up the lepers and sends them to the mission, where they are kindly cared for. A priest, who has been at this dreadful post seven years, says he has buried from 150 to 200 a year of these poor creatures, who are in the most loathsome condition. He writes: "Half my people look like living skeletons, when the worms have already begun to devour, internally first and then externally. Their bodies consist of one hideous sore, which is very rarely cured. As for the odor they emit, imagine the jam fortet of the tombs of Lazarus." Connected with the mission is an orphanage for young girls, and two schools, the teachers of which are paid by the government.

T. E. Wallace, Presbyterian missionary, writes that Antonio Reyes, minister, and a man who was with him, have been assassinated by a mob at Guadalajara, Mexico, at the instigation of the priest; that a few weeks ago, two families belonging to the congregation at San Luis, Potosi, were attacked in their houses at night, and escaped very narrowly; and that after he had preached several times a town a hundred miles south of Zacatecas, the house in which he was lodging—which was that of the highest authority in the town—was attacked, stoned and fired into.

—The Evangelical Missionary Society of Paris has in Bastutoland, South Africa, (April, 1880,) 13 principal stations with 19 missionaries, 4,352 communicants, 1,692 class members, nearly 3,000 children [illegible] schools, two normal schools with 120 young men and 30 girls, an industrial school, a printing press from which Basuto bibles and hymn books are printed, a monthly paper with 800 subscribers, and a home mission maintained at a cost of $7,500 subscribed by the native churches, with 69 out-stations and day schools, and 126 native catechists and school teachers. The mission churches are now about to establish a mission on the Zambesi River.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—There have been serious outbreaks in China, at Canton. Some 3,000 or 7,000 Chinese were in the streets fighting some hours before they were subdued by soldiers. The cause of the disturbance is said to have been a dispute as to the fire putting out of a fire near the cathedral. The mob threatened the French missionaries. After this disturbance was quieted, a daring and unprovoked assault was made upon the Rev. Messrs. Selby and Morris, of the Wesleyan Mission. The missionaries were about to proceed inland, and were passing through the streets, when they were seen by an angry mob, who were discussing the cathedral disturbances. The missionaries were set upon and stoned, and barely escaped with their lives by retreating to the river. From Fuhchau there are tidings of the burning of more chapels. Some 200 soldiers went to the village of Nyang-a, on the island of Nang Nik, which is about two days southeast of Fuhchau, avowedly in pursuit of a pirate who had absconded. They burned down his house, and then fired the chapel, attacking with their spears, at the instance of the military officers, and injuring very much the catechist, who remonstrated and stated that the place was a Christian chapel. The same body of troops attacked another house in which services are held at a village five ½ distant from Nang-a, and partially demolished and burnt that also. New York Independent.

—According to the Jewish Messenger "The population of New York entitled to claim connection with the Jewish denomination and the Hebrew race is likely to reach 100,000," while "the number of members of incorporated congregations is 5,000, and the number of children attending Synagogue, Temple and Hebrew free schools does not exceed 3,000." The editor asserts that in 1858 "there were ten Jews in New York, but there were more Judaism, and that "its foundation is become merely the worship of gain, and business ideas of industry and integrity have been overshadowed by the worship of gold and brass, the consequence of which kept pace with these tendencies." Hence, there are only 5,000 Jews who, out of 20,000 heads of families or single men, contribute to the support of the Synagogue. The Messenger is disposed to think "that the managers of our congregations, clergymen as well as trustees, are to blame."

—The Wabash Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Chicago, has a flourishing Chinese Sunday-school, whose sessions are held each Sunday afternoon. This school held its first anniversary last week. The Chinese pupils invited their teachers and friends to a banquet, preparing a nice supper in regular American style. After the supper they sang some of the Moody and Sankey hymns, and played some pieces on their own native musical instruments. Finally, the leader, Lee Quang, made a little speech in English, in which he thanked all the teachers for their instruction during the year, saying that they wanted to learn more of the language that they might read the Bible and know more about Jesus Christ.

—The Classon Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, of which Dr. Duryea was, and Dr. Frazer now is pastor, is to be congratulated on its good work, accomplished on a recent Sunday, of raising its entire remaining debt of $70,000. Over $40,000 of this debt consisted of pew ownership, which the pew owners offered to surrender if the congregation would raise the balance. This was done at a single collection, and the beautiful house of worship is now free. On the same day the Madison Avenue Reformed Church of New York raised the notable sum of $65,000 towards clearing a debt of $100,000.

—The Year Book for 1881 of the New York Sunday-school Association gives the number of Sunday-schools in New York as 445, with 175,823 scholars and 16,550 teachers and officers, and average attendance of 82,461. Of these schools, 75 are Episcopal, 70 Presbyterian, 57 Methodist, 51 Roman Catholic, 44 Baptist, 20 Reformed, 15 Lutheran, 6 Congregational, 5 Friends, 5 Hebrew, 2 Moravian, 10 Universalist and Unitarian, 26 Union and 25 miscellaneous. The Association, by its various classes for superintendents and teachers, its institutes, social meetings, and its library and reading-room is doing an important and efficient work.

—The Reformed Dutch ministers of New York recently discussed the subject of "Romanism and Education." The ground that the Bible should be kept in the public schools was strongly maintained; also that while theology should not be taught in the schools, still they should be pervaded by the principles of religion as by an atmosphere. Dr. Berthoff, of Holland, said that the banishment of the Bible from the schools there had resulted in lack of reverence for the Book.

—The signs are rapidly multiplying that the question of disestablishment in Scotland is coming to a head. Nothing, however, can be done during the present Parliament, Mr. Gladstone having pledged himself to submit the question to the country before he attempted to solve it. But in all probability the issue will be really decided, as it was in the parallel case of the Church of Ireland, long before the time for legislation arrives.

—The Reformed Episcopal Church is steadily extending its work among the colored people of the South. Bishop Steven's training school at Charleston has seven or eight students preparing for the ministry, while several are already ordained, and in charge of parishes. The work is sadly hampered, however, from lack of funds.

—A memorial has been presented to the King of Sweden in behalf of Baptist and Methodist missionaries and ministers who have been persecuted. One of the most recent cases was that of Carl Palmblad, a Baptist preacher, who was arraigned in court and fined one hundred crowns for preaching publicly in the town of Skofde.

—The Lutheran and Missionary announces that the statistical tables of the Church Almanac just published, show a grand total of 911,868 communicants, embraced in 5,511 synods, an increase in 1880 of considerably more than 100,000. If the same ratio continues, in 1881 the Lutheran Church will be one of the strongest in numbers in the country, being surpassed in membership only by the Baptists and Methodists.

Our Young People.

RED RIDING HOOD.

BY JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER.

On the wide lawn the snow lay deep,
Ridged o'er with many a drifted heap;
The wind that through the pine-trees sung,
The naked elm-boughs tossed and swung;
While, through the window, frosty-starred,
Against the sunset purple barred,
We saw the sobre crow flap by,
The hawk's gray wreck along the sky,
The crested blue-jay flitting swift,
The squirrel foraging on the drift,
Erect, alert, his thick gray tail
Set to the north wind like a sail.

It came to pass our little lass,
With flattened face against the glass
And eyes of which the bodier drew
Of pity shame, stood gazing through
The narrow space her rosy lips
Had melted from the frost's eclipse.
"O, see," she cried, "the poor blue jays!
What is it that the black crow says?
The squirrel has his furs to keep him warm,
Because he has no hands, and hates
The asking for my mits, I know.
May I not feed them on the snow?

Half hid within her hood, her head
Warm sheltered in her tippet red,
Her plaid skirt close about her drawn,
She buffeted shown the wintry lawn
Now struggling through the misty veil
Blown round and back by the shrieking gale,
Now sinking in a drift so low
Its scarlet hood could scarcely show
Its dash of color on the snow.

She dropped for bird and hungry mouse
Her little store of nuts and corn,
And thus her timid guests bespoke
Come, squirrel, from you hollow oak!
Come, black old crow—come, jay blue-fe
Before your sister's slow to stray
Don't be afraid, we all are kind.
And I'm no mamma's darling mind
Of Thou whose care is over all,
Who hearkest e'en the sparrow's fall,
Keep in the little maiden's heart
The pity which is now its part!
Let not her childhood's fancy make
Thy helpless creatures wholly take
Into her feeble care and love
Thy providence, that stronger love
Than hers all living things should know,
And trust thee as the flowers do now!

Chicken Money.

TRANSLATED BY [illegible].

Mr. Editor: Will you oblige me by inserting in your paper the accompanying letter, which reached me to-day from Opelousas. The money has been received, with many thanks.

Yours truly,

WILLIAM HOUSTON PEGUE.

Opelousas, La., January 15, 1881.

Dear Bro.:

Last spring my little brother and myself concluded, to raise some missionary chickens, and succeeded tolerably well. From the proceeds of mine, I send you one dollar, and brother fifty cents. Mamma sends one dollar also; the funds to be used as you think best. Little brother and I are members of the Sunday-school Missionary Society, at this place, and mamma is a member of the Women's Missionary Society. We feel interested in the cause of missions, particularly our own French Mission. Praying the blessings of God upon you, and your labors for the salvation of the Creoles,

As ever, Your friend,

MAGGIE THOMPSON.

How Waller Entertained the Boys.

A hearty laugh burst from the group of boys clustered around the lamp-post at the corner. The smallest of them, Alf. Lester, exclaimed a little contemptuously, "The idea of a fellow thirteen years old not knowing how to make a snow-ball! Why, I'm only ten, and I can make splendid ones, hard as anything!"

"And should think you'd have got used to the cold by this time, Walter," added Alf's brother Will.

Walter Perry shivered, wrapped up as he was in overcoat, comforter, overshoes, mittens, and sealskin cap with ear-lappets, as he replied good naturedly, "They say an eel can get used to skinning, but I don't believe I'll ever get used to snow and ice? If I hadn't promised Aunt Delia that I would stay out-doors one whole hour to-day you wouldn't catch me here! Ugh!"

"I believe you haven't got much courage! You are afraid of the cold!" sneered Joe Brainard.

"Maybe I am! I am not afraid of a gun that is not loaded as you were yesterday. I know how to handle a gun too, if I didn't know how to make a snow-ball."

The day before this exchange of banter these same boys and one or two others were in Mr. Lester's house examining a new gun; but Brainard could not be persuaded to touch even the stock, while Harry Greenough was senseless enough to hold it with the muzzle toward him.

"I am accustomed to guns," said Will Lester, rather pompously; "my father is a great sportsman."

"So is mine," said Walter; "he and brother Arthur and I often went shooting."

"Did you?" exclaimed Will. "Papa said yesterday he thought you must be a sportsman. What did you shoot?"

"O, parrots and"

"Parrots!" exclaimed three or four. "How could you kill them?"

"Easy enough horrid nuisances!"

"Why Walter Perry! Parrots, nuisances? They cost lots of money. My cousin Mary has one she wouldn't sell for a hundred dollars!" cried Alf. Lester, in amazement.

"You must remember that with us in the West Indies," I mean, where my father lives gray parrots are as common and as troublesome as crows are in your corn fields. Your cousin ought just to hear a flock of them go screaming over the house-tops at day light in the morning on their way to coffee-fields. O, don't they make a noise!"

"Something like our crows?"

"Only more so. Alf., does your cousin's parrot ever scream?"

"Yes, indeed! Sometimes she has to keep Polly covered up for two or three hours to quiet her."

"Then just fancy twenty or thirty all yelling at once up in the air, where you can't cover them? Then think of the mischief they do to the coffee."

"That's so; they always love coffee."

"Does coffee grow like corn, Walter?" asked Harry.

"O no; it is a bush with a pretty blossom."

"What color?"

"White and pale lavender."

"Oranges grow there don't they?" Alf. enquired.

"Yes; oranges, lemons, bananas, guavas—"

"Guava jelly!" suggested Alf.

"The fruit of which the jelly is made."

"Does it grow on a tree or a vine?" asked Will.

"On a shrub; it has a pretty flower—white and pale yellow."

"Bananas grow on trees, I know; for I saw some in the Botanical Gardens in Washington, when papa took me there last year," said the Brainard.

"There was only one bunch on that tree, though."

"That's the way they grow with us. A young tree comes up and flowers out, bears only once, and then dies; but from the same root there will be young shoots coming up all the time, so that a man who owns a banana walk always has fruit at hand."

"A banana walk—what's that?"

"Well, one root, which sending up so many shoots makes a sort of grove where it is always cool and damp and unhealthy."

"The people there are fond of bananas, are they not?" suggested Will.

"Fond of them? They live on them, eat them raw, baked, or fried, for breakfast, dinner, and supper. Banana is a necessity of life."

"Which do you like best—red or yellow ones?"

"The yellow ones. The red ones that grow up with us are given to the pigs, even the negroes won't eat them."

Little Alf. Lester listened in admiration.

"What lots of things you know Walter! A heap more than any of us."

"I don't know how to make snow-balls, and you do," replied Walter, merrily.

"Let's try quits, Walter! You may get used to the cold and the snow just when you like. We will not tease you any more. You teach us all you know about the West India islands, and we'll make all your snow-balls."

"Agreed!" cried all the boys, including Walter.

"They have everything nice there, don't they?" said Will, who was very fond of oranges and bananas.

"Not quite! No such schools as they have here in Boston, or papa would not have sent me here to be educated," answered Walter. "No one country can have everything. We have beautiful birds, lovely flowers, delicious fruits all the years round, also earthquakes and tornadoes, but oh, so much ignorance and superstition, even among well informed people! Give me the intelligence I find here, even among school boys, if I do half freeze six months in a year! Ha! my hour is up, and nearly another one gone. You've entertained me."

"No! no!" "You were the entertainer." "Tell us some more next Saturday!" cried the Brainard.

"Maybe I will. Good-bye. Up, for the warm parlors," answered Walter, scampering away.—Church Register.

A Funeral Procession of Ants.

One day a little boy of mine, about four years old, being tired of play, threw himself down on a grassy mound to rest. Shortly after I was startled by a sudden scream. My instant thought was that some serpent had stung him. I flew in horror to the child, but was at once reassured on seeing him covered with soldier ants, on whose nest he had laid himself down. Numbers of the ants were still clinging to him with their forceps, and continuing to sting the boy. My maid at once assisted me in killing them. At length about twenty were thrown dead on the ground. We then carried the boy indoors. In about half-an-hour afterwards I returned to the spot, when I saw a large number of ants surrounding the dead ones. I determined to watch their proceedings closely. I followed four or five that started from the rest toward the hillock a short distance off, in which was an ants' nest. This they entered, and in about five minutes they reappeared, followed by others. All fell into rank, walking regularly and slowly two by two, until they arrived at the spot where lay the dead bodies of the soldier ants. In a few minutes two of the ants advanced and took up the dead body of one of their comrades; then two others, and so on, until all were ready to march. First walked two ants bearing a body then two without a burden; then two others with another dead ant, and so on, until the line was extended to about forty pairs, and the procession moved slowly onwards, followed by an irregular body of about 200 ants. Occasionally the two laden ants stopped, and laying down the dead ant, it was taken up by the two walking unburdened behind them, and thus by occasionally relieving each other, they arrived at a sandy spot near the sea. The body of ants now commenced digging with their jaws holes in the ground, into each of which a dead ant was laid, where they now labored on until they had filled up the ants' graves. This did not quite finish the remarkable circumstances attending this funeral of the ants. Some six or seven of the ants had attempted to run off without performing their share of the task of digging; these were caught and brought back when they were at once killed upon the spot. A single grave was quickly dug, and they were all dropped into it.

A Normal Historical Idol Broken.

Mr. Eliot Gosswiller, the Arabic scholar, of Basle, has been breaking in pieces another of the idols of children—Haroun al Raschid, of the "Arabian Nights." The learned doctor says that the polished, sagacious and kindly potentate of the Thousand-and-One Nights was by no means so pleasant, wise and amiable a character in actual history as he is taken to be by all the boys and girls of Christendom and Islam, who know him only from his panegyrical portrait in that charming and inexhaustible book. The great Caliph was neither such a lover of righteousness nor so beloved by his people as we used to fancy. He possessed to the full the characteristic faults of those oriental despots whose humor is their only law. His far-famed generosity was but the reversed side, like Robin Hood's, of a boundless system of spoliation and robbery. The very slightest pretense of an insult, or an act of negligence, on the part of any of his rich subjects was made by Haroun al Raschid an excuse for wholesale confiscation of the wealthy offender's property. No Roman or Byzantine Cæsar was ever more relentless in the execution of his arbitrary decrees. It is easy enough, however, Dr. Gosswiller contends, to discover the reason why his fame and his virtues are painted in such glowing colors by the writers of legends. Firstly, he was the last Caliph who held the empire together through genuine mental power, and who possessed the true genius of a born ruler. Under the Caliphs who followed him, everything got out of joint. Secondly, he fully understood the importance of standing well with the poets and scholars, for whom he always had a pleasant manner and an open purse.—London Globe.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

J. W. RUSH, W. L. C. HUNNICUTT,
C. B. GALLOWAY, C. W. CARTER.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 27, 1881.

Waiting for The Lord.

This attitude of waiting is insisted upon by Christ, and by the apostolical writers. It is the condition of readiness and of preparation for the end. Whether of the end of the world, the end of existing order of society and of governments, or their own end, the substance of the admonition is to be ready. To be prepared for the second coming of Christ, and for the final judgment, is to be ready for whatever may happen. In such a state the Christian is ready for tribulation, for bereavement, for tumults and revolutions, for sickness and for death. If it be a definite looking for the personal coming for the great parousia—this insures a spiritual readiness for whatever may come to pass. "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour, Jesus Christ," is connected with the operations of the grace of God in the heart. To "love His appearing" is a mark of the true believer.

This looking and loving is, however, consistent with the conviction that the manifestation of Christ is yet very distant. Ages may roll between us and that event, and it may come long after we have entered the paradise of God. All this does not affect the blessedness of the hope, nor the waiting for the Lord's coming. Whether here on earth, battling with temptation and sin, or yonder in the home of those who have entered into rest, the looking, the waiting, the expectation are common to all the saints. We are waiting and they are waiting, "that they without us should not be made perfect." This polar star of hope never sets, but shines alike upon those who linger on earth and upon those who have crossed the flood. Every eye is turned toward this grandest and most momentous event, every sanctified heart on earth and in glory is yearning for the appearing.

As to ourselves, this waiting is practical. It is not a state of inaction, of wonder-worship, of indifference to the duties of life. The loins are girded and the lights are burning, and the servants are diligently improving the gifts entrusted to them. There is no fanatical excitement, no interruption of the work given us to do. Rather does this expectation quicken the spiritual life, and incite to greater zeal in laboring for the spread of the gospel and for the salvation of the world. If saved at all, the world must be saved before "the appearing of the great God and of our Saviour, Jesus Christ." The grace of God and the present instrumentalities must achieve the salvation of the human race. The coming of Christ is the end, the consummation of all things, the last judgment, and the final and complete reward and glorifying of the good.

With reference to such results, how necessarily the belief leads to vigilance, to the diligent use of the grace and opportunities given, and to ever-increasing effort to advance the cause of Christ! It is the hour of our opportunity and of our responsibility. We know not when the end may come, but our accountability will be guaged by its imminence, by the possibility of its coming at any time. How much time God will give the church to execute the great commission cannot be known. He never intended that we should know, and He has left it in obscurity, that every generation should do its utmost to bring the world to Christ. The pre-millenial theory, based upon the idea that present gospel methods are a comparative failure, and that the personal reign of Christ on earth is to bring in more powerful and effectual means of bringing men to repentance, is a theory that paralyzes effort and weakens faith. Consistently with such a theory we might wait inactive, and with folded hands, and our missionary zeal might sleep until the voice of the archangel and the trump of God call us to awake. It is, however, the delay of that trump and the silence of that voice that loudly call us to action. The world must be saved before the Lord descends from heaven with a shout. And our own souls must be arrayed in righteousness, and we must be perfected in love before that day.

Waiting is, therefore, working; it is laying broad and deep foundations, and building for the ages. It is an intense realization of the fact that the gospel is the only hope of the world, and that there is nothing more, in the way of means and instrumentalities, to come forth from God. The coming that saves and redeems is already consummated and at work; in coming that judges and glorifies is that for which we look. How would preachers preach, how would Christians live, how would they all run in the race of usefulness if they were thus waiting for their Lord. Their greatest readiness would be in their complete consecration, and in the absorbing endeavor to pluck from the fire as many brands as possible.

And yet there is a waiting that is full of self-deception and danger, a current talk about a millennium that is to usher in a new and different dispensation, and in which the old gospel methods are to be superceded. Perhaps the servant who buried his talent was one of these sincere but deluded souls. He was waiting for his Lord, but not wisely waiting. He was looking for Him, but only to be met with rebuke and shame. The foolish virgins were also waiting for their Lord, and they slept the sleep of carnal security. They thought they were ready, but the doors of heaven were shut against them. The true waiting is thus distinguished from the false. It is a right apprehension of what the Lord's coming is—a coming to judge, to punish and to reward, and a coming that closes the gospel offer to the world. It is such a life as takes its tone and impetus from a blessed hope that also rivets, upon the conscience and heart, the vast issues involved. This true waiting brings Christian men face to face with their great and fearful responsibilities, and arouses in their all the faith and zeal and watchfulness of a trumpet blast from the throne of judgment. Waiting for their Lord, they are in the vestibule of eternity, in the ante-chamber of the august presence, and in joyous readiness to lay their charges down at the Master's feet. Waiting here with fidelity, they move at length into brighter conditions of waiting until He comes.

This is the season in which pastors have most trouble with the more worldly members of their flocks. It is the period most given to worldly amusements, and the air is full of Mardi gras, and the spirit of the carnival is abroad. Must the shepherds be always running after these wayward and giddy sheep, and will it never come to be understood that the lines of discipline are to be observed? Must every pastor, when he reaches his new work, be pained and embarrassed by this neglect and defiance of the rules of the church, and must the battle be fought over every winter? If our members are to be left to wander whither they will, and to dance, and to patronize the theater, and to indulge in riotous pleasures, let it be so understood, and let the pastors throw the rein upon the neck.

But if we mean to have discipline in the church, let us enforce it, and let it be done by all our pastors, and without respect of persons. We are constantly hearing from the new pastors that they find their charges fearfully demoralized, and the inference is that their predecessors did not administer discipline, or sufficiently rebuke these worldly excesses. Will those who complain see to it that they leave a clean record, and that the old leaven is duly purged out? It is of the greatest importance that there be uniformity of administration, and we fear we shall never have this until the Annual Conferences, in the passage of character, inquire particularly into this matter. Do any of the pastors wink at these irregularities, or remain in official ignorance of violations of the rules? Matters of common fame, known to almost everybody else, seem to be strangely concealed from the eye of the pastor.

It is time to take a decided stand in reference to prohibited worldly amusements. Something can be done by warning, instruction and faithful admonition, but, these failing, let us at least attempt to enforce the rules of discipline. It may result in the loss of some members, specially some of the richer ones, and those who move in gay society, but it will probably save some who are being led away from Christ. Whatever be the difficulties and whatever the results, if we have a discipline let us enforce it. If, however, we cannot, or will not do this, we had as well drop the subject. Coaxing, scolding and lecturing will not amount to much with unconverted church members.

How would it do, in the towns and cities, to hold special revival services during the season of worldly festivities, and thus endeavor to counteract the devices of satan? It is said that our young people must have society, and social entertainment of some sort. How to provide this, so as to exclude things pernicious, is a problem not of the easiest solution. And yet we have thought that during the winter our churches might have weekly or monthly reunions of a social character, in which the young people especially might find entertainment and pleasure, without being exposed to the demoralizing influence of the dance or the card table. The subject is worth considering. There are members who might open their houses occasionally for this purpose, and the churches themselves would not be profaned by such gatherings in them.

In our efforts to obtain the aid of legislation in advancing moral reform we must not lose sight of the important fact that every thing at last depends upon the general and voluntary acceptance of the principles upon which these reforms are based. Legislation on temperance cannot be advanced beyond the convictions of the people on this subject; or, if by any chance it should be, it will soon fall back to the level of the popular conviction. If the work that is purely moral and religious is well and faithfully done, the political measures will follow. Christianize the people, and we shall then have Christian legislation and Christian institutions. When this becomes a Christian country it will cease to be governed by inebriates or by venal legislatures. Christian men are disposed to vote in accordance with their religious principles, but the trouble is that more than half of the voters are not Christian men. If Christianity will convert the voters there will be good morals in legislation, and the nation will be exalted by righteousness.

Christianity must win its own way by its own divine force and authority. At home and abroad, it must stand upon its own merits, and gain its own victories. Foreign and heathen countries can not be Christianized by diplomacy, by treaties, nor by the march of trade, and the invasion of our civilization. The gospel must do this work, and it cannot lean upon the secular arm without being stripped largely of its own supernatural power.

We are aware that many of the prevailing evils are such as to appeal to our temporal interests for their abatement. Such, notably, is the whisky traffic, the lottery business, and the dealing in futures. But it is not likely that these evils can ever be uprooted by exposing their damaging influence upon health, industry and trade. Sin, in every form, is a temporal evil, the fountain of all earthly woes. But the argument of dispassionate reason and of temporal interest has always failed in effecting reform. The principles and sanctions of religion must be brought in, and the grace of God must be the chief reliance. An enlightened and living conscience is of more value in opposing great public vices than all the statistical arguments that can be arrayed against them. These have an auxiliary value; but, without belief in a living God and a coming judgment, society will go on in corruption and dissipation, and we shall labor in vain to overcome the tide of iniquity.

One of our esteemed Alabama contributors has an excellent article on our second page this week on the subject of education. Parents especially will do well to read it. The difficulties in the way of the conscientious teacher and educator are great, and one of the greatest difficulties lies in the unreasonableness of parents. A spirit of hurry in education is to be deprecated. We lose sight of the chief end of education—that it is to educate. Not merely to put something into the mind, but to draw out and discipline the powers and faculties of the mind, to teach the pupil to think, and to develop in him the capacity for high achievements in whatever line of work he may select. This is an age of hurry, and we must go fast in everything. In haste to get rich, in haste to build railroads, in haste to build cities and to settle unoccupied lands, we are also in haste in educating.

The superficial and the cramming processes are demanded, and consequently there is danger of deterioration. Something has been realized from the washings of the sands, but the deep-shaft miners are amassing wealth from stores that are inexhaustible. The advice of one of our veteran educators has seemed to us to be good: whatever be the time and means, let your boys begin as if they were going through. That is to say, as we understood him, do not attempt to build your house without a foundation. A little education is far better than none, but let it be education. As far as it goes, let it be the training and improvement of the mind, and let what work is done be done thoroughly. If only primary studies be possible, let them be mastered completely. It may often happen that the freshman is really better educated than the senior who, by hook or by crook, pockets his degree and leaves his Alma-Mater in triumph. The slow school, because the thorough one, may be the school to patronize. Finishing schools are really less needed than good beginning schools. A superstructure is worth little without a good foundation.

Methodist Literature.

Under this caption, the Spectator and Methodist Chronicle, Melbourne, Australia, makes some excellent points which are applicable to Methodism in this part of the world. It says:

John Wesley was anxious that "the people called Methodists" should not be an embodiment of ignorant piety. He wrote for the people. He was one of the first, if not the first, to attempt to popularise literature. He led the way in those praiseworthy efforts which were made to diffuse useful information of every kind, and to smooth the path of knowledge to the middle and lower ranks of society." He was a voluminous writer, and not merely on theological subjects. He published books on various branches of science, grammars in five different languages, histories both civil and ecclesiastical. The early Methodist preachers travelling round their extensive circuits had their saddle-bags well stocked with useful books, which they sold to the members of the Society. In those days of theological strife the Methodists used to sharpen their sword-blades by reading Wesley's and Fletcher's polemical works, and refreshed their spirits, and added to their stores of information, by reading the biographical sketches, the sermons, and the other varied contents of the Arminian Magazine. We hope that the Methodist people in Victoria are readers; but we fear that very many of them have very little acquaintance with Methodist literature. There are those in all our colonial circuits to whom Methodism is the church of their choice, although it was not the Church of their fathers. There is no one in their homes who can tell them of what they hear in the fatherland from the lips of those who were co-temporary with John Wesley—John Nelson, Joseph Benson, Adam Clarke, Samuel Bradburn, and the other mental and spiritual giants who lived in those days. Many of our young men and woman are growing up, and they have not read a life of John Wesley or a history of Methodism. They have not had their hearts stirred, or their ambition excited, by reading the lives of those "heroes of the Holy Ghost," the early Methodist preachers. They are urged to follow in the footsteps of the saintly, like Bramwell and Stoner, Carvosso and John Smith, Mrs. Mortimer and Hester Ann Rogers. But these are names and nothing more to many who have been taught in our Sunday-schools, and who have been converted through Methodist instrumentality. It would do the younger Methodists of our generation both mental and spiritual good to make themselves familiar with the biographical, historical, and theological works of our own Church. Steven's histories of Methodism in England and of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America read like a romance. Thomas Jackson's Early Methodist Preachers contains the biographies of many men like John Nelson, of whom Robert Southey said that "he had as high a spirit and as brave a heart as ever Englishman was blessed with." Richard Watson's and Jabez Bunting's sermons take front rank among the sermonic literature of the English language. The theological works of Wesley and Fletcher, Watson and Pope do not suffer by comparison in their keen analysis, their clearness of statement, their logical completeness with those of the theologians of any Church.

The biographical department of the literature of our Church is especially rich, and no true Christian can read the lives of the godly men and saintly women who have lived well and died well without being stimulated to follow them, even as they also followed Christ. We believe that, were our people generally to resolve to read Methodist literature, the result, under God, would be a heightening of the spiritual life of our churches, and the bringing about of a genuine revival of religion.

There is one class of Methodist literature which we would like to see much more widely circulated. We refer to the monthly periodicals issued from the Conference office. These include the Wesleyan Methodist Magazine, the Christian Miscellany and Family Visitor, and two serials for the children—Early Days and Our Boys and Girls. They are a marvel of cheapness. The Magazine is the oldest monthly religious magazine in existence, for it was commenced more than one hundred years ago. The editor of the Magazine is the late President of the British Conference, the Rev. B. Gregory. Among the contributors to its pages there are some of the best pens of Methodism, and occasionally of other Churches. The regular reader of the Magazine will acquire no small amount of information upon the theological, scientific, literary, and social questions of the day. The Christian Miscellany and Family Visitor contains tales and sketches, both biographical and historical; poetry, original and selected, and much other matter; while the two serials for young folks are admirably conducted and well-illustrated. We should be glad to hear of these monthly publications from the Conference office finding their way into every Methodist home in the land. With so much pernicious literature in circulation parents ought to avail themselves of the opportunity of providing their households with this well-written and wholesome literature.

A few years ago the publications of the Wesleyan Conference office at home were not equal in appearance to those published elsewhere. That is no longer the case. The books now issued are attractive in appearance. We would urge upon our ministers, local preachers, class-leaders, and Sunday-school officers and teachers, in the mental and spiritual interests of others, to do all that they can to circulate Methodist literature.

Death of Dr. Jobson.

Dr. Frederick James Jobson was one of the conspicuous figures in English Methodism. His death, which occured only two weeks ago, has caused mourning throughout the borders of that great denomination. Some months since the London Methodist Recorder, contained an account of the Wesleyan Conference, and the proceedings when Dr. Jobson asked a supernumerary relation. After more than forty years of tireless toil, filling the most important and responsible positions in the connection, his health had failed and he was no longer able for active service. In his short address to the Conference the grand old man uttered these words of mournful tenderness: "Should it please God to restore my health I hope to find a pulpit in some village church." What beautiful Christian humility. He had been for a quarter of a century a trusted leader. Three times he had been pastor of City Road Chapel. For nearly ten years at the head of British Methodism's publishing interests. Exeter Hall had echoed to his burning words as he plead for the cause of missions. Thousands had read with profit the able volumes from his graceful pen. He has been president of the Conference, the highest honor and position in his church. And now if able ever again to preach the word, he only craves a place "in some village church." But God has called him home. At the reception tendered Dean Stanley by the Methodists of New York some two years ago he paid an eloquent tribute to Dr. Jobson and states that at his Dr. J's suggestion the monument to John and Charles Wesley was erected in Westminster Abbey. Methodism on this side of the sea will unite in mourning the fall of this prince and leader. His grand career and blessed memory are alike our inheritance.

C. B. G.

Our Mexican Letter.

MR. EDITOR: Somewhere about 1531, so the legend runs, an Indian was one day gathering fagots upon the high hill of Guadaloupe, about three miles from this city, where there appeared to him no less an illustrious personage than the Virgin Mary, who commanded him to go and express to a certain Archbishop her desire that a church should be erected on that spot to her honor. Through disbelief in his own senses, the Indian did not obey the celestial mandate, until she appeared three times, and during her last visit took the Indian's sarape or blanket and returned it to him with a full length painting of herself upon its surface. This settled all doubt, and three churches, instead of one, were erected on and at the foot of the holy hill, which has become the shrine to millions who worship Our Lady of Guadaloupe.

The twelfth of December is the day set apart for the Indians to pay their devotion in person to their patron saint. I wished to go out there on that day, but, as it fell on Sunday, we concluded to go the day before, and so started bright and early on our trip in the street car that lands all lazy pilgrims at the foot of the hill. After we left the city, the ruins of whose gates can still be seen, our way lay for awhile parallel with the old road to Vera Cruz, built by Cortes, and which is marked by many wayside stone shrines for saints to bless from and for sinners to pray to. All the way out, on either side of the car, the road was alive with Indians, coming from all parts of the country, and presenting a very varied and interesting sight. Of all ages, sexes and conditions, trotting along, some on donkeys, some (and by far the greater number) on foot, laden with their necessary effects, for, no doubt, most of them had been traveling for several days, and had to bring the where-with-al to eat and drink and sleep. The different tribes had different colored blankets or sarapes, which, together with the clothes of most of the women, had been woven by themselves in primitive looms, hung from the tree branches about their village huts. Both men and women wore great white straw hats, also made by their own deft fingers, and beneath the broad brims the brown faces looked so good-natured and contented as to evidence that the pilgrimage was more of a pleasure than a penance. To be sure when we entered the town we found one poor pilgrim toiling along on his knees, a woman walking meekly by his side, holding in her hand his old straw hat. They looked penitent and tired enough, but the majority of their fellow-travelers seemed to be having a good time, and the term feast-day could be well applied to the time, judging from the numberless kinds of food and dulces that were to be seen on every side. The village is quite small, and, though the day before the feast, was already well filled with the Indians. They thronged up to the very doors of the churches, and were buying, selling, eating, drinking, sleeping, laughing, talking, cooking, all in the open air; some had made temporary tents by placing their gay sarapes over raised poles, but the greater part minded not the searching gaze of sun or stranger, but lighted their charcoal and cooked their meat and frijoles close to the steps of the churches, and stretched themselves on their mats to sleep under your very feet.

We entered first the large church at the foot of the hill. It is said to contain the veritable blanket with the miraculous painting, and we saw it, high over the central altar, surrounded by tinsel of all styles—a very commonplace picture to have been painted by a supernatural hand. The church, like all the churches here, is very gaudy. It is said that at first most of the adornments were of pure gold and silver. If so, it must have been a very costly building, for you cannot look anywhere about you without seeing a gleam of yellow ore, which is now generally conceded to be brass, said by some to be placed there by the priests, who, like those in the apocryphal story, made way with the offerings of the faithful and believing, stealing the gold and substituting the brass. The choir has some curious specimens of wood-carving about it. Service was being held when we entered, and we heard some good music. A pretty thing happened while we were listening. Suddenly, through the crash of musical instruments, we heard ring out the clear, shrill warble of a bird; whether it was one caged there purposely or a stray songster that had found his way up among the dusty organ pipes I do not know, but it was to me truly a "wandering voice" that brought a refreshing thought of green fields and still waters, God's temple not made with hands, with its myriad-voiced hymn of perpetual praise, while about me there were souls made a little lower than the angels, kneeling in worship before a painted piece of cloth. And they knelt, ladies in their handsome veils, servants in their rebosos, and Indians in their white suits and sandals, babies, or pulque bottles made of immense gourds, tied on the backs of the women, all paying devout homage to the Virgin of Guadaloupe and right grateful they ought to be to her, judging from the art gallery that we found in a corner of the church, consisting of many small pictures, which commemorated the numerous miracles performed by representing the scenes, and giving a written description beneath. One represented a woman, in gorgeous array, dancing gracefully before the horns of an infuriated bull, which the text informed us, was about to gore her to death, when the Virgin interposed her successful power. Another showed a caravan of about twenty-five or thirty heavily loaded wagons which had all passed over the body of an unfortunate man when the Virgin appeared and raised him up safe and sound. A series of pictures represented a certain woman as being the happy subject of five or six different miracles. In one she is walking pensively through a forest, and robbers, fierce and many, rush out before her, when the Virgin appears to save. In another she is tumbling down stairs, when the Virgin saves her from all damage, except a slight bite of the tongue. In another her coach has upset, but she is rescued by the same blessed appearance, and so on. One picture shows a child falling from a window, but it is saved by the Virgin's opportune power from any hurt, except a slight bleeding of the nose. The accounts are very explicit as to dates, and the places where these wonders occurred. Though I felt sad and sick in heart to see so much idolatry and superstition, the paintings, as works of art, were too much for me to see unmoved, and I laughed myself tired. Indeed, they were fearfully and wonderfully made. We went from there to another and smaller church, which is built about a mineral spring, which is considered to have sprung up at the miraculous touch of the Virgin's foot. I forgot to say that among the pictures in the other church there were several bundles of crutches and eye blinds that were left there by those who had recovered sight or use of limb by the application of this miraculous water. However, the number of unnecessary crutches within did not lessen the number of lame and blind outside. And one, seeing the many sickening forms of beggary about the church doors, could not but think that the Virgin was partial in her benefits. The hill on which the third church stands is quite high and steep, but the ascent is rendered somewhat easy by broad steps cut in the sides of the hill. They say that on the twelfth of December these steps are thick with kneeling Indians, who go up in that manner to pay their homage and their mite on the spot where the celestial visitor first placed her feet.

n the church, or rather chapel, is a fe-size painting of the Indian to hom Mary appeared, and with it a ill account of the three visits. A hort distance from the church, a lit- e way down the side of the hill, is great stone sail, placed there by a rateful man who was saved from hipwreck by the Virgin of Guada- upe. But the view would be worth limbing a steeper hill. The city at short distance, the Lake Tezcuco leaming in another direction, the many little towns at the foot of the mountains that stint the whole with- a great circle, and over all God's lessed sunshine. Bro. Patterson old me that from the hill we could e five towns in which he had work, nd it is very good to know that the aven of God's pure truth is at work teach these Indians that neither n this hill nor anywhere else must od be worshiped by slight of sym- ol, but in spirit and in truth.

It was a keen and shrewd mind hat saw it, when the idols worship- d for ages were swept from the In- ians, to come to them with another, nd one claiming to be the patron aint of the Indians, condescending them especially. It was a change or the better from their hideous ols and human sacrifices, but now, then, they see no higher than the ravin image. Such is the virtue opposed to rest in this picture that ne cannot enter a pulque shop or ull store of any kind without see- ng a copy placed in a conspicuous osition, and throughout the city any houses were decorated to cele- rate her day.

CHARLOTTE HALLARAN.

City of Mexico, Dec. 22, 1880.

A Clerical Confidence Man.

At the late session of the Louisiana onference at Shreveport a man alling himself Rev. Mortimer C. arlile and having a certificate of ministerial standing in the Cumber- nd Presbyterian Church, appeared efore the Conference for the recog- ition of his orders and for admission to the Conference. His certificate rom the Presbytery contained erasures and other marks which excited Bishop Keener's mind the sus- icion that something was wrong. n Sunday the Bishop called Mr. arlile's attention to the matter, nd that night Mr. Carlile disap- eared. Nothing more was seen or eard of him. His credentials, how- ver, were endorsed as having been ecorded in the clerk's office of Dorsey ounty, Toledo, Ark., and find the ct of the State upon them. Im- ediately after the adjournment of onference, the secretary, Rev. J. T. awyer, wrote to the Clerk of Dorsey ounty, Ark., and received the fol- owing reply:

DEAR SIR: Yours of 27th inst. ad- ressed to Mr. Holmes was handed me for reply. I find on page 483 of Ent. Deed Record, credentials of J. S. Castell recorded, from Elam Caddell, S. C. of the Presbyterian Church Cumberland, and I have good reason to know that the said Castell is now in the penitentiary in the State of Texas for bigamy. He married about thirteen times so I am informed, all of his wives are yet living.

The records here do not show any credentials of Mortimer C. Carlile on record.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant, J. T. RENFROW, Clerk.

DORSEY CO., TOLEDO, ARK., January 1, 1881.

Mr. Carlile, alias Castell, is a first class confidence man, evidently. He is a tall and rather gentlemanly looking man, of spare habit, dark complexion, and looks to be about forty years of age. As a forger of papers, and a counterfeit of clerical sanctity, he can hardly be excelled.

That History.

We call special attention to the communication of Rev. J. G. Jones, which appears on our first page this week. That history of Methodism ought to be published. It contains materials which in no other way can be preserved, and which we cannot afford to lose. It covers a long period and a wide territory, and will be of interest to a great many people. It embodies the materials for the early history of several Conferences, and, whatever may be the other merits of the work, it is almost necessary to any future historian of Methodism in the Southwest. We have not read a page of the manuscript, but from our knowledge of the venerable author, we feel that we can safely say that the history will be of the highest interest, entertaining, instructive, and stimulating to the enterprise and piety of the Church. We do, indeed, most earnestly desire the publication of the work at an early day. The influence of such histories upon the Church cannot be over estimated. Surely more than enough names to ensure the publication, will be furnished by the Methodists of Alabama, Mississippi, Texas and Louisiana. Let us subscribe for the work and have it at once. The aged author is still among us, and can bring out these volumes as no other hand can. It will be a reproach to us if we do not speedily secure their publication.

ACCEPTED.—Of the brethren elected as corresponding editors of this paper all have accepted except Bro. H. D. Moore. We regret that he could not see his way clear to do so. We hope, however, that we may be favored with occasional contributions from him. The readers of the ADVOCATE and the editor will always give him a hearty welcome.

A Visit from Our Missionary to Brazil.

Rev. J. J. Ransom, superintendent of the mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Brazil, writes us that he is to be in Louisville January 16, in Mobile Sunday, January 23, and expects to reach New Orleans Thursday, January 27, remaining over Sunday, January 30. On Monday, January 31, he will leave for Texas, hoping to be in Houston Wednesday, February 2, and in Galveston Sunday, February 6. In view of Bro. Ransom's visit here, the Preachers' Meeting advised the following appointments for him:

1. A union meeting, to be addressed by him at the Felicity Street Church, Friday night, January 28, at seven o'clock.

2. Preaching by Bro. Ransom at the Carondelet Street Church, on Sunday morning, at eleven o'clock, January 30, and at night, at seven o'clock, at St. Charles Avenue.

We urge the members of all our churches in the city to attend the meeting at the Felicity Street Church, on Friday night, January 28, and give Bro. Ransom a cordial and Christian greeting. Bishop Keener and the pastors of our churches are expected to be present, and the services will doubtless be of an interesting character.

Our aged Bishop is hard at work on the Pacific coast. The Pacific Methodist of January 7, says:

Bishop Kavanaugh is "putting in his time in a most effective way. Last week he preached four times at Santa Rosa to the delight of our people. Mrs. Kavanaugh and her friend Mrs. Hamon were with him and aided in organizing an Auxiliary Missionary Society on Sunday. The pastor reports one addition to the Church last Sunday."

Speaking of the revival in San Francisco, the same paper says:

"The meetings have grown more intensely interesting and the results are visible not only in the city but throughout the country. Nearly every church in the city is in a glow of gracious influences. Prayer-meetings are held nightly in some of the outlying churches. Mr. Moody seems to be made of stern stuff; he never grows weary and is never uninteresting. This week he has redoubled his efforts and is holding noon prayer meetings at the Tabernacle on Tyler street; 3 o'clock meetings at Howard Presbyterian Church and preaches at the Howard street Methodist Church at 7 o'clock in the evening and at 8 o'clock is preaching to the great crowd in the Presbyterian church on Mission street. Mr. Hallenbach and Mr. Stebbins are holding Temperance meetings at the Young Men's Christian Association Hall at 3 P. M. Our friends in the country never see any account of conversions in the paper, nor are they talked of here; but nevertheless there are hundreds of souls born into the kingdom. Some of these conversions are very remarkable. It is a blessed work, such as California has never known before."

TAKE NOTICE. I am happy to announce that I will deliver the Wesley Memorial Volume to all subscribers, who paid for it, as rapidly as the book is received from the publishers. As many were not able to give me their post-office, will all who did not, send me a postal directing where to send the book? And will those subscribers who did not pay, please forward the money, that the work may be sent to them without delay?

Please take notice that all others who wish to procure the Wesley Memorial Volume, or to act as agents for it, must apply to the Rev. Dr. J. H. McFerrin, of Nashville, Tenn., if they live in Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, Virginia, or West Virginia; to L. H. Bauguer & Co., of St. Louis, Mo., if they live in Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, or Texas; and to J. W. Burke & Co., of Macon, Ga., if they live in Georgia, South Carolina, Florida, or Alabama. Otherwise, the book may be obtained of duly authorized agents whom the above parties may respectively employ to canvass for it.

If the preachers, itinerant and local, if the editors of our church papers, and of other papers friendly to the cause to which the net proceeds of the volume will be exclusively devoted, will, as far as they can conscientiously, actively push it, the Wesley Monumental Church will be soon completed. Brethren, one and all help!

My address is Macon, Georgia.

J. O. A. Clark, Agt. Wesley Monumental Church.

A Merited Rebuke.

A young Methodist preacher, whose name may be found among the appointments of one of the Texas conferences, was, says the Texas Christian Advocate, the recipient of certain overtures from a clergyman of another denomination. He showed us his reply. We not only approved his manly tone and its stinging rebuke to such unworthy acts on the part of a Christian minister, but secured a copy of the letter for publication, withholding the name of the parties as well as the localities. Our readers can infer what the proposal was from the following very pointed reply:

——— Texas, ——— 1880.

DEAR SIR: Your astonishing letter received this morning. Permit me to say, in answer, that I deem the expression contained in it unworthy of a minister of God, and the offer totally beneath my notice; for I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of Methodism than to dwell in the fine palaces of Episcopalianism.

That you, sir, should endeavor to bribe me to leave the church of my adoption makes me blush for the church of my birth. I trust that I have given no reason to anyone to conclude that I am so inconsistent as to have joined the Methodist church while in heart I was a Protestant Episcopalian; or so venal as for the purely personal consideration of a possibly better position, to turn traitor to my principles.

Trusting that your letter was written in a moment of haste and without due deliberation, I remain, sir,

Your brother in Christ,

GOOD AGENT.—Rev. A. C. Hunnicutt, writing from Pine Apple, Ala., January 19, 1881, says: "The year opens to us here with good signs of spiritual prosperity. I have held two church meetings, where I secured the renewal of nearly all the old subscribers, and added five new ones to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May it live long and do much good in the future, as it has in the past."

ANNOUNCEMENT.—Rev. J. W. Adkisson has been appointed to the pastoral charge of Shubuta circuit, Meridian district, Mississippi Conference, made vacant by the death of Rev. J. J. Smylie.

R. J. JONES, P. E.

MERIDIAN, MISS., January 13, 1881.

Bishop Wightman, says the Southern Christian Advocate January 22, ordained Rev. R. Herbert Jones, elder, one day last week. He was assisted in the service by Rev. W. P. Meazon and Dr. Meyardie. For the past few days the Bishop has not been so well. He has been suffering with severe neuralgic pains. Though somewhat better at this writing, 18th inst., he is still feeble.

—It will be seen by reference to President Bordeaux's card in another column of this week's ADVOCATE that Mansfield Female College is prepared to receive pupils at any time and that the terms are as reasonable as need be. We rejoice to learn that the roll of students is rapidly increasing and that the prospects of the institution were never brighter. This College is the property of the Louisiana Conference; the moral and religious influences are good, and the literary advantages all that can be desired. The spring term opens February 14. We trust this may prove the most prosperous year in the history of the college.

—Our Southern German Methodists at Osyka, Miss., are moving to build a church at that point. They have already secured a lot and the building is under way. They have done what they can, and four hundred dollars more is needed to complete the edifice. There is no Methodist church in Osyka, and one is greatly needed. Liberal people who can help in raising the additional four hundred dollars, are requested to send their contributions to Rev. Dr. J. B. A. Ahrens, of New Orleans, or to Rev. H. G. Wunsch, Osyka Miss.

—Mr. Wm. M. Goodrich died at Poughkeepsie, New York, January 19, 1881, aged seventy-six. Mr. Goodrich was a member of the old firm of Hyde & Goodrich, of this city, of which Griswold & Co., is the successor. His sister, Mrs. Southmayd, is still living in New Orleans. Rev. Dr. Charles Goodrich, rector of the Episcopal Church, in Baton Rouge, is a brother of the deceased.

Books and Periodicals.

THE WESLEY MEMORIAL VOLUME; or Wesley and the Methodist Movement, judged by nearly one hundred and fifty writers, living and dead. Edited by J. O. A. Clark, D. D., LL. D. New York: Phillips & Hunt. Cincinnati: Walden & Stowe. Macon, Ga.: J. W. Burke & Co. Nashville, Tenn.: J. B. McFerrin, Agent. St. Louis, Mo.: L. H. Dameron & Co. 1880.

This book has been so extensively advertised before its appearance that most of our readers are already acquainted with its prominent features.

It is a large volume, an octavo of 743 pages, packed and crammed with Wesley, Wesley in the details of his biography, in every phase of his character and history, in every conceivable aspect of his influence, in his relation to other great men, in his doctrine, his experience, his genius in organization and administration, his character and work as a founder, in his scholarship, his poetry, his attributes and powers as a preacher, his style and capacity as an author and writer.

For the purposes of a brief book notice, there is such an "embarrassment of riches," that an adequate characterization of the work is almost impossible. It is made up of contributions by forty-two living writers of Europe and America, besides extracts from one hundred others, living or dead. The articles are generally very able, and in the best style of some of the best writers of our day. The conception which the volume gives us of Wesley is as complete and satisfactory as possible, and light is thrown upon this most wonderful man from every conceivable point of view, and by many of the most masterly minds of our day, and of a past generation.

The plan of this unique work, and the successful execution of it, are due to the editor, Rev. Dr. J. O. A. Clark, whose good taste and unfatiguable labors have brought it to completion. There are in the volume some curious and rare things, some things not generally known concerning Wesley and his work, and much incidental information concerning his cotemporaries, and the times in which he lived.

To give our readers a notion of the contents, we select a few of the titles of the articles: The Wesley Family, by Mr. George J. Stevenson; Wesley and Methodism, by the editor, Rev. Dr. Clark; Wesley and the Church of England, by Rev. Dr. J. H. Rigg; Wesley and Personal Religious Experience, by Bishop Cyrus D. Foss; Wesley as a Revivalist, by Rev. George Douglass, LL. D.; Wesley the Founder of Methodism, by Bishop H. N. McTyeire; Methodist Doctrine, by Rev. Dr. William Burt Pope; Wesley as an Itinerant, by Bishop George F. Pierce; Wesley and his Literature, by Dr. Punshon; Providence of God in Methodism, by Rev. Dr. Andrew A. Lipscomb; Wesley's Liberality and Catholicity, by Dean Stanley; Wesley and Coke, by Bishop Wightman; Wesley's Death and Character, by Rev. Luke Tyerman.

Besides elaborate and able articles there are in the volume historical and statistical materials of great value and interest. The illustrations consist of steel engravings of John and Charles Wesley, and of Susanna Wesley, fac simile of a letter from Dr. Adam Clark to Lord Teignmouth, and engravings of the memorial tablet in Westminster Abbey, and of the Wesleyan Monumental Church, Savannah, Ga.

Considering the object and scope of the work, we must pronounce it well done, and a most valuable contribution to Wesleyan Literature. If it should fail to complete the Memorial Church, it will be something more than that, a monument in itself to Wesley and Methodism. We hope, however, that the demand for the book will be such that the Monumental Church will be finished within the next few months. We venture to find this one fault. The names of the several writers are not placed at the head of their several articles. It is true they are given in the table of contents, but it would be a convenience and a satisfaction to most readers to see them in connection with the articles themselves.

We are requested to say that Thamerin and Co., St. Louis are sole agents for Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas. Dr. McTerrin for Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia; and J. W. Burke & Co., for Alabama, Georgia, Florida and South Carolina. Lathrop & Wilkins, 112 Camp street, will order the book when desired. The volume is substantially and beautifully bound, and is sold at $3 per copy.

THE KINGDOM OF ISRAEL, from its inception under Joshua, its First President, in the Year of the World 2553, to the Second Advent of Christ. By J. B. Philpott, Mexia, Texas: St. Louis, Mo.: Advocate Publishing House, Logan & Dameron, Managers. 1880.

From the title page we learn that the Kingdom of Israel is considered, first, as typical, under its first three heads, and the United States shown to be the third and last of these heads. And considered second, as anti-typical, and the Confederate States shown to be the grand anti-type on its first appearance, to ultimate in the throne of the Prince of the House of David. The volume is in two parts. Part first, entitled "The Western Star of Empire," is historical and prophetical, in which the prophecy of Obadiah is particularly expounded. Part second is occupied with the seals and vials of Revelation. Whether Mr. Philpott has made out his case and hit upon the true exposition of these mysterious and perplexing scriptures is doubtful. We notice but do not criticise the work. Our readers must examine and form their own conclusions.

THE BIBLE STUDENT'S CYCLOPEDIA; or Aids to Biblical Research. By A. F. Morrow, with an introduction by Rev. James M. Buckley, D. D. New York: N. Tibbals & Sons.

Within the 553 duodecimo pages of this volume there is a wonderful amount of information concerning the Bible and Collateral Knowledge. The contents of the work are in chapters in the form of questions and answers, the questions and answers being in separate chapters, and making separate divisions of the volume. For the use of Sunday schools this arrangement may be the best, but not so convenient for the ordinary reader. There are some excellent maps and illustrations, and the work will be of great service to all who wish to study the bible thoroughly as a book, without special reference to its doctrines. Price $1 50.

—Walk in the light is the title of a little paper covered volume by Rev. George G. Smith, of the North Georgia Conference. When it first reached us it was mislaid, and we have but recently recovered it. It is a very clear statement of the different stages and conditions of the Christian life and experience. The reading and circulation of it cannot fail to do good. We have read it with much pleasure, and we trust with profit. It is published by Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn. The price is ten cents. Pastors would do well to order a supply for distributions.

—We have received from the publishers, J. S. Ogilvie & Co., New York, Scripture Lights on Sabbath Lessons, First Quarter, 1881. A page containing the golden text at the head is devoted to scriptures which shed light upon the lesson of each Sabbath. These pages, fourteen inches by ten, are suspended on a neat roller and with cord attached, so that they may be suspended for convenience. Price, sent by mail, 31 cents.

—The Sunday Magazine, Frank Leslie's Publishing House, New York, has been missing from our table for a good while. The February number, now before us, seems to be unexceptionable in its tone, and in the general excellence of its contents. It is now simply "The Sunday Magazine" and is conducted by Rev. Alfred Taylor. Dr. Deems appears as a prominent contributor. From an examination of the table of contents, as to subjects and authors, we are impressed with the religious and orthodox character of many of the articles. The wood cuts are about as numerous as formerly and not much better. If the Sunday Magazine maintains a pure and evangelical spirit and character we shall wish it a successful career.

The North American Review, February, 1881, has the following articles: 1. The Nicaragua Canal, 2. The Pulpit and the Pew. Oliver Wendell Holmes. 3. Aaron's Rod in politics, Judge Albion W. Tourgee. 4. Did Shakspear Write Bacons Works? James Freeman Clarke. 5. Partisanship in the Supreme Court, Senator John T. Morgan. 6. The ruins of Central America; part 6. Desire Charnay. 7. The poetry of the future, Walt Whitman. Published by D. Appleton & Co., New York. Price $5 a year.

—The Southern Workman is a monthly, devoted to the interest of Negro and Indian Civilization, and is edited and managed by the officers of the Hampton Institute. Published at Hampton, Va., Price $1.00 per annum.

—We have received a copy of Ayers Almanac for 1881. It is in nine different languages. The reader can take his choice. It is of course mainly an advertisement of patent medicines. The Calendar, however, is probably accurate and useful. Published by J. C. Ayers, Lowell, Mass.

Publisher's Department.

☞ We shall do our best to exclude fraudulent advertisements of every description from the ADVOCATE, and ask our friends, in ordering goods from the leading merchants of New Orleans and elsewhere, as represented in our columns, will mention having seen the advertisement in the ADVOCATE. We will also take pleasure in attending personally to any commissions for our friends in the country with which we may be favored, while endorsing our advertisers as being worthy of their patronage.

A young lady once hinted to a gentleman that her thimble was worn out, and asked what reward she merited for her industry. He sent her in answer in the shape of a new thimble, on which were the following lines engraved:

"I send you a thimble, for fingers nimble,
Which I hope will fit when you try it;
It will last you long, if it's half as strong
As the kind which you gave me to buy it."

A service was recently announced at St. Matthew's, Sydenham, London, "for children of the upper classes." Whereupon the following amendment to the well-known saying was promptly offered by a newspaper commentator: "Suffer little children of the upper classes to come unto me."

Just before visiting the menagerie, Johnnie had a passage at-arms with the young man who assisted at his toilet, and with whom he flew into a rage. Arrived at the menagerie, Johnnie was immensely interested by a strange foreign animal with a long little body. "What animal is that, Mamma?" he asked. "It is called an anteater, my son." After long silence: "Mamma, can't we bring Aunt Mary here some day?"

At the Battery baths: A fat man opens the door of his dressing room enough to get his head out and shouts in despair, "Waiter, some one has stolen my trousers." "Impossible, sir; there must be a mistake somewhere; I will search for them." After a while he comes back without them, and says, "I cannot find them, sir; are you quite sure you brought them with you?"

The subject of conversation at an evening entertainment was the sagacity of animals, particularly of dogs. Says Smith: "These are dogs who have more sense than their masters." "Just so," responded young Fitzdoodle, "I've got that very kind of dog myself."

The Senior Greek professor, in his lecture to the juniors, the other day, speaking of the marriage of Venus and Vulcan, remarked that "the handsomest women generally marry the homeliest men, adding, gravely, "There's encouragement for a good many of you."

"You did wrong to shoot that man's dog. You might have pushed him off with the butt of your gun," said the Galveston recorder to a man who was charged with shooting a neighbor's dog. "I would have done that," replied the prisoner, "if the dog had come at me first, but he came at me with his biting end."

What's the matter with the aged people of this country? They seem to be in an abnormal state of repose. There has been no alteration made for nearly two weeks in the party aged one hundred and two who saws four or five cords of wood before breakfast, and then walks twenty miles before dinner.

Manville to his widowed friend Chassable, who has views urged: "Is it true that you've broken off with Sir Henry's daughter?" Chassable: "Alas, yes, I was forced to, although she is a charming woman." Manville: "Why?" Chassable, "Incompatibility of complexion. She does not suit my fortune."

What part of the eye is like a rainbow? The iris. What part is like the schoolboy? The pupil. What part is like the globe? The lid. What part is like the piece of a whip? The lash. What part is like the summit of a hill? The brow.

Charles Dudley Warner, in speaking of the upwards of 6,000,000 hogs slaughtered in Chicago last year, remarks: "The human mind is so constituted that it cannot take in six million hogs at once." But how about Dr. Tanner's stomach at the close of his fast?

She had a pretty diploma tied with a pink ribbon, from one of our best young ladies' colleges. In conversation with a daring and courageous young man, after he had detailed the dangers and delights of riding on a locomotive, she completely upset his opinion of independent education of the sexes by inquiring: "How do they steer locomotives, anyhow?"

Mamma seeks to console her crying child: "Why do you cry, John? What has hurt you?" "Mamma and he bawls more lustily than ever, yesterday I fell down and hurt myself." "Yesterday! Then why do you cry to-day?" "Oh! because you were not at home yesterday."

A lady wants to know why the railroad companies do not provide special cars for tobacco chewers, as well as for smokers. Bless your innocent heart! tobacco-chewers are not set apart so far as that. An ordinary passenger car is good enough for them.

W. C. SHEPARD & CO.—American China dinner, breakfast and tea set, 160 pieces, for $15. Equal in looks and usefulness to French China.

Mr. Lincoln used to tell a story about a big Hoosier who came to Washington during the war and called on a Street Arab for a shine. Looking at the tremendous boots to be blacked the called out to a brother shiner across the street: "come over and help, Jimmy. I've got an army contract."

John Wilkes was once forced to listen to a garrulous story teller whose prolixity wearied him. A friend excused the lack of politeness by saying, "He is in his dotage." "Dotage, sir," he is past dotage; he has got to snoring."

She was beginning to discriminate; but did not see through it quite clearly. Perhaps some of the other ones can help her out of her difficulty. "When I feel out of sorts they call me cross, but when Aunty feels cross, they call her nervous."

A Chicago lady of rather large size was boasting to a lady visitor that she was going to Paris and that she intended to have Worth make her a dress. "Will, my dear," said the other, "will he build scaffolding around you, or will he employ a surveyor?"

"I shall find another channel for my article," wrote the author of a rejected contribution. "That's right," was the answer of the courteous editor. "The British Channel would be an excellent place for it."

Some one suggests that England should establish a Zollvereient garden.

Business Notices.

Mosquito Bites.—An antidote for the poison of mosquito bites has been found in Barnett's Kalliston.

Because it adds to Personal Beauty by restoring color and lustre to gray or faded hair, and is beneficial to the scalp, is why Parker's Hair Balsam is such a popular dressing.

CANVASSERS make from $25 to $50 per week selling goods for E. G. RIDEOUT & CO., 10 Barclay St., New York. Send for Catalogue and terms.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

MANSFIELD, LOUISIANA.

Owned, controlled and managed by the Louisiana Annual Conference.

Course of study equal to any college in the South. Its roll of pupils has nearly doubled in three months, and still they come. Noted for healthfulness of locality. All at living rates.

Total expense for Spring term, commencing February 14, 1881, only $75 in literary and music course. Music $30. No extras. Let Louisianians build up their own schools.

A specimen copy of College News free on application. Address REV. J. LANE ROBERTS, President.

An Experienced Lady

Desires a position in a school as teacher of French and Instrumental Music. Would assist also in English Branches. Address, Madame C., office Christian Advocate, New Orleans.

MUNSEY'S SERMONS and LECTURES.

Price, $1.50.

PRESS OPINIONS 5th Edition.

This is truly a wonderful book, as might be expected from such a remarkable author. Dr. Munsey's "Thought made up of serious lectures and fragments, it takes hold of the reader with the grip of a master of romance. Theological Monthly, Richmond.

The publication of the sermons of a great preacher usually results in disappointment to his admirers. But the volume will prove an exception. Nashville Christian Advocate.

We do not hesitate to pronounce it one of the most remarkable books of sermons that has ever come under our notice. St. Louis Christian Advocate.

It is one of the most remarkable productions of the Methodist pulpit of this age, and a Methodist Reorder, Cyclone, Pa.

We are convinced that this volume will not only sustain the great preacher's reputation, but increase it. When one reads his sermons in the "Divine Legend and Week" he naturally thinks of Methodist prose writers, as Fiskine or Jeremy Taylor, or Barrow, and such like masters of expression. Wesleyan Christian Advocate, Macon, Ga.

They ought to rank with our best English classics. Rev. W. Cowell Brown, of London.

These are the finest fruits of Dr. Munsey's wonderful powers, and are one of them would make the future and fortune of an ordinary man. Texas Christian Advocate.

There is no man, but one Munsey and Methodism will never see his like again. Raleigh Christian Advocate.

Munsey's sermons gained something in the delivery but less than in the case of many other great preachers. Their excellence and mighty all might make them attractive are transferred to the printed page. Reader they are not a mere memento of a wonderful man, but the living echo of words that burned and they are the man himself, and the very voice that thrilled and enchained. They are not pictures hanging in the dark, but fresh and luminous, and still moist with the last touches of the genial genius. New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Bishop Keener has done his Church and all Churches good service in perpetuating this preaching of one of the most brilliant preachers of the South. The sermons here collected deserve certainly survival. One admiring hears his thought as he reads the fiery lines. His sermons would be a profitable study to the orator of a colder clime. Bishop Gilbert Haven in New York Christian Advocate.

Address LATHROP & WILKINS, 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF METHODISM.

BY REV. W. C. BLACK.

Concerning this work D. A. Parker, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, says: "The history, statistics, polity and doctrines of Methodism are clearly and compactly stated by the author, and the causes, under God, of the wonderful success of Methodism, are unfolded with intelligent acumen and analytical power. We hope it will be extensively circulated. The Mississippi Methodist says: "The work shows the hand of a master. Everybody, friend or foe of Methodism, ought to read it." Pastors will do a good work by encouraging it among their people. One order has been received for three hundred copies for gratuitous distribution. More than a thousand copies will be sold within sixty days of its publication. Price 20 cents; or $2 per dozen. For sale by LATHROP & WILKINS, 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

DR. EDWARD HARRISON,

112 Canal Street, from 11 to 4 P. M.

NEW ORLEANS.

W. F. MELLEN,

Attorney at Law,

12 CARONDELET ST.,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

UNITED STATES

Four Per Cent. Bonds

BOUGHT AND SOLD BY

New Orleans National Bank,

58 CAMP STREET.

Carpet and Oil Cloth Warehouse.

ELKIN & CO.,

100 - - - CANAL STREET - - - 100

New styles of

MOQUETTE, VELVET, BODY BRUSSELS, and TAPESTRY BRUSSELS, with border to match.

3-PLY and INGRAINS in great variety.

OIL-CLOTHS of all widths.

WINDOW SHADES and CURTAINS, new patterns.

CORNICES and CORNICE POLES.

MATTINGS of every description.

CURTAIN GOODS, TASSELS, CORDS, GIMPS, Etc.

Our prices for corresponding qualities of goods are as low as any house in the South or West.

DR. C. J. BICKHAM,

RESIDENCE AND OFFICE,

221 Jackson St., Bet. Chestnut and Coliseum

NEW ORLEANS.

Office Hours—Eight A. M. and three to four P. M.

Sterling Music Books.

NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY METHOD FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

In parts; each, $1 50; or complete, $3 25. This is a method of established reputation, which has been in constant use in the great Conservatory, and is getting to be everywhere known and valued. Has received decided commendations from the best teachers.

DICTIONARY OF MUSICAL INFORMATION. $1 25. Very convenient book of reference.

GROVE'S DICTIONARY OF MUSIC AND MUSICIANS. Vol. I. $4 00. A grand encyclopedia.

STAINER AND BARRETT'S DICTIONARY OF MUSICAL TERMS. Complete $3 00. A famous and useful work.

RICHTER'S COUNTERPOINT. $2 50.

RICHTER'S FUGUE. $2 00. Two standard works on Composition.

THE WELCOME CHORUS. $1 00. For High Schools, and SONG BELLS, cents. For Common Schools, should be in the mind of every teacher in need of new books.

JOHNSON'S NEW METHOD FOR HARMONY. $1 00. By A. N. Johnson. Is an excellent for ease, simplicity, and thoroughness.

TEMPERANCE LIGHT, $2 50. TEMPERANCE JEWELS, 35 cts. and BELL'S TEMPERANCE GLEE BOOK, cents. Are the three best Temperance Books. TRY THEM.

Any book mailed post-free for above prices.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.

C. H. DITSON & CO.,

No. 843 Broadway, New York.

ELGIN WATCHES.

All styles, Gold, Silver and Nickel, $6 to $150. Chains, etc., sent C. O. D. to be examined. Write for Catalogue to STANDARD AMERICAN WATCH CO., PITTSBURGH, PA.

GREAT WESTERN GUN WORKS, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Send stamp for Catalogue.

Rifles, Shot Guns, Revolvers, sent c. o. d. for examination.

Agricultural.

THE GUINEA FOWL.—A Southern correspondent of the Poultry Record says this much-abused bird receives its name [illegible] supposed to have had its origin, and where it still exists in an undomesticated state. Its beauty and vivacity should make it a favorite with the fancier everywhere, but more especially at the South, where the climate brings fully into play its more useful qualities. It is objected to by many on account of its noise, its roaming and its disposition to conceal its nest. These faults are more than counterbalanced by its laying qualities, watchfulness, inoffensiveness, and last, but in this section not least, propensity for "roosting high." Guineas prefer to roost in trees, except in extremely bad weather, and there bid defiance to the oldest and most cunning depredator. They are wary, and on the approach of a hawk or other danger, sound the alarm quickly, thereby allowing ample time for chickens to hunt cover. No matter how many dogs you keep they note immediately the approach of a stray canine, and follow him with an incessant clamor till he takes his leave. This, again, is a great advantage in a country abounding in "cups of low degree," all prone to prowl and "seek what eggs they may devour." Their eggs, though small, are of fine flavor, and the flesh of the fowl, three to six months old, delicious.

There are frequent enquiries as to how to distinguish the sexes. The difference is easily noted by a careful observer. The cock is larger than the hen, has a more arch, his comb is higher, his wattles much larger, with a lateral projection which the hens have not. His cry is entirely different from the females' "potrack." He has a prancing, tiptoe gait; which is especially noticeable when they are being fed. Though usually mating in pairs, they are not strictly monogamous. In this latitude (Ala.) they usually begin to lay in the latter part of February, and, if not allowed to sit, continue this number, on the approach of cold weather, when they "dry up" and remain till the approach of spring. If "broken up" when young, they frequently begin again in three days, rarely longer than a week. The hen usually lays about eleven o'clock, and approaching the nest, which is concealed in high grass, in a stealthy, zig-zag course. They rarely remain on the nest longer than five minutes. A peculiar noise announces that the egg is laid, when she quietly and speedily leaves the spot. Frequently the cock stands a few feet off during the process. When the hen has laid twenty-five or thirty eggs, she becomes "broody." No need to confine her. As sick lead across the nest does the business. As several lay together, it is not unusual to get a forty-five or eighty eggs from one nest.

The plan of raising them is as follows: Never allow the guinea to sit; she is a poor mother. Place twenty to twenty-five eggs under a common hen. Set two at once, if practicable, and give all to the hen when hatched. At the expiration of twenty-six or twenty-seven days the hatching is through. If eggs of the same age are used, frequently the whole brood is out in three hours from "pipping" of the first egg. Place the hen and brood in a dry coop in a sunny spot—your garden is the best place. Keep the coop closed for two or three days, till the young learn the call of the hen and get over their extreme shyness. At the end of that time allow the brood to go and come at will, but keep the mother confined for six weeks. Feed on cornmeal moistened with water or sour milk, to which onion-tops, chopped fine, are added. Once a week mix in a little cayenne pepper. They are very fond of this diet. At this age they venture only a few feet, returning often, but soon range over the whole garden. They do no harm and destroy insects innumerable. When the hen is released, she takes them to the poultry house, where they may be allowed to roost till three or four months old, when they must go to the trees, which they readily do. They go to roost much later than other poultry, and can be shut out by closing the entrance after your hens are "in bed." The least damp is disastrous to the chicks, unless quickly dried; hence confinement of the hens is necessary. No more forlorn object can be imagined than a cold, wet Guinea chick. After two months they require no food. They can conduct a campaign successfully without a "commissariat," as they are always in "marching order," and are wonderful "foragers."

TREES AND SHRUBS.—The Gardener's Monthly says trees always give a great value to an estate, and, as they grow up, not only really add to the beauty of the place, but much lessen its working expenses. They also give a little wildness to the spot, which is in itself a beauty; for, when we speak of neatness as essential in a garden, we mean, of course, those parts which would be expected to keep neat, and which will look all the more neat for having a little wildness to contrast with them.

It is a pleasure to note that the taste for trees is increasing. They bring us the best form of beauty, and in a state that does not cost much to keep. And mid-trees, shade, clumps of shubbery often have a beautiful effect, and once planted, require no care for many years. They may be selected from among the spireas, lilacs, syringas, mock-orange, upright honeysuckles, weigelas, deutzias, forsythias, elæagnuses, ferns ampelopsis, hypericum, willows, almonds, calycanthus, dwarf horse chestnuts, dogwoods, purple hazels, snowdrop trees, lord cherries, etc.

Some judgment is required in pruning flowering shrubs, roses, etc., although it is usual to act as if we were one of the most common-place operations. One of the most clumsy of the hands is commonly set to work with a pair of shears, and he goes through the whole place, clipping off everything indiscriminately. Distinction should be made between those flowering shrubs that make a vigorous growth, and those which grow weakly; and between those which flower on the old wood of last year, and those which flower on the new growth of next season, as the effect of pruning is to force a strong and vigorous growth. Those specimens that already grow too strong to flower well, should be only lightly pruned; and, in the same individual, the weakest shoots should be cut in more severely than the stronger ones. Some things like the mock orange, lilacs, and others, flower on the wood of last year to prune these much now, therefore, destroys the flowering; while such as althæas, which flower on the young wood, cannot be too severely cut in looking to that object alone.

Wherever any part of a tree does not grow freely, pruning of such weak growth, in season, will induce it to push more freely next year. All scars made by pruning off large branches should be painted or tarred over, to keep out the rain. Many fruit trees become hollow, or fall into premature decay, from the rain penetrating through old saw cuts made in pruning. Also the branches should be cut close to the trunk, so that no dead stumps shall be produced on the tree, and bark will readily grow over. Many persons cut off branches of trees in midsummer, in order that the [illegible] readily clothe the wound with new bark, but the loss of much foliage in summer injures the tree, and besides, painting the scar removes all danger of rotting at the wound.—Register.

MONEY VALUE OF A COW.—A good cow, says Henry Stewart, such as a careful person would select, will yield from twelve to sixteen quarts of milk daily, when fresh, to three or four at the end of ten months. This will amount to an average of eight to ten quarts a day for three hundred days, or 2,500 quarts, at least, in a year. Each quart is worth to a family six cents at least; that is, the ordinary milk supplied by dealers or farmers costs at least that price; but this is not equal in value to milk from a good, well-kept family cow. If the owner of such a cow has a surplus of milk, it can, as a rule, be very readily sold, for six cents a quart to neighbors, who will be glad to have such a chance; so that the income in money from a family cow may be estimated at $150 a year. If butter is made, the 2,500 quarts of milk should yield two hundred and fifty pounds of butter, which is worth thirty cents a pound, or $75, and the skimmed milk is worth two cents a quart, or near $50, in all $125. It will serve a sufficiently good purpose, however, to take $100 as the gross yearly income from a good cow, and as the basis for computing the actual value where milk can be sold for five or six cents a quart. Everywhere the relative value will bear an even ratio with the cost, because where milk is less the cost of keeping is less. The object is to show that there is a profit in keeping a cow, and having gained a basis for reaching the income, the next point to consider is the cost of keeping her, and the exact profit realized or modey, leaving over advantages to speak of themselves. But it ought not to be forgotten that there are cows that will not produce half the above mentioned quantity of milk, and that will not milk ten months out of twelve, and there are cows that will do this, and enough of them; and it is the lostness of those who want such cows to look for them, and not to be contrit to take a poor one at less price; because a poor cow will eat as much as a good cow, and costs as much for lodging and care, so that the profit of keeping a cow will depend altogether upon her character. Nevertheless, there are hundreds of dairymen who should know better, who keep cows that do not pay for their feed, and, strangely enough, they continue to keep them while knowing this.—Mobile Register.

HAY IN HOLLAND.—In various parts of Holland as, for instance, in the Province of Friesland many of the farmers keep a stock of from thirty to eighty head of cattle, which in winter time must be brought under cover and stall-fed. In consequence of this general practice, enormous supplies of hay are necessary. To provide these, the mown grass is allowed to lie for two days or more, with occasional turning over; and is then placed for further drying in large barns, where it is piled in heaps from ten to thirteen yards high. Such piles often contain from 100,000 to 200,000 kilogrammes of hay apiece. To render it specially suitable for cattle, it is subjected to a process of subdued fermentation, which makes it more palatable and easier of digestion. This is brought about by bringing in the hay while not yet quite dry and treading it down firmly. As thus treated, it frequently acquires such a degree of heat as to fire spontaneously, and at the same time set the barn in which it is stored in flames. This not uncommonly happens, unless the farmer is specially careful. Supposing all to go well, the hay thus treated acquires a peculiar honey-like smell and a sweet flavor. Many of its organic constituents undergo a change as, for instance, its starch, which is converted into dextrine. The chemical analysis of fresh-made hay shows the following composition: fourteen per cent. water, six per cent. inorganic salts, and eighty per cent. organic compounds. After successful fermentation it contains 54 parts of albuminates, one part of fat, and forty-one parts of carbhydrates, the greater part of which is converted into dextrine. The remainder is indigestible fibrous matter, which is given off in the excrement. Hay put up in ricks does not go through this favorable fermentation, because the outer surfaces of the stack are too much cooled by the air. On the flooring of stables and sheds, hay scarcely ever ignites spontaneously, because it is never piled up in thick layers, and so cools far better than when stacked in ricks.—Herald.

WHY BEES WORK IN THE DARK.—Every one knows what fresh honey is—a clear, yellow syrup, without any trace of solid sugar in it. After straining, it gradually assumes a crystal appearance—it candies, as the saying is, and ultimately becomes a solid mass of sugar. It has been suspected that this change has been due to photographic action; the same agent which alters the molecular arrangement of the iodide of silver on the excited collodion plate, and determines the formation of camphor and iodine crystals in a bottle, causes honey to assume a crystalline form. Mr. Scheibler inclosed honey in well corked flasks, some of which he kept in perfect darkness, while the others were exposed to the light. The result has been that the portion exposed to the light soon crystallizes, while that kept in the dark remains unchanged. Hence, we see why the bees are so careful to obscure the glass windows which are sometimes placed in their hives. The existence of the young depends on the liquidity of the saccharine food presented to them, and if light were allowed access to this, in all probability it would prove fatal to the inmates of the hive.—Western Farmer.

COAL ASHES.—The value of coal ashes for small city gardens has been frequently alluded to, and now that such ashes are more abundant and easy of access, their value as a fertilizer will be more often tested. The Husbandman reports an experiment made with coal ashes, applied at the rate of two hundred bushels to twenty square rods, or ten bushels to the square rod. The soil was compact mid-heavy. The ashes were drawn on, late in the autumn and spread on the ground, which had been recently plowed. In the spring the plowing was repeated, thoroughly mixing the ashes with the soil. The ground was planted with garden vegetables. The beneficial result was in the correction of the heavy character of the soil, the ashes acting mechanically and not as a manure, and producing a satisfactory improvement.

Glass may be powdered to render it suitable for glass paper, for filtering varnishes, etc., by heating it red-hot and then suddenly plunging it in water.

Household.

A CHAPTER ON PICKLES.—As this is the season when nearly every housekeeper is engaged in making pickles for [illegible] gives [illegible] receipts which are said to be "splendid."

CUCUMBER CATSUP.—One dozen of large green cucumbers (grated,) one pint of grated onions and one pint of grated horse-radish. Put in a jar and season with cloves and pepper; scald vinegar and pour on hot.

GREEN TOMATO PICKLES.—One peck of green tomatoes, one cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of cinnamon, one of cloves, one of allspice, and one of white mustard seed, all ground. Lay the tomatoes, sliced, with a little salt between the layers, over night; then drain off the water, cover with vinegar, add spices and sugar, and boil a few minutes, stirring to prevent burning.

HIGDEM.—One peck of green tomatoes and half a pint of salt; cover with water and let them stand twenty-four hours; then drain. Add twelve green peppers, twelve onions (if you choose,) and one small head of cabbage, and chop the whole; scald in weak vinegar and drain that off; then add one pint of molasses, ground cloves, allspice and grated horse-radish; mix, put in a jar, cover with vinegar, and put one pound of brown sugar on top.

PICKLED SEED CUCUMBERS.—Pare ripe cucumbers, take out the seeds, wash in cold water and wipe dry with a cloth. Cut in strips and cover cold vinegar over them. Let them stand twenty-four hours. If the vinegar is weak, pour away part and add new. To one quart of vinegar add one and a half pounds of sugar, half an ounce of cinnamon buds, and the cucumbers; boil until the cucumbers are clean. After a few days they will be ready for use, and are excellent.

CROW-CROW.—One quart of small cucumbers; one pint of onions, one quart of green tomatoes (sliced,) one cauliflower (cut in strips,) three red peppers (sliced;) scald in salt and water. After draining, pour over it hot vinegar and let it stand two or three days; then drain off the old vinegar. Take one package of English mustard, one quart of vinegar, one and a half cupfuls of brown sugar and half cupful of flour; boil the vinegar; mix up the other ingredients in a little cold vinegar, and pour into the hot; let it boil up, and pour (while hot) over the pickles.—New England Farmer.

COOKING AND HAPPINESS.—It is positively certain that a slovenly, slattery method of preparing food at home often drives a man from his own table. Perhaps there is nothing so positively irritating to a wife as to hear commended those viands which have been furnished to a husband at some other table. It engenders a feeling akin to jealousy. It is a tacit reproach which many of us who have charge of the home table feel most keenly. Conceal our chagrin as we may, though the bread-winner may make no complaint, every time he dines away from home, there is the suspicion that, if our dinners had been better served, the absence of the husband would have been less frequent. Sentimentality and that lofty flight of imagination, which thinks that perfect indifference to food is the nearest approach to Buddhistic happiness, will never appreciate how absolutely practical are the physical wants of men and women. Asceticism is just as bad a vice as overluxurious living. We cannot hope to rival the Vatels or Carêmes at home, but we can by a little care, thought and good judgment, present good food properly cooked at our tables. The unhappiness in many a house, the quasi widowhood of a wife, the foundering of her life, the smothering of every hope, have often arisen from her own fault, for she has not known, or has been indifferent, how to make her home a pleasant one. There was once an epitaph written on a good wife, "She lived forty years a happy wife, and never once slammed the door." This might be repeated, only changing the conclusion, "and never once cooked a bad dish.—Methodist.

ANTIDOTE FOR SNAKE POISON.—During a long residence in tropical countries, where venomous snakes abound, I learned by actual practice, that ammonia given inwardly, in few drops mixed with water and applied outwardly, is the sure antidote of snake poison. Since my return to the United States I have seen it applied, on my recommendation, in two instances with complete success. In both cases many hours had elapsed from the time of receiving the bite until the ammonia was taken. Applied and a dose taken immediately after the bite of course is more effectual. As large a dose as the patient can stand without taking the skin off his mouth and throat will be the guide as to quantity. On the Amazon River and its tributaries I passed several years, and each one of our party carried ammonia in his pocket when going to the woods and through the thick undergrowth. It is necessary, when living in that country, to look under your pillow at night before going to bed; it is a favorite place for snakes and in the morning examine the inside of your shoes for scorpions. Ammonia relieves one at once from the sting of a scorpion. I am not a doctor, but only wish to give the public the benefit of my experience. If the information should save one person, I shall be thankful. Sule, in the World.

TO MAKE REAL HONEY SOAP.—Cut two pounds of common bar soap into thin shavings, and put it in a pail, with barely hot water enough to cover it. Place the pail into a kettle of boiling water, and when its contents are melted, stir them thoroughly, and add a quarter of a pound of honey and a quarter of a pound of almond oil, and a quarter of a pound of powdered borax. Mix all together by stirring well for ten minutes. Then add oil of cinnamon, a few drops, or oil of bergamot, or any scent which is preferred. Mix it well, and turn the soap into a deep dish to cool, then cut into squares. It can be made into sand soap balls, by adding equal quantities of white sand and Indian meal, until it is so stiff that you can roll it in the hands. There is no soap that will whiten the hands like this.

BEEF HASH.—Two tumblers of hot water, a large spoonful of butter, three tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, and the same of fine bread crumbs; thin season highly with cayenne pepper, adding three tumblers of cold beef minced. It should all be stirred well together and served as soon as hot.

CREAMED OYSTERS.—Put the liquor emptied from a quart of oysters into a saucepan; add a half cup of butter, two tablespoons flour and one cup of curry powder; well mixed; let boil, add oysters and a little salt; boil up once and serve.

Educational.

—Hon. Levi Parsons, of Fort Plain, N. Y., has just acquired an additional title to nobility, by a scholarship en- [illegible] Union College of [illegible] He had previously given the same princely sum to found a library for the people of Gloversville, N. Y., his native town. As an eminent barrister he gained fame and fortune in California, and has returned to his early home to bless it with his generous and carefully awarded gifts. He will thus become the guardian and benefactor in perpetuity of a goodly number of worthy and poor young men whom he will virtually send to college, and help at least to support and educate, thus fitting them for a useful and honorable career in life. It is a happy thought in Judge Parsons to use his abundant means in this way, and fitly places the climax on his long and honorable career on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. May he long live to continue such noble deeds; but live or die, his memory will be precious to those who are aided by his wise generosity; and the college may congratulate itself in having so valuable and noble a friend.

—Col. Charles H. Lewis, of Boston, has recently guaranteed the endowment of a large sum to Norwich University, Northfield, Vermont, and that institution, by legislative enactment, will hereafter be kitown as Lewis College. The University was founded in 1834, by Captain Alden Partridge, a former superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point, and was formally chartered by the Vermont Legislature. When the Rebellion broke out, in 1861, all the senior class and many from other classes joined the army, and for two years there were no commencement exercises at the institution. Several prominent business men, becoming interested in the College, are also contributing freely toward a further endowment. The aid which Colonel Lewis has now given it will relieve it from all its financial embarrassments, and insure for it not only the success and prosperity of the past, but a still fuller career in the future.—N. Y. Independent.

—The Girl's Seminary at Northfield, established by Mr. Moody, is full. It has a hundred pupils. Applications for admittance are so many that a house twice the size of the present one could be filled at once. The Indian girls are making great progress; they work well and excel in several studies, and are specially fond of music. They are both docile and happy. They are to become teachers among their own people. The great need of this seminary is said to be a library.

South Carolina has now 2,073 public schools, 3,171 teachers, and 135,072 pupils. The school fund amounts to $351,115. Of public and private schools and colleges there are altogether 3,331 in the State. The State Superintendent does not recommend any increase in the general school tax, and looks to local district taxation as the means of supplementing the State fund. The aid heretofore granted to the schools from the Peabody Fund is to be devoted to the education of teachers.

—At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of the Northwest, at Chicago, Ill., the Hon. Cyrus H. McCormick paid over as a new and unconditional gift the sum of $75,000, making, with previous gifts, a total sum of more than $200,000 presented by him to that institution. Mr. McCormick also pledges himself to give $5,000 for every like sum presented by any person after a fund of $50,000 has been raised from other sources.

—There are six cosmopolitan schools in San Francisco, in which French or German is taught. There are 438 pupils studying French, and 2,085, studying German. Of all these pupils 639 are the children of American parents. The annual expenses of these schools amount to $6,528; and the progress of the pupils is exceedingly satisfactory. It is proposed to establish a cosmopolitan primary school.

One hundred and nineteen ministers have graduated from the college of Liberal Arts of the Northwestern University. Sixty-five of these have also graduated from theological schools, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. Ten others are still students of theology. The whole number (seventy-five) with the exception of four, have pursued their theological studies at the Garrett Biblical Institute.

—The State of New Jersey offers the sum of twenty dollars to every one of her free public schools, with which to start a library, provided the district raises as much more. Ten dollars is added yearly, upon the same conditions. The sums are small; but they will act as an incentive to the formation of school libraries and the idea is worthy of emulation.

—The Hebrew Union College is to be established permanently in Cincinnati, where a house has been purchased for its accommodation. The institution is maintained by voluntary subscriptions. There are only three Hebrew colleges in this country—one in New York, one in Philadelphia, and the third is that in Cincinnati.

—The Lowell Institute, of Boston, was founded by John Lowell, in 1835, who left it a legacy of $250,000, which is said to have trebled in value. Courses on physics, chemistry, botany, zoology, mineralogy, literature, natural theology, and such other subject as the wants and taste of the age may demand, are given each winter.

—The preparatory department of Lincoln University has sent altogether four hundred young colored men to the South as teachers or ministers. The collegiate department has graduated one hundred and thirty-three students.

—The Siberian University is rapidly becoming established. The Russian government, before the foundation-stone was laid, had expended $65,000. A library of 15,000 volumes has already been collected.

—The total cost of text-books for a pupil passing through the primary and grammar grades of the San Francisco schools is $7.25. The cost of books for the high-school is $38.85.

—The public schools of New York State cost nearly $10,300,000, of which $7,750,000 was for teachers' salaries. The school-houses in the State are worth $31,000,000.

—The teachers of Colorado say, formally, that the School of Mines, School of Agriculture and State University ought to be consolidated for the sake of economy and concentration.

—There are 3,651 pupils enrolled in the Davenport, Iowa, public schools, and of these 2,216 study German.

—The colored people of Baltimore are to have two schools, taught by colored teachers.

—The bonded debt of the University of Virginia has been reduced to $80,000.

EDUCATIONAL.

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE,
ABINGDON, VA.

[illegible] faculty, this is one of the most thoroughly equipped schools in the South. It is located in one of the finest sections of Virginia, 2,000 feet above the sea.

Bishop McTyeire, Dr. Garland, Dr. Summers and Dr. A. W. Wilson give it their cordial endorsement.

Music is a specialty. The director of this department, Prof. V. Knerlinger, is a noted teacher and composer, and his assistants are thoroughly cultivated musical artists.

A full course of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Natural Science, and Mental and Moral Philosophy is taught with great care.

The fare is good, and every care is taken of the health of the young ladies.

Parents living in the South would do well to send their daughters here to spend the summer.

$200 paid in advance will cover board, tuition, fuel, washing and lights for forty weeks. Music is $50 additional.

Spring session begins February 4, 1881. A discount of twenty per cent. to Methodist preachers, and Publishing House bonds taken from them at par.

Send for catalogue to

REV. E. E. ROSS, President.

HAMBURG (ARK.) HIGH SCHOOL,
Thirty Miles North of Rastrop, La.

This institution, for both sexes, now in its fourth year, has 60 months yet remaining. Its facilities for educating are peculiar, and its charges are moderate. All modern improvements introduced. Faculty full and experienced. The principal boards his teachers and pupils, regarding the latter as his own children.

One hundred and twenty-five dollars will cover all school expenses, except Music.

City inquiries are referred to Judge R. B. Todd, A. M. Bonner and J. M. Lewis, Esqs., to Rev. Dr. C. W. Carter and Bishop Keener.

D. C. B. CONNERLY,
January 6, 1881. Principal.

READVILLA SEMINARY,
BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA.

A home school for girls. Thorough training in all departments. Full corps of efficient teachers. Expenses moderate. Numbers limited.

For particulars address

MRS. MARY W. REED,
Principal.

Memphis Conference Female Institute,
JACKSON, TENNESSEE.

REV. A. W. JONES, A. M., D. D., President.

This well-known College of the South and West begins its Fall session on the First Monday in September. Opening Concert and Address Tuesday, September 7, 1880. For thirty-six years there has been an average of more than a dozen graduates annually.

The Faculty is full and efficient. The determination is to stand among the foremost in the progress of Science, Language and Art.

For further information apply to the President.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE,
AT BATON ROUGE, LA.

The next session of this school will begin September 9, 1880.

This is a family Boarding School for boys. The healthfulness of the location is unsurpassed. Instruction thorough as all that is necessary to prepare the student for any grade in college or any pursuit in life. Discipline parental. The constant personal care of the principals given to the health, morals and manners of the pupils.

For circulars, with necessary information, apply to

W. H. S. MAURDER,
Baton Rouge, La.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,
JACKSON, LOUISIANA.

Opens September 6, 1880. The last session was the most prosperous one since the war. The whole cost of board and tuition need not exceed $140 in the Preparatory Department, nor $164 in College classes for the scholastic year. Send for a Catalogue.

C. F. ANDREWS, President.

East Mississippi Female College,
MERIDIAN, MISSISSIPPI.

REV. J. W. ADKISSON, A. M., President.

A chartered and prosperous Southern school for girls and young ladies. Few schools have grown more steadily and rapidly in public confidence and patronage. Increased in numbers during the past seven years as the following figures show: 56, 62, 86, 94, 93, 87, 113. Commanded during the last year, from Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee and Alabama, its past, history, increasing facilities, accessibility and methods of close and thorough instruction assure its friends of a long and prosperous future for the institution. Send for catalogue.

HIWASSEE COLLEGE,
EAST TENNESSEE.

Founded 1849, and located where

Pure waters flow,
Sleek cattle low,
Cool breezes blow,
Ripe apples grow.

Excellent and tried teachers. Terms very favorable. The Female Department is at SWEETWATER, on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad. The Male Department, at HIWASSEE COLLEGE POST-OFFICE, seven miles out in the country. A neat monthly paper, the "Hiwassee College Reporter," at fifty cents a year. Address

J. H. BRUNNER, President.

JEFFERSON COLLEGE,
HIGH SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND YOUNG MEN.

Six miles from Natchez, Miss. Session begins September 16. Full corps of instructors. Course of study thorough and extensive. Nearly fifty boarders from abroad. Pupils from a distance board with the principal. Entire expense for ten months, $145. For catalogues address the principal,

J. S. RAYMOND,
Washington, Adams county, Miss.

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE,
SUMMERFIELD, ALA.,

Will begin its forty-first session October 4, 1880. Great attention paid to the regular course. Teachers in the Music and Art departments selected with reference to special fitness. Charges moderate.

For further information address

H. M. MOSS, A. M., President.

HOMER MALE COLLEGE

THE TWENTY-FIRST SESSION

will begin the

FIRST OF SEPTEMBER 1880.

Address R. A. SMITH,
President.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Crescent Insurance Co.,
67 & 69 Camp Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

ORGANIZED 1869. REORGANIZED 1880.
Cash Capital $100,000.

SOLICITS
FIRE, RIVER AND MARINE RISKS.

W. R. LYMAN, President.
S. O. NEWMAN, Vice President.
CHAS. E. RICE, Secretary.

SPORTSMEN'S DEPOT,
RICHARD RHODES,
55 ST. CHARLES STREET 55
NEW ORLEANS.

Articles for Fishermen of all Kinds.

Rods, Nets, Hooks, Lines, and every desirable article for the Angler, wholesale and retail. Guns imported to order. J. R. Cooper's Breech and Muzzle Loading Guns always on hand. All kinds of Ammunition at factory prices. Repairing of Guns carefully done by experienced workmen, and Fishing Rods made to order. Address Postoffice Box 1501.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS.

SIZES AND PRICES.

Diam. of Bell.	Wt. of Bell.	Cost of Bell & Yoke.	Cost of Bell & Hanging.
No. 1	95 lbs.	250 lbs.	$ 25 00
No. 6	270 lbs.	460 lbs.	50 00
No. 7	360 lbs.	580 lbs.	50 00
No. 8	540 lbs.	730 lbs.	75 00
No. 9	880 lbs.	928 lbs.	100 00

RUMSEY & CO.,
Seneca Falls, N. Y., U. S. A.

We Now Illustrate and Describe our Celebrated Silver Watches and send for a Specimen. It sells how I send watches to all parts of U. S. to be examined before paying any money. Unlimited references. N. H. White, Jeweler, Newark, N. J.

EDUCATIONAL.

TEACHERS,

SCHOLARS

AND

DEALERS

Are hereby advised that the

Largest Stock and Most

Complete Assortment of

SCHOOL BOOKS

in the South-west is now in stock and ready to fill all orders, large or small at Publishers' prices at

112 CAMP STREET,

NEW ORLEANS.

All the books used in this section supplied at short notice and prices guaranteed as low as they can be had elsewhere. Catalogues mailed on application. Also a general line of

School Supplies,

SLATED PAPER,
SLATED CLOTH,
LIQUID SLATING,
BLACKBOARDS,
BLACKBOARD RUBBERS,
CHALK CRAYONS,
MATHEMATICAL INSTRUMENTS,
NUMERICAL FRAMES,
SCHOOL SATCHELS,
BOOK STRAPS,
WRITING PAPER,
DRAWING PAPER,
BLOTTING PAPER,
WRITING BOOKS,
COMPOSITION BOOKS,
SLATES AND PENCILS,
INK, INK STANDS, PENS,
PENHOLDERS, CALL BELLS,

Kindergarten Material,

ETC., ETC.

Send for any thing you want or address for prices.

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

In addition to the above we keep a complete line of all the Standard religious publications, for pastors, members and Sunday-schools. Prices quoted on application.

Southwestern Agency for

Readers' and Writers' Economy Co.

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD & Co.,

AMERICAN CHINA HOUSE,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans

We append a few prices:

The American China Dinner, Breakfast and Tea Set, comprising 160 Pieces, for $12.

A Real French China Dinner Set, 115 Pieces, for $17.

English Stone China Dinner Set, 124 Pieces, for $10.

English Stone China Chamber Set, comprising 10 Pieces, for $2 50.

Decorated Chamber Sets, with different Colored Bands, 10 Pieces, for $3 50.

Glass Goblets, from 60 cents to $1 per dozen.

Particular attention given to Novelties and Specialties pertaining to the House-Furnishing Department. Orders promptly attended to. We have just received a full and complete stock of holiday goods. Call and examine before purchasing.

W. C. SHEPARD & CO

Christian Advocate.

The Year at Hand.

The world to an end shall come
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one.
—Mother Shipton's Prophecy.

It would be difficult to describe all the sinisters predictions that have, as by common consent, been concentrated upon the coming year. The soothsayers, diviners, oracle makers, astrologers and wizards seem to have combined to cast their spell upon it. Superstitious people of every sort, and some who are not willing to admit that they are superstitious, regard the year 1881 with more or less anxious expectation and dread. As the earth, on New Year's Day, swings out into another round about the sun, it will go to meet a host of evil omens. It will go cursed by theomancy and hitillomancy. Aeromancy and meteoromancy will glare at it from comets and shooting stars. Oneiromancy will intercept its path with visions of evil, and nomancy will shake the ominous, backward-reading numerals "1881" before it. It will be beset with scarecrow figures by arithmancy and with menacing phrases by stichomancy. Yet there is no reason why persons of good digestion should not go to sleep on New Year's night confident that, after having encountered the average quantity of storm and sunshine, the one-horse ball we call the world will bring them safe through the perils of its five-hundred-million-mile flight round to the starting point again.

Timid persons first began to look forward with some alarm to the year that is about to open, when, several years ago, the key to the so-called prophetic symbolism of the Great Pyramid of Egypt was made public, backed by the fame and reputation of the British astronomer, Plozza Smyth. Others, using Mr. Smyth's observations and measurements, have gone much further than he did in drawing startling inferences; but no one can read his book without perceiving how powerfully it must affect those who have the slightest leaning toward superstition or credulity. Besides this record of explorations and experiences in the heart of Egypt's greatest marvel has all the charm and interest of Dr. Schliemann's descriptions of his discoveries in Homer's Troy. Such a book could not well be neglected by the world of readers; and by the nature of the human mind, many of its readers were sure to be imbued with its ominous dogmas. So the belief, or at least the suspicion, spread that the secret chambers of the great Pyramid, under Divine guidance by the most mystical character in all history, Melchisedek, King of Salem, spoke, among other things, that the Christian era will end in 1881.

Mother Shipton's so-called prophecy rests upon the same data for the end of the world. The ominous jingle of her rhymes has probably done at least as much to disturb the equanimity of credulous persons as the more elaborate speculations of The Pyramid interpreters. Moreover, Mother Shipton is represented as foretelling that in the good days England will "accept a Jew." As England has, with considerable emphasis, and more than once, accepted the remarkable son of old Isaac Disraeli for her Prime Minister, this has been taken as a fulfillment of prophecy. So Lord Beaconsfield's dramatic personality is made a principal figure of the murky cloud of evil prophecy that hangs over 1881.

As if the evil eye of Mother Shipton and the mystical menace of the Great Pyramid were not enough for one poor world to bear, the "horrors of the perihelia" have been denounced upon the coming year. About two years ago certain pamphlets were circulated about the country, purporting to be written by men of science, and predicting that awful consequences to mankind would result from all the great planets reaching their perihelia or nearest points to the sun together. According to these prophets the sinister effects of the perihelia were to begin making their appearance this fall, when Jupiter passed his perihelion, and next year the sythe of death was to be put to the harvest in the far east, and to sweep westward, with a swathe as broad as the continents, until it reached the Pacific Ocean. The narrow Atlantic was to be no more than a brooklet in the path of this terrible harvester. Plagues, famines, pestilences, fires, earthquakes, floods, and tornadoes were to scourge the human race until only a few remained, like Noah and his family, to repeople the earth with a steadier and more God-fearing race.

So much alarm was caused by this ludicrous if pretended science and prophecy, that some real men of science—Mrs. Proctor among others—were at the pains to show that, so far as these perihelions professed to rest upon scientific facts, they were baseless. The great planets will not be in perihelion in 1881, and they will not be in perihelion together at any time. It is true that several of the chief planets will reach their perihelion within a few years, and that it is rare for them to be clumped so close together as they will be at one time next year. It is also true that remarkable coincidences have been observed between the existence of great storms on the sun, and peculiar electrical disturbances and possibly meteorological changes upon the earth, and the presence of Jupiter near his perihelion. Astronomers have also noticed that the influence of some of the other great planets upon the earth can be perceived, but they have never discovered any reason to believe that the combined forces of all the planets could, under any circumstances, produce upon the earth a thousandth part of the evil effect ascribed to them by the astrologers. If indeed they produced any evil effect whatever.

Still the astrological almanacs for next year are repeating substantially the same prediction of evil things to occur, if not to culminate, in 1881. Because, as they say, the ravages of the Black Death in the middle ages followed the nearly coincident perihelia of the four great planets, they predict similar consequences from the conjunction of the planets now. But neither in their premises nor their inferences does science recognize any validity.

In truth, however, the astrologers, not less than the astronomers and all star gazers, will have plenty of employment in the heavens to occupy their attention for the next twelve months. The sky will not present such brilliant pageants again this century. There will be a remarkable series of conjunctions, and double and triple conjunctions. The most interesting of these is the great twenty-year conjunction of Jupiter and Saturn in April. This conjunction is one of the stumbling-blocks of the astrologers. As it occurs in the sign Taurus, which they say rules Turkey and Ireland, they feel sure, an element of revolt accompanies it. Sweetness of spirit is the outgrowth of self-control. Serenity of soul, whatever be the constitutional characteristics, comes most frequently from long self-discipline and prayerful struggle.

Venus, and the far-away giants Uranus and Neptune will play a part in this remarkable planetary levee.

Venus will reach her greatest brightness in the [illegible] and will be so brilliant as to be visible at noonday. Her delicate crescent will be a favorite object in the amateur astronomer's telescope. Saturn still will open wider his wonderful rings, and will be one of the chief attractions of the evening sky for several months. Jupiter will not lose much of his present brilliancy before he comes a morning star in April. Mars will begin to brighten in the latter part of the year, and then his snowy poles and shadowy continents will again become the admiration of those who gaze through telescopes. In short, there will be no end of attractions in the starry heavens, and all the prognostications of the soothsayers will not be able to darken the sky of 1881.

Getting Married in Germany.

This time I was bound to make sure work, and so, with the best information I could procure, started off for the civil bureau (Standes Amt) to ascertain precisely what was required.

"Upon what business do you come?" demanded the pompous servant at the door.

"I am an American citizen, and want to know how to get married in Germany," I faltered.

He opened the door of the main office, and shouted, "Ein Her Amerikanner wishes to marry himself!" and then showed me into a large and well-tiled waiting-room to take my turn, every occupant of which gazed fixedly at me without winking for some minutes. One thin, dark, wiry man in soiled linen, and bright yellow kid gloves, had dropped in to announce the death of his third wife. A trembling young mother was sharply reprimanded for letting the legal third day pass before announcing the death of her child. A somewhat seedy clerk had come, with a radiant face, to announce the birth of a boy fourteen hours old, and to be called Johannes Conrade Hermann Degenermeister. A servant-girl and her lover were waiting in one corner,—she, red and giggling, he erect, dignified, taciturn as a head-waiter,—to be made man and wife. I had plenty of time to observe, for nearly an hour passed before my turn came. At length I was shown into a long room, with half a dozen clerks at one end, who twisted their necks, adjusted their glasses, and gazed and listened with open-mouthed wonder.

"I wish to get married in the very simplest and quickest way," I said, presenting my passport. "Will you please tell me how to do it?"

"It is extremely simple," said the officer. "We must have a certificate of your birth (Geburtsschein) signed by the burgomaster of the town in which you were born, and with its seal, and witnessed in due form. Your certificate of baptism (Taufschein) should also be sent to guard against all error, sealed and witnessed by the present pastor or the proper church officers. These must be presented here by each of the contracting parties, with their passports as the first step."

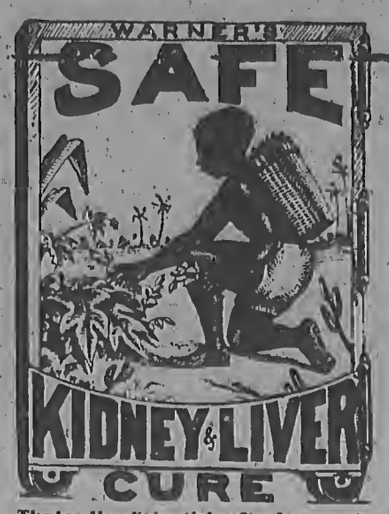
I mentally noted this, and he proceeded:

"The parents, if living, should certify to their knowledge and approval of the marriage. We must also be satisfied that there is no obstacle, legal, moral, or otherwise, to it; whether either of you have been married before, and if so whether there are children, and if so their names and ages. The parents' names should be in full; also their residence, occupation, age, and place of birth should of course be given for record here."

I begged for another scrap of paper and made further notes.

"When we have these here in this desk," he continued, patting fondly that piece of furniture, "then either we can publish the bans (Aufgebot), by posting a notice of your intention in the Rathhaus for fourteen days, or else you can have it printed in the journal of the place where you reside in America, and bring us a copy here as evidence that it has actually appeared. After the expiration of this time you can be married in this office."

"Must it be here?" I queried.



"Of course," he said. "This is the only place which the law now recognizes. Poor people are content with civil marriage only, but all who move in good society go from here to the church for a religious ceremony."

"Is it not possible to shorten the time?" I timidly ventured to inquire. "We had made all the arrangements for an earlier day, and are seriously inconvenienced by the delay. I did not know the requirements. It takes four weeks to hear from America, and then two weeks more here, and . . . You do not, perhaps, exactly understand, and yet I hardly know how to explain. But there is really haste. We are pressed for time."

"Haste? Pressed for time?" he repeated. "Perhaps I do not understand. I am sorry, but it cannot possibly be sooner. You think we are slow in Germany. True, but we are sure. We require our people to take time to think over the matter beforehand, and divorce with us is far from being the easy matter I have heard it is in America." Danbury Athenæ.

GENTLE MONITORS. I thought I was singing my boy to sleep with the little ballad of which the above is a chorus; but the blue eyes opened, and the quiet voice said, "Mamma, you aint always gentle." In self-justification I replied "But, you know darling, Mamma has to scold you when you're naughty." "Yes, ma'am." The argument dropped; so that the little head upon my bosom, I did not finish the song, nor have I sung it since. Tenderly tucking in the little truth-teller, I reproached myself for deserving his remark, and gently questioned the truth of my answer. Do mothers ever have to scold? Has scolding any legitimate place in the family government? How is the world to be ruled? "Ruling with clamor, uttering rebuke in rude and boisterous language." Is this a helpful adjunct to parental authority? Why do Christian parents sometimes scold? For two reasons, it seems to us. First, for lack of self-control, second, from habit. Children are often terribly trying, and loud and angry tones seem a safety-valve for our stirred tempers. Besides, we feel that gentleness alone can never safely steer the family bark over life's troublous sea. Force, firmness, decision, steadiness, even severity, are often necessary. A suitable degree of these is not incompatible with gentleness. It is not a synonym of weakness. The gentleness that makes one great comes from subdued strength. This lovely fruit of the Spirit proves an element of power. The "soft answer" often cools the answer clearly. Sweetness of spirit is the outgrowth of self-control. Serenity of soul, whatever be the constitutional characteristics, comes most frequently from long self-discipline and prayerful struggle.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time, and for years people suffered great agony, which might have been relieved. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that come peculiar to the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver, Headaches, Jaundice, Dizziness, Gravel, Fever, Ague, Malarial Fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for Females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb. As a blood purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

READ ITS RECORD.

"Preserved my life."—E. B. Lakely, Mesa, Ala.

"It is the remedy that will cure the many diseases peculiar to women."—Mothers Magazine.

"It has passed severe tests and won endorsements from some of the highest medical talent in the country."—New York World.

"No remedy heretofore discovered can be held for one moment in comparison with it."—Rev. C. A. Harvey, D.D., Washington, D. C.

This Remedy which has done such wonders is put up in the LARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by druggists and all dealers at $1.25 per bottle. For Diabetes, enquire for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy.

H. H. WARNER & CO., Rochester, N. Y.

E. HEATH,
IMPORTER AND DEALER IN
Carpets, Floor Oil Cloths,
UPHOLSTERY GOODS, Wall Paper, Window Shades, Cornices, Lace and Nottingham Curtains, Mirrors, Moldings, Chromos, Engravings, etc.
Frames made to order—a specialty.
No. 99 Camp street, New Orleans.

SPENCERIAN
SPENCERIAN COMMERCIAL
STEEL PENS
of the Very Best European Make, and unrivaled for Flexibility, Durability, and Evenness of point.
REAL SWAN QUILL ACTION.
In 20 Numbers. A complete Sample Card, containing by mail on receipt of 20 Cents.
As implement of 10 of the Leading Styles, for trial, by mail, on receipt of 10 Cents.
IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR & CO.,
138 & 140 Grand St., New York.

NO MORE RHEUMATISM OR GOUT
ACUTE OR CHRONIC
SALICYLICA
SURE CURE.
Manufactured only under the above Trade-Mark by the
EUROPEAN MEDICINE CO.,
OF PARIS AND LEIPZIG.
IMMEDIATE RELIEF WARRANTED. PERMANENT CURE GUARANTEED. Now extensively used by all celebrated Physicians of Europe and America, recommending it as the Most Harmless and Reliable Remedy on both continents. The highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 95 cures out of 100 cases within three days. Secret: The only dissolver of the poisonous Uric Acid which exists in the Blood of Rheumatic and Gouty Patients. $1.a box. Gloves for $5. Sent to any address on receipt of price. Introduced by PHYSICIANS. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS. Address,
DANIEL ROMMEL, Sole Proprietor,
Office 162 Fulton street, New York.
For sale by E. E. Lyons and E. J. Hart & Co., New Orleans.

BENSON'S CAPCINE
POROUS PLASTER.
has received the greatest number of unquestionably reliable endorsements that any external remedy ever received from physicians, druggists, the press and the public. All pause themselves a great improvement on the ordinary poisonous plasters and all other external remedies.
50000 Physicians and Druggists of great standing cheerfully endorse them as a great improvement on all other plasters.
Sold by all Druggists. Price 25 cents.
BEWARE OF FRAUD.

THE MILD POWER
CURES
Humphreys' Homœopathic Specifics
Proved from ample experience an entire success. Simple, Prompt, Efficient, and Reliable, they are the only Specifics adapted to popular use.

	PRICE.
1. Fevers, Congestion, Inflammations,	25
2. Worms, Worm-Fever, Worm Colic,	25
3. Crying Colic, or Teething of Infants,	25
4. Diarrhœa of Children or Adults,	25
5. Dysentery, Griping, Bilious Colic,	25
6. Cholera Morbus, Vomiting,	25
7. Coughs, Cold, Bronchitis,	25
8. Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache,	25
9. Headaches, Sick-Headaches, Vertigo,	25
10. Dyspepsia, Bilious Stomach,	25
11. Suppressed or Painful Periods,	25
12. Whites, too profuse Periods,	25
13. Croup, Cough, Difficult Breathing,	25
14. Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions,	25
15. Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains,	25
16. Fever and Ague, Chill, Fever, Agues,	50
17. Piles, Blind or Bleeding,	50
18. Catarrh, acute or chronic, Influenza,	50
20. Whooping Cough, Violent Coughs,	50
24. General Debility, Physl Weakness,	50
27. Kidney Disease,	50
28. Nervous Debility, Spermatorrhœa,	1.00
30. Urinary Weakness, Wetting the bed,	50
32. Disease of the Heart, Palpitation,	1.00

For sale by druggists, or sent by the Case, or single Vial, free of charge, on receipt of price. Send for Dr. Humphreys' Book on Disease, &c., (144 pages), also Illustrated Catalogue, FILED.
Address, Humphreys' Homœopathic Med. Co., 109 Fulton St., New York.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC
Ginger, Buchu, Mandrake, Stillingia and many other of the best ingredients known are combined scientifically in Parker's Ginger Tonic as to make it the greatest Blood Purifier and the Best Health and Strength Restorer ever used.
It cures Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sleeplessness, and all diseases of the Stomach, Bowels, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Urinary Organs and all Female Complaints.
If you are wasting away with Consumption or any disease, use the Ginger Tonic. No preparation ever so skillfully in Parker's Ginger Tonic as to make it the greatest Blood Purifier and the Best Health and Strength Restorer ever used. It cures Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sleeplessness, and all diseases of the Stomach, Bowels, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Urinary Organs and all Female Complaints. If you are wasting away with Consumption or any disease, use the Ginger Tonic. No preparation ever so skillfully combines the best curative properties of all. Buy a 50c. bottle of your druggist. None genuine without our signature on outside wrapper. Hiscox & Co., Chemists, New York.
PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM The best and most economical Hair Dressing.

MISCELLANEOUS.

25,000 SOLD!
FARMER'S AND MECHANIC'S
—MANUAL—
Edited by GEO. E. WARING, Jr.,
Author of "Elements of Agriculture," "Draining for Profit and for Health," and formerly Agricultural Engineer of Central Park, New York.
500 Octavo Pages—Over 300 Illustrations.
Worth to any Thinking, Working Farmer
$25 per Year.
This book is for the most part a work of facts and figures—assorted, analysis and demonstrations, about which there can be no dispute. The design was to produce a work of substantial and enduring value, and of universal application and use. This work is offered as completing more that has been proven by long use to be of vital importance, that is most necessary for every farmer and mechanic to know, and more of promising novelty, than any other that has ever been presented to the farmers and mechanics of America. It is complete in every particular in which it is possible for such a book to be complete; and, in addition to this, it is sufficiently suggestive in many other respects to induce its readers to read more, to think more, to experiment more, and to become more intelligent and more successful in the management of their business as well as really happier and wiser men.
Price, in Extra English Cloth, Gilt Back, Only $2 50.
Sent post-paid on receipt of price. Address
LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans, La., or Houston, Tex.

B. T. WALSHE,
SHIRTS,
Winter stock now ready. Prices moderate.
Assortment of
MEN'S FURNISHING GOODS
Very Complete.
No. 13 ST. CHARLES STREET, New Orleans.
Country orders carefully and promptly filled.

YOUNG MEN'S
Christian Association,
OF NEW ORLEANS.
ROOMS, 87 CAMP STREET,
Open from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M., except Sunday, and on Sunday afternoon from 3 to 6 P. M., where may be found the leading daily and weekly papers of the most important cities of the United States.
SERVICES.
Tuesday, 7:30 P. M. Devotional.
Thursday, 7:30 P. M. Singing Class.
NOON-DAY PRAYER-MEETING,
Daily, 12 to 12:30.
Rules, Prospectus and Remedies are handed to those who apply.

FURNITURE
JOHN BOIS,
DEALER IN
Parlor, Bed and Dining Room
FURNITURE.
291 Camp St., cor. Calliope, New Orleans.
Repairing, Upholstering, Varnishing, etc., promptly done. Country orders promptly attended to. Spring Hair and Moss Mattresses made to order. A full line of common Furniture on hand; suitable for the country.

Unequaled Low Rates now Ruling at
JOHN GAUCHE'S
MAMMOTH
QUEENSWARE HOUSE.
We announce to our patrons that we are now offering our celebrated ROYAL SEMI PORCELAIN DINNER SETS, 100 pieces, for $12.
ENGLISH STONE CHINA DINNER SETS, 124 pieces, $10.
REAL FRENCH CHINA DINNER SETS, 124 pieces $15.
ENGLISH PRINTED TOILET SETS, $5 50.
ENGLISH CHINA PRINTED DINNER SETS, $20.
ENGLISH CHINA GOLD BAND and FLOWER TEA SETS, 44 pieces, $6 50.
THE BEST SELECTION OF
CROCKERY
Glassware and Housefurnishing Goods
OF ANY HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
The assortment for both city and country is very large and the prices are guaranteed as low, if not lower than any establishment North or South.
REMEMBER THE PLACE, IT IS
JOHN GAUCHE,
AT THE MORESQUE BUILDINGS,
109, 111, 113 & 115 Camp Street.
Branch House, Nos. 108 and 110 Chartres Street.

HOLIDAY MUSIC BOOKS.
DITSON & CO. call attention to their elegant and useful music books suitable for presents, and especially to their
VOLUMES OF BOUND SHEET MUSIC,
Prices of each in cloth, $2 50. Fine Gilt $3.
THE CLUSTER OF GEMS. 43 pieces of high character.
GEMS OF THE DANCE. 70 of the best pieces of each dance music, by the most celebrated composers.
GEMS OF STRAUSS. 50 splendid and brilliant compositions.
PIANOFORTE GEMS. 100 select piano pieces.
HOME CIRCLE. Vol. I. 120 easy pieces for beginners.
HOME CIRCLE. Vol. II. 142 pieces, of which 22 are for 4 hands.
PARLOR MUSIC. 2 Vols. 120 easy and popular pieces each.
CREME DE LA CREME. 2 Vols., 80 select pieces of some difficulty, suited to advanced players.
FOUNTAIN OF GEMS. 97 easy and popular pieces.
WELCOME HOME. 70 easy and popular pieces.
PEARLS OF MELODY. 50 pieces of moderate difficulty.
PIANIST'S ALBUM. 102 pieces. Fine collection.
All the books above named are alike in size, style, binding and price.
OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston
C. H. DITSON & CO.,
843 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NEW DICTIONARY HOLDER.
These holders are so arranged that they press the book firmly together when it is closed. In short the Dictionary Holder is perfected in form, finish and operation, and will be found one of the most elegant and desirable articles for schools, literary or professional reference and library use. Every one who owns a dictionary should have one of these patent holders, and have the unwieldy Unabridged remain for reference. Place the dictionary in the holder and keep it there. There is no more occasion to take it out of the holder than on of its binding. Children and grown people refer to a dictionary if supported in one of these holders as they will remain open when placed by your side when reading, or writing, the task of looking up words how enough if you sit and have received well-bound praise from clergymen, and teachers, and all others who have used it. The Unabridged Dictionary, either of Webster or Webster's, fits in them exactly.
Price finished in hard jet black japan, $2 00
" " while, or nickle wash, 2 50
Address LATHROP & WILKINS, Agents for the Southwest, 112 Carondelet, New Orleans.

D. H. HOLMES,
155 Canal Street, - - - 15 Bourbon Street.
Our Stock of Spring Goods is now complete, consisting of the latest novelties in Silks, Laces, Dress Goods in Worsted Fabrics, Black Grenadines in Silk and Wool, Linen Lawns, Organdies and Percales.
HOSIERY in all Styles and Colors. A Complete assortment of MATTINGS.
SAMPLES SENT FREE OF CHARGE.
D. H. HOLMES,
155 Canal Street, New Orleans

WHEELER & PIERSON,
(Successors to Harry & Wheeler and Pierson & Howes.)
CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS,
Nos. 13 & 15 CAMP STREET, New Orleans.
Black Cloth Suits, $20 to 40. Business Suits, $12 to $35
6 Shirts for $9. Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.
Orders from Clergymen solicited, and liberal reduction made to them.
Rules for self-measurement sent on application, and goods sent C. O. D.
Plantation Clothing for Country Stores at very low prices. Send for Wholesale Department circulars.

CATARRH
Is a Terrible Disease. Its fearful effects—corruption running down the throat, weak eyes, deafness, loss of voice, loss of smell, dizziness, colds, nasal deformities, and finally consumption. From first to last it is ever aggressive. Ordinary treatments are worse than useless. Hence the while a cure is possible, it may rapidly develop into quick consumption. The most thorough, successful and pleasant treatment is
Dr. M. W. CASE'S CARBOLATE of TAR INHALANT
It does not require [illegible] minutes to demonstrate the value of Carbolate of Tar. The most healing, remedial agent known to science. Balsams and Conials of the most healing and soothing properties are so combined with Pine Tree Tar that the more breathing conveys them into a dense smoke or Vapor. This is inhaled—taken right to the diseased parts. No heat, no hot water, simply inhaling or breathing it, and you feel its healing power at once. This treatment is endorsed by physicians everywhere, and highly recommended by the people who have used it with perfect satisfaction. FULL TREATMENT—Circulars, etc., Sent Free—Sent. Satisfaction Always Guaranteed. Address, DR. M. W. CASE, 933 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.
FOR CATARRH, ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION, Bronchitis & Deafness.

HOW TO PAINT.
A new work by a Practical Painter, designed for the use of tradesmen, Mechanics, Merchants, Farmers, and as a Guide to Professional Painters. Containing a plain, common sense statement of the methods employed by painters to produce satisfactory results in plain and fancy painting of every description, including formulas for mixing paint in oil or water, tools required, etc. This is just the book needed by every person having anything to paint, and makes Every Man His Own Painter.
Full directions for using white lead, lamp black, green, yellow, vermillion, brown, whiting, glue, pumice stone, asphaltum and sparks of turpentine, oils, varnishes, varnishing furniture, milk paint, preparing kalsomine
Paint for Out-Buildings,
Whitewash paste for paper-hanging, hanging paper, graining in oak, maple, rosewood, black walnut, staining, clear staining, making rustic pictures, painting flower stands, imitating rosewood polish, varnishing furniture, waxing furniture, cleaning paint
Paint for Farming Tools,
and for machinery, and household fixtures.
To Paint a Farm Wagon,
to re-varnish a carriage, to make plaster casts.
The work is neatly printed, with illustrations wherever they can give the desired information, and it will save many times its cost yearly. Every family should possess a copy.
Price by mail, post paid, $1.
LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans, La., and Houston, Tex.

Good News! Good News!
Mammoth Furniture House
OF
McCRACKEN & BREWSTER,
33 & 35 Royal Street,
Now have the largest stock of Fine and Medium Chamber Sets, Ebony Gilt and Walnut Parlor Sets, Dining Room and Hall Furniture to be found in the South. Also a large and various stock of cheap and durable Furniture suitable for the country trade.
THONET BROS., VIENNA,
BENT WOOD FURNITURE
Our motto—small profits and quick returns.
McCRACKEN & BREWSTER.

J. H. KELLER,
MANUFACTURER OF CARBOLIC,

Office,
110 Gravier St.
All Kinds of Laundry and Toilet Soaps.
Send for Circular.
BEST WASHER AND WRINGER
in the World. Guaranteed to do the perfect work of ironers returned. Warranted for 5 years. Price of Washer, $8. Sample by agents, $4 50. Price of Wringer $7 50. Sample $4 25. Circulars free.
ERIE WASHER CO., ERIE, PA.

MENEELYS' BELLS.
For Churches, etc., known to the public since 1826, are made only at "THE MENEELY BELL FOUNDRY," West Troy, N. Y. Catalogues free.

WATCHES.
LADY'S GOLD WATCHES, $30 and upward.
GENT'S GOLD WATCHES, $15 and upward.
GENT'S SILVER WATCHES, $12 and upward.
BOY'S SILVER WATCHES, $12 and upward.
All guaranteed.
A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.,
Cor. Third and Royal Sts.

BUCK'S IMPROVED
BUCK'S
BRILLIANT STOVES
BRILLIANT STOVE
Is acknowledged to be the
Best Cook-Stove Made.
SOLD BY
H. HALLER,
NEW ORLEANS.
DEALER IN ALL KINDS OF
Cooking and Heating Stoves of the most improved makes. Stamped Plain and Japanned Tinware. Tinned and Enameled Hollow Ware, Fire and Clay Furnaces, Thaten's Stock, Granite Iron-ware, Lamps, Burner, and Wick to suit Burner. Iron Spoons and Forks, Cutlery, Mills of all kinds, Plated-ware, Sad Irons, Fire Grates, Fitting Machines etc.
H. HALLER,
No. 55 Camp St., New Orleans.
Price list mailed on application.

GRATEFUL. COMFORTING.
EPPS'-COCOA.
FOR BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in packets, labelled
JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists,
London, England.
A Packet of Epps's Cocoa will be sent to any address on receipt of Six Stamps.

AGENTS WANTED.
AGENTS WANTED everywhere to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete, in 30 minutes. It will also knit a great variety of hose work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 400 Washington St., Boston, Mass.
AGENTS WANTED, to sell Dr. Chase's 2000 RECIPE BOOK. 80th of Sept. You double your money. Address Dr. Chase's Printing House, Ann Arbor, Mich.
$777 A YEAR and expenses to agents. Outfit free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

PRICES CURRENT.

REVISED AND CORRECTED WEEKLY.

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
New Orleans, Monday, Jan. 24, 1881.

Our readers should bear in mind that our quotations represent prices for round lots, and that in filling small orders higher prices must be paid.

SOUTHERN STAPLES.

	Today.	Sat.
Cotton, ₱ lb.
Low ordinary	7¼	7¼
Ordinary	8¾	8¾
Good ordinary	9⅝	9⅝
Low middling	10⅝	10⅝
Middling	11⅝	11⅝
Good middling	12⅛	12⅛
Middling fair	13⅛	13⅛
Sales to-day	2,500 bales.
Receipts since our last	39,318 bales.
Receipts previously	915,635 bales
Sugar, ₱ lb.:
Fair	@	6¼
Fully fair	6⅝	6⅝
Prime	6¾	6¾
Choice	—	—
Yellow clarified	7⅞	8
White clarified	8	8⅛
Powdered	—	—
Crushed	—	—
Molasses, in bbls, ₱ gallon:
Common	30	33
Fair	35	36
Prime	38	40
Choice	46	47
Rice, Louisiana, ₱ lb:
Common	4	4¼
Fair	5¼	5⅜
Prime	—	6
Choice	6¼	—

GROCERIES.

Butter, ₱ lb:
Western	12	32
New York	17	32
Coffee, ₱ lb.
Rio, ordinary	11	11¼
Rio, fair	13	13¾
Rio, prime	14	14¾
Cheese, ₱ lb:
Western factory	—	—
English	15	15
Candles, ₱ lb:
Best Sperm	—	12¾
Corn Meal, ₱ bbl:
Choice K D		3 40
Flour, ₱ bbl:
Superfine	3 50	3 75
XX	4 25	4 50
XXX	4 75	5 00
Choice XXX	—	—
Choice family	—	—
Fish:
Mackerel, No. 1, in bbls		8 00
Half barrels		4 50
Kits		1 85
Mackerel, No. 2, in bbls		6 75
Half bbls		3 85
Kits		1 65
Mackerel, No. 3, in bbls	5 00	6 75
Half bbls	3 00	3 75
Kits	75	1 00
Pollock, ₱ lb	5½	6
Herring, ₱ box	30	35
Oils, ₱ gallon:
Coal, crude	25	30
Coal, in bbls	19	22
Linseed, raw	56	58
Linseed, boiled	59	61
Lard, raw	70	75
Lard	70	75
Soap, ₱ box:
Magnolia	—	1 85
Olive	—	2 40
Palm	—	—
Castile	—	2 40
Soda, ₱ lb	—	—
Starch, ₱ lb	3½	3½
Salt, ₱ sack:
Coarse	1 02½	1 05
Fine	1 40	1 45

GRAIN AND FEED.

Corn, in sacks, ₱ bushel:
Yellow	—	—
White	63	64
Mixed	63	64
Oats, ₱ bushel:
Western	53	54
Red rust-proof	62½	65
Bran, ₱ 100 lbs
Choice	—	1 00
Hay, ₱ 100:
Prime	24 00	25 00
Choice	26 00	27 00
Cow Peas, ₱ bushel:
Mixed	—	—
Clay	—	1 20

PROVISIONS.

Bacon, ₱ lb:
Breakfast	9	10
Shoulders	8¾	9¼
Sides, clear	—	9¾
Sides, clear	8	8¾
Rams, sugar-cured	9	10¾
Mess Pork, ₱ bbl	13 75	14 25
Dry Salt Meat, ₱ lb:
Clear rib sides	—	7¼
Clear sides	—	7¼
Shoulders	6	6¼
Lard, ₱ lb:
Choice, in kegs	9¾	10
Choice, in tierces	9¼	9½

ESCULENTS.

Potatoes, ₱ bbl:
Irish	2 75	3 00
Sweet	—	—
Onions, ₱ bbl	—	4 50
Apples, ₱ bbl:	2 50	3 00
Cabbages, ₱ 100	—	—
Sour Kraut, ₱ bbl		12 00

BALING STUFFS.

Bagging, ₱ yard:
India	—	—
Jute	—	—
Baling Twine, ₱ lb	—	17
Ties, ₱ bundle:
30 ties and buckles	—	1 85

SUNDRIES.

Poultry, ₱ dozen:
Grown chickens	4 00	4 25
Young do	2 50	3 00
Ducks	2 50	3 00
Geese	—	6 00
Turkeys	11 00	12 00
Eggs, ₱ dozen:
Western	—	25
Southern	25	25
Honey:
Strained, ₱ gallon	—	—
Comb, ₱ lb	—	—
Pecans, ₱ lb:
Louisiana	—	16
Texas	—	—
Oranges:
Louisiana, ₱ bbl	—	—
Foreign, ₱ box	—	2 50
Wool, ₱ lb
Louisiana	—	25
Texas	—	—
Feathers, ₱ lb
Geese	—	—
Hides, ₱ lb
Country green	—	7
Dry salted	11	12
Dry flint	—	13
Ox Horns, each	—	6
Tallow, ₱ lb	5½	6¼
Cotton Seed, ₱ ton
In sacks	—	10 00
Meal	—	20 50
Oil cake	—	22 00
Cooperage, ₱ each:
Sugar hogsheads	3 00	3 25
Molasses barrels	1 50	1 55
Half barrels	1	1 00
Kegs	—	70
Oak Staves, per M:
Kegs	—	—
Barrels	—	—
Extra claret	90 00	100 00
Extra hogshead	130 00	135 00
Extra pipe	140 00	175 00
Tobacco:
Leaf logs	—	—
Medium	—	4½
Good to fine	—	—
Low leaf	—	—
Medium	5½	5¾
Good	6¾	7
Fine	7½	8
Selections	7½	8
	10	12

A Word to Our Readers.

When you read of a remedy that will cure all diseases, beware of it; but when you read of a pure vegetable compound which claims to cure only certain parts of a body, and furnishes high proof that it does this, you can safely try it and with the assurance that it will help you. That is just what Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure does. It cures all troubles of the lower portion of the body and none others. It will not help the tooth-ache, earache nor consumption but it will put your body in a vigorous and healthy state where you can enjoy life and appreciate its good things. Try it.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Senator Joe Thurman twenty-five votes in the house, and eight in the senate.

DOVER, Del., Jan. 18.—Thomas F. Bayard was re-elected United States senator for this State this morning, all the Democratic members of the legislature voting for him. Seven Republican representatives and one Republican senator voted for Anthony Higgins, of Wilmington, a leading party man and ex-United States district attorney.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads met to-day, and by a vote of seven to one agreed to favorably report upon the Springer resolution, and directed Representative Morey, chairman of the committee, to present the report to the House at the earliest opportunity. The following is the text of the resolution.

Resolved, That the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads be instructed to inquire into the expediency of establishing by law a telegraphic postal system under the Government of the United States, and also the cost of reproducing facilities for transmitting telegraphic messages, equal to those now possessed by existing corporations, and as to the expense of opening the same, with power to send for persons and papers, and report at anytime by bill or otherwise.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 21.—The senate committee on military affairs to-day agreed to report, with favorable recommendation, the bill to place Grant on the retired list of the army, by the following vote: Yeas—Burnside, Plumb, Cameron, of Virginia, Logan. Nays: Randolph, Cockrell and Grover.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The house committee on inter-ocean canal, at a full meeting to-day, referred back to the sub-committee the bill and report favoring the incorporation of Eads' ship railway across the Isthmus of Panama, with instructions to strike out that portion which provides for the endorsement by the government of its stock to the amount of $50,000,000.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 22.—Father Edward Purcell, brother of Archbishop Purcell, and manager of the disastrous church banking business in this city, which involved a loss to the depositors of several millions of dollars, died of apoplexy at the Ursuline Convent in Brown county, Ohio.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The Alexandria obelisk was placed over the pedestal in Central Park to-day, between five thousand, and ten thousand people witnessing the operation. Among those present were Secretary of the Navy, Gen. Secretary Evarts, members of the park commission, Collector Merritt, and representatives of the Masonic fraternity. A guard of sailors and marines from the navy yard, headed by the marine band, formed a cordon around the monolith. A few minutes after noon, Lieut. Commander Borrings gave the signal, and the pillar was quickly raised from a horizontal to a perpendicular position, amidst the enthusiasm of the spectators. There were no formal ceremonies.

HOUSTON, Jan. 21.—Rev. R. W. Kenon died yesterday evening at Independence, aged seventy-five years. He was one of the most distinguished ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, a resident of Texas for many years, and was well and widely known throughout the entire State. His death will be universally regretted.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The distress in the county Clare, Ireland, is worse now than it was last year. The lord lieutenant has ordered a presentment to the Court of Sessions for organization of relief works.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Snow extends over nearly the whole kingdom. The weather is the severest experienced in twenty years. Vessels are ashore and navigation obstructed. Railroads disabled and telegraph lines prostrated.

HAVANA, Jan. 18.—The steamer City of Alexandria brings advices from the City of Mexico to January 9. It is reported that Gen. Triburcies Montiel actually ordered the execution of and shot Col. Tipia, administrator of the custom-house, at Lopaz, Lower California, for engaging in contraband trade. The legislature of Michoacan declared ex-President Diaz, an honorary citizen of the State. The legislature of Morelos conferred a similar honor on the ex-President, and inscribed his name in golden letters on the walls of the legislative chamber.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Truth says: The marriage of Baroness Burdett Coutts to Mr. Ashmead Bartlett will take place one day next week, at her own residence, by special licence.

CARDIFF, Jan. 19.—Seventeen vessels are ashore near here, and it is feared they may go to pieces. Some of the crews have left the vessels.

DOVER, Jan. 19.—The Admiralty Pier and other portions of the sea front have been severely damaged by high sea and furious gales.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Seven vessels are ashore at Yarmouth and it is feared that fifty persons have been drowned there.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Numerous wrecks, attended with loss of life, are reported around the coast. On the east coast the storm is so violent that it is impossible, in several instances, to render help to shipwrecked crews.

LONDON, Jan. 19, 7 P. M.—It has again commenced snowing. Reports from all points of the country indicate that the storm is the severest within the memory of living persons. Railway traffic and telegraphic communication are almost completely suspended throughout the Kingdom, and the interruption has extended to the Continent. Severe weather continues, but the hail and snow storm has abated. In London, street traffic is paralyzed, the snow drifts in some cases being five feet deep.

A terrific gale and snow storm yesterday raged over nearly the whole of the United Kingdom, causing great damage to property and involving a loss of many lives.

BUENOS AYRES, Jan. 20.—A telegram from Valparaiso reports that a great battle has been fought near Chorillas, nine miles south of Lima. The Peruvians were defeated and driven from their positions with heavy loss. The Chilians hold Chorillas.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—The rector of the university took advantage of the meeting of the students in honor of German unity to advocate the abandonment of anti-Jewish agitation, which caused such an uproar that neither Dr. Mommsen nor the director could make himself heard. A number of challenges to duels have passed between advocates and opponents of the agitation.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A dispatch from Buenos Ayres, dated January 20th, says: The Chilians have attacked and completely defeated the Peruvian army at Mayflores. Gen. Pierlo, president of Peru and commander-in-chief of the army, had fled. The Chilians occupied Lima, the capital, without resistance, on the 17th inst.

General Pierola, late minister of war, was taken prisoner. The Peruvian loss in the battle of Chorillas is said to have been seven hundred killed and two thousand prisoners. Twenty-five thousand Peruvians were engaged in the battle at Miraflo. The Chilian loss in both was heavy. The diplomatic body at Lima have urged the conclusion of an armistice, and ask that the person of Senor Pierolas be respected.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—In the chamber of deputies, yesterday, M. Gambetta, thanking the members for his re-election as president of that body, said: That the chamber would not separate before emancipating the press from present restrictions, nor without sanctioning the right of public meetings.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—A private telegram from Chili says Lima surrendered unconditionally, after Chorillas, Barraca and Miraflores had been taken and destroyed, with great slaughter.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—A dispatch from Dublin to the Times says: It is satisfactory to note a marked improvement in the social aspect of the country. The number of outrages has diminished, and the panic has in some degree subsided.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The Times, in an editorial article this morning, says:

Prince Gortschakoff, Russian Chancellor, we may state, now definitely retires from public affairs. This leaves room for doubt as to the future course of the power to which the whole Eastern difficulty has frequently been attributed.

Literary News.

—Mr. Edmund W. Gosse is preparing for the "Parchment Library" of C. Kegan Paul & Co., of London, a selection of the best English odes, from Spenser Swinburne, with a critical and historical preface.

—Messrs. G. P. Putnam's Sons will soon publish "The Journal of a Farmer's Daughter," by Elaine Goodale, one of the authors of "Berkshire Wild Flowers." It is a prose picture of life in the Berkshire Hills.

—The proposed publication of M. Thiers's correspondence with several royal personages of Europe has been postponed. It is said in Paris that the project was abandoned at the request of the monarch of a neighboring state.

—The author of "His Majesty Myself" and "Colonel Dunwoodie, Millionaire," has written another book in a similar vein, entitled "Blessed Saint Certainty," which is in press and will soon be published by Roberts Brothers.

—Count de Greneville, son of the Emperor of Austria's grand chamberlain, is writing a work on Cyprus, which island he lately visited. The local government is said to have placed a large amount of official information at his disposal.

—Messrs. Jansen, McClurg & Co., will shortly publish "Familiar Talks on English Literature," by Abby Sage Richardson. This work will embrace the great epochs of English literature from the conquest of Britain to the death of Sir Walter Scott.

—During this winter Prof. Max Muller will produce two volumes of "Selected Essays on Language, Mythology, and Religion." Prof. Muller's former and kindred work, "Chips from a German Workshop," filled four volumes and ran through several editions.

—The English publisher of Scribner's Monthly telegraphs for seventeen thousand copies of the coming Midwinter (February) number, an advance of six thousand upon his orders for the same issue last year. This number will contain the opening chapters of Mr. George W. Cable's new serial, "Madame Delphine."

—Mr. William L. Alden, who has attained considerable notoriety as the "funny man" of the New York Times, has left that journal, to enter the service of Harper & Brothers, and will in future exercise his talents on the numerous publications of that house. While on the staff of the Times, Mr. Alden received $4,000 yearly for contributing a humorous editorial several times in the course of a week.

—In speaking of the success of Disraeli's latest work, the Athenæum states the following facts: "As the papers have been announcing various sums from £40,000 to £30,000, as the price paid for 'Endymion,' it may be as well to say that Lord Beaconsfield will eventually receive £10,000. It may also be added for the benefit of the curious, that the novel was begun some ten years ago. Our statement that the subscription amounts to 7,000 copies is, despite assertions to the contrary, correct."—N. Y. Independent.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The District Stewards for Williamsburg District, Mississippi Conference, will meet one at Williamsburg, Saturday, February 5, 1881, Mr. Ferrel, Columbia, Rev. Stephens, Augusta, P. E. Welsh, Station, Creek, and J. Wetherby are District Stewards. I have not learned the others yet. Brethren please attend. My address is Williamsburg, Covington county, Miss. D. A. LITTLE, P. C.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

UNION SPRINGS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Greenville station	Jan. 1, 2
Greenville circuit, at Oak Grove	8, 9
Fort Dejosh circuit, at Letohatchee	15, 16
Oaky Streak circuit, at Antioch	22, 23
Rutledge circuit, at Rutledge	29, 30
Rocky Mount circuit, at Rocky Mount	Feb. 5, 6
Union Springs station	12, 13
Troy station	19, 20
Pine Level circuit, at Hill's Chapel	22
Olustee mission, at Brine Hill	23
Brundidge circuit, at Clay Hill	26, 27
Mount Meigs circuit, at Mount Meigs	Mar. 5, 6
Union circuit, at Mount Hilliard	12, 13

(53) J. M. HOLLAND, P. C.

MONTGOMERY DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Auburn station	Dec. 25, 26
Tallassee station	Jan. 1, 2
Hurtsville circuit, at Sec'l	8, 9
Elmore circuit, at Carolina	15, 16
Crawford circuit, at Crawford	22, 23
Tuskegee circuit, at Cotton Valley	29, 30
Salem circuit, at Salem	Feb. 5, 6
Lanchapoka circuit, at Notasulga	12, 13
Tuskegee station	19, 20
Opelika station	26, 27
Franklin mission, at Franklin	Mar. 5, 6
Montgomery station	5, 6
Tallapoosa circuit, at Tabiba Chapel	13, 14

The District Stewards will meet at the District parsonage in Auburn, February 15, at eleven o'clock A. M. A full meeting is very much desired.

(53) T. F. MANGUM, P. E.

GREENSBORO DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Havana circuit, at Havana	Jan. 15, 16
Green circuit, at Salem	22, 23
Livingstone and Eutaw, at Livingstone	29, 30
Demopolis, at Demopolis	Feb. 5, 6
Forkland circuit, at Forkland	12, 13
Cadesville circuit, at Gainesville	19, 20
Belmont circuit, at Wesley Chapel	26, 27
Cuba circuit, at York	Mar. 5, 6
Gaston circuit, at Coke's Chapel	12, 13
Linden circuit	Wednesday
Choctaw circuit, at Tilley's	19, 20

(53) R. FRQUHART, P. E.

MOBILE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

St. Paul	Jan. 1, 2
Whistler	8, 9
St. Francis Street	15, 16
Franklin Street	22, 23
Eastern Shore, at Bay Minette	29, 30
Citronelle, at Mannville	Feb. 5, 6
Tombigbee, at Four Mile Post	12, 13
Grand Bay, at Grand Bay	19, 20
St. Stephen's, at New Hope	26, 27
Bladon Springs, at Bladon Springs	Mar. 5, 6
Okatumpa, at Bethel	12, 13
Suggsville, at Suggsville	19, 20
Grove Hill, at Mt. Zion	26, 27

(53) O. B. BLUE, P. E.

SELMA DISTRICT.—FIRST ROUND.

Clifton circuit	Jan. 1, 2
Rembert Hill	5
Choctaw Corner	8, 9
Lower Peach Tree	12
East Selma	15, 16
Brush Creek	21, 22
Marion	22, 23
Uniontown station	29, 30
Uniontown circuit	Feb. 1
Orrville	5, 6
McKinley, at McKinley	12, 13
Summerfield	19, 20
Spring Hill	26, 27
Perryville	Mar. 5, 6
Cahaba mission, at Ivy Chapel	7

District Stewards meet at Selma, Tuesday March 15.

(53) W. A. M'CARTY, P. E.

MARIANA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Geneva circuit, at Geneva	Jan. 15, 16
Mariana station, at Mariana	22, 23
Cerro Gordo mission, at Cherry Pond	29, 30
Calhoun mission, at Shady Grove	Feb. 5, 6
Big Creek circuit, at Powelton	12, 13
Greenwood circuit, at Mt. Zion	19, 20
Chipola mission, at New Britton	26, 27
Headland mission, at Headland	Mar. 5, 6
Holme's Valley circuit, at Moss Hill	12, 13
Freeport and Walton, at Freeport	19, 20

The District Stewards will please meet at Campbellton, Jackson county, Fla., January 8.

Brethren please be punctual, as it is important that the whole work should be fully represented.

(52) A. J. COLEMAN, P. E.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

ALEXANDRIA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Bayou Beuf and Evergreen	Jan. 15, 16
Alexandria and Pineville	22, 23
Raddes	29, 30
Jena	Feb. 5, 6
Castor	Tuesday 8
Colorado	12, 13
Winnfield	19, 20
Harrisonburg and Trinity	26, 27
Shelby Island	Mar. 5, 6
Little River	12, 13
Colfax	Thursday 17
Spring Creek	19, 20
Simsport	26, 27
Avoyelles French mission	Apr. 2, 3

(1) L. G. HOLLIS, P. E.

HOMER DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Homer, at Homer	Jan. 8, 9
Tulip, at Salem	15, 16
Sparta, at Sparta	22, 23
Vernon, at Douglass	Feb. 5, 6
Indian Village, at Indian Village	12, 13
Rochester, at Rochester	19, 20
Haynesville, at Haynesville	26, 27
Minden, at Minden	Mar. 5, 6
Arcadia	12, 13
Downsville	19, 20
Farmerville, at Smith	26, 27
Webster, at Andrew Chapel	Apr. 2, 3

District Stewards will meet at Tulip, January 29-30. Preaching on each day. R. W. Greer, Homer, P. C. Rust, Tulip, Lovick Wrenn, Meridian, G. T. Wynn, Haynesville, E. L. Holland, Vernon, W. P. Kimball, Webster, — Norton, Arcadia. The Stewards from Sparta, Farmerville, Downsville, Indian Village and Rochester, together with the brethren named, will please meet me at the above time and place.

J. F. PARKER, P. C.

SHREVEPORT DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Logansport mission, at Reynold's S. H.	Jan. 8, 9
Caddo circuit	15, 16
South Bossier, at Bellevue	22, 23
North Bossier, at Red River	29, 30
Mooringsport	Feb. 5, 6
Shreveport	12, 13
Mansfield	19, 20
Coushatta, at Coushatta	26, 27
Springville, at Springville	Mar. 5, 6
Pleasant Hill	12, 13
Many, at Negreet	19, 20
Anacoco, at Holly Grove	26, 27
Natchitoches circuit, at New Hope	Apr. 2, 3
Natchitoches station	10, 11

District Stewards meeting at Shreveport, February 12, 1880. (2) T. H. MCLENDON, P. E.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

JACKSON DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Hinds mission, at Lane's	Jan. 1, 2
Canton	8, 9
Sharon, at Lone Pine	15, 16
Thomastown, at Lone Pine	15, 16
Madison	22, 23
Soule Chapel	29, 30
Edwards	Feb. 5, 6
Raleigh	12, 13
Jackson	19, 20
Benton	26, 27
Mt. Pleasant	Mar. 5, 6
Fletcher's Chapel	12, 13
Silver Creek	19, 20
Lodi	19, 20
Vazoo City	26, 27

The district Stewards will please meet at the parsonage in Canton, at ten A. M., on Tuesday, January 25. (11) W. L. C. RUSSELL, P. E.

WOODVILLE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Jackson station	Jan. 1, 2
Clinton station	8, 9
Amite City, at Amite City	15, 16
Pinckney and Port Hudson, at Pinckney	22, 23
Wilkins at Wilkins	29, 30
Bayou Sara, at New Hope	Feb. 5, 6
St. Helena, at Pine Grove	12, 13
Wilkinson, at Bethel	19, 20
Woodville station	26, 27
North Wilkinson, at Hopewell	Mar. 5, 6
Amite, at Liberty	12, 13
Franklington, at Franklington	19, 20
East Feliciana, at Olive Branch	26, 27
East Baton Rouge, at Bethel	Apr. 2, 3
Livingston, at Bayou Barbary	9, 10

(53) JOS. A. GODFREY, P. E.

BROOKHAVEN DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Brookhaven and Wesson, at Brookhaven	Dec. 25, 26
Crystal Springs station	Jan. 1, 2
Summerfield and McComb, at McComb	8, 9
Hazlehurst station	15, 16
Brandywine, at Rehoboth	22, 23
Magnolia, at Magnolia	29, 30
Adam's and Bogue Chitto, at Bethel	Feb. 5, 6
Scotland, at New Hope	12, 13
Beauregard, at Rabula	19, 20
Spring Ridge, at Byram	26, 27
Bayou Pierre, at Union Chapel	Mar. 5, 6
Georgetown, at Bethesda	12, 13

(53) H. F. JOHNSON, P. E.

VICKSBURG DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

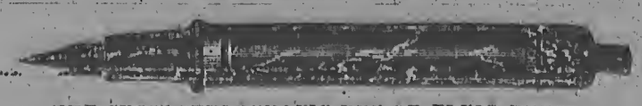
Rolling Fork	Jan. 1, 2
Glover Hill	8, 9
Mt. Olivet, at Sabartia	15, 16
Sunflower mission, at Sabartia	15, 16
Warren at Bovina	22, 23
Vicksburg	29, 30
Port Gibson	Feb. 5, 6
Martin	5, 6
Rocky Springs, at Rocky Springs	12, 13
Chuga, at Utica	18, 20
Natchez	26, 27
Fayette, at Fayette	Mar. 5, 6
Kingston, at Kingston	12, 13
Meadville	19, 20

District Stewards meet in the lecture room of the Methodist Church, at Vicksburg, January 29, at 10 A. M. (54) JOHN A. ELLIS, P. E.

MERIDIAN DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Linwood, at Linwood	Jan. 1, 2
DeKalb, at DeKalb	8, 9
Lauderdale, at Lauderdale	15, 16
Meridian station	21
Marion, at Union Grove	22, 23
Illinsville, at Old Scenia	29, 30
Enterprise, at Chunkey	Feb. 5, 6
Wheatfield mission	11
Waynesboro, at Waynesboro	12, 13
Paulding, at Paulding	19, 20
Wayne, at Liberty	26, 27
Enterprise and Quitman, at Enterprise	Mar. 5, 6
Shubuta, at Shubuta	12, 13
Shady Grove mission, at Shady Grove	19, 20

The District Stewards will meet at the Methodist Church in Meridian, January 20, at eleven o'clock.



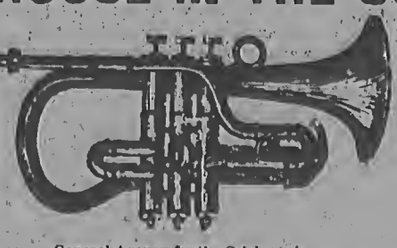
(52) W. J. JONES, P. E.

It is a foolish mistake to confound a remedy of merit with the quack nostrums now so common. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Rheumatism and Dyspepsia, and when worn out by overwork, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE
In Nervous Diseases.

W. A. Hammond, M. D., late Surgeon General U. S. Army, said that under the use of arsenic and Horsford's Acid Phosphate, a young lady recovered her reason, who had been rendered insane by a dream.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE CROSS STYLOGRAFIC PEN OR FLUID PENCIL.

A pencil that writes with Ink; never needs sharpening and never wears out. Made of hard vulcanized rubber, gold, platinum and iridium. 14 kinds from $2 50 to $5 each. Call and see them or send for circular.

LATHROP & WILKINS, Agents for the Southwest,
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

LEON ARLAUD
DRUGGIST,
Corner Customhouse and Dauphine sts., New Orleans.
PURE AND GENUINE DRUGS. GUARANTEED UNADULTERATED
Medicines, Perfumery, etc. Specialty of Bather's Eau de Cologne.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR
MUSIC HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

Easiest Terms! Lowest Prices!

General Agency for the Celebrated
Steinway, Knabe, Pleyel, Weber, Fischer Pianos
And the Popular Organs of
CLOUGH & WARREN AND PELOUBET, PELTON & CO.,
Everything in the Music line at rock bottom prices. Send for illustrated catalogues.
LOUIS GRUNEWALD,
Grunewald Hall, New Orleans

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.

SOUTHERN DEPARTMENT:

OFFICE: CORNER CARONDELET AND GRAVIER STREETS.

The capital of the Company is TEN MILLION DOLLARS, to which there must be added the unlimited fidelity of the proprietors.

Fire assets, excluding paid-up capital	$9,881,426 21
Paid-up capital	1,228,200 00
Total fire assets	$11,109,626 21
Fire liabilities	3,944,358 23
Making the surplus for policy-holders	$7,165,267 98

Losses by Chicago Fire in 1871 $3,239,611
Losses by Boston Fire in 1872 $1,129,729

Fire risks of all kinds respectfully solicited. The Board of Directors is fully empowered to adjust and pay all losses from this city, thus placing the Company on an even footing with the local companies chartered under the State laws.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

J. F. SCHRODER, Esq., Chairman, of Leopold Christ & Co.
NEWTON BUCKNER, Esq., of Buckner & Co.
PERRY NUGENT, Esq., of Nugent & Lallande.
PETER ANDERSON, Esq., of Anderson and Simpson.
HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary.
JULES P. ROUX, Asst Resident Secretary.
NEW ORLEANS October 20, 1880.

P. WERLEIN,
135 Canal Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

PIANOS,
ORGANS,
MUSIC
AND
Musical Instruments.

Please send for my catalogue and prices before buying from any one, North or South.

$25 TO $35.
STEWART'S NEW IMPROVED
SINGER
Sewing Machine.

Great Reduction in Prices!
Down with Monopolies!
Hard Times Demand Low Prices.

We warrant all our Machines to be NEW, LATEST-IMPROVED and PERFECT for

FIVE YEARS.

Our NEW MACHINE is supplied with a LOOSE BALANCE WHEEL, which is a great improvement over the old SINGER, as it enables the operator to wind the bobbin without running the machine, or removing the work from the needle. This is the most important improvement ever put on the Sewing Machine.

Also dealer in all first-class Machines, such as the WHEELER & WILSON, GROVER & BAKER, DOMESTIC, WILSON, WEED, Etc.

Cotton, Silk, Flax, Oil and Needles for all kinds of Machines. Address

M. A. PECK,
General Sewing Machine Agent
153 CANAL STREET,
Next to Holmes' Dry Goods Store,
New Orleans.

B. J. MONTGOMERY. C. KIRSE
R. M. & B. J.
MONTGOMERY
FURNITURE
AND
MIRROR EMPORIUM
Corner Camp and Poydras Sts.

After a sojourn of over six weeks among the Furries North, East and West, we open the Fall and Winter Trade with the largest and best selected stock of Furniture, French and German Plate Mirrors, Ornamental and Fancy Goods, Upholstery Goods and Cabinet Makers' Hardware ever brought to this city. We select our goods in person from the best factories, and are determined not to be undersold. Our assortment being too extensive and varied to be enumerated in detail, we request our customers and the general public to call and inspect for themselves.

Constantly on hand a full line of the celebrated Victoria Wood Work and Invalid Wheel Chairs.

Goods packed and delivered F. O. B.

THE
NEW HYMN BOOK
Everybody is Delighted with it.

Prepared by authorization of the General Conference of 1878, and especially adapted to revival, prayer and social meetings. The arrangement in the Standard Hymn Book has been preserved, as well as the most common hymns in that work, so that it can be used in connection with it. It contains 241 hymns besides benedictions and doxologies, etc., the order of public worship, baptismal service of infants and adults, and form of reception of church members. It is strongly bound in cloth, stitched with wire, and the low price at which it is supplied renders it particularly available for general use, in all churches for congregational singing.

Single copy by mail, postpaid, twenty-five cents.

In quantities of twenty-five or more, by freight or express, twenty cents per copy. Address

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

FURNITURE.

W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
New Orleans.

D. MERCIER & SONS,
Better Known as Cheap John.
NO BRANCH STORE IN TOWN
MEN'S, BOYS' AND YOUTH'S
CLOTHING,
HATS, BOOTS, SHOES, FURNISHING GOODS, ETC., ETC.
Cor. Dauphine and Bienville sts.,
New Orleans, La.

Orders from Country Merchants promptly executed on most reasonable terms.

DR. ELY'S CELEBRATED PATENT ARTIFICIAL LEGS AND ARMS have all the motions of the natural limbs. Perfect satisfaction in all cases or no pay. Prices reduced. Send for pamphlet.

A. McDERMOTT, Manufacturer.
158 Camp St., New Orleans.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 27.—NO. 5. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1881. WHOLE NO. 1339.

PUBLISHED FOR THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

G. T. LATHROP, Publisher.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, . . . $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.
REV. H. D. MOORE.
REV. O. R. BLUE, D. D.
REV. J. O. ANDREW.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. H. WATKINS, D. D.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. JOHN MATHEWS, D. D.
REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

THE ANCIENT PILGRIM SONG.

BY MARIANNE FARNINGHAM.

They passed along their checkered way,
Those pilgrim bands of old,
When morning painted on the skies
Its bands of red and gold.
And when the noontide glory bathed
The land in floods of light,
And when the shadow-forms came forth,
Dark heralds of the night,
Their song in sacred unison,
In valley or on hill,
The Lord hath been mindful of us,
And He will bless us still.

Sometimes the earth was dry and parched,
But they did not fear to sing,
And soon there mingled with their song
The music of the spring;
And there were famine times of woe,
But God would feed them at real
And there were fierce fights with the foe,
Yet were they comforted,
For faith was strong and hope was high,
Since the would not forget;
The Lord hath been mindful of us,
And He will bless us yet.

They saw in every blushing flower
A token of His love;
The covering skies alone did part
Them from His home above;
They said, within the sunny glades,
"See where the Lord hath been."
They felt His thought and care for them
In every varying scene,
And boys and girls and the old men sang, with uplifted brow,
The Lord hath been mindful of us,
And He will bless us now.

Little cared they who else forgot
Since He remembered them;
Not theirs the land of Promise yet,
Nor theirs of gold or gem,
Yet were they tranquil, strong and glad,
In the day bright or dim;
Their God was with them evermore,
Were they not safe with Him?
They rested them upon the might
Of His most gracious will,
Mindful of them the Lord hath been,
And He will bless them still.

What have we for our modern life
But the same trustful song?
More eagerly, with quicker steps,
We pilgrims pass along;
But the same need is in our hearts,
We tread the self-same way,
And He who guided Israel
Is blessing us to-day.
So sing we forth in happy tones
The hymn that ceaseth never,
The Lord hath been mindful of us
And He will bless us ever.

Alabama Conference—Missions.

PRAIRIEVILLE, January 29, 1881.

MR. EDITOR: I send this report to the ADVOCATE that the preachers may refresh themselves with the sight of the resolutions we adopted at the last conference. Another very important resolution, offered by Bro. Mason, was carried. It looks to the Brazilian mission. I will send this also, before long.

We made a forward movement at Pensacola, and I suppose no one will say we moved too soon. If we carry out our resolutions, there will be a marked and wonderful change in the church in Alabama. May God help us!

The Conference Board requested Rev. M. S. Andrews, the chairman, to call attention through the ADVOCATE to this vital interest, and we shall look for strong and stirring articles from his facile pen often during the year. It is very important that collections for Domestic Missions be made once, and the funds sent immediately to Bro. J. M. Patton, the treasurer. The Board most earnestly desires to pay the missionaries their money quarterly,—will the brethren help?

J. W. H.

REPORT OF SECRETARY MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF ALABAMA CONFERENCE, 1881.

On the list of our regular appointments are 16 missionary charges, all of which have been heard from except Hustee. The reports summed up give the following statistics: Local preachers, 31; white members, 2,—; colored members, 1,—; adults, baptized, 75; infants baptized, 114; number of Sunday-schools, 41; number of officers and teachers, 165; number of scholars 1,084; moneys expended, $2 73; number of churches, 55; number of sittings, 8,800; value of churches $4,965; value of other church property, $408 75; moneys expended in building, repairing, etc., $1,043 50.

Bishop's fund, $22 35; Conference collection, $73 35; Education, 9 78; the poor, $45 70; bible cause, 14 25; other objects, $136 35; foreign missions, $48 10; domestic missions, $57 15; paid presiding elder, $250 85; paid pastors in charge; $2,503 87.

On account of the migratory habits of the people generally served on domestic missions, and of the frequent changes made in the boundaries of the several charges, it is almost impossible to give such a statistical statement, as will perfectly indicate the condition of this part of our field. Yet enough is certain, to show we are not laboring altogether in vain. Indeed, considering the poverty and spurseness of the population, their remoteness from centers of trade, and the kinds of business they generally follow, their love for the church and for Christ seems quite equal, if not superior, to that of many of the more wealthy and favored circuits and stations.

The amount per member given for missions is about 5 cents; for ministerial support, $1 28, and for all purposes, $2 02. The appropriations of the Board, augmented by the sums raised on the works, give a total of $5,504 72, an average of $344 04 to each missionary. We're happy to be able to announce that all drafts for the present year have been paid in full.

It is for the Board to consider, whether these amounts should be increased; and for the Society to determine, whether by collecting and remitting funds in the early part of the year, the preachers shall be paid in quarterly installments, or remain unpaid and embarrassed till the year's work is done. The Board has passed a resolution requiring collections to be made as early as May, and sent to the Treasurer; and that he pay it quarterly on the drafts to be drawn for the next year. Will the society carry out the resolution?

The treasurer's report shows $3,718 20 raised for the foreign work. This makes but quite 12 cents per member. When we remember that money is the product of the toil of man's brain, and nerve, and muscle, and consequently the means, when possessed, by which he hopes to provide himself with comfort and luxury, and to exempt himself from poverty and labor, it is easy to see why to the unrenewed heart it is the object of most eager search and most idolatrous love; and also, why the Saviour makes the amount consecrated to his service the measure and the exponent of one's love to himself. A man puts himself into his money, and consequently, to give himself is to give his substance. In the nature of the case the surrender of the heart to Jesus, is the surrender of all the heart loves to Him. None of it can be kept back. The problem for a Christian to solve, is to see not how little, but how much he can put into his Lord's treasury, and not how much, but how little he will be forced to use in doing the work the Master appoints him. The calculation should seek to determine not what part belongs to God—that is already settled, it is all His—but what part his necessity as a good and faithful servant will require to be kept out of the present contribution. Until our preachers and people shall see plainly these primary truths, they will never adjust themselves to the simplest relationships of religious life, and the church must suffer the reproach of something like 12 cents per annum as the gift of each member to enlighten and save the millions of benighted and lost heathen for whom Christ died. It really looks like the love of the world has blinded our eyes and swerved us from our true allegiance to our Lord. When will the Alabama Conference wipe out this degrading reproach?

In the light of the Scripture teaching, and in view of the wealth entrusted to our membership, we feel it is impossible to meet our obligations with such meagre contributions as we have been making. With repentance for the past, and prayer for future help, let us adopt and carry out the following resolution:

Resolved, That this Conference do now solemnly pledge itself to employ all the means within its control to increase both the missionary spirit and the missionary contribution, the next year going beyond the amount assessed to us by the parent Board.

Respectfully submitted,

J. W. HARSH, Secretary.

PENSACOLA, December, 1880.

"Wesley Without the Experience of Sanctification."

In a recent number of the ADVOCATE there appeared an article with the above caption. The effort of the writer was to show that Mr. Wesley never experienced the blessing of entire sanctification. I do not propose to review the article, but simply to give a few facts gathered in the course of my own reading, to be read in connection with the above article.

1. He professed it indirectly in his tract called "The Character of a Methodist," published about the year 1744, in this language:

"Come, let us look one another in the face, and perhaps some of you who hate what I am called, will love what I am by the grace of God."

In the above tract he describes the person as "pure in heart," "cleansed," "purified," etc., all of which terms the Holy Ghost uses of him who is "complete in Christ."

In commenting on the above, Dr. Bangs, in the Christian Advocate and Journal, of January 22, 1852, says: "Now, unless Wesley designed to exclude himself from the family of Methodists, whom he characterizes in the above energetic description, he must have professed the blessing of sanctification; for no one will dispute but that he who enjoys what is therein described, has the enjoyment of that inestimable blessing," and we fully agree with the Doctor.

2. He professed it clearly by implication in his plain account of Christian perfection, in the following questions:

Question 1. "Suppose one had attained to this, would you advise him to speak of it."

Answer. At first he would be scarcely able to refrain, the fire would be so hot within him; his desire to declare the loving kindness of God carrying him away like a torrent, etc."

Ques. 2. "But would it not be better to be entirely silent, not to speak of it at all."

Ans. "By silence, he might avoid many crosses which will naturally and necessarily ensue, if he simply declare, even among believers, what God has wrought in his soul."

"If, therefore, such a one were to confer with flesh and blood, he would be entirely silent. But this could not be done with a clear conscience, for undoubtedly he ought to speak," etc.

If Mr. Wesley did not make a public profession of entire sanctification, he stands before the world convicted of a glaring inconsistency, in advising others to do, in such strong language, that which he himself never did.

3. In Moore's life of the Wesleys, pages 184, 185, and 186, we read of his troubles with Maxfield. Hear his rebuke to Maxfield, "I dislike your supposing a man may be as perfect as an angel; that he can be absolutely perfect; that he can be infallible, or above being tempted; or that a moment he is pure in heart he cannot fall from it. I dislike your saying, 'This was not known or taught among us till within two or three years.' I grant you did not know it. You have, over and over again, denied instantaneous sanctification to me. But I have known and taught it and so has my brother, as our works show above these twenty years." Mark his language, "Known and taught it." Comment is useless.

4. And now let us turn to Wesley's Works. In a letter dated London, June 19, 1771, addressed to a lady friend, we read, "Many years since I saw that 'without holiness no man shall see the Lord.' I began following after it, and inciting all I had any intercourse with to do the same. Ten years after, God gave me a clearer view of it than that I had before of the way how to attain this, namely, by faith in the Son of God. And immediately I declared to all, 'we are saved from sin, we are made holy by faith.' This I testified, in private, in public, in print; and God confirmed it by a thousand witnesses. I have continued to declare this for above thirty years; and God has continued to confirm the words of his grace."

Let the incredulous cavil, but let us carefully ponder the above.

Last. In his last letter to Dr. Dodd, which we find in volume 6, of his works, I believe, page 573, or there about, we read some thing like this, "This is my experience, and also of my brother, besides hundreds of others, in England, whom I personally know."

With these facts before me, if Mr. Wesley was alive, and on his trial for making a public profession of entire sanctification; and I sitting on the jury, I should feel it my duty to return a verdict of guilty.

J. WYNDHAM.

Evangelization in France.

New York Independent.

There are many and unmistakable indications that the favorable moment for Protestantism in France has come. The people, for very excellent reasons, are wavering in their allegiance to the Roman Catholic Church. They have come to regard it as the friend of tyranny and ignorance, and the foe of Republican institutions and free education and free thought. They are beginning to see how far it has departed from the pure principles of the religion of the New Testament, and how near its worship is to idolatry. It still holds the more ignorant in chains; but the intelligent, thinking classes are, unfortunately, breaking with Catholicism, to become free thinkers and atheists. The church makes no effort to prevent these losses, and refuses to adapt itself to the environments and to the spirit of the age. It will not remember that the old regime has passed away forever, and that the memory of it is hateful to true Frenchmen. Hence, statesmen are declaring that Protestantism is the hope of the French nation, and the people are inquiring what the principles and doctrines of the Reformed Church are as never before.

There are three Protestant churches in France: the Reformed Church and the Lutheran Church, supported by the state, and the Free Churches, which renounced state aid in order to become free from state control. Of this very respectable and vigorous body Dr. Pressense is a distinguished leader. The Reformed Church, which represents the great bulk of Protestantism in France, is, unfortunately, greatly hampered by its connection with the state. It has felt most severely the blighting influence of Rationalism, and has been trying since 1872 to free itself from this incumbrance; but in this period there have been many changes in the Cabinet, and negotiations with the ministry of public worship have, accordingly, been slow and uncertain. The present minister refuses to permit the regulations of the Synod of 1872 to be observed, and there appears to be little hope of the Church being able to shake off Rationalism so long as it remains a State Church. The Orthodox majority, however, have established an unofficial ecclesiastical system, which, though without ecclesiastical authority, gives strength and unity to the Evangelicals, and enables them to work together effectively in missionary and other benevolent enterprises. The Lutheran Churches are not concerned with the evangelization of the country, which is left chiefly to the Reformed Church and the Free Churches. The Wesleyans have a Conference in France, and some British and American missionaries are at work; but none of these agencies are very strong. The Evangelical Society of the Free Churches, the Central Protestant Evangelization Society of the State Church, and the Home Mission Society are the chief French evangelization societies. These societies are trying to perform a work which requires more money and more men than they can possibly command. Therefore, they sent M. Reveilland and M. Dodds to the United States to plead the cause of France, and worthily and effectually was it done.

The commission formed to welcome and assist this deputation have an encouraging report to make. Dr. Beard, the secretary, at a meeting recently held in this city, at the house of the president, Dr. Crosby, stated that in the eighty-one days that Messrs. Reveilland and Dodds were in this country they held seventy-seven public meetings, averaging three every Sunday. They spoke in thirteen different States and in Canada, and the results of their earnest appeals cannot be measured in money, though they obtained some $12,000, with much more yet to come. They were most cordially received everywhere, and they left with the conviction that a deep and abiding interest had been awakened in the evangelization of France. Many interesting incidents were given in Dr. Beard's report, indicating the deep impressions made and the necessity of following them up. Some remarkable special gifts were promised. Enough has been reaped from this effort of less than twelve weeks, to show that if their cause, if properly presented to the American people, is one which will enlist their ready sympathy and assistance. The question now is, how this shall be done? Spasmodic efforts will not do. To prompt the French societies to enlarge their operations this year, only to curtail them the next, through lack of permanent aid, would be unkindness. What will the churches do?

The news of the success of Mr. McAll's mission in Paris and vicinity has reached, doubtless, nearly every pastor in this country, in some form; but it cannot be generally known how attentively the people hear evangelists in France, and how whole villages have renounced Catholicism and accepted the Protestant religion. Dr. Somerville, the well-known Scotch evangelist, made a tour in France a year or two ago, and he was amazed at what he saw and heard. He was welcomed everywhere and listened with the closest attention. We need not repeat the information given by M. Reveilland; but those who desire to acquaint themselves fully with the subject would do well to obtain copies of "The White Fields of France" and "God's Wonderful Work in France."

Parables not Adapted to Children.

It is a great mistake to suppose that children can easily understand Bible parables. Parables are not illustrations. Illustrations illuminate truth; throw light on it; make it at once clearer and more distinct. Parables enfold truth; wrap it about with figures, that for the time being conceal rather than disclose it. This is the original purpose of parables. "Why speakest thou unto them in parables?" asked the disciples of Jesus, when they found that He was addressing the multitude in figures of speech difficult of apprehension. "Because," was the reply, "it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given." Yet the disciples had to come to their Master for the explanation of one parable after another which He had spoken to others in their hearing. "And when they were alone He expounded all things to His disciples." A child's imagination is active. He can understand, make believe. He can enter into the spirit of a fairy story or an allegory; but his reasoning faculties are not so disciplined that he can transfer the intended teachings of the figures thus employed from the abstract to the concrete, from the ideal to the real, from the symbol to the symbolized. Many a child can tell you almost any Fable of Æsop who cannot give you the "Moral" of a single one. Many a child, moreover, who loves to think of Jesus taking little children into His arms and speaking loving words to them, and who can imagine Jesus looking down on children with the same tender interest in their welfare, gets no help from the suggestion of the good Shepherd carrying the lambs of His flock in His bosom. A good man once said that he suffered for years, from his earlier childhood, in the thought of his eternal future. The figure of the Shepherd dividing the sheep from the goats in the Day of Judgment had been given to him as the unfolding of that future; and the idea he gained from it was, that his only choice was to be covered with hair or wool forever and ever. "Moral"—for those who are old enough to apprehend it: Illustrate Bible truth as well as you can, in your teaching of children; but don't speak to them in parables.—Sunday-School Times.

PRIDE AND STIFFNESS.—In every church there are certain men who, by their long residence, efficiency, wealth, learning, or social position, have come to be recognized as leaders. They fill the important offices, or are as influential as though they did. Such men can add very much to their power for good by courtesy to those less honored, to the obscure members of the church, especially to the young and to those who were once in better circumstances than present. A courteous nod, a warm shake of the hand at the church door, in the street, or at any casual meeting, from such men, will build up a church in Christian unity and attract the people to it more than eloquent preaching where the leading spirits form a little aristocratic coterie. The real cause of the decline of some important churches is that the official members are without genuine sympathy with the majority of the congregation. People begin to feel that they are ignored; then that they are not desired; then they go elsewhere or remain at home. A little thoughtfulness and brotherly kindness on the part of the men and women of position and leadership would prevent this. Think of it, ye who wish the church to prosper. And let all practice it.—Christian.

In the New York Witness of January 6, an interesting account is given of the Christian work, during the past year, of Father J. A. O'Connor, of the Independent Catholic Church of New York city. He has now a large weekly congregation, chiefly of those who have heretofore attended Roman Catholic worship. He has received into the church eight ex-priests and ten young men who had been monks and students in Roman Catholic monasteries or colleges. Tracts and Bibles have been circulated; Bible classes, preaching, and prayer-meetings have been held during the week; and a very wide and hopeful influence has been exerted upon the Roman Catholic population. The work seems to promise large growth and great usefulness.—Zion's Herald.

PRINCETON, ARK., January 21, 1881.—Your valuable paper still reaches me regularly, for which I am greatly obliged. Our first Quarterly Conference for the Princeton circuit, has just been held, and the stewards paid me nearly enough money to pay my expenses to this country. A great many Methodists here, and some of them quite true to the cause.

W. W. GRAHAM.

Good Words.

—A beautiful incident is told of a little child upon a lately wrecked steamer. The boats were taking the passengers away as fast as they could, every one crowding forward, intent on his own salvation. One after another was passed down, while the neglected child stood waiting her turn. The vessel rocked to and fro, on the eve of going to the bottom. Seeing no chance of escape, the little one stretched out her hands, and cried, "Save me next." It is a cry that ought to go up from millions of hearts. The bark of life will go down some day, and if we are not saved by Christ, we must be eternally lost. It is a cry that those of us who have saved might hear on every hand.

—The Rev. Phillips Brooks says "the reason why a great many people seem to be always changing their faith, is that they never really have any faith." After saying they have a great many opinions and fancies which they have gathered together, and loosely considered in an exercise of the will which they call faith, he adds, "They no more have a faith than a vagrant has a home who sleeps on a doorstep every night."

—A foreigner on one occasion, indulging in skeptical doubts of the existence of an over-ruling Providence, Sydney Smith, who had observed him evidently well satisfied with his repast, said:

"You must admit that there is great genius and thought in that dish?"

"Admirable?" he replied; "nothing can be better."

"May I then ask, are you prepared to deny the existence of the cook?" asked Sydney.

"How are you getting on in your new place?" asked a lady of a girl whom she had recommended for a situation. "Very well, thank you," answered the girl. "I am glad to hear it," said the lady. "Your employer is a very nice lady, and you cannot do too much for her." "I don't mean to, ma'am," was the innocent reply.

How passing strange that mystery of suffering is, and how questionable the right which two-thirds of the world assume to themselves of filling their ears with cotton, that the moans may not break in upon their silken repose, and that the cry of the toiling thousands may float by on the blast unheard.—F. W. Robertson.

—We have, amid all changes, three unchangeables—an unchangeable covenant, an unchangeable God, and an unchangeable Heaven; and while these three remain "the same yesterday, to-day and forever," welcome the will of our Heavenly Father in all events that may happen to us. Matthew Henry.

—The only way to shine, even in this false world, is to be modest and unassuming. Falsehood may be a thick crust; but, in the course of time, truth will find a place to break through. Elegance of language may not be in the power of us all; but simplicity and straightforwardness are.—W. C. Bryant.

—Good works do not make a Christian; but one must be a Christian to do good works. The tree bringeth forth the fruit, not the fruit the tree. No fruit is made a Christian by works, but by Christ; and being in Christ, he brings forth fruit for him.—Luther.

—An infidel said sarcastically to a clergyman: "I always spend Sunday in settling my accounts." The reverend gentleman did not wither as expected, but simply replied: "And you will probably spend the day of judgment in the same way."

The profession that fosters pride is one that can only bring a snare in the end. And not a few of our religious professors do this, since they substitute a desire for human recognition or applause for the prompting that comes from the Saviour.

—Human happiness has no perfect security but freedom, freedom none but virtue; virtue none but knowledge; and neither freedom nor virtue has any vigor or immortal hope except in the principles of the Christian religion.—President Quincy.

—You will confer the greatest benefits on your city, not by raising its rents, but by exalting its souls. For it is better that great souls should live in small habitations than that abject slaves should burrow in great houses.—Epictetus.

—Has it never occurred to us, when surrounded by sorrows, that they may be sent by God only for our instruction as we darken the cages of birds when we wish to teach them to sing?—Richter.

—Let the ground of all our religious action be obedience. Examine not why it is commanded, but observe it because it is commanded. True obedience neither procrastinates nor questions.

—It is safer to be humble with one talent, than proud with ten; yea, better to be an humble worm than a proud angel.—James iv. 6; Prov. xvi. 19, 24. Flavel.

Diversity of worship has divided the human race into seventy-two nations. From all their dogmas I have selected one—Divine Love.

Every saint is God's temple, and he who carries his temple about him may go to prayer when he pleases.—Austin.

—No man can lift himself above the world unless he takes hold of something higher than himself.

—A judicious silence is better than truth spoken without charity.—De Sales.

—Practice in life whatever you pray for, and God will give it to you more abundantly.—Dr. Pusey.

Missionary Notice.

To the Pastors of the East Texas Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DEAR BRETHREN: Under date January 23, 1881, Mrs. D. H. McGavock, Corresponding Secretary of Woman's Missionary Society of our Church, writes me:

"I write now to repeat what I asked you to do in the interest of Woman's Work in Texas. We need a Conference Society in East Texas Conference. Have two flourishing Auxiliaries, one at Palestine, and one at Crockett. The work cannot progress without further organization.

I am deeply interested in the development of the work in Texas, and hope it will be convenient for you to do this much more for the W. M. S. which is already under obligations for your active efforts."

In answer to this request, I invite all the pastors of the E. Texas Conference to co-operate with me by organizing at once an auxiliary in every charge. Let the auxiliaries at Crockett and Palestine, those newly organized, each elect delegates to a meeting which I D. V. I will hold in Marshall, Texas, February 26, for the purpose of organizing the Conference Society. Let each auxiliary be represented in the person of its delegates, and each auxiliary, without exception, send to me at Marshall, a roll of its officers and members. I have written to the pastor at Marshall, requesting him to make such arrangements as he can for the convenience and comfort of this meeting, and I take the liberty and responsibility of answering for his kind co-operation.

The delegates will meet in the Methodist Church, Marshall, Texas, at 10 A. M., Saturday, February 26, for organization. All ladies interested in church work are urgently requested to attend. At night there will be a Mass Meeting under the auspices of the new Conference Society, at which addresses will be delivered illustrative of women's work and its place in the philosophy of church life.

J. J. HANSON.

NEW ORLEANS, January 28, 1881.

A NOTE FROM BISHOP KEENER.

I hope that the pastors of our churches in East Texas Conference, will co-operate with the Woman's Missionary Society in the formation of auxiliaries in their several charges. In answer to the request of the Corresponding Secretary of that Society directed to Rev. J. J. Ransom, Missionary to Brazil,

J. C. KEENER.

NEW ORLEANS, January 28, 1881.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1881.

THE MISTY-LAND.

BY PAUL PASTNOR.

Somewhere's a strange, unreal shifting place
Where all the vapors of this earth-life rise,
And we, with generous geographic grace,
Make large Misty-Land an unknown skies.

We love the colony, for thither go
Unrestful nomads and burglarious boors.
We cheer the outbound ships of sailing snow
Go home, our chase the latches of our doors.

It is so grateful to have foreign lands,
Far, far away across the sparkling sea,
Whither to point life's outcasts with our hands,
And bid them all God speed—from you and me!

What should we do without this distant bay,
This barren Misty-Land that nurses waifes?
Our beauteous city would be grim and gray
With whining beggars, bolstered in their graves!

We could not walk in garden paths at eve,
But some gaunt, hungry hand would seek our throat,
Or lank marauder, still as drifting leaf,
Transgress the threshold, helpless and remote!

What matters who is King of Misty-Land?
It is a great, dim desert, far away;
The tribute that he will, let Him demand
From Old-World rajahs, to their lorn dismay.

If we be rid of them, 'tis well and good—
It's long ere we mind, weep and sail away.
Time enough then to parley by the flood
With Charon and his lemuous ghosts of gray!

Appointment of Delegates to the Ecumenical.

The action of the last General Conference, concerning the Pan-Methodist Love-Feast and Council, to be held in London this year, is contained in two resolutions closing the report of the Ecumenical Committee. (See Journal, page 137.)

"Your committee recommend for your adoption the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, heartily approve of the proposed Ecumenical Conference of Methodist Churches.

"Resolved, That the Bishops of our church be, and are hereby, authorized and directed to appoint a committee of seven, consisting of two of the Bishops, three other ministers and two laymen, who shall be fully empowered to arrange for such a Conference, and to represent our church in the correspondence necessary thereto; and to appoint delegates to represent the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the Ecumenical Conference, whenever it may assemble."

The question, Who is to appoint delegates to represent us in the Ecumenical Conference? is answered by the grammatical construction of language. The same persons who appointed the committee to arrange for the Conference, viz.: "The Bishops of our church."

There is a real force in punctuation marks. Small as they are, they change the meaning of a sentence by being shifted from one part of it to another, even though the words remain the same. A comma has determined the sense of contracts involving great issues. There is a difference in their signification; a comma is not the same as a semicolon. In fixing the meaning of a somewhat involved and elliptical sentence punctuation is not only convenient, but essential.

According to the plain reading and proper emphasis of the second resolution, the Bishops are authorized and directed to appoint a committee to do a certain work—arrange for a Conference. This done, the committee's function is ended, and the same persons who appointed the committee, again acting under the given authority, are to appoint delegates to that Conference.

Our Bishops so construed the resolution; and, after the committee had done its work, the Bishops (the committee concurring in their construction of the resolution) met and appointed the delegates.

Now come certain objectors, and say: This is all wrong; the committee alone had authority, under the resolution, to make appointments! They have gone into the church papers (so far as they are admitted) with their charges and complaints. They berate the Bishops soundly for immodesty, indelicacy, intrusion and usurpation, and call in question the validity of the credentials of the delegates. So far these writers have had it all their own way, no one seeming to think it worth while, in so plain a matter, to reply to them. Perhaps the impression has been made on some minds that they really have a case.

Not only does the proper rendering of the resolution show them in error, but usage and analogy of government likewise. The College of Bishops represent the General Conference, ad interim, in many ways. As executive officers of the church, they are subject to the directions of the General Conference, carrying out its measures. Their official duties acquaint them with the whole field, from which the Ecumenical delegates are to be selected; whereas, five-sevenths of the committee were ministers and laymen, having only a local acquaintance. Suppose the committee of seven, after doing its plainly-prescribed work, had proceeded to appoint delegates. The two Bishops on the committee must have had undue influence or responsibility, for the other committeemen must depend on them largely for information concerning men beyond their own Annual Conferences. Ah, that committee would have seen sights! They would have been "pitched into" from all sides by disappointed men and their friends, and by others as well, who read the resolution correctly. Imagine how it would be: "Presumptuous men," some would say, "you were authorized to do one thing, and you have gone on and done another, and a very different thing."

Others would object: "There is Miller, very fine preacher; writes ably for the Quarterly, and all that; good for a committee of seven to arrange for the Ecumenical; but what does he know about California or Texas or Florida or Virginia? Always lived in Kentucky. Bishop Kavanaugh lives in Kentucky, too, but he has been over all the territory of the church several times, and been in contact with all its leading men; he is the man to take part in appointing delegates; and we mean him, and the resolution reads that way. There's Carlisle great astronomer does he know the men of his own South Carolina, to say nothing of all outside of South Carolina, as well as Bishop Wightman? Does the absentee Haygood know Georgia, and the other thirty-five Conferences, as well as Bishop Pierce? Does the learned Hendrix equal Bishop Payne in his judgment of and acquaintance with the ministers and laymen of our connection?" And so it would go. The two Bishops on the committee of seven (Doggett and McTyeire), would catch it from all sides. "Why did they, ignoring their colleagues, go into the work with that committee? They ought to have known better. It was an insult to their wise and venerable associates—it was disloyalty to the General Conference. Ah, but you see—they are two ambitious men—scheming for power; they knew they had advantage over the other members of the committee, and could therefore work things pretty much their own way."

What a fuss there would have been? The luckless committee would have been arraigned before the public as sinning both against grammar and godliness. Know this, O reader, for your comfort: No matter how a thing is done, if it touches honor, and place and appointment, there is sure to arise complaint from some quarter.

Pity that the Annual Conferences could not elect. But, as it turned out, there were not enough delegates to go round—one of each sort.

Pity the General Conference did not elect. But in May, 1878, the Ecumenical had not been determined on.

So it was turned over to "the Bishops of our church," as many other things are, and left for them to do.

The Northern General Conference in May, 1880—when the Ecumenical was a fixed fact—also turned over the appointment of their eighty delegates to their Bishops, so I have been informed.

It appears that in making up the delegation to the Ecumenical Conference the College of Bishops followed the method prescribed by the General Conference in making up the committee to arrange for it, viz.: Bishops, other ministers and laymen—with this difference however: while the Episcopal College furnished two of the seven members of the committee, it furnishes three of the thirty-eight members of the delegation, the rest being, eighteen other ministers and seventeen laymen. This also has given offense to the objectors.

That a hard duty and invidious had been laid on them by the General Conference was evident to others if not to our Bishops themselves. It must needs be that offenses come. To select thirty-eight delegates out of 880,000 members was a thankless task, however performed. Somebody had to be left out; and everybody has not the grace to bear being left out. The little fuss in certain quarters surprises nobody, though the exact ground of complaint may. There were four sources of trouble:

1. Many men do not go to the Ecumenical who would represent us well; they are every way fit and worthy. One grudges to see their names—not in the list. So grandly they could act and speak! Thirty-eight does not embrace all our great men by a great deal. The number is a narrow and rigid limitation. This dissatisfaction I confess to sharing with others.

2. It is possible some will go, leaving their letters behind. "The Bishops of our church" do not claim infallibility, with the Bishop of Rome, nor do we claim it for them. They have made mistakes even in lesser appointments than these. It may be that, in selecting a delegate from a certain region of country, they had to weigh the question whether to leave that region unrepresented, or to leave an abler man at home who lived elsewhere. Much can be pardoned to mistakes of this sort. All sections of the church are not equally crowded with eminent persons. Thick settlements, and bunches of them, must inevitably be overlooked. The Conference above in the East is thought, by leading members of it, competent to supply the entire Ecumenical delegation, and not be exhausted.

3. It may be, unluckily, that a man is offended, not because he is left out, but because his rival, his opponent, his competitor (shall it be said his enemy?) is put in. Alas! for poor human nature. One of the most pointed articles I have read anent the Ecumenical appointments has been, with strange uniformity, accounted for on this ground by persons who know the parties. It is to be regretted that, in striking at the man who was in his eye (or in his way), the writer should strike unoffending persons. These cases are barely possible. Let us be thankful.

4. Here and there are those not chosen, who expected to be, and who perhaps should have been. When they found themselves not appointed by the Bishops they found out that the Bishops had no authority to appoint. Arrangements for the Ecumenical were completed, early in May, at Cincinnati. The College of Bishops met in Chattanooga, on the last of June, to appoint delegates. Not a word of warning all this time that they were going too fast, and proceeding on a wrong construction. Telegrams announced them in session. The session was closed and appointments made, but they would not be announced for awhile, for reasons so said the press dispatches and the papers. No protest yet from any quarter. For a season there was perfect calm, waiting, as one facetiously put it, "to see where the lightning would strike." By and by it began to leak out who was chosen, and who not. Then doubts began to be expressed whether the committee of seven or the Episcopal College was to appoint. It is known, not generally, that the Bishops, anticipating their difficulties, took counsel, more or less, as to the appointees, verbally or by letter. One of these letters I myself have seen. The substance of it was that he (the Bishop) having a delicate duty to perform, wished to make no mistakes. He desired to designate the brother, and asked of his consent, so that he could support the nomination by assuring his colleagues that he would accept, and attend the Ecumenical. The reply stated that it was an unexpected honor, etc. But if counted worthy, in the godly judgment of the Bishops, he would take it as a providential call to duty, and they might count on his attendance.

Unfortunately that D. D. was not appointed. He is now calling on the Bishops that the Bishops transcended their authority, and he is doing his best to throw doubt upon the credentials of the appointees. Another case has come to my knowledge: A worthy minister's intent of course without his knowledge or wish was brought to the attention of one of the Bishops by a friend and neighbor, and his claims gently pressed to be one of the delegates this before the Chattanooga meeting. He was not appointed. Since then he has been very severe on the Bishops was always of the opinion that the committee of seven, and they alone, had the right to appoint. I will not intimate that his present attitude has anything to do with the failure of his nomination; but I amuse myself with thinking how little his intimate friend knew of his opinion, and how embarrassing the situation would have been had he been appointed.

It is said there are some letters on file somewhere that, if published, would discount the force of some objectors. Let us commend the forbearance that withholds them just now.

After all, what good to these brethren expect to come from the pieces which they are publishing, and are so anxious to get republished, calling in question the validity of the appointments made for the Ecumenical Conference? Are there any contestants furnished with credentials authorizing them to take seats that may be declared vacant? I hear of none. If the Bishops' appointments, under the resolution, as they and others construe it, are not to stand, what body of men, or convention, or Conference, is invoked to make other and better appointments? I hear of none. Is it meant to accuse the Bishops? They are amenable to the General Conference, and, I suppose, are ready to answer there, at the proper time, for every part of their official conduct, including this. Is it meant to abuse them? This would be small gain to the church that has devolved upon them the administration of its government. The effect at home will be to sow disaffection, to impair confidence, to please enemies and to wound friends. Abroad, what will it be?

Southern Methodism ought to go into the Ecumenical Conference with every advantage possible. The delegation we have will show well by the side of any other, and is able to do us service and credit anywhere; give them a fair chance, and they will honor themselves and their church. But here are Southern Methodists striking at them before they start, and doing what they can to send them off on their high mission, lamed and discredited! If, perchance, any of the old prejudice against this Southern Church survives abroad, her enemies can find aid and comfort among her own people! I confess to a feeling of mortification at the scene presented in some of our church papers—those who stay at home trying to snatch the title of the few who go among strangers to represent us in the world-wide gathering of the Methodist family. Can't these writers do a better service for our church?

One practical result I fear: they may hinder the collections promised by the Annual Conferences to defray the traveling expenses of the delegates to London; and this will keep several of the best of them away, for they cannot go on their own charges. For one, I greatly desire a full and solid delegation from Southern Methodism to answer at the grand roll-call in the historic chapel of John Wesley, next September, and that they may have the assisting hand and prayers of a united church at home, and return to us full of the old zeal and love and holy fire that began there the conquest of the world to Christ, over a hundred years ago.

A SOUTHERN METHODIST.

—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Injudicious Protestants.—No. 4.

Archbishop Whately says ("Errors of Romanism, page 69): "The infallibility of the so-called Catholic Church, and the substitution of the decrees of Popes or of pretended general councils for the Scriptures, as the Christian's rule of faith and practice, is commonly regarded as the foundation of the whole Romish system."

This is a most remarkable statement. It is so unlikely it cannot possibly be true. And it is so exceedingly and clearly untrue that it reduces his whole argument to a fallacy. Nobody ever pretended that infallibility, either in the church or in any officer or officers thereof existed primarily. Nobody ever claimed that infallibility resided originally elsewhere than in God. Romanists claim that, in what they call the original formation of the church, infallible functions of government were necessarily and, in fact, imparted to and conferred upon the church. They say that Christ organized the church, and commanded its perpetual continuance, thereby giving it infallible functions of government. And the Archbishop, in effect, substantially, and to all purposes and intents, says the same thing. He says Christ framed the government of the church, appointed its first officers, prescribed its laws, and gave it perpetuity of succession. Then, if so, He gave to the "first officers," and so to their successors perpetually, whatever governmental infallibility He Himself possessed. No Romanist can therefore need or claim a larger or better measure of infallibility than the Archbishop himself gives to the church. Does he deny Christ's own infallibility? Does he deny the Saviour's power to confer infallible functions of government, or any other functions, on the church officers then appointed by Him and then in His presence? Did Christ appoint "the first officers" with no powers? Did He frame and organize a church government to die and cease to exist on the death of those first officers?

There are two conceivable systems of church origination and government essentially and fundamentally different. The one must be wholly true and the other wholly false. The thing we call church, and that we see every day, must have come into being in one of those two ways. The one naturally and necessarily implies infallibility in its officers, or some of them, in administering the government. The other forbids it. These two systems are easily described.

First. The church is an institution, as represented by Smyrlus, Whately, Wiseman, Milner and all Romish and High Church writers. He founded the society. He appointed the first officers. He gave authority for the admission of members. He prescribed the constitution, etc.

This is easily understood. A church government, with its personal officers, laws, governmental functions and by-laws; was a distinct revelation. This divine revelation applied as well to its perpetuity as to its origination. So the subsequent officers were prospectively endowed and inspired the same as the first ones.

Second. Besides the above the only conceivable theory is that revolution teaches and inculcates individual religion. This is both self-interested and social. Its social gravitating force necessitates coherence. It is the strongest moral force known among men. Christian persons necessarily congregate and segregate and formulate into societies.

To suppose they do not thus segregate and form a church and churches, is to suppose they do not possess, and are not controlled by the faith, feelings and impulses which make up Christianity. Christians do and must associate as Christians in social and public worship.

The church is therefore a brotherhood or fraternity, and not an institution, using the latter term in the sense of a community founded by outside authority. It is the natural and necessary result of individual Christianity. There was, therefore, no necessity for founding a corporation, and to do so could not fail to hamper and embarrass the church in all after time. Moreover, what was the necessity for a reorganization of the church, or the making a new one, at this particular period, more than a hundred years before or a hundred years after? I have not known an attempt by any one to answer this important question.

Let it be repeated, the fortieth time if need be, why organize a new church government at or about the time of the death of Christ, rather than now, or at any other time? Is there a reason for it?

Bishop Whately is at a loss to see what church infallibility could have grown from. According to his own facts and argument, as set forth in the first paper of this series, it seems plain to me that divine revelation is the law upon which it rests. He says, in effect, and almost in terms, that Christ ordained infallibility for the church. I cannot see the possibility of reaching any other conclusion from the Bishop's own premises. He says Christ organized the church at the first, making it up of several distinct personal members, appointing its first officers, giving it a perpetual law of government, and ordaining for it a perpetual succession. That being a divine revelation, the first officers, being thus divinely invested, and succeeding ones to occupy their places respectively, the question arises: How could it cause its infallibility?

That the church possessed infallibility at the first is certain, if the Bishop's statement is true, because Christ is infallible, and His laws are infallible. And to suppose the church has lost this divine investment, no matter by what means, is to suppose the church plan was an unwise one, and, in the second place, that we are now without a divinely-recognized church.

This is substantially the argument of all Romish and High Church writers. There is obviously and naturally nothing else conceivable out of which infallibility could grow. The infallibility of the church is the invested infallibility of Christ. And if the facts and arguments of Archbishop Whately, the Roman Catholic polemics, and other church-makers are to be credited the infallibility of the Vatican is conclusive.

And so, according to those facts and arguments, when such writers as Elgar and Elliott and Whately complain of wax candles, seven sacraments, etc., it is a complete and triumphant answer to reply: The church says so; that is, infallibility says so by revelation.

These complaints of Romish practices are good as far as they go, but they do not go beyond the surface. They are like an attempt to kill a tree by whipping the outer branches and leaving the trunk and tap-root untouched.

Then what of the facts and arguments of Romanists and other High Church writers. Whately at the head? What about Christ framing a church government for mankind? It rests upon nothing. It is, as somebody said, "the bageless fabric of a vision." Then why not sever this tap-root and destroy High Churchism?

A. ARMY.

From California.

California had a fine crop last year. Most of the wheat is yet in the warehouses, while some of it has passed out of the farmers' hands, yet it is owned by the people of California, and the money will stay in the State.

The Chinese question has been settled by the late treaty of the two governments, and doubtless Congress will pass such a law on the subject that all California will shortly be drawn.

The county of San Francisco is a little larger than the city, but not much, and in 1880 we lacked a little of having three hundred divorce cases, twenty-two of which Christ would approve, the others He would not. Let no one think that this is Mormon influence, for they are opposed to the divorce law existing among them now; but call it infidelity, and the effects of New England Free-loveism.

I find a kind of mongrel people in faith, they are spiritualist, yet materialist, or denying the existence of God as taught in the Bible. And now let me write a loud word: Spiritualism is Free-loveism, gone to seed.

Had I been an infidel when I came to California, and found the kind of brethren I had out here, I certainly would have quit the brotherhood through self-respect, if nothing else. The whole atmosphere seems to be contaminated with infidelity of some kind. I have seen it more than once that some visiting man or woman at religious houses would keep their seats and refuse to kneel during family worship. They would sit as straight as a post, with a broad defiant grin on their face, and seem to feel that they were showing their fine sense and good education. I remember a young lady who did so, and after family worship wanted to know of me if I believed there was any such thing as religion. We call such here nice young ladies. We have a few men and women scattered all over the country who are the salt of the earth, and deserve praise for their firmness and decision of character.

My work last year was in Tulare county; I lived in the town of Lemoore. It was four years old, and quite a place for its age. Were I called on to tell what kind of people lived in and around it, I should answer, all kinds. We had some of the best, and others of the worse character, some smart and well-informed, others as stupid and dull as can be found anywhere.

We had Mexicans, called greasers, white, black and yellow ones, some honest, others dishonest. I could fill most any bill called for of this kind in this small community.

Among the infidels of this town we had at least one literary man, "so-called;" he is a poet, and, I suppose, his book has circulation enough not to think me revealing any secrecy to quote a little from it. His title-page is "Bible Explained, Or Bible Religion Contrasted With Natural Religion, In Plain Simple Rhyme All Can Comprehend." His motto: "Truth Is Eternal And Will Prevail."

This man is a fair sample of the infidelity of this country, and, for the edification of your readers, I will give a sample of his book. This piece is called the "origin of language," and here it is:

"O! how you Christians should rejoice,
At the sound of that tremendous voice,
That called about from Babel's Tower,
In ten thousand tongues in an hour;
And let your anxious spirits know,
How languages came here below;
But, Christian friends, can you abide,
By its derision satisfied?
Our Language, I have been told,
Don't happen to be quite so old;
And every tongue I ever have heard,
Adds to it yearly many a word."

This is a sample, and as good as any I can find in his book, and I could not be accused of slang if I should call it "poetry with a vengeance."

This poet and infidel was quite a leader among the young people of the town. The only way for a preacher to meet such stuff as this would be by ridicule, for no argument would effect such cases.

What I have said here about the town of Lemoore will hold good in every place in California that I am acquainted with. As to the health of Lemoore and all of Tulare county, so far as I am acquainted, I had rather live on the banks of the Mississippi river for health. Last summer we had an epidemic of typhoid fever. I never saw it equaled in any part of the South. So far as the health of California is concerned, we have parts of the State where the health is fine, no better to be found anywhere. There are other parts with as much sickness as you will find on Deer Creek or Sun Flower river in the Mississippi swamps. I am getting letters from Mississippi wanting to know how I like California, and I will answer them through the ADVOCATE by your permission.

I like California. You can find any climate you want; can have the Mercury 115 in summer or at 60, just as you like. Or you can have snow ten feet deep in winter, or live where it never freezes.

But many want to know if I like this State better than Mississippi. I answer no. Mississippi is as good a State as can be found, and people who cannot make a living there will doubtless fail out here.

The surroundings in Mississippi are very bad, we all know, but, bad as they are, they are no worse than you will find in California. People can do well out here if they have money, but if they have none, or but little, they had better remain away. The people of Mississippi are among their friends, who sympathize with them, but in California you will find but little sympathy.

The people of the older States belong to certain circles in society; in California we are too apt to weigh the purse, and throw the man or woman in for good count. I would say to all my friends in Mississippi hold up your broken fortunes at home, and be content, you will find no better country.

This year will doubtless be a hard one; poor crops and low price for cotton; but honest labor will make a living, even the bad years, in that country.

I am now in Santa Clara Valley; it is called the garden of California; and I am safe in saying that if the farmers here went on the same system that the people of Mississippi do they would starve out in five years. No person can rent land, teams, and find the labor, all the eating and wearing, and find up long. And the share system is no better; I believe a little worse.

The only way is to hire the labor and see the work is done, follow it up every hour in the day, as is done in the free States. We often think that free negroes are poor laborers, and so they are; but there are just as many good ones to be found among them as white labor of other States.

The negro has no revenge, no envy, and but little gratitude, we confess, but this is more than can be said of the white labor of any State in the Union.

The white labor of Europe and America are always in for strikes, and full of Communism. We have none of this among the negroes of the South. It is said that "a contented mind is a continual feast;" and may we of the South learn to be satisfied with our home and country.

I know that the changes are so great that it is hard to be endured by us, but we must accept the situation as it is, and learn to be happy. It is not the wealth of this world that brings joy to the heart of God's people; it is the riches of Heaven that is in us.

F. M. FEATHERSTUN.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CAL., Jan. 15, 1881.

Obituaries.

QUINEA LEWIS was born in Lenoir county, North Carolina, May 28, 1794, and died at his home, near Holmesville, Pike county, Miss., January 13, 1881, in the eighty-seventh year of his age.

He was married to Miss Martha Spear September 22, 1816. In 1828 he came to Mississippi, and settled on Pearl river, in Marion county. In 1837 he removed to Pike county, and settled on Magee's Creek. In the winter of 1856-57 he came to Holmesville, where he and his wife both died, she having departed six years before him. He lived to see himself, and be seen by those about him, a grand old age and for many years he was honored by the title "Uncle Quinea" from all classes in the community. His last sickness was short, and the result such as might have been expected. He was taken sick on Sunday, with paralysis, at the same time having a severe cold, which developed into pneumonia, ending in his death on the following Thursday morning, at 1:7 o'clock. He went down gradually but grandly and triumphantly. Everybody in the neighborhood seemed anxious about him, and waited with trembling to see how the matter would end. Surrounded by his children and grand-children and neighbors, he gained the victory through Lord Jesus Christ in the last conflict.

Those who never knew Uncle Quinea might be satisfied if this notice of him should end at the period, but many others who have known him and esteemed him highly would desire more.

There are other facts in his history which are worthy of mention, but let it suffice to note only a few in this connection. In his youthful days he was for a short time a soldier in the war with England which began about 1812, and I believe he was a pensioner at the time of his death for services rendered in that war. He was brought up by a Baptist mother whose pious life and godly counsel made a lasting impression upon him for good. But he was also acquainted with the Methodists in his younger days, and heard Bishop Andrew as a circuit preacher when he was a young man. After moving to Mississippi he and his wife, both about the same time became serious about religion. The nearest Methodist Church was Union Academy, in Marion county. They had agreed to join the Methodist Church, when they then attended regularly, though living several miles away. In the meantime his wife was converted, and through her influence he took up the duty of family prayer, and the family altar, reminding more than half a century an institution in his home his wife holding prayer with the children up to old age, and sometimes when he was at home.

They joined the church in a quarterly meeting love-feast, at Union Academy, Marion county, Miss., June 17, 1822, Rev. Thos. Golding, P. E., and Rev. Miles Harper, P. C. He had been praying in secret and seeking the Lord for two years, and holding family prayers since the March preceding. On the second Sabbath of the following September he was converted. He spent the day in the woods, reading his Bible and praying, and his wife knowing it spent the day praying at the house for his conversion. Night was at hand, but he resolved to let every thing but the salvation of his soul alone for the time being, and spend the night in necessary, as he had the day in prayer to God. It was too dark to see to read, so he laid his Bible aside and got upon his knees and stayed there all night and dyed his determination not to cease till he was blessed. Very soon the blessing came. It was sudden and overpowering. For a time he did not know that he was on the earth at all, seemed to be up in the air. When the first gush of joy had subsided he felt with his hand to see if he was on the ground. Finding that he was he arose and returned to the house and found his wife still praying for his conversion. The scene that follows, which they met can be better imagined than described. Thus he started in the Christian race. No wonder that for over fifty-eight years he stood on his way, known with increasing alacrity. He professed religion and his life was consistent with his profession. In simplicity and godly sincerity he had his conversation in the world, and the world is better by having lived in it. His life and its fruits illustrate the saying: "Godliness with contentment is great gain." He had ten children, two of his sons, H. and W. H. Lewis, are well-known ministers of the gospel in the Mississippi Conference. His children, grand-children and great-grand-children number about one hundred and thirty, many of whom are following in the way, the path he trod. It was his desire for many years to gather together all his living on his birthday as many of his descendants as he could for social and religious entertainment. Must this family meeting cease? Though his earthly state has ended and he can no more join in the celebration of his birthday let it be remembered that the day that gave him birth into the kingdom of God was the day of all others most precious to him. It was the "new-born babe" of that day that God has been fostering. Faith, prayer, study of the scriptures, affectionate union with the ordinances of God, communion with saints, and fellowship with Christ, led him along the line of love in his soul. The light in his life, and his exemplary life commended the religion which he professed, and though his attendance in the church were confined to the quarterly meeting, steward, class-leader and exhorter, he was constituted the power of godliness and the influence of religion in the ordinary relations of life.

I have heard him tell about walking eight miles to class-meeting when he was a young man. He approved the gospel and never missed an opportunity to attend the house of God, even in his last years.

Let us thank God for the grace that through a long life sustained Uncle Quinea and left to the heritage of his blessed memory.

J. W. SANDERS.

MALCOLM MCMILLAN, the noble subject of this obituary, was born in North Carolina June 28, 1820, and after a life of varied experience died calmly home in Pollard, Escambia Co., Ala., October 21, 1880.

Bro. McMillan was a very rare man, and highly prized by all who knew him. He occupied a position in the community and in the church that can rarely be filled by another.

One of his characteristics was his peculiar love for young people, though sixty years old, he was a cheerful as a boy. He was not, however, spared to old age in society; both young and old loved Uncle Mac as he was called.

He was, for some time before his death, steward of the church, and I assure you he filled the office well. He had begun a round of collecting when he was taken sick, during a visit of his pastor, in the first of his illness, while suffering the very agony of pain he asked Mary, his wife, to get his purse. She did so and he handed him five dollars, with the promise that if the girl will be would collect the remainder.

As husband, father, friend,
He was truth to the end.

May God bless the bereaved, and unite them again! He walked with God, and was not, for God took him.

J. M. ROLLINS.

LAURA LULA MCDAVID, died of pneumonia, at Stockton, Ala., November 25, 1880, aged two years, one month and twenty-two days.

I baptized the sweet babe during my last quarterly meeting at Stockton. Little did I think then she would be an angel so soon. Her father and mother she bore her long suffering calmly and patiently, and now sleeps sweetly on the bosom of Jesus." What a precious thought! Thank God for a gospel that saves our children.

J. M. ROLLINS.

MRS. ELIZABETH A. JORDAN, daughter of S. D. and C. E. Chapman, was born September 25, 1843, and died December 8, 1880.

Sister Jordan professed religion when about 16 years old, was married to W. H. Jordan November 22, 1859. She was the mother of eleven children, having nine behind. She had always been a consistent Christian, and died as she lived. A good woman is gone. May God sanctify her dear husband and children.

W. D. STANTON.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1881.

MY VESPERS SONG.

Vexed with weariness and pain,
Scarcely strong enough to pray,
In this twilight hour I sit,
Sift and sing my doubts away,
O'er my broken purposes,
Ere the coming shadows roll,
Let me build a bridge of song:
"Jesus, lover of my soul,

Let me to Thy bosom fly!"

Haw the words my thoughts repeat;
To Thy bosom, Lord, I come,
Though unfit to kiss Thy feet.
Once I gathered sheaves for Thee,
Dreaming I could hold them fast;
Now I can but faintly sing,
"Oh, receive my soul at last."

I am weary of my fears,
Like a child when night comes on;
In the shadow, Lord, I sing,
"Leave, oh leave me not alone."
Though the tears I still must shed,
Though the evil yet to be,
Though I falter while I sing,
"Still support and comfort me."

All my trust on Thee is staid,"
Does the rythm of the song,
Softly falling on my heart,
Make its pulse firm and strong?
Or is this Thy perfect peace,
Now descending while I sing,
That my soul may sleep to-night
'Neath the shadow of Thy wing?"

"Thou of life the fountain art;"
If I sunker on Thy breast,
If I sing myself to sleep,
Sleep and death alike are rest.
Through the shadows overpast,
Through the shadows yet to be,
Let the ladder of my song
Rise to all eternity."

Note by note, in silver bars,
May my soul in love ascend,
Till I reach the highest round,
In Thy kingdom without end.
So impatiently I sing,
Though I lift my hands and cry,
"Lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly."

—Rural Home.

Our Pulpit.

How the Hardest Case in Jerico was Converted.

BY JESSE BOWMAN YOUNG.

A sermon, a little, and a long dog, and received accordingly.—Luke xix, 6.

Once, when our Lord was on earth, he passed through the old city of Jerico. He stopped here only a day, but in that day he did a wonderful work. Before Jesus came to the place there were two sinners there who were reckoned the worst cases in the whole region. No one supposed it possible for the Lord to take any notice of them or do anything for them. Yet these two persons were the very ones Jesus sought out, and saved from their sins, and made them happy in his love. One of these sinners was a blind beggar, and you can read how he was saved and healed, in the eighteenth chapter of St. Luke. The other man whom the Saviour blessed that day was named Zaccheus, and he, I think, was the hardest case, the most unlikely sinner to be saved in the city. It seemed a more difficult thing to reach him than to heal the blind man. I will try to tell you why.

First, he was a very little man; almost a dwarf. And now you will ask why it was harder for Jesus to save a man of short stature than it would have been if he had been tall.

Well, we will think about this a bit. Thoughtless people like to make fun of cripples, deformed folks, and other unfortunates. I remember an old crazy man who used to come to the town where I lived with straws and weeds woven around his hat and into his garments. Whenever he made his appearance the idle boys would gather in the streets and make sport of the poor lunatic, jeering at him, taunting him, crying out, "Hallo! here comes old Wyatt!" So children who are lame or weak are often ridiculed. I suppose it was the same way with Zaccheus. He did not like to have people look down on him with sneers and laughter. His smallness of stature probably made him moody, unhappy and discontented. He would easily come to hate those who made fun of him, and to have a sullen and envious disposition. And when a man gets into this mood it is hard for him to get out of it.

But that is not all that his shortness of size had to do with making it difficult for him to be saved. As Jesus came through the city a great multitude followed him. The crowd hid the Master from view. Taller men were all around Zaccheus, and he could not see Jesus. So it almost came to pass that he did not get even a sight of the great Teacher, the Saviour, at all.

Then, again, it was hard for Zaccheus to be saved on account of his occupation.

He is called a publican; that means in our language a revenue or tax collector. Perhaps you have been in a custom-house somewhere. There was one at Jerico, and Zaccheus was the head man of the office. Maybe you will say that that was not such a bad thing against him. But in that day it was. Most of the publicans were dishonest. They oppressed and cheated the people, making them pay more money than was due. They were cruel and heartless. They were called more savage than the wildest beast of prey. Zaccheus belonged to this hated class of publicans. The people all despised and looked down on them. That made it hard for him to become a disciple of the Saviour.

Still another reason why it was difficult for him to be saved is that he was a rich man. Some rich men followed Jesus when he went about doing good, and afterwards, but not many. The Master said it was hard for a rich man to enter his kingdom. He could not as long as he lived his riches and was not willing to give to the poor, as long as he was proud and puffed up on account of his money. Zaccheus had not made all his money honestly. He had got some of it by cheating. He defrauded people who had paid him taxes, taking more than he had a right to.

All these things were in the way of his conversion. They made it hard for him to become a Christian.

Now, let us see how it happened that this man did find Jesus. How were these difficulties got rid of?

Look what Zaccheus himself did.

First, he wanted to see Jesus. He had heard of him as the great Physician, the Friend of publicans and sinners, and he wished to see what sort of a man this wonderful teacher was. This was the beginning of his conversion. Whenever a poor sinner really wants to see the Saviour, he has taken the first step toward heaven.

Then he went further than this; he climbed up where he could see him. He found that the crowd hid the Saviour from his eyes, and he determined to get up into a tree where he could see him as he passed along. He did not stop to think of what the people would say when they saw him perched up in the sycamore. They might mock and laugh if they chose, but he did not care if he could only catch a glimpse of the Lord. And he showed that he was in earnest about it, too—he ran with all his might. He did not idly wait and say, "Oh, well; I'm too little to see over this crowd. I can't see Jesus now. I will let the matter go this time." If he had acted that way he would never have seen the Saviour, for Jesus did not come back to that city again. This was the only chance Zaccheus ever had, and he made good use of it. He did what he could to overcome the difficulties in his way.

Now, see what the Lord did.

First, he came by where Zaccheus was. He might have gone some other road, or passed by without noticing the poor sinner up in the sycamore; he might have done so if he had not been the Saviour.

But he acted then, as he always acted ever since. He came by where the sinner was on the lookout for him, ready to help and save.

Once more, Jesus looked up and saw Zaccheus. He gave him a glance which went right into his heart. It was a look of kindness, of gentleness, of pity, of wonderful love. You remember how, when the apostle Peter had denied the Saviour, he was rebuked and won back again to repent and be a disciple. The Lord turned and looked upon him—that was all; but that was enough. Peter remembered his sins, and went out and wept bitterly. One look broke his heart.

John Newton was an Englishman who was at one time very wicked, and doing all sorts of badness. When he was converted he wrote some beautiful hymns, in one of which he tells about this look of Jesus:

In evil long I took delight,
Unawed by shame or fear,
Till a new object struck my sight
And stopped my wild career.

I saw One hanging on a tree,
In agonies and blood,
Who fixed His languid eyes on me,
As near His cross I stood.

Sure never till my latest breath
Can I forget that look.
It seemed to charge me with his death
Though not a word He spoke.

The last thing that Jesus did was this: He told Zaccheus to make haste and come down, for he wanted to stop at his house. He recognized and named him before the people, showed that he cared for him, and that in the crowd might despise the publican, he, the Saviour of sinners, was his friend. Everybody could see that Jesus thought that this publican, whom all the people hated, was worthy to entertain and take care of him while he tarried in the city. That spirit of kindness and mercy won the heart of Zaccheus. He had not a friend in all the city. The crowd despised him. But Jesus showed himself a friend in need and trouble, and this made Zaccheus a disciple.

Now, how did Zaccheus show that he was converted?

I have not time to tell all the ways in which he did this. One thing is certain; he promptly obeyed. He lost no time. He made haste and came down. He minded the word of Jesus. That was a sure sign that he was converted.

Then again, he joyfully received the Saviour. It was a glad day for him. He rejoiced, and accepted Christ as his guest and his friend.

Besides, he was not ashamed to confess the Saviour publicly. He faced the multitude when they all murmured that Jesus was gone home with a great sinner, one of the worst in the city and called Jesus "Lord." His first word was one of trust and worship.

Again, he showed his conversion by his willingness to restore whatever he had in his possession that did not belong to him. He promised to give back to any man whom he had cheated four times as much money as he had taken from him. He did not dare to keep these unjust gains.

And the last sign of his conversion that I can notice here is his kindness to the poor.

He was a rich man, and had been a stingy one. His purse now, as well as his heart was converted. His hands had been close fisted, but now they were opened wide to feed the hungry and help the poor.

He saw what Jesus did. He said, "This man goes about doing good. He preaches the gospel to the poor. He seeks and saves the lost. Since he has chosen me to be one of his disciples, I must try to help in this work. I cannot preach the word. I am not fit to be an apostle. But I can give my money to him and his needy ones. Henceforth half of all I am worth I will give to the poor."

And from that day on, the orphan and the widow and the poor had a faithful friend in Zaccheus.

Dear little folks, who read this sermon, remember that Jesus still comes by seeking the lost. When he calls you by his word, or by his Spirit, follow the example of Zaccheus, and without delay receive him joyfully. Christian Union.

THE FAMILY.—If our readers enjoy the following from Charles D. Warner's book, "My Winter on the Nile," as much as we have, they will heartily thank us for printing it:

"The long, bended neck ages humility but the supercilious nose in the air expresses perfect contempt for all modern life. The contrast of his haughty 'stick-up-ativeness' (it is necessary to coin this word to express the camel's aurient conceit) with the royal ugliness of the brute, in both awe-inspiring and amusing. No human royal family dare be uglier than the camel. He is a mass of bones, faded puffs, lumps, lumps, splay joints and callosities. His tail is a ridiculous wisp, and a failure as an ornament or a fly brush. His feet are simply big sponges. For skin covering he has patches of old buffalo robes, faded and with their hair worn off. His voice is more disagreeable than his appearance. With a reputation for patience, he is snappish and vindictive. His endurance is overrated that is to say, he dies like a sheep on an expedition of any length, if he is not well fed. His gait moves every muscle like an ague. And yet the ungainly creature carries his head in the air, and regards the world out of his great brown eyes with disdain. The Sphinx is not more placid. He reminds me, I don't know why, of a pyramid. He has a resemblance to a palm tree. It is impossible to make an Egyptian picture without him. What a Hapsburg lip he has! Ancient, royal? The very poise of his head says plainly, 'I have come out of the elder past, before history was; the deluge did not touch me; I saw Moses come and go; I helped Shoofoo build the great pyramid; I knew Egypt when it hadn't an obelisk, nor a temple; I watched the slow building of the pyramid at Sakkara. Did I not transport the fathers of your race across the desert? There are three of us—the date palm, the pyramid and myself. Everything else is modern. Go to!"

Religious Intelligence.

MISSIONARY.

—The Rev. B. H. Badley, of our mission in India, gives a graphic account of the Sunday-schools of Lucknow in the Missionary Review. One can spend the whole of Sunday in that city in going from one school to another, and can thus see about a thousand regular attendants, besides many others who always flock about. The work has also spread to other stations. The International Lessons were introduced in 1878, and have been faithfully studied. The second seven years' course has been enthusiastically entered upon, and the system is satisfactory. "The lessons are well chosen, easily taught, and adapted even to heathen children. That these non-Christian children have a real liking for their Sunday-schools is evident from the fact that they bring in outside children—those who do not attend the day school." Many of them are very regular in their attendance, and they often leave their festivals to be at the school. "We often come home from street preaching," he says, "thoroughly tired out and discouraged. In the religious fairs, where the multitudes assemble and listen to our preaching, we often feel that it is up-hill work trying to influence the adult classes, but in our Sunday-schools we deal with different material. We realize that the words we say and the lessons we teach find their way deep down into heart of those before us and take root. The work of teaching is indescribably pleasant, and very easy." The singing—of vernacular hymns and translations—is very attractive. The children, as a rule, prefer their own tunes, but they also like our Western airs."—Methodist.

—The Baptist missionaries on the Congo have had trouble with the treacherous natives. They have San Salvador as their head-quarters, with Stanley Pool as one of their objective points. Recently they received a communication from the king of Makata, promising them a kind reception and a safe conduct through his country on their way to the Pool, provided they took no Congo men with them. They accepted the condition and started; the two missionaries, the lad Cain and eight Krew boys. The Krew boys ran away, the missionaries and Cain kept on. At the third town in Makata they were assailed by native brandishing weapons and stones, dancing and yelling. A shot struck Mr. Comber in the back and he fell. Mr. Hartland, his companion, ran to help him, but was reminded by him that they had agreed that if anything should happen to one, the other should escape, so as to avoid sacrificing two lives; so he and Cain started away. Mr. Comber soon got up, and was able to join them, and they succeeded in reaching friendly town, whence they were taken a three days' rough journey to San Salvador. Mr. Comber there had the bullet extracted. Mr. Hartland also received a gash in the temple from a stone.—Methodist.

—The other day, while resting at Bro. Coody's, Eufaula Creek Nation, he told me this anecdote of Bishop Paine, the benefit of which, I doubtless he has reaped for many years: Twenty-five years ago the Bishop was holding an Annual Conference in the Cherokee Nation, and made a stirring missionary speech.—In the midst of the collection a child let fall a silver half-dollar, which rolled on its edge several feet and went directly to where he was standing. Quick as thought he raised his foot and brought it down on the rolling coin, which the audience could see, and remarked, "Keep it under your feet, and not in your hearts." This well-uttered truth made a fine impression on the people, and on the memory of Bro. Coody. And how much good could be done, how rapidly could the blessed gospel be scattered all over the world, if everybody who has money would make a servant of it and not a god.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

MISSIONARY ZEAL.—A poor blind girl brought to a clergyman thirty shillings for the missionary cause. He refused to take it, saying:

"You are a poor blind girl, and cannot afford to give so much."

"I am indeed blind," said she, "but can afford to give this money better, perhaps, than you suppose."

"How so?"

"I am, sir, by trade, a basket-maker, and can work as well in the dark as in the light. Now, I am sure, in the last dark winter it must have cost those girls who have eyes more than thirty shillings for candles to work by, which I have saved; and therefore I hope you will take it for the missionaries."

—The missionaries of the South American Missionary Society have done considerable recently in exploring the unknown affluents of the Rio Purus, one of the branches of the Amazon, which rises in the mountains of Peru. Mr. Burke has visited two of these affluents Iehuma and Manuria, with a steam launch. The former he could not ascend very far. Along the banks of the latter he found evidence of visits from Indians of the Jemanady tribes; but met none of them, though this was the chief object of his search. They are of very retiring habits, and are believed to live in the primeval among the forests among which the Manuria takes its rise.

Says the Northern: "Mrs. Gov. Wright, of New York city, has just donated to the New York Branch of our Women's Foreign Missionary Society, the sum of $1,500, to build the girls' school-house in Hakodati, Japan, to be called the Caroline Wright School for Girls, in memorial of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Peck. This is a beautiful as well as a benevolent memento, but it is all the more beautiful and benevolent that the money is the proceeds of the sale of articles in Mrs. Wright's own parlors, which were mostly the work of her own hands."

Mr. Winsor, of the Mahratta Mission of the American Board, writes of an encouraging state of affairs in Ranjangar. The people are giving up their idols to be destroyed, seeing that they are powerless to avenge themselves. The Maharas have all left their idols and are striving to learn of the true God.

Rev. A. L. Blackford, after spending some time in the service of the American Bible Society in Brazil, has been reappointed as a missionary of the Board in that country. His station will be at Bahia.

Bishop Merrill, at last accounts was at Cairo, Egypt, en route to Bombay via Suez. He had seen Syria and Palestine quite thoroughly. It is possible he may return to this country in April next.

In all there are now at work in heathen countries 5,000 Protestant missionaries, and the churches sustain the work by an annual contribution of about $5,000,000.

—The Roman Catholic church is showing unwonted activity in African missions. A college intended exclusively for the training of priests for African missions has been established at Malta.

—St. Luke's Church, New York, has given to the City Missionary and Church Extension Society a contribution of $6,700.

—The king of Congo, Africa, has joined the Baptist Church. He is the only crowned head in the denomination.

—The Protestant Episcopal Church is asked to contribute $158,000 to foreign missions this year.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—At the recent dedication of a Unitarian house of worship in Cleveland, after the usual remarks about the rapid "liberalization" of orthodoxy, etc., had been made, the Rev. C. T. Collins, the plucky pastor of the (orthodox) Plymouth Church, who was on the platform, was called up, and among other things had grace to say: "I believe every one of the old truths, from Trinity down to eternal punishment of the persistently impenitent; and I do not hold these beliefs through superstition, but as the result of earnest and devout thought. I would not have the people here to-night believe the truth of what has been said of orthodoxy and the orthodox; more especially, I insist that the charge of our insincerity is incorrect. I do not so understand it."

—The New York Evangelist says: "But few of our churches can glance back on such a decade of progress as that of the Presbyterian Memorial Church, Madison Avenue and Fifty-third Street, New York. Since Rev. Dr. Charles S. Robinson took charge of this church, in 1870, a new edifice has been built and entirely paid for, and the church and congregation have been organized for effective Christian work. During this period of ten years, a total of $500,000 has been contributed, an average of $50,000 a year; and five hundred persons have been added to the number of communicants, an average of fifty persons each year."

The Year Book for 1881 of the New York Sunday-school Association gives the number of Sunday-schools in this city as 415, with 115,824 scholars and 10,550 teachers and officers, and an average attendance of 82,161. Of these schools 73 are Episcopal, 70 Presbyterian, 57 Methodist, 51 Roman Catholic, 14 Baptist, 20 Reformed, 15 Lutheran, 6 Congregational, 5 Friends, 5 Hebrew, 2 Moravian, 10 Universalist and Unitarian, 29 Union and 25 miscellaneous. The Association by its various classes for superintendents and teachers, its institutes, social meetings, and its library and reading-room is doing an important and efficient work.

—The recent General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church appointed a Church Building Commission, whose purpose is, by general and personal appeals to raise a Church Building Fund of $1,000,000, the interest of which shall go on perpetuating itself indefinitely in the erection of new churches all over the West. Bishops Doane and Elliott, Dr. Schenck, of Brooklyn, Messrs Lemuel Collin, of Pennsylvania, J. B. Prince and W. H. Low, of Brooklyn, and others, are members of this commission.

—The next meeting of the International Sunday-school Convention will be held in Toronto, Canada, commencing June 22, 1881. It is expected that the meeting will be the most interesting ever held in Canada in connection with Sunday-school work. Distinguished representatives will be present from the various States, as well as from the Provinces of the Dominion, and in addition, a goodly number of leading workers from Great Britain have promised to be in attendance.

—The London Religious Tract Society has circulated more than seventy-seven and a half millions of books and tracts in 130 languages and dialects. It requires $2,700 every week-day to keep it going, but the receipts from sales are so large that it is able to devote all the money received from gifts and collections to grants of its publications. The sales last year also supplied $75,000 to be expended in gifts of books, etc.

—The first Methodist who ever stepped his foot in the streets of this Puritan city, Boston, was Charles Wesley, a brother of John Wesley, one of the greatest hymn-writers of the world. He sailed from Liverpool for Charleston, S. C., and the ship being disabled, she put in here in 1774 and remained two weeks. During that time he preached several times, and created considerable sensation.—Zion's Herald.

—According to a statistical report compiled under the authority of the Board of Delegates of American Israelites, there are in the United States 230,257 Hebrews, of whom 12,000 are connected with 278 religious societies or congregations. In the city of Philadelphia there are 80 of these congregations, with a membership of 4,458, and in addition there are 18 benevolent organizations, embracing a membership of 2,662.

The Rev. R. D. Sproull, of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of Rochester, New York, leaves the Reformed Presbyterian Church because he does not believe in the exclusive use of the Psalms in praise, and in some other peculiarities of the denomination to which he has belonged. This is the first break in that small but exclusive sect which made the trouble in the late Council in Philadelphia.

According to the showing of the Wesleyan Association, Boston, at its late annual meeting, Zion's Herald has had a successful year. It has renewed its type, reduced its price, and paid fully a thousand dollars higher for its fine grade of paper, and added one thousand subscribers. The report shows that every room of the granite building is occupied and a reduction of the debt of the Association.

—Sunday before last was the fortieth anniversary of the installment of Rev. James H. Shaw, D. D., as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Rochester, N. Y. His protracted pastorate has been marked by numerous revivals and by constant additions to the Church membership, 1,826 persons having been received on confession during forty years. The Church now has 1,289 members.

Mr. Peter Ruddy, Son., has bequeathed $5,000 to Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, Danville, Penn., the interest to be used for paying in part the rector's salary, and $30,000 to erect a memorial for himself and wife in the shape of a new church building for the parish.

On Christmas Day, 1780, the Rev. John Murray, of Gloucester, Mass., the founder of American Universalism, preached his first sermon in the first Universalist meeting-house erected in the United States. Dr. Chapin's death occurred almost on the centennial anniversary of this sermon.

Our Young People.

BE IN TIME.

Be in time for every call;
If you can be first of all:
Be in time.

If your teachers only find
You are never once behind,
But are, like the dial, true,
They will always trust to you:
Be in time.

Never linger ere you start;
Set out with a willing heart:
Be in time.

In the morning up and on,
First in work, and soonest done:
Ride is how the goal is attained.
This is how the prize is gained:
Be in time.

Those who aim at something great
Never yet were found too late:
Be in time.

Life with all is but a school;
We must work by plan and rule,
With some noble end in view,
Ever steady, earnest, true:
Be in time.

Listen, then, to wisdom's call
Knowledge now is free to all:
Be in time.

Youth must daily toil and strive,
Censure for the future hive;
For the work they have to do,
Keep this motto still in view:
Be in time.

Forgot to Renew.

SUPERVISORS TOWN, January 15, 1881.

MR. EDITOR: I hardly know how to apologize for my papa's remissness in not having paid for his paper in 1879. His only excuse is, that about the time his subscription expired, he moved further up the river and had a great deal of business to attend to, and forgot he had not paid for his paper till I reminded him. Now, Mr. Editor, please excuse him this once, and send me your paper for this year, as I earned the money to pay for it in advance. Please publish my letter, as I am a little girl in the Young Folk's Corner.

Your little friend,

NINA ——— MITCHELL.

Naughty Editor.—That is right. When the parents are too busy to think about it, let the children remind them of the ADVOCATE and of renewing their subscription.

How Effie Helped

One day, when she came home from school, Effie found the sitting-room and kitchen occupied by cousins and friends, all very busy and very lively, for they were making preparation for a wedding. One of Effie's sisters was soon to be married, and of course there was a great deal to be done.

Effie thought how nice it would be if she could help make the cakes and spread on the icing; for it was a country wedding, and much of the "refreshment" part would have to be done at home. It seemed such easy work mixing things together, beating eggs, etc.

So Effie went first to one and then to another, begging that she might be allowed to help.

"No, child, no; what do you know about such things?" a rather impatient old lady said to her.

Another said:

"Oh my! now school's out, we shall have no more peace. Children are always in the way!"

After she had been rebuffed in all her attempts at being useful in the pleasant way she wanted to be, she happened to cast her eyes upon a large work-basket in the corner of the sitting-room and she saw that it was filled with stockings and socks waiting to be looked over and repaired.

"Now if I really want to be useful," thought the little girl, "I might get these stockings out of the way for this busy week. They have been forgotten, I suppose—but I would rather make cake."

Effie was but eleven years old, but she knew how to darn very nicely, for her mother had taught her, and she had been willing to learn.

Down she sat, therefore, close to the table in the corner, so as to be out of the way, and began her self-denying work.

The merry laughter among the young cousins as they went in and out to the oven with their delicate cakes and other things sounded pleasantly to Effie, and she longed to be among them; but she reflected,

"Mother will be so tired by this evening that she will not want to do her darning, and it will be a nice surprise to her when she finds all these socks and stockings have been put in their proper drawers all ready for use."

So she persevered with her quiet task, glancing once in a while toward the busy group, and admiring their skilful performances.

One of the cousins who had been "cross" to Effie noticed how industrious and steady she seemed at her work in the corner, and after awhile brought over a beautiful iced queen-cake and gave it to her.

But that, though nice as it was, gave her not half the pleasure she felt, when, toward the close of the afternoon, her mother, tired with baking and other work sat down by her work-table saying:

"I would like to lie down and rest a little, but I must get the week's mending out of the way. But who has been here before me, I wonder?" she added with surprise.

"Your little daughter," said one of the girls. "I could not but notice her, after she had been refused when she wanted to help with the cakes and sweet things. Not many little girls would have been so thoughtful about doing work that was not attractive."

And when Effie was kissed and thanked by her mother, and had seen her comfortably resting after her labors, she certainly felt much happier than if she had been allowed to help with the icing and other ornamental matters which seemed so tempting to her among her young cousins. She felt sure now that she would only "have made a mess," as they said, for she knew nothing about such doings.

Little girls are sometimes troublesome when they undertake to do things of which they have no knowledge, and are called "officious."

This day's experience was useful to Effie. She had borne patiently the disappointment of not being allowed to help in the way she would have preferred but in the performance of a nearer duty, she had proved herself really a valuable assistant; and in after years she learned to know and value, under all circumstances, the wise and practical suggestion, "Perform the duty that is nearest thee."—Golden Days

Willie's Courage.

Willie Carr was one of those boys who never liked to be beaten at anything. Only dare him to do a thing, and he will do it, no matter how absurd or foolish it was. He had lately come [illegible] and his schoolfellows constantly amused themselves on half-holidays by climbing the cliffs, fishing, boating, and many other seaside pastimes.

On one Sunday afternoon Willie said to his companions:

"The tide has just turned; in a quarter of an hour that rock," pointing to a small rock covered with seaweed, "will be under water; I dare any one of you fellows to run ten times around it."

Some shook their heads and said they did not care to run the risk of being drowned; but a few said, "we will go if you will be one."

So off they started. The water was over their shoes at the first round.

"Salt water will do us no harm," said Willie.

At the sixth round Tom Bishop and Willie were the only ones who kept on running; the water was already above their knees, for the tide was coming in fast. At the eighth round Willie was running alone, and many of the boys said "don't go any more, Willie." But Ned Dawson cheered him: "Only twice more, and I will say you are the bravest fellow in Hastings." But at the tenth round all said, "Don't go any more."

"Do you dare me to do it?" cried Willie; "although the water is above my waist, I will go, just to show you what I can do."

Many of them tried to hold him back, but he rushed off panting for his last round. When he reached the rock he was very tired, so he sat down to recover his breath; then he got up and waved his cap. The boys, cheered him, and cried, "Make haste—come along."

He stayed longer than was necessary, just to show how brave he was, and waved his cap. At this moment a large wave dashed over the rock, drenching him to the skin, and obliging him to start off. But before he had gone half-way on his journey another wave came along, and he found himself up to his armpits in water; another came, and then another, and carried him off his feet. He was nearly choked with the salt water that went down his throat, but he recovered himself enough to get back to the rock; there he sat, panting and exhausted.

His boasted courage began to fail; he could swim but little, and encumbered with his wet clothes and all exhausted as he was, there was not much chance for him. Higher and higher the water rose; the rock was under water; and there he sat, pale and shivering.

Some of his comrades ran off for help, but poor Willie doubted if it would come in time. All his sins and follies rose before him like a cloud; he thought of his mother's anguish for he was her only son, and how she would look when she heard he had been drowned—drowned! and by his own folly. A larger wave rolled over him—he tightened his grasp on the seaweed; another came, and then another; a mist rose before his eyes—he loosed his hold, and all was dark.

Some hours later Willie was in his own bed at home, and a lady with a sweet, pale face was bending over him. "Thank God!" she said. Willie heard it, and opened his eyes.

"Oh, mother," he said, "I am saved, then! I was so frightened, and when I thought of God, death seemed so terrible."

"Yes," she said; "you were saved by a boatman who heard your schoolfellows' cries of distress; let us thank God for his mercy in saving you."

Some time after Willie entered the navy; he had lost none of courage and daring, but he acted more under the sense of duty and less to gain man's applause.

He is now an officer, beloved by his men, and respected by all who know him, for, at the call of duty, he is always first, and where danger is, there you will always find him.—Sunday Magazine.

THE EAGLE STIRRING UP HER NEST.—The long sojourn of Moses in the wild district of Sanai must have rendered him familiar with the habits of some of the larger birds of prey. A person accustomed to observe accurately the habits of animals, reports having seen an eagle in one of the deep gorges of the Himalayas, thus teaching its young to fly. While with his glass he watched several young ones on a ledge of rock at a great height, the parent bird swept gently past the young, one of which ventured to follow, but seemed as if unequal to the flight. As it gently sank down with extended wings, one of the parent birds glided underneath it, and bore it aloft again. "It is not necessary," says a recent traveler, writing in view of a deep chasm in the Lebanon range, "to press every poetical figure into strict prosaic accuracy. The notion, however, appears to have been prevalent among the ancients, that the eagle did actually take up her yet timid young, and carry them forth to teach them how, and embolden them to try their own pinions. To this idea Moses seems to refer in Exod. xix. 4. The fact is not impossible; the eagle is strong enough to do it, but I am not aware that such a thing has ever been witnessed. I, myself, however, have seen the old eagle fly round and round the nest, and back and forth past it, while the young ones fluttered and shivered on the edge, as if eager but afraid to launch forth from the giddy precipice. And no wonder, for the nest is on high, and a fall from thence would end their flight for ever."—Biblical Things not Generally Known.

Sometimes an old man becomes a boy again, though too small to drop into his second childhood. An illustration of this pleasant tendency was given, not many months since, by an old man with several million dollars.

He was in the habit of prowling around the office of the insurance company in which he was a director. One morning as he was investigating, he happened to come across the dinner-pail of the office boy. His curiosity led him to take off the cover. A slice of home-made bread, two doughnuts, and a piece of apple-pie tempted the millionaire's appetite. He became a boy again, and the dinner-pail seemed the one he had carried sixty years ago.

Just then the office boy came in and surprised the old man eating the pie.

"That's my dinner you're eating!" exclaimed the boy in figuratively.

"Yes, sonny, I suspect it may be; but it's a first-rate one, for all that. I've not eaten so good a one for sixty years."

"There," he added, as he finished the pie, "take that and go out and buy yourself a dinner, but you won't get as good a one," and he handed the boy a five dollar bill.

For days after, the old man kept referring to the first-class dinner he had eaten from the boy's pail.—Canada Presbyterian.

Christian Advocate.

Organ of the Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences of the M. E. Church, South.

Rev. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
Rev. J. W. Bush, Rev. W. L. C. Bucknicutt,
Rev. C. B. Galloway, Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1881.

Not Orphans.

"Comfortless" is a comment rather than a translation. "I will not leave you orphans" is the literal meaning. Orphanage is, indeed, a comfortless condition. In its spiritual sense it is to be "without God in the world." Wiclif hit the sense precisely—"fatherless." Atheism is orphanage in regard to the divine fatherhood, and so are all apprehensions of God which exclude His personality and goodness. But, more than this, to be without Christ is to be orphans, without the comfort and presence of the infinite Father. Christ alone shows us the Father, and manifests Him as the Father to the believing heart. Our sonship is based upon faith in Christ. "But, as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name." In contrast with the orphanage of the soul is the spirit of adoption. "And, because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father." Whatever speculative or theoretical notions we may have about God, the cry of Abba, Father, in its deep heart penetrating sense, never springs from a mind estranged from Christ.

Strauss, as quoted by Taylor Lewis, says: "In the enormous machine of the universe, amid the incessant whirl and hiss of its jagged iron wheels, amid the deafening crash of its ponderous stamps and hammers, in the midst of this terrific commotion, man, a helpless and defenseless creature, finds himself placed, not secure for a moment, that on some unguarded motion a wheel may not seize and rend him, or a hammer crush him to powder. This sense of abandonment is at first something awful." The fearful desolation of the skeptic is well depicted in this honest utterance. Having rejected Christ and the supernatural, there is nothing left but blank despair. In contrast with this dark and cryless night of unbelief is the spirit of adoption in the children of God, the love of God shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost, and the sense of security as the believer nestles in the arms of an almighty and loving heavenly Father.

Orphanage rightly describes the abandonment, the helplessness, the hopelessness of those who have drifted out into the black and fathomless waters of atheism. And all systems of religion and philosophy that reject Christ tend to atheism, and ultimately reach it. A weak and ignorant child, left parentless in the world, and thrust out upon the current of society, without sympathy, love and wisdom to guide and shelter it, only faintly exhibits the melancholy state of the Christless soul. To such an one there is no personal wisdom, mercy or goodness, no justice, truth or righteousness in the ordering of events. There is a blind, inexorable, unfeeling force, and a material fatalism in the sweep and movement of nature. There is no God, no pitying Father, no beneficent power to whom helpless creatures may appeal, and in whom they may trust. Man is a stray and parentless waif, a something in which intelligence and consciousness have been evolved to perish in death, or to pass into other conditions and forms as inexplicable, and perhaps more miserable than the present.

From such dreary views of the world, and of man and his destiny, the hungry soul turns with relief to the revelations and privileges of the gospel. Christ does not leave us in this horrible and repulsive orphanage, this utter loneliness of spirit, this state of severance from a love which the soul instinctively craves. He comes to us. God comes to us in His Son, and the Spirit of His Son in us cries: Abba, Father. Man is not a mere imp of matter drifting, we know not whither, but an immortal spirit made in the divine image, redeemed by love, and guided through sorrow, temptation, suffering and death, to the everlasting mansions.

There is nothing so utterly alone, so absolutely helpless, so surrounded with unmitigated gloom as the human spirit without God. The companionship and sympathy of our fellows do not help us, since they are in like case, as miserable as ourselves, and powerless to avert disaster, or to secure good fortune. Our earthly parents have brought us into a world of trouble, but they cannot guide us through it, nor give us hope in passing out of it. As to all higher relations, and as to the interests and destiny of the soul, our orphanage is absolute and appalling, until the divine fatherhood, the infinite tenderness, the far-reaching mercy shine forth in Christ. Comfortless because of our orphanage, all comfort breaks upon us through the sonship in Christ. In Him "the eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms."

Christ found the world in a state of orphanage, alienated from God, and with dim conceptions of His paternal love and compassion. He left His disciples trembling and doubting, and with feeble conceptions of God's care over them. He looks upon struggling, tempted, agonizing souls everywhere, tossed and worried by doubt and sin, and hungering for a strong consolation. He comes to us all to reveal the Father, and, in the place of the Spirit of bondage, to fear, to plant in us the Spirit of adoption. He comes to break off the chains of darkness, to open the prison doors, and to thrill the longing heart with the one cry which ends our banishment from the infinite and eternal love. He comes in the power and joyousness of His own Spirit, crying, Abba, Father, in the orphaned soul.

Cumulative Preaching.

As we were listening to a preacher the other Sunday we felt the force of the man's whole life poured upon us in a discourse of forty-five minutes. All that the man knew could not be told in that length of time, but the best that he knew on that particular subject could, and so we realized that we were getting the choicest results of a ministry of twenty-five years. The matter was evidently culled and chosen from a large stock, and did not, by any means, embrace all. A younger man could not have done so well, because the results of his thinking and gathering would have come from a scantier store. When Dr. Lyman Beecher declared that he was forty years in preparing a certain sermon, he meant it in this sense, that it was the outcome of that many years of general study and of mental and spiritual training, although the actual writing of the sermon may not have occupied him more than a few hours.

We also thought that the cogent reasoning, the happy arrangement, the lucid statement, were the results of a quarter of a century of mental discipline and training, added to the college course. It took time to develop these mental powers, and to bring them to their present state of effectiveness and strength. These trained powers of mind were more completely exhibited in this single sermon than the stores of mere knowledge could be. So far as they were concerned, we were being served by the accumulated results of all the preacher's past years of study and mental effort. This treasure, of a mind brought to its ripest strength and polish through so long a course of training, was ministering, in its wholeness, to us in this one sermon. Just as all the weight of the costly and beautiful machinery bears upon the die in coining every precious piece, so the whole mind, with all that it had become, stamped itself upon this single piece of gospel gold.

There was also the spiritual element. Paul knew whom he had believed, because he had long been acquainted with Christ. It was the knowledge of long acquaintance, of walking with Christ for many years, and of trusting Him under many and varied circumstances. In the case we are considering, besides the early conversion, the Scripture study, there were years of religious experience. In all this time there had been growth in grace, and growth in the knowledge of Christ. The deep things of God had been sounded, as they could not have been in the first years of the most devoted ministry. Here was a nature piety, with its wealth of increase, and with its strong and deep insight, and spiritual enlargement and freedom, coming full-handed to anoint us with the gathered unction of years of prayer and of spiritual struggles and victories.

We reflected, further, that nothing grows like character, and that the sum and might of it all are put into every word the preacher utters, into every blow he strikes. Up to the last hour before the sermon is preached something is added, and the entire power of a spotless and holy life goes into every sermon.

What, we asked ourselves, is the value of a sermon that is the product of such manifold and rich materials, gathered through many years of mental toil, heart-searchings and consecrated living? And do we generally take into account what preaching is made of, and how much it costs those who are doing it? And it also occurred to us that one secret of good preaching and of a successful ministry lies in hoarding up, saving parsimoniously, everything in the way of thorough study, of religious experience and of Christian character. Where this cumulative process goes on, time is an important factor of excellence. But this process unfortunately is not the universal rule. Perhaps there are not many who can put a whole life of thought and experience and character into every sermon. There have been miscarriages, negligences, mistakes. But for these they would be greater preachers than they are.

Mississippi Notes.

Amid the most unprecedented season of wintry weather, alternately raining, snowing and sleeting, with an occasional ray of sunlight to let us know the "king of day" had not forsaken the skies, our preachers have moved and settled in their new pastorates. All things wait on the weather but Methodist preachers. Farm work is arrested, steamboats tie up, railroads are stopped, tradesmen are almost without employment, but the Methodist itinerant moves when the Conference commands. Roads, weather, poverty, nothing stays his march, often going well-nigh without purse or scrip. If the old saying is true that "three moves are equal to a fire," many of our brethren have been burned out a number of times, and yet have no fear of the devouring element. But warm welcomes and kind receptions brighten the picture. At Natchez, Crystal Springs, Canton, Meridian, Bolton and other places new pastors found receptions amounting to ovations. Parting from their old shepherds with regrets and tears, wishing them godspeed to other folds, they welcome the new with gospel greetings and brotherly sympathy. This is right, and should be the rule of pastoral changes.

In educational affairs Mississippi is enjoying great prosperity. The Agricultural and Mechanical College at Starksville is full to overflowing. President Lee has published a notice that no more students will be received until dormitory accommodations can be increased. More than one hundred of the young men engage daily in farm work at stated hours. If the faculty succeeds in keeping up the esprit de corps of that department, the prophecies and expectations of many will be disappointed. The University at Oxford has about four hundred students this term. About the same number as the last, but the graduating class will be one of the largest upon which the university degrees were ever conferred. A little newspaper discussion has recently sprung up, occasioned by the reported action of the trustees opening the departments of the university to ladies. The old question of co-education of the sexes is having earnest if not exhaustive treatment by the average country paper. Our Conference schools are prosperous beyond any period in the past. There is a growing conviction that education is one of the great obligations and evangelical functions of the Christian church. Missionaries in foreign fields would make but poor progress without their day schools. Why is there not, in certain measure, the same necessity at home? Sin here is just as insinuating and powerful as in India, China or Mexico.

The Mississippi Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has recently closed an annual session at Canton, Bishop C. D. Foss presiding. Happening to be there one day, in company with our pastor, the Rev. R. S. Woodward, I visited the Conference, and had the pleasure of meeting Bishop Foss. He is a man our Southern Methodism will always be pleased to honor. Conservative, courteous, learned and religious, he is free from sectionalism, pedantry and bigotry. His address to the class for admission into full connection was full of wise counsel, religious sympathy and genuine eloquence. I have rarely, if ever, heard it surpassed. But one circumstance was highly amusing. In propounding the usual questions the Bishop noticed that all did not answer affirmatively when asked if they would abstain entirely from the use of tobacco. Then he delivered a short exhortation and repeated the question, when all agreed to "quit" but two, one white and one colored candidate. The white brother was disposed to argue the case, despite the Bishop's declaration that he had no option in the matter. Finally he said: "I can't promise; you may continue me on trial." Thus he joined the issue—the pipe or orders in the Methodist ministry—and he decided in favor of the pipe. Without discussing, and even doubting, the wisdom of the rule, I could but be a little humiliated at the decision. Our brethren in Canton treated Bishop Foss with becoming hospitality, and, by invitation of Bro. Woodward, he preached to his congregation on Sunday night.

In a few days Judge George will resign his place on the supreme bench of Mississippi to take his seat in the Senate of the United States, to which he was elected by the last Legislature. Who will succeed to his judgeship is just now the leading question with a small regiment of legal gentlemen and their partisan friends. No doubt Gov. Stone will make a wise selection, as he has so well done in most of his appointments. South Mississippi claims the place, and will get it if a suitable man is presented.

The Jackson Clarion, of last week, published an extract from Judge Arnold's late charge to the Grand Jury of Lowndes county on the Sunday laws. It was manly and able, an honor both to his learning and judicial fidelity. The enforcement of these and the liquor laws will yet be a prominent if not political question in the State. Disregard of the Sabbath begets indifference to all law and a contempt for public morals. Outlawry is born of "minor offenses." Unless they are promptly and vigorously punished the darkest crimes will follow beyond possibility of prevention. In some localities we need a revival of justice.

C. B. G.

Alabama Notes.

Old dame "Nix" came to see us again last Sunday night, the second time now within a month, and spread her white robe six inches thick over everything. It may be pleasant for her to gallop her boreal steeds over mountain and plain, and spend some of the season in this far sunny South; but it is a costly visit to us who live here, as will be testified by many a pinched finger and toe, and by the decaying bodies of many a little bird and sickly calf and old cow that were made to pay nature's last debt.

But it is said she is an excellent farmer, or, at least, that she has a way peculiarly her own of preparing and fertilizing the soil for the seed, and of destroying insects that prey upon growing plants. It is to be hoped this is so, and that the richest results will follow her unwelcomed visits. If we only knew that she had broken the shell that holds the thing that turns to the fly, that lays the egg that hatches the worm, that rusts the cotton, that brings the money, that buys our bread and makes us rich, we would esteem her more highly than we do Gen. Morgan and the professor of caterpillars he sends to visit our Southern plantations every summer, and, like some housewives who have been much hindered in their work by the untimely visit of an unloveable neighbor, we would bow and scrape and smile, and say to the departing old dame: "Now, dear Mrs. Nix, do come again, and do not let it be so long. Remember us to Mr. J. Frost, and tell him we will look for him in a few days; be sure."

The excessive snows and clouds of the winter following the excessive rains and clouds of the fall have made the roads very bad, worse, they say, than ever before. And, all combined, have very much hindered the preachers, and caused the work of the church to move off very slowly indeed. Sometimes the Quarterly Conferences are so thinly attended it is thought best to postpone the arrangements for the year to a later day. Indeed, it has come to pass that December and January, which include the winding up of the year, the session of the Annual Conference, and the moving of the preachers to their new charges, are almost entirely lost as a period of efficient work. And for one I am almost persuaded it would be better to change the time of holding our Annual Conference from the first part of December to the last part of February. It cannot be objected that the collections or salaries would fall off, for there is no good reason why this should be so. And every preacher, or nearly every one, either has had, or now has or will have a two-horse wagon load or so of children little cherubs angels and to move such freight, "nisi, jocate," is no comfortable job, and rather risky to health and life. I have tried it twice and ought to know. Pray that your flight be not in the winter. The only valid objection to the change lies in the difficulty of getting homes for the preachers at that time of the year—first of March—and this would hold only where there are no parsonages. But would not this very difficulty stimulate circuits to build parsonages? It does seem so to me. If this change were made, I believe the spirit of parsonage building, which for a few years has been so active with us, would push its work till a good home was provided for the preachers wherever needed. Let the nine wise men now ruling among us take this hint and ponder it.

***.

"Months of Vanity."

Creation seems to have its wastes, physically, intellectually and spiritually. The tide has its ebb and flow. Trees have their times of growth and decay. The mind has its seasons of activity and repose. When we look out upon the hosts of heaven some clear night, and remember that every shining point we see is a sun perhaps a thousand times larger than our sun, and that around each one revolve planets nobler than any in our system, we are impressed with the stupendous magnitude of creation. When to this we add the millions of stars revealed by telescopes, we are overpowered by the grandeur of the thought. Yet, after all, these millions of worlds are but atoms floating in space measureless and inconceivable, though an indubitable fact confronting us everywhere. An astronomer of considerable celebrity has written upon "the wastes of the universe" a very readable book; but are they real wastes? Suppose the sun were brought as near to us as to Venus, would human life under the changed conditions be possible? Crowd Jupiter, Saturn, Neptune and Uranus upon the inside of the earth's orbit, and would the constitution of them or the earth remain the same? We here make no account of the loss of equilibrium between centripetal and centrifugal forces. Allow them to be balanced by divine fiat. Still these other conditions must be different in the very nature of things.

Not less remarkable are the empty spaces in which our thoughts and emotions float like so many luminous specks. Every nucleus of associations, however extensive, is but one of ten thousand constellations, each one of them a center of planets that only proximity may develop, moving in orbits of inconceivable vastness. Between each is territory apparently unutilized, and in vain we ask why? We have not yet learned the laws of mind and heart well enough to be able to answer this question as definitely as the similar one relating to matter. But we may suppose the reason to be analogous. We can readily see that all space could not conveniently become solid matter. There would be too much interior and too little surface. It would necessitate the destruction of mind. The law of impenetrability holding, there could be no place for mind. Not that mind per se has need of place, but material forms are its definitions and symbols. It must have a place to put these.

But there are applications of this phrase of a more particular and practical character. Man is "made to possess months of vanity" in the growth from childhood to manhood. It is very poor special pleading to say that all the time occupied in development to maturity is necessary. Other animals develop more rapidly. There is no special reason why man should not be a man at once, so far as concerns the preparation for the duties and responsibilities of life. We cannot find the reason in any law of utility. There is none certainly on the score of economy. The amount of care, patience and worry, not to speak of money in food, clothing and doctors' bills, with numerous incidentals and accidentals, is almost incredible. If man is to do service in this world, he ought to be released from these drawbacks, or, if this is the service he is to render, it seems to be a work little better than that assigned to Sisyphus. "To work for the world" will not do since if all were perfect there would be no need to work either for self or others. Or, if it be said to be its own end, and that man's highest enjoyment is in the work, then consciousness is false in all of those treasures which hope lays away for the future. No one ever lived who felt that his life was the end for which he lived. Nor did he ever believe that the enjoyment of life's healthy functions was the end. Ingersoll did not so feel by the grave of his brother.

But these "months of vanity" do not relate merely to life in its general tendencies and contour. They are peculiarly true of the times of constrained idleness, through which the laborer must live upon the earnings of his days of employment. The poor operative has worked eight months, and, by scant living, he begins to find his purse becoming heavier; but all at once the company fails or suspends work, and he must lie idle and eat the earnings of the eight months. The mechanic has had a good season of carpenter or mason work; but trade sickens, or the winter season comes, and he must wait till next year for another job. The farmer has planted and tilled his crop; it is ripening. But he is prostrated with fever. There is none to relieve. The weeks go by and the crop is lost. The poor man has little consolation in the stale and unsympathetic doctrine that it all came as a punishment for sin or as a lesson in patience. What sin? and why such a drill in patience here if there is nothing in the next life for the exercise of that virtue? Job could not see it, nor can any one see it merely as a drill or preparation.

In our spiritual journey we often get into places where there is no increase, no advance, no anything. In vain we try to whip ourselves into penitence. In vain we try to coax ourselves into happiness. We bemoan our deadness but to no purpose. Our ship is waterlogged, our train is ditched, and putting on steam does no good. We get our hands in a vice, where the best plan is to hold still. There is no sin in this state. Indeed, some of us have yet to learn that sin is not produced by state or condition, but by character. The rejoicing man is not, by reason thereof, a saint; nor is the weeping man a sinner because he weeps. Self-complacency is neither sin nor religion in itself; so self-condemnation is not the one or the other aside from the character. This waterlogged condition is a "month of vanity" which comes in our life, but why is a question not readily answered. The spring time and the autumn of life, the summer and winter of the soul, come and go; the rotation of the seasons of the immortal year may reveal the philosophy of life's dead points here. I have sat in brilliantly lighted halls and amused myself by watching the shadows the candelabra made in the light of one another. Where at a superficial glance all was light and lightgiving, upon a closer scrutiny all was shadow and shadow-generating. A third look blent them into a luminous net-work of light and shade of such variety and richness that it required little imagination to transport the mind at once to the land of magic where Aladdin was sporting his wondrous lamp. So if we could take in at a glance the wondrously illuminated hall of the universe and see the shadows growing into rays of light along the darker depths of space, and the sunbeams growing into belts of black in the radiance of some nebula constellation, until the whole grew into the tesselated pavement of the eternal mansion, we then would be satisfied with the eclipses and chills which we suffer here. Our want and waiting would make such a bright shadow that we would regret neither the emptiness nor the duration. Along the magic arch our feet would speed to the worlds of light from which our own hearts and intellects caught their glow. The "months of vanity" would bring us that feeling of tremulous ecstasy that one feels as borne by a balloon he sweeps through space above every obstacle and every vehicle of motion save that which heaven itself furnishes to its native children.

T. A. S. A.

Plans.

I have always wanted to be one of the two brethren stationed in the church aisle at the close of the Conference session when the appointments were read. They receive and forward the plans. What a variety of styles there see the light! Here comes a leather-backed book with complete register and possibly a diagram of the circuit and full instructions, so that the way is found so plain that a way-faring man need not err therein. Here comes a half sheet which was hastily scratched off six years ago, and has gone through three pockets. Let us hope it will perish, and a better take its place. Yonder is a brother writing hurriedly upon his knee, for the presiding elder has just whispered to him that he ought to have it ready. He had not counted on moving. Not much plan there.

At our last Conference a presiding elder, so he tells us, left a plan in the hands of his successor with the suggestive invocation appended: "May the Lord bless the man that works this work." A parting prayer is a good thing, especially if it follows after good works. The brother don't say what else he left besides that plan and prayer. Did it tell his successor, who was bound to "work that work" that continent of mud—where to go? Did it point to a house and home and furniture? or did it suggest boarding or renting? Some men's works go before them, and some they follow after. Some plant and others pluck up instead of reaping. Some build, and others, if they do not tear down the building, leave it ready to fall for the want of a little judicious repairing. Blessings upon that man who has so amended his predecessor's plan as to leave a comfortable home for that man who follows after.

On my way from Conference I fell in with a young brother going to his first appointment. There was a parsonage on it, and he showed his plan.

The P. S. was suggestive and I copied it:

"Dear Brother: You will find many good friends on this circuit; you will find in —— and —— good teachers for your children. Mr. —— will sell you goods and groceries at a very low profit. You will find Col. ——, a very clever merchant. Mr. W. will let you get wood on his land. Ben. ——, colored, will do your hauling. A. L. and wife, colored, will work, wash and cook for you. You will find some young fruit trees planted out. Take care of them, for they are of very fine variety. I will leave some vegetables in the garden for you. Yours truly, ——."

If that circuit preacher ever locates the Conference will be much poorer. I do hope the vegetables survived the freeze, and that the cattle did not break in and eat up the fruit trees.

HOMELESS.

The Northern politician and religious meddlers have been so long and strenuously insisting upon the social and industrial and other shortcomings and sin of the South, that some of our own press are beginning to echo their senseless and conceited jargon. We are glad to see that the Nashville Christian Advocate has a true conception of the situation. Dr. Fitzgerald, writing on "Too many doctors for an unappreciative patient," says:

Too much doctoring will make a well person sick. It is not wise to go to taking medicine for every slight disorder of the body. A healthy boy's "growing-pains" are not dangerous. Leave him alone, and let him grow. The South is growing in all the elements of material and moral progress. During the last fifteen years she has suffered more at the hands of her volunteer doctors and nurses than from all others. Under a pet-dog rule she was bled within an inch of her life; but she survived, and is now doing well. Her appetite is good; her sleep is sweet; her lungs are sound; her limbs are strong; her eye is bright. Let her grow while. Don't waste so much advice where it is not needed. Don't discourage a brave and struggling people with this unceasing clamor of censure or evil-prophesying. Before the war the Southern people, in dealing with difficult and peculiar inherited conditions, acted their parts as well as any of their neighbors would have done under the same circumstances. Since the war they have shown great adaptability, and they have exhibited in a marked degree the qualities requisite for political organization and self-government. They are not an effete race. They are not barbarians. They are not a sick or dying people. They have given many names to the roll of illustrious men whose lives are the glory of our country, and they will add many names to it in the future. There is life in the land yet. Let there be a stop to croaking at home and of nagging from abroad. The last ten years was a period of marvelous progress to the South. The next ten years will be still more progressive.

Memphis Conference and Mexico.

The Western Methodist, referring to a recent article of ours, says:

We copy the above well considered and most gratifying editorial from our New Orleans co-temporary, especially to give emphasis to important resolutions adopted by the Memphis Conference Board of Missions at the late session in Trenton. These resolutions, we regret to say, were not correctly printed in the report on Missions as it appeared in our issue of December 4; or rather two of them were transposed so that they seemed, as printed to have reference to another interest. This mistake was very unfairly repeated in the pamphlet Minutes, "as the printers copied" from this paper. Our readers of the Memphis Conference will please take note of the action of the Board, as we now give it, viz:

Resolved, 1. That from this date we will endeavor to collect 20 dollars on to the amount assessed to our several charges, funds enough to pay the salary of the Rev. Wm. M. Patterson, Superintendent of the Central Mexican Mission, and a member of the Memphis Conference.

2. That in addition to contributions for this special purpose, we designate that any sums collected in the several charges in excess of the assessment to them respectively.

3. That we recommend to the children of the Church in our Sunday-schools and families that they give their offering to this special purpose.

W. J. JOHNSON,
W. C. SELLARS,

This action fully explains itself. It is a late, but not too late recognition of a duty, and a privilege as well, of a high type and full of promise. There is no room for doubt that our own Patterson is doing a good and great work, in connection with the duties of his mind and heart. Indeed it is quite probable that the Board of Missions to be written will contain records of the greatest triumphs of Southern Methodism among the people of our neighboring republic, and those records will show the name of Dr. W. M. Patterson as one of the chief instruments under God in the evangelization of Mexico. We ask and urge our brethren, the preachers, and their people also, to give heed to this action of their Board of Missions, that they may thoroughly understand and properly appreciate the conditions and provisions. Then let them devise and do liberal things.

Dr. F. M. KENNEDY D. D. — In the memoir of this beloved minister, adopted by the South Carolina Conference at its recent session, we make the following extract:

As a preacher and pastor, both in town and in the country, as army chaplain during the war, as secretary of his Conference, and Presiding Elder, and as editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, he served the Church with conspicuous ability. Wherever he was appointed, his work was well done—was performed faithfully, thoroughly, gracefully. His devotion to duty, his invincible determination to achieve the full measure of the service required, urged the shaft that quivered in the heart, and dismissed—alas! too soon, we think—the soaring soul from the labors and loves of earth to the glorious activities and associations of Heaven. He was assistant secretary of the last General Conference, and also acted as secretary of the hard working committee on finals. Day and night for a month he toiled on, so taxing his nervous force that the result was paralysis, two years of comparative helplessness, but of meek and cheerful submission, and then—a sudden death.

Dr. Kennedy was both beloved and honored. How many in the Carolinas and Georgia felt the pain of a personal bereavement when he "fell on sleep," February 5, 1880! His was a short life—so we call it. Counted by its number of years, it was short; but, measured by the work, the worship, the growth and the achievements of the man, by the character constructed, his was a full life-time on the earth. Milton Kennedy was a noble man, for he was true, gentle, and kind. He was a courteous, high-toned, genial gentleman. He was both witty and wise, playful and discreet, magnanimous and sympathetic. Everybody loved him; everybody trusted him. Truth was his theme in the pulpit; and to be true was the law of his life. He was not an erratic genius; he was a well-developed, rounded man. One hardly knew which most to admire, his common sense, his glowing rhetoric, his magnetic courtesy, his rippling humor, his rare judgment, his tender sympathy, his exquisite taste, or his manly earnestness. He did not probably fulfill the mission of the great man; but, better than that, he fulfilled the great mission of man—he followed Christ, and became a "partaker of the Divine nature."

MISSIONARY MOVEMENTS.—As previously announced, there was quite a large and interested gathering at the Felicity Street Church, of this city, Friday night, January 28, to welcome and to hear Rev. J. J. Ransom, our missionary to Brazil. There were appropriate religious services, several rousing missionary hymns were sung, and addresses by Bishop Keener and Bro. Ransom. Bro. Ransom gave a very interesting and entertaining account of the Empire of Brazil, the political, social and religious condition of the country, and of the open door for missionary effort. The collection was not pressed very persistently, but $150 was given or pledged toward building a church in Rio de Janeiro. On Sunday last Bro. Ransom delivered missionary sermons, in the morning at Carondelet Street, and at night at the St. Charles Avenue Church. We heard his night sermon, and were much gratified at its comprehensive and masterly grasp of the great principles underlying all missionary effort. Such appeals to the understanding and conscience of Christian people are bound to bear good fruit.

Rev. Dr. A. W. Wilson, secretary of our Board of Foreign Missions, reached New Orleans Monday morning, and, in company with Bishop Keener, left for Mexico Wednesday morning, February 2. The departure of the Bishop and secretary for this important and rapidly developing missionary field indicates a forward movement on that line. We believe they expect to be absent about a month. Dr. Wilson, at any rate, hopes to be back in time for the Baltimore Conference, which meets March 9. A note from Miss Hallaran, dated City of Mexico, January 22, informs us that Bro. MacDonell and wife arrived there, January 21, in good health.

THE ECUMENICAL APPOINTMENTS. A communication to the Nashville Christian Advocate by "A Southern Methodist," on the appointment of delegates to the Ecumenical Congress, will be found on our second page this week. Some two or three weeks ago we said on this subject what we thought was necessary, fully endorsing the course of the Bishops, in making the appointments, and on two grounds: that the resolution of the General Conference would bear the construction which the committee of seven and the Bishops put upon it; and that the Bishops were unmistakably the proper persons to make the appointments. We have not called in question the motives of those who have taken a different view of the matter. At the time we wrote our brief article we had given but little attention to the subject beyond the conviction that the right thing had been done, and in the right way. A closer and more careful examination of the wording and punctuation of the resolution, authorizing the appointment of delegates, leaves us with the conviction that it not only might bear the construction put upon it by the Bishops, but that no other construction could well be put upon it. Our chief anxiety is that there may be harmony and general consent to the manner in which the subject has been disposed of. We have a good delegation, appointed by competent authority. And we hope this will be the end of all controversy.

DEATH OF A YOUNG MINISTER. Rev. W. B. Lewis, writing from Brookhaven, Miss., January 27, says: "Rev. S. A. Strickland, formerly of the Northwest Texas Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, died here this morning at ten o'clock, of consumption. He was a young man of fine promise of usefulness, and of excellent spirit. Conscious to the last moment, he died in great peace. A suitable memoir will be prepared for your paper, and for the Texas Christian Advocate."

CENTENARY COLLEGE, LOUISIANA.—We learn that there are one hundred and twenty-one students in attendance at Centenary, with the prospect of several more shortly. This institution seems to prosper more than the most of our Southern Colleges. Now is the time to work for it by canvassing for students, and by taking up the collection for the education of young men studying for the ministry. We hope our Louisiana preachers will present this matter to their people at once.

Rev. J. W. Lambuth, superintendent of our China mission, writing from Mobile, Ala., January 25, says: "Mrs. Lambuth and myself are now in Mobile, and have been here for several weeks. We leave here on Friday, February 4, at four P. M., and will be in New Orleans about ten P. M., I suppose. We want to spend two Sabbaths in New Orleans visiting the churches and Sabbath-schools, and meeting the ladies in the interest of missions."

Rev. G. M. Liverman, writing from Keachie, La., January 20, says: "We are moving on, so far, finely. Our new house is going up despite bad weather. Some snow this morning, making the fourth during the winter. Our ADVOCATE comes weekly, freighted with good news. We appreciate it more than ever. I hope to do more for it than last year."

The Weekly Clarion, Jackson, Miss., January 27, says:

It gives us pleasure to note the fact that the health of Rev. Dr. Watkins has materially improved in the past week or two.

This good news gives us great joy and hope. We do earnestly pray that our revered brother may be restored to health.

Rev. J. W. Shores, writing from Autaugaville, Ala., January 26, says: "I have been watching at the bedside of a sick daughter, who is quite low with pneumonia. It is over three weeks since she was taken ill. We hope she will recover, but the attack seems to be a very stubborn one. One other member of the family having chills."

Rev. Thos. Y. Ramsey, writing from Eureka Springs, Miss., January 20, says: "Notwithstanding the very bad weather I am trying to meet my appointments, and so far the meetings have been interesting, and the outlook is promising.

Rev. Dr. Bristor, for the past two years pastor of Ames Methodist Episcopal Church, of this city, has been transferred to the Delaware Conference, and stationed at Wilmington. He is to be succeeded at Ames Church by Rev. Wm. C. Webb. Rev. Dr. Hartzell, whose time on the New Orleans district has expired, is appointed presiding elder of the Teche district. The removal of Dr. Bristor will be generally regretted, not only by his former congregation, but by the community at large. Dr. Bristor is a man of brilliant gifts, and a minister of catholic and fraternal spirit. We wish him an acceptable entrance into his new field of labor, and abundant success.

—Our Nashville Sunday-School periodicals for February are, as usual, of goood quality, and everything that our Sunday-schools need in their line. We regret to hear that some of our schools are using other publications to the neglect of our own. Let us by all means see that our own literature is used in our own schools. It is best for us.

We have received a copy of the minutes of the recent session of the Alabama Conference, held at Pensacola, Fla., December 8 12, 1880. It is a full and clear exhibit of the minute business and statistics of the Conference, and should be in the hands of every member of the church in the bounds of the Conference.

Rev. W. M. Motley, of Greenville, Ala., sends us an excellent obituary of Mrs. S. E. Boland, wife of Rev. J. M. Boland, of the Alabama Conference. It was received too late for this number of the ADVOCATE, but it will appear next week.

We regret to learn, from the last number of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, that its veteran editor, Dr. McAnally, is suffering from the effects of a fall on the ice. We hope that he may be speedily restored to his accustomed good health.

We were rejoiced, says the Raleigh Christian Advocate of January 19, to learn from Dr. H. Craven, the President, that Trinity College has opened its Spring session with about 110 students and a prospect of more yet to come in. There is no reason why our institutions should not feel the influence of returning prosperity to the State. Send all the boys you can to Trinity College." That is the best and quickest way to give it permanent and paying prosperity.

Books and Periodicals.

FIVE WOMEN OF ENGLAND. By Meade Publication. Philadelphia: Presbyterian Board of

The five women are: Ann and Jane Taylor, Mary Martha Sherwood, Hannah More, Elizabeth Fry. The life and character of these noted Christian women are sketched for the entertainment and instruction of the young. A good work and calculated to benefit the young people.

—The Pastor and People is the title of a bimonthly periodical published at Cincinnati, Ohio. Rev. S. Mease, D. D., managing editor, Dayton, Ohio. It purports to be "a repository of current Christian teaching and working to aid in all the churches." It is handsomely printed and filled with choice sermonic literature. We have received the numbers for September and October and November and December. Price $1 50 per annum.

—The Midwinter (February) Scribner has always been a special number, as rich as the choicest literary matter and most beautiful wood engravings can make it. Of last year's midwinter number the London Times said: "It is a really magnificent triumph of American pictorial art and literary genius." The English publisher of Scribner has telegraphed for 17,000 copies of the present number—an advance of 6000 upon his orders last year, and the largest edition of an American magazine ever sent to England—in fact, it is said to be larger than the monthly sales of any English magazine. The American edition of Scribner has grown during 1880 about 20,000 copies.

A delightful feature of the magazine this year is a series of sparkling novelettes, or condensed novels, instead of a serial story. "A Fair Barbarian," the story of a piquant American girl in England, by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, begins in this February number with a twenty-two page installment, and will run through three issues. Since the death of George Eliot it may be said that Mrs. Burnett commands a larger English-speaking audience than any other woman. Her novelette will be followed by one by George W. Cable, author of "The Grandissimes," etc., and afterward Royesen's "Queen Titania" will be published. "Pour the Great," Eugene Schuyler's historical work, begun in February, 1880, will be finished in October of this year. Buccaneers of the recently published special offers of Scribner, the whole of this great work, with its wealth of illustrations, can be had at a very low price, in connection with a year's subscription. All book sellers can give the terms.

—In the same ratio that Scribner's Monthly is prospering, St. Nicholas, the famous magazine for girls and boys, issued by the same publishers, grows apace. About 100,000 copies of the Christmas (December) number were sold, while the January number has been for some time out of print. In February, there is a full account of the Obelisk, richly illustrated from sketches and photographs, showing the great monolith in all stages of moving.

The Contemporary Review, January, 1881, George Munro, publisher, New York, has: 1. The Unity of Nature, by the Duke of Argyle. 2. Taxation in the United States, by An American Statesman. 3. The Jews in Germany, by the author of "German Home Life." 4. Plutarch and the Gangrenous Christianity of the First Two Centuries, by Julia Westwood. 5. Richard Cantillon and the Nationality of Political Economy, by Professor W. Stanley Jevons. 6. Suicidal Mania, by George W. Knighton, LL. D. 7. Latin Christian Inscriptions; by Rev. Geo. T. Stokes. 8. Mr. Hodgson's Article—Professor Green as a Critic, by Professor Green. 9. The Death of Anaxagoras, by William Canton. 10. The Crisis in Ireland. Also, "The Black Robe," by Wilkie Collins.

—St. Nicholas for February, in the quality and exquisite finish of its numerous illustrations, excels any magazine that comes to our table. The engravings, typography and paper are beyond criticism. Of the articles in this number we mention: Thorwald and Summer, a poem; The Giant Squid; Two Visions of Fairy-land, a poem; Cousin Charley's Story; Mystery in a Mansion, chapters 7 and 8; In Nature's wonderland, chapter 4; How Jube Waked the Elephant; The True Story of the Obelisk; The St. Nicholas Treasure Box of Literature. The Subscription price of this superb magazine for the young, is $3 per annum.

—The Fortnightly Review, George Munro, publisher, New York, January, 1881, has: 1. Geist's Grave, by Matthew Arnold. 2. Political Integration, by Herbert Spencer. 3. The Land Legislation for Ireland, by George Campbell. 4. Etienne Dolet, by Mark Pattison. 5. Freedom of Contract, by T. H. Farrer. 6. Notes on Endymion, by Lord Houghton. 7. Aerial Navigation, by William Pole. 8. County Boards, by Charles T. D. Acland. 9. The Tragic Commedians, by George Meredith. 10. Home and Foreign Affairs. Also, The Freres, by Mrs. Alexander.

—Appleton's Journal, February, 1881, has: The Veterans of Yesterday, in three parts, part second—from the French of Erckmann Chatrian; Rambles Among Books 1. Country Books; Parliamentary Anecdotes; Buddhists and Buddhism in Burmah; The Irish Land Question; Shakspeare's Prudences; A Lady's Wanderings in Japan; Music; A Deadly Fond a sketch; Decorative Operations; Romances of Ancient Egypt; A Strange Story; Love in dreams a poem; Editor's Table; Notes for Readers.

The Magazine of Art, January, 1881, Cassell, Potter, Galpin & Co., publishers, London, Paris and New York, is more than usually rich in exquisite engravings. Among them are: Vandyck Painting the Children of Charles I; Treasure Houses of Art, with five illustrations; the Decorations of the Home, with four Illustrations; The Special Exhibitions of Scottish Art, with three Illustrations; Ebers's Egypt, with two Illustrations; Wood Carving, with four Illustrations. The yearly subscription for the Magazine of Art is $3.50.

The Nineteenth Century, January, 1881, George Mouro, publisher, New York, has: 1. The Dawn of a Revolutionary Epoch. The Crisis in Ireland. 3. The High Court of Justice. 4. A Glimpse at New Foundland. 5. A Day with a War Balloon. 6. The Exhibiting of Pictures. 7. A Census of Religion. 8. Penny Fiction. 9. The Religion Zoroaster. 10. The Basutos and the Constitution of the Cape of Good Hope. Also, Sunrise, a story of these times, by William Black, chapters 40 to 45.

The Popular Science Monthly, February, 1881, has: The Development of Political Institutions, by Herbert Spencer; Origin of the Plow and Wheel-Carriage; Physical Education; Horses and their Feet; The Value of Accomplishments; Darwin on the Movements of Plants; Atmospheric Electricity; Optical Illusions of Motion; the November Meteors, and other articles.

Publisher's Department.

☞ We shall do our best to exclude fraudulent advertisements of every description from the ADVOCATE, and we ask our friends, in ordering goods from the leading merchants of New Orleans and elsewhere, as represented in our columns, will mention having seen the advertisement in the ADVOCATE. We will also take pleasure in attending personally to any commissions for our friends in the country with which we may be favored, while endorsing our advertisers as being worthy of their patronage.

"How can I best increase my stock?"
Said Farmer Jones to Thomas;
"By making six of mine," quoth Tom,
"No miracle I proclaim;
A simpler process ne'er was known;
What is it? Well, now, s'pose'n
You catch that yearling cow asleep,
"Twill be a heifer-dozin'."

In a little village in Virginia there lived a family named Ransom. They were not very pious people, and never went to church. Once, however, during a revival, the family were prevailed upon to attend preaching. When they made their reluctant and tardy appearance, the services had just begun; and when they had scarcely taken their seats, the minister gave out the first hymn, reading it somewhat thus: "Return, ye ransom sinners, home." "All right," cried the head of the Ransoms, getting up in a rage, and clapping his hat on his head. "Come along old woman and kids, we'll go home fast enough, and every body in the church knows we didn't want to come."

We will certainly be called on to record the sudden and violent death of that fellow Gilloolly. Yesterday he stopped in front of a fruit stand on Canal street avenue and picked out several peaches, squeezed them until the stuffing came out of them, tryng to find out if they were ripe, and then he put them back. "Look here, I guess all them peaches that you have squeezed them," you didn't sell 'em before I squeezed 'em did you." "No but—" "Well, if you don't sell 'em after I've squeezed 'em you don't any ways oil than you were before. You must learn to reason, man, before you talk."

The "commuter" who travels daily on the railway may be a very good-natured person. Otherwise he would be a nuisance. The fussy and peevish man who rides to the commuter resort always are those who call the wretched management of the railway and early wake the riders from his shift to soon and return to his residence in the city.

A minister of more than ordinary talents, visiting the congregation of which formerly he was a member, preached both in the afternoon and evening, and from his social well-known acquaintance, the congregation was rather a full one. The next morning at the breakfast table, he was asked by his son, "How came it at the little end of the horn last night?" "Well," replied he, "as you could come out of the crowd."

A Sunday school teacher of an infant class was explaining Jonah's being cast into the sea, and how the angry waves ceased to rage. The little boy was greatly interested in knowing how she must have looked after that, and after musing awhile said, "Teacher, did the pillar have a pillar case on it?" [Idea and pillow mean the same to his mind.]

A negro was suspected of surreptitiously meddling with his neighbor's fruit, and being caught in a garden by moonlight, complimented his detectors by raising his eyes, clasping his hands and piously exclaiming: "Good heavens! dis yere darkey can't go nowhere to pray any more without bein' 'sturbed."

"You are now one," said the minister to a happy pair he had just tied together with a knot that they could never untie. "Which one?" asked the bride. "You will have to settle that for yourselves," said the clergyman.

"Are you a good rider?" asked a livery man. "Sir," replied the customer, and just then the horse started, stood on his hinder hoofs, threw down and kicked. "And the customer went on, from his high seat in the hay now. "See how easily I get on?"

"Well, you are the biggest goose I ever saw," exclaimed Jones to the partner of his joys and sorrows. And Mrs. Jones smiled upon him with a seraphic smile as she remarked, "Oh, Jones, you are such a self-forgetful darling!"

The organ grinder, accompanied by the inevitable monkey, was performing to the delight of the children. A father asked his son of five years how he liked the music. "I like it much," he replied, "but I pity the man's little brother."

"It remains undecided whether the fact of a gentleman having no tea may not have something to do with the answer he sends to one who calls upon him with a bill.

One of debt is cup of danger,
And your credit is to pay.

A printer down in the city of 340,000 inhabitants says that the Chicago is proof a girl has a compartment head for a brevier body; and a long primer foot." But you bet she is alive and counts one of that large inhabitants.

A lady engaged to be married, and getting sick of her bargain, applied to a friend to help her untie the knot before it was too late. "Oh, certainly," she replied, "it is very easy to untie it now, while it is a bow-knot."

The following advertisement appears in a Canadian newspaper: "Will the gentleman who stole my melons last Saturday night be generous enough to return me a few of the seeds, as they are a choice variety."

It is near midnight. A beautiful father has been dozing for more than an hour. Suddenly she rises, stretches, yawns, and says drowsily to herself: "Come, now! no more laziness—go to bed.

"What did the Puritans come to this country for?" asked a Massachusetts teacher of his class. "To worship in their own way and make other people do the same," was the reply.

A London gamin called out after a smart, dapper little gentleman who affects particularly large boots, "Come out of that hat, will ye? I know'd you in it, 'oots 'n' all."

"Sam, why are lawyers like fishes?" "I don't meddle with de subject, Pompy." "Why, don't you see?" 'Cause dey am so fond ob debates."

"Gentlemen," said a farmer writing to the chairman of an agricultural society, "put me down for one load of cattle for a call."

W. C. SHEPARD & CO.—Autumn Clothing, breakfast and tea set, 180 pieces, for $15. Equal in looks and usefulness to French China.

Business Notices.

For Mosquito Bites, Burnett's Kalliston is invaluable, as it neutralizes a peculiar property which neutralizes the poison and allays the inflammation caused by the sting of insects.

Because it adds to Personal Beauty by restoring color and lustre to gray or faded hair, and is beneficial to the scalp, is why Parker's Hair Balsam is such a popular dressing.

CANVASSERS make from $25 to $50 per week selling goods for E. G. RIDDOTT & CO., 10 Barclay St., New York. Send for Catalogue and terms

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

MANSFIELD, LOUISIANA.

Owned, controlled and managed by the Louisiana Annual Conference.

Course of study equal to any college in the South. Its roll of pupils has nearly doubled in three months and still they come. Noted for healthfulness of locality. All at living rates.

Total expense for Spring term, commencing February 14, 1881, only $25 in literary and classical course. Music $20. No extras. Let Louisianians build up their own schools.

A specimen copy of College News free on application. Address REV. J. LANE HOOPES, President.

An Experienced Lady

Desires a position in a school as teacher of French and Instrumental Music. Would assist also in English Branches. Address, Madam C., Office Christian Advocate, New Orleans.

MUNSEY'S SERMONS and LECTURES.

Price, $1.50.

PRESS OPINIONS. 5th Edition.

This is truly a wonderful book, as might be expected from such a remarkable man as Dr. Munsey. Though made up of sermons, lectures and addresses, it takes hold of the reader with the grip of a master in romance.—Theological Monthly, Richmond.

The publication of the sermons of a great preacher usually results in disappointment to his admirers, but this volume will prove an exception.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

We do not hesitate to pronounce it one of the most remarkable books of sermons that has ever come under our notice.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

It is one of the most remarkable productions of the Methodist pulpit of this or any age.—Methodist Recorder, Pittsburg, Pa.

We are convinced that this volume will not only sustain the great preacher's reputation, but increase it. . . . When one reads his sermon on the Divine Councils and Work, he immediately thinks of Milton's prose work, of Eloquence of Jeremy Taylor, of Barrow and such like masters of expression.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate, Macon, Ga.

Dr. Munsey is rank with our best English classics.—Rev. W. Cowell Brown, of London.

These are the ripest fruit of Dr. Munsey's wonderful powers, and any one of them would make the reputation of an ordinary man.—Texas Christian Advocate.

The church has but one Munsey, and Methodism will never see his like again.—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

Munsey's sermons gained something in the delivery but less than in the case of many other noted preachers, other excellence and power to rally all that made them attractive are preserved in the printed page. Hence they are not a mere monument of a wonderful man, but the fault ridden of words that survive their author, the man himself, and the very voice that thrilled and enchained. They are not perhaps hung in the dark, but fresh and luminous, and still bear with the last touches of the pencil of genius.—New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Bishop Keener has done his Church and all Churches good service in preparing this memorial for one of the most brilliant preachers of the South. The sermons here offered are certainly marvels. . . . The effort almost bates his breath as he reads the fiery lines. . . . His sermons would be a profitable study to the student of a colder clime.—Bishop Gilbert Haven of New York, Christian Advocate.

Address
RATHROP & WILKINS,
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

DR. EDWARD HARRISON,

112 Canal Street, from 11 to 4 P. M.

NEW ORLEANS.

W. F. MELLEN,

Attorney at Law,

12 CARONDELET ST.,
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

UNITED STATES
Four Per Cent. Bonds
BOUGHT AND SOLD BY
New Orleans National Bank,
58 CAMP STREET.

Carpet and Oil Cloth Warehouse.

ELKIN & CO.,

100 - - - CANAL STREET - - - 100

New styles of
MOQUETTE, VELVET, BODY BRUSSELS, and TAPESTRY BRUSSELS, with border to match.
3-PLY and INGRAINS in great variety.
OIL CLOTHS of all widths.
WINDOW SHADES and CURTAINS, new patterns.
CORNICES and CORNICE POLES.
MATTINGS of every description.
CURTAIN GOODS, TASSELS, CORDS, GIMPS, Etc.
Our prices for corresponding qualities of goods are as low as any house in the South or West.

DR. C. J. BICKHAM,

RESIDENCE AND OFFICE,
220 Jackson St., Bet. Chestnut and Colisee
NEW ORLEANS.
Office Hours—Eight A. M., and three to four P. M.

Sterling Music Books.

NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY METHOD FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

By Tapper; each, $1 50, or complete, $3 25. This is a method of established reputation, which has been in constant use in the Grand Conservatory, and is getting to be everywhere known and valued. Has received decided commendations from the best teachers.

DICTIONARY OF MUSICAL INFORMATION, $2 25. Very convenient book of reference.

GROVE'S DICTIONARY OF MUSIC AND MUSICIANS. Vol. I., $4 50. A grand encyclopedia.

STAINER AND BARRETT'S DICTIONARY OF MUSICAL TERMS. (Complete $3 00.) A handsome and useful work.

RICHTER'S COUNTERPOINT. ($2 00.) RICHTER'S FUGUE. ($2 00.) Two standard works on Composition.

THE WELCOME CHORUS. ($0 60.) For High Schools and SONG BELLS, (50 cts.) For Common Schools; should be in the hands of every teacher in need of new books.

JOHNSON'S NEW METHOD FOR HARMONY. ($1 00.) By A. N. Johnson. Is the excellent for ease, simplicity, and thoroughness.

TEMPERANCE LIGHT, (25 cts.) TEMPERANCE JEWELS, (30 cts.), and HULL'S TEMPERANCE GLEE BOOK, (30 cts.) are our three best Temperance Books. TRY THEM!

Any book mailed post free for above prices.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston,
C. H. DITSON & CO.,
No. 843 Broadway, New York.

ELGIN WATCHES.
All styles, Gold, Silver and Nickel, $6 to $150. Chains, etc., sent C. O. D. to be examined. Write for Catalogue to STANDARD AMERICAN WATCH CO., PITTSBURGH, PA.

GREAT WESTERN GUN WORKS, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Send stamp for Catalogue.
Rifles, Shot Guns, Revolvers, sent c. o. d. for examination.

Agricultural.

NOTES FOR BEE-KEEPERS.

GRAPES FOR BEES.—For many years there have been annual discussions in the papers in regard to bees and grapes, some affirming and others denying that bees destroy grapes. But whether or not bees first puncture the grapes, there is no denying that they are very fond of them; and the question arises whether it would not pay to plant out vines especially to grow fruit for bee food. We do not think bees generally puncture fruit, but the bruised ones are visited by them eagerly. Late in the fall when flowers are almost over the grape would furnish plenty of food for bees; and it would even pay to gather the fruit and place where the busy workers could get it easily. It is estimated that every hive yields twenty-two pounds of honey and is sold at twenty-five cents per pound. At this rate it pays to look to the welfare of the bees.

ROBBING HIVES.—In the raising of bees the trouble of having a hive attacked by robber bees is sometimes met with. These attacks may be known by there being a profusion of bees flying about in front and near the entrance, going and coming, alighting and leaving, running about excitedly in great numbers and fighting and falling to the ground. Inside, too, it is all excitement. When robbing is discovered, the hive should be ventilated and the entrance so closed that a bee could not enter or go out. Open it just before dark, so one bee may pass, and close again before sunrise. When the excitement is so far over that robbers do not return, open the entrance for one to pass at a time, or, what is far better, at once remove the hive attacked, to a distance, perhaps away from the apiary; sometimes when the colony is quite strong, you need only close the entrance passage, so that not more than one bee can pass at a time, and they will protect themselves. This is the advice given by the Bee-Keeper's Magazine.

QUEEN BEES.—The bee is said to be a resident of every climate of the globe, and does not materially change its ways in any place. It was once said that in lands which produced flowers the whole year round, bees were indolent in storing honey, but this has since been discovered. The way queen bees are furnished is described as follows: Bees rear queens from eggs or larvæ as most convenient, when they have brood in all stages. They select the oldest larvæ that can be changed to a queen, and make several queen cells. After these are started, they commence working over cells having young larvæ or eggs, and this commences the development of more queens. When bees take the oldest larvæ that can be changed into a queen, the first queen hatches the tenth or eleventh day. When queen cells are made over eggs they hatch in about sixteen days. The time of hatching varies from ten to seventeen days, depending somewhat upon the temperature. A young queen will fly out several times if the weather is favorable; if she fails to become fertile in ten days, she is less inclined to fly out. She generally comes out, when from three to six days old, between one and three o'clock in the afternoon.

WINTERING BEES.—The American Agriculturist gives the following advice on the wintering of bees: "The general honey yield is now over in most localities, and the surplus honey that still remains in the hive should be removed at once. The practice of leaving boxes on the hives after the honey season is over, should be avoided. Remove the boxes and place them away in a clean place where they will be ready for use the following season. Some of the boxes will be partly filled with honey, these, if they are single comb ones, should have the honey removed by an extractor and the empty comb will serve as a guide the next season. The combs in the brood-nest need watching, and if the moth worm is found they should be smoked with brimstone. The preparations for successful wintering are to be made now. It is very desirable that each colony should be supplied with a large number of young bees as it goes into winter quarters. In order to obtain this end a prolific queen should be in every hive. Young queens usually deposit more eggs and for a longer time than old ones, and on this account are much to be preferred.—Tribune and Farmer.

TOBACCO PLANTS.—A practical tobacco-grower of long experience writes that the foundation for a good crop of tobacco is a proper soil, well prepared, and an abundant supply of strong, healthy plants. The former is absolutely necessary; than the latter nothing is more essential to success. A tobacco grower who fails to secure an early, abundant supply of good plants will find it very difficult to repair the loss, if not impossible. Some growers depend on their neighbors for plants. This is a poor way, as one's neighbors are unwilling to share with him until their own wants are supplied, after which the best opportunities for setting are often past, and the remaining plants in the bed are small and weak. Young tobacco farmers, or those who are not accustomed to growing plants for themselves, often fail through lack of vigilance. They need to be reminded that during nearly half the time from the sowing of the seed to the harvesting, the plants remain in the seed-bed, and during that time, being very small and tender, they require much more attention than during the last half of their growing life. The grower who, early in the season, finds himself with an abundant supply of strong healthy plants large enough for setting, may consider one great step taken towards a successful crop of tobacco.

"During the first two weeks after sowing the seed, the plant bed requires ably attention. The soil must be kept constantly moist on the surface or the newly germinated seed, lying at or near the surface of the ground, will be destroyed. An hour of hot sun, when the surface of the seed-bed is dry, will sometimes prove fatal to the young and tender plants. When glass or other covering is used, as must be the case if early plants are desired, the bed will require more watchfulness as there is more danger of damage from sun-burning on hot days. This part of tobacco culture should have the personal attention of the planter. Hired and insufficient help should not be trusted without the supervision of the grower, as a little negligence will often occasion much loss. To avoid cooling the soil in the seed-bed, tepid water should be used for sprinkling, and light frequent waterings are preferable to heavy sprinklings when applied but once or twice a day. If early plants are desired, they may be further forced after they have started their second pair of leaves, by stimulating their growth with liquid manure. This is best made and applied by placing in the barrel containing water for sprinkling the bed, a sack of hen manure or guano. Weeding should begin as soon as the weeds become large enough to pull. This is a laborious task, especially with new beds or those which have not received proper attention the previous season. When glass is used, a portion of the sash should be raised on warm days or when the sun shines hot, to give ventilation and prevent the plants from being scorched, and they should be entirely removed a few days before the plants are fit to set, to toughen them previous to setting them in the field. On cool nights, or when there is danger of frost, the bed should be protected by a covering of old carpet or boards.

Farmers who propose growing a considerable amount of tobacco will find economy in providing some conveniences for taking care of the plants. As much water is required, a pump in the vicinity of the bed will save much labor. Some apparatus for heating water conveniently and quickly is also very desirable. An agricultural steamer or a furnace kettle is often used for this, and answers the purpose very well.

Our experience of last year, with a small patch near Mobile convinces us that the Gulf coast country may be made to produce as fine tobacco as is grown in Cuba, and we are inclined to the opinion that it can be made a very profitable crop. On our poor pine lands high fertilizing will be necessary of course, consequently we will be forced to look for our profits to the superiority of our product over that grown in portions of the country where the land is rich enough to bring the crop without manures. We shall try the experiment on a much larger scale this year.—Mobile Register.

RAISING CALVES.—James Fisher, Jr., of Harrison Co., O., gives his way of "making six months' calves equal to yearlings:" In the first place, after a calf is a day old, I take it from the cow, and I have no trouble in learning it to drink milk. I feed for one week on new milk, and then change to sweet skimmed milk, the milk having stood twenty-four hours. I feed sweet milk the first three months, and then commence adding a little mush and bran. If calves are kept growing all the time for six months, you have no idea how large they will be. As a general thing calves are turned out on grass after two or three months' care. Then they become thin and "peaked," and when winter comes they are but very little bigger than when you quit feeding them. It is but very little more trouble to keep feeding a calf six months; then look how large it will be. If any kind of the young stock gets stunted, it takes a great amount of extra feed to bring it up to where it ought to be at six months or a year old. Now let every farmer's wife or farmer's daughter try and see what she can make out of her calves. It is as easy to have steers ready for market at two years old, by giving to them the proper attention, as it is to let them run and be half kept and not marketed until three or four years old. What stock you keep make it your aim to keep them in the best manner. Keep no more than you can keep growing all the time. There is never any trouble in fat stock always finding a buyer. Make it a rule to feed high and plenty. It should be your constant aim to see how soon you can bring your cattle into market. And, in carrying out this plan, always give your calves a good start, and keep them growing right along. Mush and milk is a first-rate feed for calves after they are three months old.

CULTURE OF ONIONS.—"After an experience of many years," says a writer in the American Cultivator, "I still follow the practice of plowing ground for onions in the fall or early winter, and of spreading manure from the cart upon the frozen surface, allowing its exposure to the ameliorating influence of winter's frosts and the drenching rains of spring. I prefer the yellow Danvers variety, sowing five pounds of seed to the acre as early in the season as the ground can be made sufficiently fine. Fineness of soil is an essential in successful culture. I have found the footprints of the grower judiciously placed along the row after sowing the seed to give large increase in yield. Clean culture is an important factor. The crop should be harvested early, and housed during dry weather. Have obtained good crops on ground dressed with ten loads of farmyard manure to the acre combined with the use of half a formula of Stockbridge fertilizer. My experience indicates that this course is preferable to the use of either manure or fertilizer alone."

RAISING DUCKS.—Ducks are easily hatched, and if properly managed they are easily raised—much more so than chickens or turkeys. Probably the worst thing for ducklings is the first thing they usually receive, and that is unlimited range and water to swim in. The little things are in a measure, nude, and should be kept in pens with dry soil floors or stone pavement that can be washed down daily. No kind of poultry will succeed on bare boards. All the water they need is best furnished by burying an old pot in the ground, and laying a round piece of board on top of the water with room for the ducks to stick their heads in, and fish out the corn that is put on the water. This amuses them and does no harm, while, if allowed to go off to ponds or streams, they are very liable to fall a prey to vermin in some shape, or to get their bodies wet and chilled from remaining too long in the water. Their pens must be kept clean if they are expected to thrive.

WATER THE SHEEP IN WINTER.—During a long, and, on the whole, successful experiment on a farm in Minnesota, in regard to the raising of sheep, we found that they required water in winter to almost the same extent that they did in summer. The first season, with a flock of about one hundred and fifty head, we were in the early part of winter negligent in providing water for their use, because we had been assured that sheep would eat snow, and would not drink water, but we soon discovered the mistake, and found that water was as necessary as hay and other food for them. Probably if sheep were fed a bountiful supply of turnips or raw potatoes they could be comfortably wintered without water more than once a day, but we can assure the breeders of sheep, that in this cold, dry climate, water is indispensable for them, more particularly when fed on dry food.

Those who have never tried hauling stone in winter would be surprised to see with how much ease a team can haul a loaded stone-boat, which in the absence of snow, would test their strength to the utmost. It is a good time, while snow is upon the ground, to haul stones for building or other purposes, as they can be heavily loaded upon a sled or stone-boat, and as easily unloaded.

Earth is a good absorbent for use in the barn or stable. Where a bank of earth is accessible in winter, to use behind the farm stock for saving the liquid manure, the value of the farm manures may be greatly increased, if not doubled.

Household.

TO BAKE PORK AND BEANS.—Three hours before dinner-time put on a nice piece of salt pork to boil, and about the same time put the beans to cook in another kettle, with much more water than enough to cover them; stand on the back of the stove at first, so that they will swell nicely before boiling. When they have boiled about twenty minutes drain off the water and put on more, which should be boiling at the time. When they are very tender, and begin to break, dip enough salt water from the pot to season them. If the pork is not yet tender, set the beans on the back part of the stove, for they will burn very easily after they begin to break. When the pork is boiled enough—it will generally be tender in about two hours—take the beans out into a dripping pan and place the pork in the centre; cut through the rind where it is to be sliced, and sprinkle black pepper over the whole. The beans must be quite juicy when put into the oven or they will be very dry when baked. A spoonful or two of molasses in half a cup of water, spread over before baking, make them brown nicely and also give them a good flavor. We usually boil the potatoes for dinner in the water the pork was boiled in, taking care to reduce it if too salt.

TO CORN BEEF.—Choose either a solid cut from the round, with a little fat, or a brisket piece; the latter should have the bones removed and be rolled and tied securely; the meat will not be harmed by washing it in clean, cold water. Let twenty minutes be allowed for every pound of meat; put it over the fire in cold water, let it gradually reach the boiling point, and boil it slowly. The scum which rises to the surface of the pot liquor should be skimmed off, and the meat simmered slowly. If the water is changed as soon as it boils vegetables may be cooked with the meat, time being allowed according to the season of the year. In the early fall, when they are freshly gathered and are full of their natural juices, they will cook in half the time that they require in the late winter and spring, when much of their moisture has been lost by evaporation. If the meat is to be used cold, it will be juicy if allowed to cool in the pot liquor. If the brisket is pressed between two boards or platters, under a heavy weight, until cool it will afford nice, compact slices when cut, and is good for luncheon or supper.

CHICKEN AND ONIONS.—Prepare a chicken as for boiling; fill up the body with small onions which have been parboiled in milk, with a little salt. Make a stock to boil the chicken in, of the giblets, a little bacon, four large onions, and pepper and salt to taste; let the chicken simmer in this stock for three-quarters of an hour, or until perfectly tender. Make a white sauce by boiling four onions in a quart of milk until reduced to a pint; mixed two tablespoonfuls of flour, in two or three of cold milk stir in the thickening, taking care to keep it perfectly smooth. Now stew over a slow fire until the sauce becomes as thick as good cream, then break up two ounces of fresh butter, and put it into the sauce, with a grain of Cayenne pepper, and salt to taste; stir the sauce over the fire until the butter is well mixed, but take care it does not boil. Pour the sauce over the chicken and serve.

HASTY PUDDING.—Put a pint of milk into a perfectly clean quart stew-pan, with five or six bay leaves; have ready on the hob a basin of flour; as soon as the milk boils remove the bay leaves, take some flour in the left hand, and let it fall lightly into the milk which must be kept boiling fast the whole time, stir without ceasing, adding flour until it is about the consistency of porridge, then let it boil a few minutes longer, still keeping it stirred. Turn it out on a hot dish, stick pieces of butter all over it, sprinkle moist sugar and grate some nutmeg, when the butter and sugar will melt and mingle, and, running all over and round it, form a delicious sauce. Do not be too sparing of butter and sugar, and the cook not be discouraged if she does not succeed in her first attempt, as experience alone can teach her how to sprinkle the flour in properly. If it is not done very lightly, lumps of flour will be the result.

GERMAN RECIPE.—Scrape the carrots, wash them, and cut them up in small pieces, one inch long and a quarter inch thick. Put a small tablespoonful of butter in the saucepan, let it get quite hot, then drop the carrots in, and let them stew in the butter for about half an hour, stirring them once in a while. Then put some water in the pan, little by little, and let them boil till they are quite soft. In summer, when they are fresh, two hours will be enough, but in winter boil longer. The softer they cook, the better. Before serving on the table, season and mix one teaspoonful of flour with a little milk or water; put this in the carrots, and let them boil slowly ten minutes longer. The carrots ought to be sweet. If they are not sweet enough of themselves, add one teaspoonful of white sugar.

HOW TO SAVE COAL IN OPEN GRATES.—The most practical suggestion yet made toward economizing the use of coals seems to be in the use of solid bottoms in ordinary fire-grates. It has been asserted, and indeed proved, that in any fire-grate, not exceedingly small, a plate of iron placed upon the bars will nearly halve the consumption of coal, and also reduce the smoke, and keep up a cheerful, free-burning fire. Quite sufficient air will enter through the front bars, and all poking should be avoided, and the fire will continue until all the coal is consumed, which will be done without leaving much ash or dust. A sheet of iron to fit easily into the grate will cost but a quarter of a dollar, and the coal bin will not need to be replenished so frequently.

An inexpensive but appetizing pickle is made as follows: Slice one peck of green tomatoes and nine large onions; scatter one teacupful of salt over them; cover with water and let them stand all night; in the morning drain and boil in weak vinegar. Then take four quarts of vinegar of good strength, two pounds of brown sugar, two ounces of white mustard-seed, two tablespoonfuls each of ground allspice, cloves, cinnamon, and ginger, half a teaspoonful of red pepper. Boil all together for half an hour. The tomatoes, if a little too near ripe, will not need boiling quite so long.

BAKED BEETS.—Wash, but be careful not to cut them; put them into a very slack oven for about eight hours. When cold, peel them and dress them as follows: Chop half an onion finely, put it into a saucepan with a piece of butter; when it begins to take color, add the beetroot, cut up into large dice, pepper and salt to taste, and add two or three tablespoonfuls of tarragon vinegar. When quite hot serve.

Scientific.

—Dr. Charles Sedgwick Minot, one of the best thinkers among the rising generation of naturalists, has recently issued a paper on cell growth in the "Proceedings of Boston Society of Natural History," that deserves consideration for the profundity of its speculations and general soundness of its deductions. Some of the suggestions intended as facts to sustain the reasonings, however, require further investigation. For instance, it is stated: "In a rough way, we know that the larger the animal the longer it lives." The "rough way" could have scarcely gone beyond the reflection that the elephant—the very large animal—does live a very long time; but the horse and the cow are larger than man, but his age is three times theirs. The dog and the cat are not near the size of the horse and the cow, yet their lives are nearly as long. The duck is, on the whole, a larger bird than the common fowl; but its life does not average quite as long. On the other hand, some of the smaller animals live to wonderful ages. The farmer believes that he has seen "that same gray old rat for years and years," and the toad is thought to never "lie down and die." However, it may be, it is certain that the common wood-tortoise will live for near half a century. It is a common practice with country people to cut the initials and date on their shells; and, allowing that one may sometimes be the victims of practical jokers, there is enough evidence as to their certain great age. In Martindale's "History of Byherry" there is a case given of one who found his own mark on a tortoise forty years afterward. If we compare species with species, as well as classes with classes, there seems nothing to favor Dr. Minot's suggestion. The bantam fowl may not be a good species, though, on the grounds developed in Darwin's "Origin of Species," it might well be treated as if it were; but, even as a marked variety, it will live as long as the Cochin China or any of the larger breeds of fowls. So far as we know, the smaller monkeys live as long as the larger ones; and when we come to individuals of the same race, the small man lives as long as the larger ones. However, we have few exact facts as to the relative ages of the various classes of animals, and some naturalists who would do a little more than place the matter in a rough way before us would do good service to science.—N. Y. Independent.

—The smoke of London has become such a nuisance, that inventors and practical men of science are at last, taking hold of the matter in earnest. Dr. C. W. Siemens, the distinguished electrician and the inventor in 1862 of the so-called "regenerative gas-furnace," which has worked such a change in the manufacturing use of fuel, has contrived a simple grate, which accomplishes the purpose by using jets of gas, playing upon a mass of coke in the grate. He considers the use of raw coal essentially "barbarous," and shows that a far more economical and perfectly smokeless fire is obtained by first decomposing the bituminous coal into gas and coke, and then burning the products, under properly regulated conditions. But gas in London costs only eighty-seven cents a thousand feet, so that his figures will hardly apply in this country. Scott Moncrieff proposes a slightly different plan—that the gas companies should only take from the coal, they use about one-third of the gas they now get from it. The coke left would then be, he asserts, quite as valuable a fuel as the raw coal itself, and would give a smokeless fire. But the gas companies would have to handle three times as much coal as now.—N. Y. Independent.

—M. Gustave Engel has subjected some diatomaceous sands to the action of dye-stuffs, and has found that they behave in the same way—that is, absorb and hold the coloring matter—as do woolen and cotton fibers when exposed to the same substances. These sands are chemically inert, being composed of silex, and can not only by virtue of the capillary attraction of the minute tubes of the microscopic shells, of which they are made up. From this, M. Engel concludes that the physical structure of the matter to be dyed has more to do with its capacity to take the color than its chemical composition.

—Professor Humphrey, of the British Medical Association, claims that in no other branch of knowledge are true science and sound practice, so perfectly conjoined as in medicine, clearer knowledge of physiology and pathology, of heredity, of the effects of social laws and climatic variations, would have a vast influence on the whole framework of civilization; and he was led to conclude with Des Cartes, that all great movements in the world of thought, of philosophy, of morals, and of government, were to come out of medicine.

—The London, Eng., Times has had constructed for use in its office, a glycerine barometer. The column of glycerine is twenty-seven feet in height. A variation in atmospheric pressure which would change the reading in a mercurial barometer by one-tenth of an inch, would make a change in the glycerine column of more than an inch, hence the advantages in the new instrument, as it will enable observers to note slight variations which otherwise might be overlooked.

—Yale College has acquired, through the explorations of Professor Marsh in the Rocky Mountain region, the most extensive collection of fossil vertebrate remains in the world. It embraces fragments of six hundred pterodactyles, or flying reptiles, and of more than one hundred Mesozoic (the middle age of geological formations) birds.

At Mahisauris, in France, a daily analysis of the air is carried on by M. Davy. During a period of high mortality in the republic, the number of bacteria in the atmosphere was found to be twice the average for that portion of the globe, thus indicating a connection between disease and the so-called "disease germs."

A gigantic octopus was recently stranded on the coast of Ireland. The eight arms were from twelve to fifteen feet in length, as thick as a man's upper arm, and furnished on the inner side with two rows of suckers as large as an English shilling. The animal's length was over twenty feet.

—Discoveries in terrestrial magnetism fully confirm the connection between auroras, magnetism, and solar disturbances, which was first suggested by Arago, in 1819, and which has been demonstrated by the investigations of the present decade.

—The art of obtaining sugar from cane was discovered by a Venetian in 1503, and for fifty years a sugar loaf weighing seven pounds was considered a wonderful curiosity.

—Australia has been so imperfectly explored that last month a large river was discovered. Along its shores are found forests of cedar and ebony.

EDUCATIONAL.

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE,

ABINGDON, VA.

In point of grounds, buildings, apparatus and faculty, this is one of the most thoroughly equipped schools in the South. It is located in one of the finest sections of Virginia, 2,000 feet above the sea.

Bishop McTyeire, Dr. Garland, Dr. Summers and Dr. A. W. Wilson give it their cordial endorsement.

Music is a specialty. The director of this department, Prof. C. Kuerlinger, is a noted teacher and composer, and his assistants are thoroughly cultivated musical artists.

A full course of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Natural Science, and Mental and Moral Philosophy is taught with great care.

The fare is good, and every care is taken of the health of the young ladies.

Parents living in the South would do well to send their daughters here to spend the summer.

$200 paid in advance will cover board, tuition, fuel, washing and lights for forty weeks. Music is $50 additional.

Spring session begins February 4, 1881. A discount of twenty per cent. to Methodist preachers, and Publishing House hands taken from them at par.

Send for catalogue to

REV. E. E. HOSS, President.

HAMBURG (ARK.) HIGH SCHOOL,

Thirty Miles North of Bastrop, La.

This institution, for both sexes, now in its fourth year, has 64 months yet remaining. Its facilities for educating are peculiar, and its charges are moderate. All modern improvements introduced. Faculty full and experienced. The principal boards his teachers and pupils, regarding the latter as his own children.

One hundred and twenty-five dollars will cover all school expenses, except Music.

City inquirers are referred to Judge R. B. Todd, J. M. Bonner and J. M. Lewis, Esqs.; to Rev. Dr. C. W. Carter and Bishop Keener.

R. C. B. CONNERLY, Principal.

January 6, 1881

READYVILLA SEMINARY,

BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA.

A home school for girls. Thorough training in all departments. Full corps of efficient Teachers. Expenses moderate. Numbers limited.

For particulars address

MRS. MARY W. REED, Principal.

Memphis Conference Female Institute,

JACKSON, TENNESSEE.

REV. A. W. JONES, A. M., D. D., President.

This well known College of the South and West begins its Fall session the First Monday in September. Opening Concert and Address Tuesday, September 7, 1880. For thirty-six years there has been an average of more than twelve graduates annually.

The Faculty is full and efficient. The determination is to stand among the foremost in the progress of Science, Language and Art.

For further information apply to the President.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE,

AT BATON ROUGE, LA.

The next session of this school will begin September 29, 1880.

This is a strictly Boarding School for boys. The healthfulness of the location is unsurpassed. Instruction thorough in all that is necessary to prepare the student for any grade in college or any pursuit in life. Discipline parental. The constant personal care of the principals given to the health, morals and manners of the pupils.

For circulars, with necessary information, apply to

W. H. N. MAGRUDER, Baton Rouge, La.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,

JACKSON, LOUISIANA.

Opens September 6, 1880. The last session was the most prosperous one since the war. The whole cost of board and tuition need not exceed $141 all the preparatory department to, nor $164 in college classes for the scholastic year. Send for a Catalogue.

C. G. ANDREWS, President.

East Mississippi Female College,

MERIDIAN, MISSISSIPPI.

REV. J. W. ADKISSON, A. M., PRESIDENT.

A chartered and prosperous Southern school for girls and young ladies. Few schools have grown more steadily and rapidly in public confidence and patronage. Increased in numbers during the past seven years as the following figures for 7 years show, 9.6, 9.7, 14.3. Commanded in patronage the last year from Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee and Alabama. Its good history, increasing facilities, accessibility and methods of close and thorough instruction assure its friends of a long and prosperous future for the institution. Send for catalogue.

HIWASSEE COLEGE,

EAST TENNESSEE.

Founded 1849, and located where

Pure waters thiw,
Sleek cattle liw,
Cool breezes blow,
Ripe apples grow.

Excellent and tried teachers. Terms very favorable. The Female Department is at SWEETWATER, on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad. The Male Department, at HIWASSEE COLLEGE POSTOFFICE, seven miles out in the country. A neat monthly paper, the "Hiwassee College Reporter," at fifty cents a year. Address

J. H. BRUNNER, President.

JEFFERSON COLLEGE,

HIGH SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND YOUNG MEN.

Six miles from Natchez, Miss. Session begins September 16. Full corps of instructors. Course of study thorough and extensive. Nearly fifty boarders from abroad. Pupils from a distance board with the principal. Entire expense for ten months, $145. For catalogues address the principal,

J. S. RAYMOND, Washington, Adams county, Miss.

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE,

SUMMERFIELD, ALA.,

Will begin its forty-first session October 4, 1880. Great attention paid to the regular course. Teachers in the Music and Art departments selected with reference to special fitness. Charges moderate.

For further information address

D. M. MOSS, A. M., President.

HOMER MALE COLLEGE

THE TWENTY FIRST SESSION

will begin the

FIRST OF SEPTEMBER 1880.

Address R. A. SMITH, President.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Crescent Insurance Co.,

67 & 69 Camp Street,

NEW ORLEANS

ORGANIZED 1869. REORGANIZED 1880

Cash Capital $400,000.

SOLICITS

FIRE, RIVER AND MARINE RISKS.

W. R. LYMAN..... President.
S. B. NEWMAN..... Vice President.
CHAS. E. RICE..... Secretary.

SPORTSMEN'S DEPOT,

RICHARD RHODES,

55 ST. CHARLES STREET 55

NEW ORLEANS.

Articles for Fishermen of all Kinds.

Rods, Nets, Hooks, Lines, and every desirable article for the Angler, wholesale and retail. Guns imported to order. J. R. Cooper's Breech and Muzzle Loading Guns always on hand. All kinds of improved artificial Baits. Repairing of Guns carefully done by experienced workmen, and Fishing Rods made to order. Address Postoffice Box 988.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS.

SIZES AND PRICES.

Diam. of Bell.	Weight with yoke & frame	Cost of Bell & Hanging.
No. 6,	250 lbs	$ 25 00
No. 6½,	270 lbs	30 00
No. 7,	350 lbs	50 00
No. 8,	510 lbs	75 00
No. 9,	780 lbs	130 00

RUMSEY & CO., Seneca Falls, N. Y., U. S. A.

My New Illustrated Price List describing over 100 Gold and Silver Waltham Watches sent for a 3c stamp. It tells how I send watches to all parts of U. S. to be examined before paying any money. Undoubted reference. N. H. White, Jeweler, Newark, N. J.

EDUCATIONAL.

TEACHERS,

SCHOLARS

AND

DEALERS

Are hereby advised that the

Largest Stock and Most

Complete Assortment of

SCHOOL BOOKS

in the South-west is now in stock and ready to fill all orders large or small at Publishers' prices at

112 CAMP STREET,

NEW ORLEANS.

All the books used in this section supplied at short notice, and prices guaranteed as low as they can be had elsewhere. Catalogues mailed on application. Also a general line of

School Supplies,

SLATED PAPER,
SLATED CLOTH,
LIQUID SLATING,
BLACKBOARDS,
BLACKBOARD RUBBERS,
CHALK CRAYONS,
MATHEMATICAL INSTRUMENTS,
NUMERICAL FRAMES,
SCHOOL SATCHELS,
BOOK STRAPS,
WRITING PAPER,
DRAWING PAPER,
BLOTTING PAPER,
WRITING BOOKS,
COMPOSITION BOOKS,
SLATES AND PENCILS,
INK, INK STANDS, PENS,
PENHOLDERS, CALL BELLS,

Kindergarten Material,

ETC., ETC.

Send for anything you want or address for prices.

LATHROP & WILKINS, New Orleans.

In addition to the above we keep a complete list of all the standard religious publications, for pastors, members and Sunday-schools. Prices quoted on application.

South-western Agency for

Reuders' and Writers' Economy Co.

LATHROP & WILKINS, New Orleans

W. C. SHEPARD & Co.,

AMERICAN CHINA HOUSE,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans

We append a few prices:

The American China Dinner, Breakfast and Tea Set, comprising 160 Pieces, for $13.

A Real French China Dinner Set, 130 Pieces, for $17.

English Stone China Dinner Set, 130 Pieces, for $10.

English Stone China Chamber Set, comprising 10 Pieces, for $2 50.

Decorated Chamber Sets, with different Colored Bands, 10 Pieces, for $3 50.

Glass Goblets, from 60 cents to $1 per dozen.

Particular attention given to Novelties and Specialties pertaining to the House-Furnishing Department. Orders promptly attended to. We have just received a full and complete stock of holiday goods. Call and examine before purchasing.

W. C. SHEPARD & CO.

Christian Advocate.

Fools' Errands.

TWO SIDES OF THE QUESTION - A SOUTHERN VIEW BY SOME OF THEM.

Springfield (Mass.) Republican Letter.

Sectionalism is an absurdity, as it is a crime. It is not at all remarkable that among the rustics of Iowa and Minnesota, remote from the South, with no special tie to it, the bloody shirt should float in grand triumph, but it is somewhat puzzling to us that those who spin our cotton, make our shoes and hats, and prepare the paper upon which we write, who travel with so much ease through our orange groves in winter, and among whom we travel in the summer, should be so anxious to draw and keep distinct the lines of separation. When it is remembered that the sceptre is departing from your Judah, and that the West, the great ally of New England now, must become her great antagonist in time to come, it seems a sad folly for her to turn her face against that section where her natural allies are found. The West will make wagons and window-sash for the present, but the South is learning to make everything. Is it well to build up and at the same time embitter so threatening a rival? The paper on which I write, once bought at Fall River, is now made in North Carolina. The shoes I wear were made in Baltimore. The cassimere of my pants is made in Mississippi, and my underclothing woven in Georgia mills. As it is impossible to break down the South, is it well to antagonize her? The solid South is no figment. There never was concocted a more ingenious and skilful ploy to make her so than that which aimed to keep power in the North. In scarcely a decade of years from reconstruction the South only needs the help of a few voters in New York to say who shall preside over this government. You can never divide the South by assailing her. The more the bloody shirt flies the closer she will cling together; and yet she can be divided. When New England ceases to be solid, when the South is no longer threatened by the Republican party, when the policy of the Springfield Republican, instead of the policy of the New York Times, is adopted, then we may look for division in the South. But this policy never will be adopted as long as the South is so generally misunderstood. The errors about the South are the more dangerous in that they are nearly all of them truths put in a false light. I have only seen a review of Judge Tourgee's work, "A Fool's Errand," and rarely speak of that, but I can tell him of sundry fools who have come on errands to the South to go back sadly angered by an utter failure to do what they wished.

Here was the bravest farmer. He never planted a bale of cotton in his life, never managed a negro, never knew anything of a mule, but having a few thousand dollars, he concluded to come to Georgia, to show these ignorant Southern people how to farm. He was going to get rich. He went to Baker or Lee county. He found Col. Thompson a plain, apparently untravelled old planter, very ready to rent. The Colonel began to suggest, but he soon found Hezekiah knew more than he did. So Hezekiah ordered out his big ploughs, got his bell and belfry, and made his labor rules; called the negroes "my gentle friends," told them he wanted their labor and they wanted his protection, bought some clover seed and timothy, sowed in the sand and began his work, old Col. T., with a merry twinkle in his eye, put Hezekiah's rent money in his big pocket and stood off to see. Well, Hezekiah found a New England laborer and Sambo rather different, and to manage a little required more art than to manage a New England township. The grass got some of his cotton. The caterpillars got the rest. The Colonel got his rent. The darkeys got the money he brought and he went back to New England disgusted, and wrote the "Fool's Errand."

Then there was the philanthropic fool. He was as sincere a fellow as ever read Emerson or came from Andover across between Harvard and Williams, too narrow for one and too broad for the other. He wanted to regenerate the negro race. True, some of us and some of our grandfathers had been trying to do that work, but Philanthropos, with deep or Cook in one pocket, and Dr. Leonard Bacon in the other, was going to show how the work was to be done in a way. He and his sister and his cousin bought new spectacles, put ten pounds of good tea in the trunk, filled it up with Atlantic Monthlies and prepared themselves for martyrdom. Fully persuaded the fearful curse of slavery had grimed beyond hope the white race, and that a Democrat and an infidel or a Methodist were the same thing, they came South. He did not seek out or consult with any Southern freedmen representative hymen. He sought out the leading colored man of the place, stayed at his house, and soon wrote home about the ostracism of missionaries to the negroes. Stated unkindly, the fact is sadly derogatory to Southern civilization, and far more to Southern religion. The fact would probably be presented by Philanthropos to a Massachusetts audience thus: "Feeling my heart bow with sympathy for an oppressed race, I went South after the war to see if I could do something to civilize and Christianize it. I opened a School in Atlanta. I found the poor freedman eager for knowledge and patriotly desirous to rise in the scale of life. I went to do him good, I went to his cabin, I slept in his bed, I ate of his scanty store, and assured him that I believed him to be a man and a brother. I did not try to curry favor with his oppressors, I tried to instil into his breast a hatred of tyranny, by often calling his attention to the wrongs of his past. I tried to eradicate from his breast any sense of inferiority and taught him to hold his own everywhere. In one word I tried to make him feel that he was a man. Could I do less than denounce the awful wickedness of the rebellion or less than to try and inspire in him gratitude for that party which had saved the Union, and given him freedom? For those things and only this I was ostracised. I could see the sneer on the lips of the brainless Southern blood, as I walked proudly by, with one of my colored female pupils on my arm, and with my teachers and scholars following in procession as we went to the Congregational Church to hear a young mulatto (the son, by the way, of a Democratic Congressman) deliver a lecture on the emancipation proclamation, only fully carried out by the use of the army to secure a free ballot." That's his side:

"The other side, or the Southern man's story, may be told as follows: The war was over. We were suffering from every quarter. Our dead children, over whom we wept, were more blessed than we. We needed sympathy and help. The negroes, who had been our slaves, were now our masters. They were sergeants and corporals of the army. They were in our halls of legislation. They were voting away our money with the design of making our taxes so heavy as to force to sale all we had. The Northern missionary came. He ignores us. He sought for the negro alone. He told him of his wrongs in the past. He told him he was now the peer and the superior of the Southern white. He taught him to sing, "We will hang Jeff. Davis on a sour apple tree." The ladies of the mission sought their associates among our washerwomen and cooks. The young ladies walked with our barbers and carriage-drivers. They took every opportunity to sneer at us and ridicule. As they seemed to have no use for us we let them alone. The men were active politicians, identified with the party which seemed bent on our ruin. True, there were exceptions. There were those who showed by their lives that they had come to do the negro good and us too. As soon as we found such out we gave them due respect. We did not object to their work. If they had consulted the preachers and philanthropists, for we have them, and sought their co-operation, they would have gladly joined with them, but they did not. We did not like them or their methods, and we let them alone."

These are the two stories. Which is correct? Both. There were many who came in the spirit of the missionary who is here represented, and there were many who presented exactly the fortunes of those of whom the representative Southerner has spoken.

American Wood Engraving.

The manifest advance in engraving on wood exhibited by the illustrations in the chief monthly magazines, especially in Harper's and Scribner's, looks very much like a revival of American art tending toward productions that may rival the best creations of the artists of past periods. It is not to be despised or disparaged because the artists are drawing specially for the engravers, or because artist and engraver are sometimes one and the same person. The masterpieces of centuries ago, which have been the admiration both of the most cultivated and competent judges of technical points and of the great multitude who have an instinctive appreciation of the beautiful, were many of them the work of men who were both artists and engravers. Durer and Rembrandt are well known as engravers. Vandyke and Titian and Guido, made etchings. Not a few of Claude's engravings sell readily for hundreds of dollars for a single copy. Leonardo da Vinci, famous both as a master and teacher of art, it is claimed, invented engraving on wood and copper. Raphael worked for some years with Raimondi, of Bologna, the most celebrated engraver of the time, and the two carried the art in some points to a degree of excellence never since surpassed. The great series completed by Raphael engraved a Madonna, which it could be proved now would command more than its weight in gold. While we have not met with satisfactory evidence that Turner worked with his hands upon the engravings of his pictures, it is beyond question that he had a through knowledge of how the work should be done, and that he was a severe critic of the craftsmen to whom the work was entrusted. At one time he was nearly dependent upon these engravings, and bestowed upon them an attention almost excessive. The relation between the ability to produce the master-pieces of art and a practical knowledge of engraving is plainly a most intimate one. No one familiar with the lives of the most illustrious artists can fail to be impressed with the fact.

The wood engravings which at the present time adorn and enrich the pages of the great monthlies, possess the characteristics which promise great achievements in the future, a future that may not be far away. They exhibit independence, originality, a courage not to be daunted by any difficulties, admirable fidelity to nature, exquisite grace, and special ability to infuse life into an illustration. Occasionally, indeed more frequently than we like to see, details are sacrificed to a degree that is not pleasant, and we now and then are disposed to growl that a sketch, however vigorous and suggestive and graceful, is not a picture, but only a part of one.

The advance to higher excellence in these engravings during the past two years is marked, and even that of the past six months. On Christmas evening an impulse from somewhere led us to compare the illustrations of Mr. Roe's Success with Small Fruits with those of Scribner's and Harper's magazines for January, 1881. The illustrations of Mr. Roe's book when they appeared were much admired, and justly, but a glance perceives the decided superiority of the engravings of the months of January. This is the evident progress of only a few months. A comparison of the ugly work of what may be called the new school with its present achievements shows a much more decided progress.

The artists we call the "masters" were encouraged and sustained by the patronage of princes, of wealthy bishops, and of religious houses possessing large incomes. The patrons to whom both the artists and the public are now indebted are the sagacious, intelligent, and liberal publishers of the great monthlies, and the prospect is, for that they will have the satisfaction of seeing that they have fostered and incited a revival of a genuine indigenous American art, tending to greatness. Many are watching with patriotic and sympathetic interest the present movement, to see whereto this thing will grow.—Christian Intelligencer.

THE INDIAN SUMMER OF LIFE. In the life of a good man there is an Indian Summer more beautiful than that of the seasons; richer, sunnier, and more sublime than the most glorious Indian Summer the world ever knew. It is the Indian Summer of the soul. When the glow of youth has departed, when the warmth of middle age is gone, and the buds and blossoms of spring are changing to the sere and yellow leaf; when the mind of the good man, still vigorous, relaxes its labors, and the memories of a well-spent life gush forth from their secret fountains, enriching, refreshing and fertilizing; then the trustful resignation of the christian sheds around a sweet and holy warmth, and the soul, assuming a heavenly luster, is no longer restricted to the narrow confines of business, but soars far beyond the winter of heavy age, and dwells peacefully and happily upon the bright spring and summer which await within the gates of Paradise evermore. Presbyterian Banner.

—The Japan coal mines are being rapidly developed. It is claimed that the per centage of coal to area is greater than in any other country.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time, and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body - for Torpid Liver - Headaches - Jaundice - Dizziness - Gravel - Fever, Ague - Malarial Fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for Females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb. As a blood purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

READ ITS RECORD.

"It saved my life."—E. B. Lakely, Selma, Ala.

"It is the remedy that will cure the many diseases peculiar to women."—Mothers Magazine.

"It has passed severe tests and won endorsements from some of the highest medical talent in the country."—New York World.

"No remedy heretofore discovered can be held for one moment in comparison with it."—Rev. C. A. Barlow, D.D., Washington, D. C.

This Remedy which has done such wonders, is put up in the LARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by druggists and all dealers at $1.25 per bottle. For Diabetes, enquire for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy.

H. H. WARNER & CO., Rochester, N. Y.

E. HEATH,

IMPORTER AND DEALER IN

Carpets, Floor Oil Cloths,

UPHOLSTERY GOODS, Wall Paper, Window Shades, Cornices, Lace and Nottingham Curtains, Mirrors, Mouldings, Chromos, Engravings, etc.

Frames made to order—a specialty.

No. 99 Camp street, New Orleans.

SPENCERIAN

SPENCERIAN COMMERCIAL

STEEL PENS

Of the Very Best European Make, and recommended for Flexibility, Durability, and Evenness of point.

REAL SWAN QUILL ACTION.

In 20 Numbers. A complete Sample Card, for trial, by mail on receipt of 20 Cents.

A sample card of 10 of the Leading Styles for trial, on receipt of 10 Cents.

IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR & CO.,

138 & 140 Grand St., New York.

All Farmers, Mothers, Business Men, Ladies and Invalids are hereby notified that is the best remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sleeplessness, Female Weakness, Debility, Kidney, Liver Complaints, and all disorders of the Stomach, Blood and Nerves.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC

If you are wasting away with Consumption, Loss of Appetite, Weakness, Fever, Ague, Chills, Malaria, Impure Blood, Pimples, Boils, Scrofula, Sores, Ulcers, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Erysipelas, Blotches on the face, Blood Poisoning, Scrofulous Humors, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Dropsy, Gravel, Diabetes, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Dizziness, Headache, Neuralgia, Female Complaints, Piles, Constipation, Dyspepsia, Indigestion

PRICES CURRENT.

REVISED AND CORRECTED WEEKLY.

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
New Orleans, Monday, Jan. 31, 1881.

Our readers should bear in mind that our quotations represent prices for round lots, and that in filling small orders higher prices must be paid.

SOUTHERN STAPLES.

	To-day.	Sat.
Cotton, ₱ lb.
Low ordinary	7¾	7¾
Ordinary	8⅝	8⅝
Good ordinary	9⅜	9⅜
Low middling	10⅛	10⅛
Middling	11⅝	11⅝
Good middling	12⅜	12⅜
Middling fair	13⅛	13⅛
Sales to-day	7,250 bales.
Receipts since our last	11,492 bales.
Receipts previously	974,937 bales
Sugar, ₱ lb.:
Fair	— —	6⅜
Fully fair	— —	6⅝
Prime	— —	6¾
Choice	— —	— —
Yellow clarified	7—	7⅛
White clarified	8	8⅜
Powdered	— —	— —
Crushed	— —	— —
Molasses, in bbls., ₱ gallon:
Common	28	30
Fair	33	35
Prime	38	38
Choice	45	47
Rice, Louisiana, ₱ lb.:
Common	4	4⅛
Fair	5⅛	5⅛
Prime	5⅞	6
Choice	6¼	6¾

GROCERIES.

Butter, ₱ lb.:
Western	10	31
New York	17	30
Coffee, ₱ lb.:
Rio, ordinary	11	11¼
Rio, fair	13	13⅜
Rio, prime	14	14⅝
Cheese, ₱ lb.:
Western factory	— —	— —
English	15½	16
Candle ₱ lb.:
Best Tallow	— —	12⅝
Corn Meal, ₱ bbl.:
Choice K. D.	— —	3 25
Flour, ₱ bbl.:
Superfine	3 50	3 75
XX	4 25	4 50
XXX	4 75	5 00
Choice XXX	— —	— —
Choice family	— —	— —
Fish:
Mackerel, No. 1, in bbls	— —	6 00
Half barrels	— —	4 50
Kits	— —	95
Mackerel, No. 2, in bbls	— —	6 75
Half bbls	— —	3 50
Kits	— —	85
Mackerel, No. 3, in bbls	5 50	6 75
Half bbls	3 00	3 75
Kits	75	— —
Goldfish, ₱ lb	5½	6
Herring, ₱ box	30	35
Oils, ₱ gallon:
Coal, in cases	25	30
Coal, in bbls	19	22
Linseed, raw	56	58
Linseed, boiled	59	61
Cotton seed	29	33½
Lard	70	78
Soap, ₱ box:
Magnolia	— —	1 95
Olive	— —	2 40
Palm	— —	— —
Castile	— —	2 40
Soda, ₱ lb.	— —	— —
Starch, ₱ lb.	3½	3½
Salt, ₱ sack:
Coarse	1 02½	1 05
Fine	1 40	1 45

GRAIN AND FEED.

Corn, in sacks, ₱ bushel:
Yellow	57	58
White	57	58
Mixed	57	58
Oats, ₱ bushel:
Western	46	47
Red rust-proof	— —	65
Bran, ₱ 100 lbs.:
Choice	— —	1 10
Hay, ₱ ton:
Prime	24 00	25 00
Choice	— —	26 00
Cow Peas, ₱ bushel:
Mixed	— —	— —
Clay	— —	1 25

PROVISIONS.

Bacon, ₱ lb.:
Breakfast	9	10
Shoulders	— —	5½
Sides, clear rib	— —	— —
Sides, clear	— —	8¾
Hams, sugar cured	9½	10½
Mess Pork, ₱ bbl.	14 50	15 00
Dry Salt Meat, ₱ lb.:
Clear rib sides	7¼	7¾
Clear sides	7¼	8
Shoulders	5	5½
Lard, ₱ lb.:
Choice, in kegs	— —	10¾
Choice, in tierces	10	10¼

ESCULENTS.

Potatoes, ₱ bbl.:
Irish	2 65	3 00
Sweet	— —	— —
Onions, ₱ bbl.	5 00	5 25
Apples, ₱ bbl.	2 25	3 50
Cabbages, ₱ doz.	— —	— —
Sour Krout, ₱ bbl.	— —	12 50

BALING STUFFS.

Bagging, ₱ yard:
India	— —	— —
Jute	— —	— —
Baling Twine, ₱ lb.	— —	17
Ties, ₱ bundle:
30 ties and Buckles	— —	1 85

SUNDRIES.

Poultry, ₱ dozen:
Grown chickens	4 00	4 25
Young do	2 50	3 00
Ducks	2 50	3 00
Geese	— —	5 00
Turkeys	11 00	12 00
Eggs, ₱ dozen:
Western	— —	— —
Southern	30	35
Honey:
Strained, ₱ gallon	— —	— —
Comb, ₱ lb.	— —	— —
Pecans, ₱ lb.
Louisiana	8	16
Texas	8	9
Oranges:
Louisiana, ₱ bbl	— —	— —
Foreign, ₱ box	— —	2 50
Wool, ₱ lb.:
Louisiana	— —	28½
Texas	— —	— —
Feathers, ₱ lb
Geese	— —	— —
Hides, ₱ lb.:
Country green	6	6½
Dry salted	— —	11
Dry flint	— —	13
Ox Horns, each	— —	6
Tallow, ₱ lb.	3 —	6½
Cotton Seed, ₱ ton:
In sacks	— —	10 00
Meal	— —	21 50
Oil cake	— —	25 00
Cooperage, ₱ each:
Sugar hogsheads	3 00	3 25
Molasses barrels	1 30	1 35
Half barrels	— —	1 05
Kegs	— —	70
Oak Staves, per 1200:
Kegs	— —	— —
Barrels	— —	— —
Extra claret	90 00	100 00
Extra hogshead	130 00	135 00
Extra pipes	140 00	175 00
Tobacco:
Low lugs	— —	4½
Medium	— —	— —
Good to fine	— —	— —
Low leaf	5½	5½
Medium	6½	7
Good	7½	8
Fine	7½	8
Selections	10	12

The Chicago Times says: Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure is highly endorsed by ministers, judges, physicians, surgeons, by men of literary and scholarly distinction, and by individuals in all the walks of life.

It is a foolish mistake to confound a remedy of merit with the quack medicines now so common. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Rheumatism and Dyspepsia, and when worn out by overwork, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

MOBILE, Jan. 22.—J. R. Daily passed a satisfactory examination and was admitted to the bar in the Circuit Court to-day.

A contract has been made with the Coal and Iron Company at Talledega, Ala., whereby all our county convicts will be hired, well clothed and fed, for $15 per month each.

GALVESTON, Jan. 25.—A special dispatch to the News from Austin says that Samuel B. Maxey, Democrat, was re-elected senator.

ATLANTA, Jan. 25.—Gen. Francis A. Walker, superintendent of the census, telegraphs to the Constitution, that the discovery of a misstated portfolio makes the population of Atlanta 34,721 instead of 34,398, as previously published. Including near at hand suburbs, the population of the city really exceeds 40,000.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 26.—The thirtieth ballot for Senator stood: Jackson 90, Maynard 25, Rose 1.

As soon as Jackson was declared elected, he was lifted out of his seat by friends and escorted to the stand, where he said he would do whatever lay in his power to allay all sectional agitation and bring prosperity to the country. He would not only represent the State, but the United States, in the broadest sense of the word.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Committee on Epidemic Diseases, of the House, are preparing, and will shortly report, a bill to establish a commission of experts to inquire into the adulteration of food. It is believed that this evil is largely on the increase, and there is a demand for active steps to check it.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The Western section of the Executive Committee on Ecumenical Conference met at the Methodist Book Concern yesterday afternoon, Bishop Simpson presiding. Representatives were present from nearly every Methodist body of the United States and Canada. It is the business of the committee to prepare a programme of exercises for a Pan-Methodist Conference, to be held in London in September. The meeting was strictly private. Another meeting will be held to-day.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The Executive Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Conference, Western Section, concluded their sessions this afternoon. Bishop Simpson, of Philadelphia, presided. The proceedings were private, but the programme was prepared for a general Conference which meets in London in September. The programme will be sent to the Executive Committee of Conference, Eastern Section, for approval.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 27.—A contract has just been agreed upon between the authorities of Florida and J. Cooyel, of Jacksonville, and A. B. Linderman, representing capitalists of Philadelphia and the Pacific coast, to drain Lake Okeechobee, in the south of Florida. If carried out, this will reclaim twelve million acres of the best sugar land in the world.

The territory reclaimed will include the celebrated Everglades, and will be in extent twice as large as the State of New Jersey. This is the largest contract on record, and when completed, Florida can produce more sugar than the United States now consumes.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—A bill has been introduced in the Senate for the retirement of judges who are permanently disabled. This is intended to meet the cases of Justices Hunt, of New York, and Clifford, of Maine, and to enable Mr. Hayes to make two more partisan appointments.

It is safe to say that these judges are not accomplices with the Administration in this business of packing the bench. It is not certain that any Democrats will lend themselves to this game.

There is reason to believe that on this question, at least, Garfield's Administration will act on a higher plan than Hayes'.

MOBILE, Jan. 27.—Henry Farrah, an old and honored citizen, died to-day of Bright's disease. When young he came from England to Mobile, where he built up a successful business, and has been many years publisher of the city directory.

ALBUQUERQUE, New Mexico, Jan. 27. A party arriving at Fort Craig on the 24th, reports that the Buckboard or Fest's mail line was taken by Indians, about five miles west of San Jose, and the driver and one horse killed. A man and three women were surrounded by Indians two miles from the same place. A Mr. Robinson and seven Mexicans arrived on the scene in time to save their lives. A fight ensued, and Robinson and his party were being worsted when five soldiers of the 9th Cavalry, escorting a contractor's train, arrived and put the Indians to flight. Mr. Robinson reports that three miners were killed, on the 18th inst., at Chloride Gulch, and the bodies of four women and children, were brought to San Marcial, on the 23d, horribly mutilated and burned.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The House Committee on Commerce this morning voted to fill the blank in the clause making an appropriation to carry out the plan of the Mississippi River Commission for the lower river with $1,000,000. The vote against a higher sum was slight to six. $600,000 was appropriated for the river above Cairo. The special appropriation for New Orleans and other harbors in the lower river remain unchanged in the bill.

The block for the reservoirs at the head waters of the Mississippi is not yet filled.

The final vote for the million dollars was unanimous. The argument of those opposing a higher sum, is that a larger appropriation would endanger the bill in the House, as many members demand a discussion for adopting the commission plan, and that it is better to take a smaller sum to start the work with the formal indorsation by Congress, of the plans of the river commission. At all events, this seems to be the best that can be done under existing circumstances, and no ordinary amount of work has been devoted by the Louisiana delegation in securing it.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—The rain that began on the 28th inst., spread over the coast from British California to the Southern portion of this State, and has been the heaviest storm experienced since 1861. Feather, Yuba and Upper Sacramento rivers have overflowed their banks, and creeks running into these streams are all over their banks. The damage cannot be stated, but the aggregate loss is immense.

The Central Pacific Railroad suffers heavily. About one thousand yards of wall, near Benicia, were washed away, and a long stretch on the Oregon Branch, near Bear River is gone, and there were washouts of less extent in many other places. Several miles of the Santa Cruz Railroad were washed away, near Santa Cruz. The town Naso was flooded, also a portion of Watsonville.

A Sacramento dispatch says: The levee is broken in two places, three miles below the city, and much damage to farms and orchards will follow. The water is backing up towards the city. The levee around the city is all right, and no danger is apprehended. A number of extensive crevasses have occurred on the opposite side of the river, in Yolo county, and much damage is reported. The losses at present are roughly estimated at $1,000,000. The river is twenty-six feet above low water mark—the highest ever before attained.

A Portland dispatch says the hurricane swept over Puyalup Valley, Washington county. The N. P. Railroad was obstructed by wind falls, buildings unroofed, and in some instances destroyed.

A terrific snow storm, with high winds, prevailed in Victoria on Saturday. Traffic generally was suspended. The snow piled in great drifts, and in the country districts it is fully three feet on a level. The weather to-day is mild, and an extensive thaw has set in.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 31.—The State legislature meets to-morrow. Most of the members are here now. Only twenty days to sit without extra session. Several bills of importance are to come up. They may have to redistrict the State.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The commerce committee is hurrying to complete the river and harbor bill this week, and if it is ready in time Judge Reagan expects to move to pass it under a suspension of the rules next Monday. If delayed much later, it is feared that certain members, who always oppose appropriations of this kind, might form a successful combination to defeat the bill. To-day the committee appropriated $175,000 for the Mississippi River from the Illinois River to Des Moines; and $200,000 above Des Moines.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Private telegrams are received at Liverpool, saying that Callao has surrendered to the Chilians, as well as Lima.

DUBLIN, Jan. 25.—In the Court of the Queen's Bench to-day, in the case of The Crown against the Traversers, Judge Fitzgerald concluded his charge to the jury at 12:30 P. M. He asked them to perform their duty with courage, springing from a desire to act conscientiously without fear or favor. The jury having asked for documents, retired to deliberate upon their verdict.

DUBLIN, Jan. 25.—The jury were discharged at 7:45 o'clock, the foreman stating that it was utterly impossible that they could agree. A juror had previously stated that they were ten to two, but the judge said he could only receive an unanimous verdict. Great excitement prevailed, and it was heightened when the judge said, after the exhibition of the day in court, he could not expect a free and unanimous verdict. Immense crowds were cheering outside the court-house.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—In the house of commons yesterday, Mr. Forster, chief secretary for Ireland, rose at 5:30 in a very crowded house, to move the bill for protection of life in Ireland. He justified the bill by a long and detailed description of outrages which had been committed. He showed that the Land League had a complete system of constables in all districts, who had recorded every infringement of the rules of the League.

The result is, he said, that the Land League is supreme; there is a reign of terror; those who break the law are safe, while those who keep it are in danger. The Land League strikes terror; we must soon strike terror into them; we must arrest these criminals. [Prolonged cheers.]

Mr. Forster's bill asked power for the viceroy to arrest persons, reasonably suspected as principals or accessories in treasonable offenses, such power to remain in force until the 30th of September, 1882.

Mr. Forster announced that the object of his second bill to be, to put matters in reference to the possession of arms in much the same position as under the peace preservation act, which expired last year. The bill will be retrospective as regards arrests for treason. It will apply to the whole of Ireland, but with regard to agrarian and other crimes will apply to proclaimed districts only.

LONDON, Jan. 26. 6 P. M. Gen. Skoboloff telegraphs from Geok Tepe, on the 24th inst., announcing that the Russians on that day captured Geok Tepe, and Gen. Giltepe, after nine hours of desperate fighting, and that the Tekke Turcomans are in full retreat. Their loss, he says, was enormous.

Gen. Skoboloff telegraphs from Geok Tepe, as follows: Tekke Turcomans were pursued and cut down for a distance of fifteen versts. Our victory is complete. We captured a quantity of arms, ammunition and prisoners. Our loss is now being ascertained. Our troops fought heroically.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—In the House of Commons to-day Right Hon. Hugh Childers, Secretary of the War, announced that Sir Geo. Colley telegraphed on the 26th as follows: Attack on Pass repulsed. Casualities heavy, but not yet known. I hold camp until the arrival of reinforcements. The Secretary of War said he believed the English attack had been repulsed.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—A dispatch from Durban, referring to the recent engagement, between the forces under Sir George Colley and the Boers, in Drakonburg Pass, says: The Boers fought with determined courage; they captured the colors of the 58th Regiment, and killed ten officers in charge of them. The colors were recaptured at the point of the bayonet.

An eye witness says the Boers were shot or wounded through their heads as they lay. If the 58th Regiment had been supported by another thousand men, the position would have been taken. Col. Bean and Capt. Lumpn were among the killed. Forty Boers fell close to the British lines.

THE ROYAL PLATE AT WINDSOR.—The Royal plate at Windsor, of which an inventory has been taken, owing to the departure of her Majesty the Queen for Italy, is stated to be of the value of £1,800,000. It includes a gold service, ordered by George IV., which will dine one hundred and forty persons, and one of the finest wine-coolers in the world, added to the collection by the same monarch; a shield formed of snuff-boxes worth £9,000, and thirty dozen plates, worth £10,000. There are also a variety of pieces brought from abroad and India. The latter include a peacock of precious stones of every description, worth £10,000, and Tippoo's footstools a tiger's head with crystal teeth, and a solid ingot of gold for his tongue.—Echo.

—An English traveller says—"Put an American baby six months old on its feet, and it will immediately say, 'Mr. Chairman,' and call the next cradle to order."

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE should be used when you are nervous and cannot sleep.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The District Stewards for Williamsburg District, Mississippi Conference, will meet me at Williamsburg, Saturday, February 5, 1881. Dr. Farrel, Columbia, Hon. Stephens, Augusta, T. P. Welsh, Station Creek, and J. Wetherbly are District Stewards. I have not learned the others yet. Brethren please attend. My address is Williamsburg, Covington county, Miss. D. A. LITTLE, P. E.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

UNION SPRINGS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Greenville station	Jan. 1, 2
Greenville circuit, at Oak Grove	8, 9
Fort Deposit circuit, at Letohatchee	15, 16
Oaky Streak circuit, at Antioch	22, 23
Rutledge circuit, at Rutledge	29, 30
Rocky Mount circuit, at Rocky Mount	Feb. 5, 6
Union Springs station	12, 13
Troy station	19, 20
Pine Level circuit, at Hill's Chapel	22
Olustee mission, at Briar Hill	23
Brundidge circuit, at Clay Hill	26, 27
Mount Meigs circuit, at Mount Meigs	Mar. 5, 6
Calou circuit, at Mount Hilliard	12, 13

(53) J. M. BOLAND, P. E.

MONTGOMERY DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Auburn station	Dec. 25, 26
Tallassee station	Jan. 1, 2
Hurtville circuit, at Seal	8, 9
Elmore circuit, at Carollia	15, 16
Crawford circuit, at Crawford	22, 23
Tuskegee circuit at Cotton Valley	29, 30
Salem circuit, at Salem	Feb. 5, 6
Loachapoka circuit, at Notasulga	12, 13
Tuskegee station	19, 20
Opelika station	26, 27
Franklin mission, at Franklin	Mar. 4
Montgomery station	5, 6
Tallapoosa circuit, at Talitha Chapel	13, 14

The District Stewards will meet at the District parsonage in Auburn, February 15, at eleven o'clock A. M. A full meeting is very much desired.

53 T. F. MANGUM, P. E.

GREENSBORO DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Havana circuit, at Havana	Jan. 15, 16
Green circuit, at Salem	22, 23
Livingstone and Eutaw, at Livingstone	29, 30
Demopolis, at Demopolis	Feb. 5, 6
Forkland circuit, at Forkland	12, 13
Gainsville circuit, at Gainsville	19, 20
Belmont circuit, at Wesley Chapel	26, 27
Cuba circuit, at York	Mar. 5, 6
Gaston circuit, at Coke's Chapel	12, 13
Butler circuit	Wednesday 16
Choctaw circuit, at Tilley's	19, 20

3 H. URQUHART, P. E.

MOBILE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

St. Paul	Jan. 1, 2
Whistler	8, 9
St. Francis Street	15, 16
Franklin Street	22, 23
Eastern Shore, at Bay Minette	29, 30
Citronelle, at Mauvilla	Feb. 5, 6
Toulminville, at Four Mile Post	12, 13
Grand Bay, at Grand Bay	19, 20
St. Stephen's, at New Hope	26, 27
Bladon Springs, at Bladon Springs	Mar. 5, 6
Okatuppa, at Bethel	12, 13
Suggsville, at Suggsville	19, 20
Grove Hill, at Mt. Moon	26, 27

53 O. R. BLUE, P. E.

SELMA DISTRICT.—FIRST ROUND.

Clifton circuit	Jan. 1, 2
Rembert Hill	5
Choctaw Corner	8, 9
Lower Peach Tree	12
East Selma	15, 16
Brush Creek	21, 22
Marion	22, 23
Uniontown station	29, 30
Uniontown circuit	Feb. 1
Orrville	5, 6
McKinley, at McKinley	12, 13
Summerfield	19, 20
Spring Hill	26, 27
Perryville	Mar. 5, 6
Cahaba mission, at Ivy Church	7

District Stewards meet at Selma, Tuesday March 15.

53 W. A. McCARTY, P. E.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

OPELOUSAS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Morgan City	Feb. 5, 6
Franklin	12, 13
French Mission	16
New Iberia	19, 20
Vermillionville	26, 27
Abbeville	Mar. 5, 6
Lake Charles	12, 13
Sugar Town	19, 20
Opelousas	26, 27
Plaquemine	Apr. 2, 3
Washington	9, 10

5 J. M. JOHNSTON, P. E.

ALEXANDRIA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Bayou Boeuf and Evergreen	Jan. 15, 16
Alexandria and Pineville	22, 23
Rapides	29, 30
Jena	Feb. 5, 6
Cenac	Tuesday 8
Columbia	12, 13
Winnfield	19, 20
Harrisonburg and Trinity	25, 27
Shelly Island	Mar. 5, 6
Little River	12, 13
Cottle	Thursday 17
Spring Creek	19, 20
Simsport	26, 27
Avoyelles French mission	Apr. 2, 3

3 F. G. HOCUT, P. E.

HOMER DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Homer, at Homer	Jan. 8, 9
Tatro, at Salem	15, 16
Sparta, at Sparta	22, 23
Vernon, at Douglass	Feb. 5, 6
Indian Village, at Indian Village	12, 13
Rochester, at Rochester	19, 20
Haynesville, at Haynesville	26, 27
Minden, at Minden	Mar. 5, 6
Arcadia	12, 13
Downsville	19, 20
Farmerville, at Shiloh	25, 27
Webster, at Andrew Chapel	Apr. 2, 3

District Stewards will meet at Tullp, January 29-30. Preaching on each day. R. W. Greer, Homer, B. F. Rhea, Tullp, Lovick Wrenn, Meridian, G. T. Wynn, Haynesville, E. L. Holland, Vernon, W. P. Kimball, Webster, — Norton, Arcadia. The Stewards from Sparta, Farmerville, Downsville, Indian Village and Rochester, together with the brethren named, will please meet me at the above time and place.

J. S. PARKER, P. E.

SHREVEPORT DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Logansport mission, at Reynold's S. H.	Jan. 8, 9
Caddo circuit	15, 16
South Bossier, at Bellevue	22, 23
North Bossier, at Red River	29, 30
Mooringsport	Feb. 5, 6
Shreveport	12, 13
Mansfield	19, 20
Coushatta, at Coushatta	26, 27
Springville, at Springville	Mar. 5, 6
Pleasant Hill	12, 13
Many, at Negrete	19, 20
Anacoco, at Holly Grove	26, 27
Natchitoches circuit, at New Hope	Apr. 3, 4
Natchitoches station	10, 11

District Stewards' meeting at Shreveport, February 12, 1880. (2) L. D. McLENDON, P. E.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

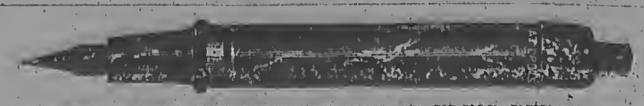
JACKSON DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Hinds mission, at Lane's	Jan. 1, 2
Canton	8, 9
Sharon, at Lone Pine	15, 16
Thomastown, at Lone Pine	15, 16
Madison	22, 23
Settle Chapel	29, 30
Edwards	Feb. 5, 6
Bolton	12, 13
Jackson	19, 20
Reuben	26, 27
Mt. Carmel	Mar. 5, 6
Fletcher's Chapel	12, 13
Silver Creek	19, 20
Lodi	19, 20
Yazoo City	26, 27

The district Stewards will please meet at the parsonage in Canton, at ten A. M., on Tuesday, January 25. (3) W. L. C. RUSSELETT, P. E.

WOODVILLE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Jackson station	Jan. 1, 2
Clinton station	8, 9
Amite City, at Amite City	15, 16
Pipkins and Port Hudson, at Pipkins	22, 23
Winans, at Winans	29, 30
Bayou Sara, at New Hope	Feb. 5, 6
St. Helena, at Pine Grove	12, 13
Wilkinson, at Bethel	19, 20
Woodville station	26, 27
North Wilkinson, at Hopewell	Mar. 5, 6
Amite, at Liberty	12, 13
Franklington, at Franklington	19, 20
East Feliciana, at Olive Branch	26, 27
East Baton Rouge, at Bethel	Apr. 2, 3
Livingston, at Bayou Barbary	9, 10



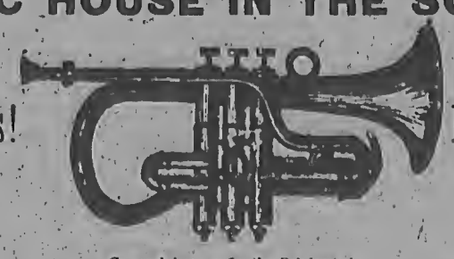
53 JAS. A. GODFREY, P. E.

BROOKHAVEN DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Brookhaven and Wesson, at Brookhaven	Dec. 25, 26
Crystal Springs station	Jan. 1, 2
Summit and McComb, at McComb	8, 9
Hazlehurst station	15, 16
Brandywine, at Rehoboth	22, 23
Magnolia, at Magnolia	29, 30
Adams and Bogueschito, at Bethel	Feb. 5, 6
Scotland, at New Hope	12, 13
Beauregard, at Balnala	19, 20
Spring Ridge, at Byram	26, 27
Bayou Pierre, at Union Chapel	Mar. 5, 6
Georgetown, at Bethesda	12, 13

53 B. F. JOHNSON, P. E.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE CROSS STYLOGRAFIC PEN OR FLUID PENCIL.

A pencil that writes with Ink; never needs sharpening and never wears out. Made of hard vulcanized rubber, silver, gold, platinum and iridium. 14 kinds, from $2 50 to $5 each. Call and see them or send circular.

LATHROP & WILKINS, Agents for the Southwest,
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

LEON ARLAUD
DRUGGIST,
Corner Customhouse and Dauphine sts., New Orleans.
PURE AND GENUINE DRUGS. GUARANTEED UNADULTERATED.
Medicines, Perfumery, etc. Specialty of Bather's Eau de Cologne.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR
MUSIC HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

Easiest Terms! Lowest Prices!

General Agency for the Celebrated
Steinway, Knabe, Pleyel, Weber, Fischer Pianos,
And the Popular Organs of
CLOUGH & WARREN AND PELOUBET, PELTON & CO.,
Everything in the Music line at rock bottom prices. Send for illustrated catalogues.
LOUIS GRUNEWALD,
Grunewall Hall, New Orleans.

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE
INSURANCE COMPANY.

SOUTHERN DEPARTMENT:

AND

OFFICE: CORNER CARONDELET AND GRAVIER STREETS.

The capital of the Company is TEN MILLION DOLLARS, to which there must be added the unlimited liability of the proprietors.

Fire assets, excluding paid-up capital	$9,881,426 21
Paid-up capital	1,228,200 00
Total fire assets	$11,109,626 21
Fire liabilities	3,944,358 24
Making the surplus for policy-holders	$7,165,267 98

Losses by Chicago Fire in 1871 $3,239,091
Losses by Boston Fire in 1872 $1,329,729

Fire risks of all kinds respectfully solicited. The Board of Directors is fully empowered to adjust and pay all losses from this city, thus placing the Company on an even footing with the local companies chartered under the State laws.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:
J. F. SCHRODER, Esq., Chairman, of Leopold Christ & Co.
NEWTON BUCKNER, Esq., of Buckner & Co.
PERRY NUGENT, Esq., of Nugent & Lallande.
PETER ANDERSON, Esq., of Anderson and Stimpson.
HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary.
JULES P. ROUX, Ass't Resident Secretary.
NEW ORLEANS October 20, 1880.

P. WERLEIN,
135 Canal Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

PIANOS,
ORGANS,
MUSIC
AND
Musical Instruments.

Please send for my catalogue and prices before buying from any one, North or South.

$25 TO $35.
STEWART'S NEW IMPROVED
SINGER
Sewing Machine.

Great Reduction in Prices!
Down with Monopolies!
Hard Times Demand Low Prices.

We warrant all our Machines to be NEW, LATEST IMPROVED and PERFECT for

FIVE YEARS.

Our NEW MACHINE is supplied with a LOOSE BALANCE-WHEEL, which is a great improvement over the old SINGER, as it enables the operator to wind the bobbin without running the machine, or removing the work from the needle. This is the most important improvement ever put on the Sewing Machine.

Also dealer in all first-class Machines, such as the WHEELER & WILSON, DOMESTIC, GROVER & BAKER, WILSON, WEED, Etc.

Cotton, Silk, Flax, Oil and Needles for all kinds of Machines. Address

M. A. PECK,
General Sewing Machine Agent
158 CANAL STREET,
Next to Holmes' Dry Goods Store.
New Orleans.

B. J. MONTGOMERY. C. KIRSCH

R. M. & B. J.
MONTGOMERY
FURNITURE
AND
MIRROR EMPORIUM,
Corner Camp and Poydras Sts.

After a sojourn of over six weeks among the Factories North, East and West, we open the Fall and Winter Trade with the largest and best selected stock of Furniture, French and German Plate Mirrors, Ornamental and Fancy Goods, Upholstery Goods and Cabinet Makers' Hardware ever brought to this city. We select our goods in person from the best factories and are determined not to be undersold. Our assortment being too extensive and varied to be enumerated in detail, we request our customers and the general public to call and inspect for themselves.

On hand a full line of the celebrated Vienna Bent Wood Work and Invalid Wheel Chairs.

Goods packed and delivered F. O. B.

THE
NEW HYMN BOOK!
Everybody is Delighted with it.

Prepared by authorization of the General Conference of 1878, and especially adapted to revival, prayer and social meetings. The arrangement in the Standard Hymn Book has been preserved, as well as the most common hymns in that work, so that it can be used in connection with it. It contains 344 hymns besides benedictions and doxologies, etc., the order of public worship, baptismal service of infants and adults, and form of reception of church members. It is strongly bound in cloth, stitched with wire, and the low price at which it is supplied renders it particularly available for general use, in all churches, for congregational singing.

Single copy by mail, postpaid, twenty-five cents.

In quantities of twenty-five or more, by freight or express, twenty cents per copy. Address

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

FURNITURE.

W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
desires to inform the public and his patrons that his Stock of Parlor Suits, Chamber Suits and Dining-Room Suits, both fine and medium, has never been as complete as at present, with prices lower than ever.

His stock of Furniture suitable for country trade is very large, and special inducements are offered to wholesale buyers.

Orders from the country will have especial care and prompt attention.

W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
New Orleans.

D. MERCIER & SONS,
Better Known as Cheap Johns.
NO BRANCH STORE IN TOWN.
MEN'S, BOYS' AND YOUTH'S
CLOTHING,
HATS, BOOTS, SHOES, FURNISHING GOODS, ETC., ETC.
Cor. Dauphine and Bienville sts.,
New Orleans, La.
Orders from Country Merchants promptly executed on most reasonable terms.

DR. BLY'S CELEBRATED PATENT ARTIFICIAL LEGS AND ARMS have all the motions of the natural limbs. Perfect satisfaction in all cases or no pay. Prices reduced. Send for pamphlet.

A. McDERMOTT, Manufacturer,
163 Camp St., New Orleans.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 27.—NO. 6. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1881. WHOLE NO. 1340.

PUBLISHED FOR THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

G. T. LATHROP, Publisher.

OFFICE—113 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, . . . $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.
REV. H. D. MOORE.
REV. O. R. BLUE, D. D.
REV. J. O. ANDREW.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. H. WATKINS, D. D.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. JOHN MATHEWS, D. D.
REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

SUNRISE ON THE BAY.

BY REV. CHARLES L. THOMPSON.

The last white star had slipped its ray
Within his cleft of blue;
The great sun sends the level day
Along the world anew;
So, Lord, within thy larger will
My trembling will would hide,
And in thy glory deep and still,
Invisible abide.

See Sunrise lay her freshened face
Across the ropes and spars,
As Hope, each day with fairer grace,
Lights up her prison-bars;
Creep the white sands to bending waves,
That shake their plumes of spray;
So, Lord, my life before Thee craves
For baptisms day by day.

Laughs the great ocean round the keel,
Buoys the yards and deck;
The hand-locked crafts the tide-wave feel,
While wings the blue fields fleck;
So, Lord my spirit waits for Thee,
O! wave of glory come;
One throb of love shall set me free,
One breath shall waft me home.

—New York Independent.

Wise Counsels to the Young.

We find in the London Watchman a letter from Rev. E. E. Jenkins, president of the British Conference, addressed "to the young people of the Methodist connection." We give an extended extract, hoping that the young men and women of our branch of Methodism will profit by it. Mr. Jenkins says:

Let me caution you against the unbelief of the age. Do not attempt to flee from it; look at it steadfastly and it will flee from you. It assumes the aspect of science; but science is not unbelief; it is knowledge. There is a state of hesitation or suspense which is the natural temper of the scientific mind, and affords a kind of guarantee for the certainty of scientific facts. But this temper as a permanent habit has no business with morals and religion. To refuse to make up our mind to be godly because we are not satisfied with the alleged proofs of God's existence and of our own immortality, and to wait until death shall determine these questions for us, is absurd; for if it so happen that when we die we live again, and stand face to face with God, we shall be convicted of the folly of not knowing Him who really existed while we were doubting Him, and at a time when, above all others, it was necessary we should know Him. It is difficult to imagine that belief in God, and the conduct which springs from it, can have any place hereafter if they are not possible now. What is now called agnosticism is intellectual atheism. Let not your simplicity be ensnared by an unusual word. It is a very ancient form of ungodliness. David describes the jargon of the agnostic of his day: "How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the Most High?"—What proof have we that the first cause is an intelligent and personal being? This non-belief has ever been associated and identified with a loose moral condition. You will hear it said that in many instances the conduct of avowed unbelievers is irreproachable. But such conduct is not the fruit of unbelief; it is the result of the restraints of Christian institutions, and of the inheritance of Christian habits. Atheism has trafficked with the morality of theism; but has never herself originated a single moral lesson. The locomotive will run on the lines for a couple of miles after the steam has been shut off; but the steam which has escaped, and not the machinery, must be credited with the momentum. And if we all become atheists to-morrow, and the inspiration of faith were universally to die, we should still go on for a few years upon the smooth rails of Christian law and example by the sheer force of the life which has hitherto propelled us. But what becomes of society when the force expires? Consider it deeply, that those laws of authority and obedience which give sweetness and reality to freedom, and which create the charm and security of English homes, are the offspring of that kingdom which taught us to bow our knees "unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named," and that when you part with this religion, the surrender of everything in life which you deem most precious is only a question of time. Look narrowly upon those faults that ruffle the quiet or blur the purity of home-life, and you will trace their spring to those dispositions which it is the mission of the Christian faith to check and exhaust.

The sovereign remedy for unbelief is work. The religion that merely muses is apt to become sickly, because the most conclusive sign of its truth is found in its practical activity, in its fruits of goodness and help; and where this support is wanting the mind is easily staggered by any "wind of doctrine" that happens to sweep by. And how much work there is to be done, and how few there are to do it! The poor and the sick throng every path you tread, and in the enclosed ways and retreats of your own homes there will be an unceasing demand for the ministry of every faculty and grace you possess. Love will teach you the skill to relieve, and furnish you with the means to enrich; and this walking in the steps of Jesus will, more than anything else, make you conscious of the reality of his presence. Let me beseech you to devote yourselves to church work. Much of it can only be done when we are young, and the doing of it is the best training for the future and heavier tasks of life. Sabbath-schools call for earnest teachers; neglected neighborhoods for visitors. Boys and girls unheard for are drifting into vice and ruin. Some of you have special abilities and opportunities for service in fields like these. Moreover, there are duties which you can undertake with more hope of success than older workers. We who have the authority of years may scold vice, and reason with it, and threaten it; but nothing subdues it like the beseechings of childhood, whose rebuke is innocence and gentleness. Rough and savage men will take off their hats to a young girl visitor, receive a book from her hand, or better still, the word of Christ from her lips.

I shall offer no counsel here on the selection of books for study and general reading, nor in regard to amusements shall I attempt to discriminate the harmless from the hurtful. Advice on these subjects, if it travel beyond the border of a very obvious propriety, is generally unsatisfactory, and therefore seldom invited. It is unsatisfactory because it can proceed on no sure principle: it may chance make its way to the conscience; but as often will it miss the mark. Give yourselves wholly to the Lord. When the heart is absolutely Christ's the judgment is a safe casuist in matters of taste. Everything unholy is unlovely. Let me beseech you to become the enrolled followers of Jesus. Do not be led astray by the vulgar sophism that it is safer to show friendship towards religion than to make a profession of it. The unworthiness as well as vanity of this position will be seen at once if you remember that religion is personal attachment to Christ; that He commands his friends to make their attachment an open confession; and that life has neither duties, nor cares, nor pleasures apart from Him. In fact, when faith joins our spirit to the Son of God, even the body is taken into the fellowship and becomes the outer shrine of the Divine Presence.

There is nothing between this thorough adhesion to Christ and an open rejection of his claims, except that philanthropic patronage of faith which supports its public usefulness and declines to have any personal relations with it. This sentiment is so convenient, exacting from those who adopt it neither the trouble of thinking nor the irksomeness of self-restraint, that it has become a creed among us, and passes for religion. Consider for a moment what it amounts to, and what it implies. I will venture to say that no satirist ever found a subject more congenial to the irony and banter of derision than the protecting air which many people assume towards the religion of Jesus. That a life consumed by earnestness and love for mankind should be simply admired; that it should be possible for a man, without being aware of its burlesque, to become the patron of Gethsemane, and the well-wisher of the cross! I am persuaded that downright hostility, honestly and consistently maintained, is less offensive to God than this nauseous parody of Christian discipleship. "I would thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of My mouth." Shun, I beseech you, as you would the infection of a death sickness, the character of a "supporter" of Christianity. Give to Christ mind and heart and life, or give Him nothing. He asks not that his sayings may be quoted, and his name used as the warrant of beneficences and the ornament of charities; He claims a union with us in which there shall be no allotment of partnership, but in which all the action of the two persons shall be absorbed into one movement, while the separate consciousness of each is preserved. "I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." "To me to live is Christ." Even in these days of scepticism there is no argument against the faith of the gospel so impressive as the indifference of those who are supposed to hold it; and let this thought never be absent from your mind, that to stand apart from the church, to hold back from a participation in the work, the responsibilities, and the fellowships of a public confession of your faith, is to give their sharpest weapon to the enemies of Christ. He was crucified by stranger hands, but He was delivered into those hands by a "friend."

As I write these words to stir your minds, I remember that impressions are fleeting; and that when we compel them to remain with us until they become the settled motive of resolution, even resolution is frail and is apt to break under us like a reed. Let me, then, lead you to the secret place of strength: "Enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." The saints of old were accused of unmanly seclusion. In these days, life seems to have no privacy; and piety, like a frightened traveler, snatches both rest and food as it hurries through its duties, as if some danger lurked in reflection and retirement. But if you would make sure of the ground upon which your faith rests, cherish the habit of observing a stated time, day by day, for the study of the Holy Scriptures and for meditation upon God, as well as prayer to God. I have said that church work is a remedy for unbelief; but no work can be well done unless the faith and the heart of the worker be refreshed and "renewed day by day." You have no enemy more dangerous than the temptation that would filch from you the golden minutes consecrated to your private interviews with God. In everything else judicious solitude is the spring of open success. As a tree attains its strength and loftiness by the unseen and silent ministry of the soil, so great characters are built up in secret. May He who was wont to withdraw "apart to pray," and to continue "all night in prayer to God," put the spirit of his example within you and then neither the frailty of resolutions, nor the subtle dissimulations of self, nor the snares of thought and passion that waylay you in books, and in intercourse, shall be able to move you "away from the hope of the gospel."

The Jews in Germany.

The Berlin correspondent of Evangelical Christendom says that the number of Jews in Berlin alone is greater than in the whole United Kingdom. Two-thirds of all the Israelites live in Russia, Austria, Germany. Almost all the whole Liberal press is in the hands of Israelites, and this is perhaps one of the reasons why all our Liberal newspapers are hostile to Christianity. The influence of the Jews in our Parliaments is also considerable. As long as the Jews are unconverted, they must, as a matter of course, be hostile to Christianity, and it cannot be desirable that their moral powers should be great in our nation. This state of things has made Christian men, who otherwise experience a warm sympathy for the nation to which our Saviour belonged according to the flesh, wish for a reaction of the Christian feeling in our people. There is much dislike to the Jews among the people, and this made many persons take up the question in a way which we must decidedly disapprove. An "Anti-Semitic League" was formed, which, among other things, published a satirical paper called Truth, containing caricatures of Jews. At the same time a petition to the Chancellor of the Empire was put in circulation, proposing (1) a prohibition of the entry of Jews from Russia into Germany; (2) the exclusion of the Jews from all offices of authority; (3) the renewal of statistics as to the religious creed of the population. Mr. Hamel questioned the Government as to whether they knew anything about the petition, and what they intended to do in the matter. Count Stolberg, vice-president of the cabinet, replied that the Government had not yet received any petition, and could therefore make no declaration respecting it. However, he would not hesitate to say that our constitution guaranteed the same rights as citizens to men of every religious belief, and that it was not the intention of the Government to advocate any change. This declaration was recognized by all parties in the House as perfectly correct. The Progressists took the opportunity to attack Mr. Stocker very violently on his activity in the Christian Working Men's Party, which they declared to be as bad as social democracy. Mr. Stocker had a great opportunity to defend himself before the House, and his work found recognition from some quarters. The debate was a very violent one, and lasted two full days. The National Liberals maintained great reserve, while the Progressists praised the Jews in several speeches. The Ultramontanes stood, on this occasion, on the side of the Conservative party, at the same time taking the opportunity to speak against the May Laws, and to assert that not half so much was proposed adverse to the Jews as was constantly being carried out against themselves. The Conservative speakers said that, in truth, there was no reason whatever for such a debate; but as the matter was brought before the House, it was necessary to mention that the Jews did not practically show sufficient respect for the belief of the nation among whom they were living. The petition, inasmuch as it sought to prevent immigration, and was directed against our civil liberties, so far must be disapproved of; and it is to be regretted that Mr. Stocker, though not at first yet after some pressure from his friends, signed the petition. It will also be difficult to exclude the Jews from public offices, though it is practically done very much still; and it cannot be denied that there is in a large portion of the nation a strong feeling against Jewish judges. Mr. Stocker is right when he said that the petition ought, according to his opinion, only to have had the last object in view. In all statistics of the population of Germany the religious creed professed is generally mentioned; and if, of late, it has been left out in some cases, this has been done at the instigation of the Jews, in order to hide the numerical influence they have obtained in many departments of public life. A number of truly Christian people disapprove of Mr. Stocker's proceeding in this matter. Intellectual struggles always take rather an acute character in Germany; and it is perhaps not without gain, if the fate of the wonderful nation is more closely considered, of that nation whose very existence is a testimony to the truth of the Word of God, and which can only be fully understood in the light of revelation. It will also be a benefit if our nation learns to appreciate more in this way the blessings of Christianity. On the other hand, there is no real danger to civil and religious liberty, as, at least in our legislative bodies, there is not any party which wishes to limit the civil rights of the Jews.

From California.

As it has been the custom of many to write big things about what is in California, I, too, claim the same privilege. There are many things out here that are large and strange. During the year 1880 we had eighty-eight suicides in San Francisco, and one hundred and eight deaths by accident, so this is one of the large things in California.

Were I to attempt to tell how much wheat there is at this time in the State, I should make a failure, for the number of bushels has not yet been determined. Dr. Bascom raised sixty-three bushels to the acre; this was the average on all his farm, and others did better than he. The fact is there is so much wheat in this country, that it seems, to me, that flour bread is not so good as it was in Mississippi. The scarcity of a thing sometimes gives relish to it.

I see thousands of acres here in wheat, and the oak trees growing all over the fields, broad spread ones at that, and the wheat does about as well as where there are none. The plows can run up just as close as if they were posts set in the ground, no roots on the surface, hence no surface roots to draw the growth from the wheat. I thought when I came out here that the vineyards would have arbors for the vines to run on, but in this I was badly mistaken. A vineyard when pruned in the spring looks like a field of stumps or crooked stubs standing all over it, every branch cut off each spring, some of these stumps are three feet and some only one foot high. Where there is mildew, the stumps are highest so the grapes can get air, but if very dry and no mildew, the grapes lie on the ground and do well. I am afraid to tell how many pounds grow on these old stumps, as I call them, hanging all around in the shape of an umbrella. Well, I thought I should have a good time eating grapes, and I suppose I have, but there are so many of them that I fear they, like the flour, are too plentiful to be appreciated.

The grape culture is on the increase here; every year adds hundreds, yea, thousands of acres to the vineyards. I am not a very good judge of the culture, but am of the opinion that it is carried on here well, and certainly no country can excel California in grapes.

We have large trees on our mountains; larger than the cedars of Lebanon, and twice as high.

We have very large fish—in fact, too large to be good to eat. I have tasted none of them that are as good as the cat of Mississippi, but this may be in my raising.

We have fresh salmon; I have tried them once or twice, and feel that I shall never try them again, unless my taste should change.

As to Irish potatoes, I never saw them larger anywhere, and as to quantity and quality they are good enough. I bought one cabbage-head, the largest I ever saw; it took wife and I eight days to finish it, and we did good eating, too. Beets are too large, most of them. I can see one now from my door. It sticks up fifteen inches out of the ground, and looks like an old rusty stump. These large ones are raised for cattle; we have a smaller kind for table use, but they are not very good—too coarse.

These are a few of the large things that we have, in fact. It seems to us that most things are larger here than elsewhere.

When a person reaches here, they seem to take on a large feeling of themselves and everything in regard to the country. It is said by one writer that Californians are all picked men, to find one that is not is the exception and not the rule.

The outlook for another fine crop was never better.

While the people of the East and South are having snow and ice, we are enjoying spring weather. My yard at this time is adorned with beautiful flowers; the sweet pinks are out.

This is a lovely part of the world, a bad place to serve the Lord, too apt to fall in love with this beautiful country. F. M. FEATHERSTUN.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, January 18, 1881.

Woman's Work in Brazil.

In Brazil the education of woman has been much neglected, and, where attempted at all, has in many cases fallen into the hands of Sisters of Charity. The intellectual incompetence of the Sisters of Charity is just as great as their moral incompetence is startling. Few women away from the cities—exceptions made of the daughters of very wealthy planters—can read at all. The higher girls' schools ordinarily teach little beyond French, music, dancing, and fancy needle-work.

The Presbyterian Churches of the United States have established schools for girls in the cities of San Paulo, Campinas, and Rio Claro, of the Province of San Paulo. In these schools the teaching of the Holy Scriptures occupies a prominent place. Miss Thomas, a lady of independent means, established in San Paulo City a Kindergarten, which is in successful operation under the care of a lady whom Miss Thomas trained for the work. Two ladies—one a Presbyterian, from Charleston, S. C., the other a Protestant Episcopalian, from New York City—have established in San Paulo City a girl's school at their own expense. This school educates gratuitously a certain number of girls, giving them books, tuition, board, and by and by clothing, and affording its alumnæ a home free of charge whenever without a situation as teachers and in need of such help.

The good to be accomplished by girls' schools in Brazil is simply incalculable. The uneducated Brazilian woman is not only ignorant, but superstitious and fanatical; the educated is either more thoroughly superstitious from the teaching of the convents, or entirely skeptical as a result of her acquaintance with French literature. The woman educated in the schools which we advocate will take the highest social rank, because she will possess the deepest literary culture, and her Christian training will fit her for eminent usefulness in the great reformation of the future.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should enter heartily upon this noble work of educating the women of a nation of nearly 12,000,000 people. Our schools can be made self-supporting, and each will prove the nucleus of a Church in the immediate future. In Piracicaba, Province of San Paulo, the Misses Newman attempted a school of a high order, of which the Church may yet make a noble success. The town is of several thousand inhabitants, county-site of a county of more than 19,000 people, enjoys railroad facilities, stands at the head of some hundreds of miles of river navigation, and is the chief town of a large district of frontier country which is being rapidly taken up by emigrants.

The beautiful City of Rio de Janeiro smiles upon the placid waters of one of the largest harbors in the world, and like a tropical beauty gazes upon the ocean, through her parted veil of mountains; yet, for all the daughters of her 350 000 to 400,000 inhabitants, no Protestant Church has given her a girl's school. Private enterprise has established, as a matter of livelihood, more than one girls' school which has proven a financial success, and we have no reason to doubt that, under the direction of competent teachers, a girls' school in Rio de Janeiro would not only prove financially successful, but be an inestimable blessing to the Redeemer's kingdom. Besides the common school population, the homeless children, boot-blacks, fruit-vendors, bal-bad-girls, and newsboys, utter a touching appeal for a children's home.

All these great enterprises were dear to the heart of Mrs. Annie Ransom; her last letter was occupied with the interests of the school at Piracicaba; and when she lay down to die, she was preparing to open a refuge for the homeless children of Rio de Janeiro. She gave her life to the work. May her ashes inspire her sisters of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South!—Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The Wesley Memorial Volume.

Dr. Whedon, editor of the Methodist Quarterly Review, January, 1881, has this to say of the Memorial Volume:

The enterprising editor of this elegant Memorial Volume has unwittingly furnished an ecumenical Methodist book preparatory to our Ecumenical Methodist Council. His aim was to bring within its pages a representative writer from every Methodist organization of every country and color. Whatever differences have existed, all could write upon Wesley, his doctrines and his work, as their common center. Signally happy is the father of the great Wesley family, in that his name is for all a note of harmony and oneness.

The Memorial Church, whose interests gave existence to this volume, is well entitled to the honor from its being erected "in the only city in America in which Mr. Wesley had a home and a parish." The beautiful city of Savannah has this singular pre-eminence in our South—a section rich in memorial spots of our Methodist primitive history. Our John Street Church in New York, where Embury inaugurated American Methodism, and Boston's beautiful Common, where Lee discharged the first gun for New England Methodism, are spots of memorial interest for every reflective Methodist in every section of our great country. Under Dr. Clark's skillful guidance, Savannah now asserts her claim on unique grounds to being the most primitive memorial spot for Methodism in America.

The editor was singularly successful in obtaining ready contributions from a large corps of able pens in both England and America, both within and without the communion of Methodism. Such writers as Punshon, Rigg, Pope, and Tyerman, represent English Methodism. Men like Bishops Simpson, E. O. Haven, Foss, Dr. Newman, and Dr. Abel Stevens, represent our Methodist Episcopal Church. Of the lights of our Church, South, there are Bishops McTyeire, G. F. Pierce, Wightman, Drs. Lipscomb and Summers, with several contributions from the prolific mind of the editor. From the colored American Churches, are Bishop Holsey, and Rev. B. F. Lee. From the other continent, outside of Methodism, are Dean Stanley, Mr. Overton, Dr. Dobbin, and de Pressense. These are brilliant names, and the volume should be welcomed to the hands and hearts of universal Methodism as an ecumenical book. It will furnish an admirable prelude to the meeting of that approaching council by which Catholic Methodism will stand out in her unity with a fresh distinctness both in her own view and in the eyes of the world.

Wesley a Prohibitionist.

In 1784, seven years before his death, Wesley, having for many years observed the sad effects of intemperance upon all classes in England, wrote a tract upon the prevalence of nervous disorders, and names the use of ardent spirits as one of the chief causes. Life to the persons thus afflicted became a burden, and not a few took their own lives.

"What are the causes of this strange disorder?" asks Wesley. And he answers, "One cause is the use of spirituous liquors. This is one of the horrid effects which naturally follow the swallowing that fashionable poison. That liquid fire lays the foundation of numberless diseases, and of this in particular.

"It is amazing that the preparing or selling this poison should be permitted (I will not say in any Christian country, but) in any civilized State. 'O, it brings in a considerable sum of money to the government.' True; but is it wise to barter men's lives for money?

"Surely that gold is bought too dear if it is the price of blood. Does not the strength of every country consist in the number of its inhabitants? If so, the lessening their number is a loss which no money can compensate. So that it is inexcusable ill-husbandry to give the lives of useful men for any sum of money whatever."

Think of this ye who say this country must have the annual revenue from liquors. We collect sixty-odd million dollars, and yearly bury ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND citizens in drunkards' graves. O, rare political economy.—Southern Crusader.

A SHARP REPORT.—An old lady of Dr. Gill's flock once called upon him with a grievance. The doctor's neckbands were too long for her ideas of ministerial humility, and after a long harangue on the sin of pride, she intimated that she had brought her scissors with her, and would be pleased if her dear pastor would allow her to clip them down to her notions of property. The doctor not only listened patiently to her lecture, but handed her over the offending white bands for her to operate upon. When she had cut them to her satisfaction, and returned the bits, it was the doctor's turn. "Now," said he, "my good sister, you must do me a good turn also." "Yes, I will, doctor; what can it be?" "Well, you have something about you which is a great deal too long and causes me no end of trouble, and I should like to see it shorter." "Indeed, dear sir, I will not hesitate; what is it? here are the scissors, use them as you please." "Come, then," said the sturdy divine, "good sister, put out your tongue."

A Sunday-school teacher was trying to make her class understand the dependence of the branches on the vine. "Jesus is the vine, we are the branches. We derive all our life and happiness from Him."

"Yes," said a golden-haired little girl, "Jesus is the vine, grown people are the branches, and we are the buds."

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1881.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

WORK FIT FOR HEAVEN.

BY MRS L. C. SADLER.

"Who does work fit for Heaven
With Christ must always stay!"
So said the monk "Angelico,"
In a medieval day.

And he, to fit for Heaven
The work he fain would do
For Christ, became a hermit
And hid himself from view.

Amid etruscan mountains,
From human kith and kin;
From evil and temptation,
From proneness still, to sin.

The lovelorn maid in convent,
Who takes the veil, says there
"Oh! Holy Mother Mary!
Pray listen to my prayer,"

"The world, flesh and the devil,
I have renounced to-day,
To do work fit for Heaven,
With Christ I here would stay."

A follower of Jesus,
A "Boanerges" blind
Thought he would work for Heaven,
With pure and Christ-like mind.

On sea and land the gospel,
Preached he, of "Grace and Love,"
And here and there he lectures
'Bout what a blind man saw."

And he saw more, without an eye
Than did the monk, with two;
And he did work more fit for Heaven,
Than hermit e'er did do.

And East and West, and North and South,
And up and down he went,
And many souls found Christ through him,
"The blind man eloquent."

A brown-eyed Christian maiden,
"Who on the Lord did wait,"
Was wooed and won, by man of God,
And then did consecrate

Her life to work for Heaven,
And thus with Christ to stay.
But, God, instead of wedded joys,
On her did burdens lay.

A crucifixion of her heart
And death of earthly bliss
She bade farewell to him she loved,
While she, the rod did kiss.

Yet still she works, on bed of pain,
With brain and pen, to-day,
And longs to hear the plaudit, "Come,
And with Christ always stay."

Judas at the Supper of the Lord.

MR. EDITOR: In the ADVOCATE of January 6 J. M. enters into a rather lengthy discussion upon the question: "Did Judas partake of the Lord's Supper?" and states in the outset that the question has never been satisfactorily answered, and thinks that probably it never will be. There is nothing in the spirit of the article to which objection can be made, but it seems to me that some of the arguments, though apparently plausible, will be found, upon close examination, defective.

It does seem to me that if the most natural interpretation be put upon the Scriptural account that the Bible settles the question. Neither Matthew nor Mark denies that Judas did partake of the supper, and, if there were no other evidence than theirs, the natural inference, from their account, would be that he did. There is, however, other and stronger evidence than theirs, for Luke asserts that the twelve apostles were with Him when He sat down, and that forthwith the emblems of His broken body and shed blood, were administered. After supper, according to Luke's statement, the fact of the conspiracy with the priests and elders was exposed.—Luke xii, 14, 23.

But let us suppose, as your correspondent does, that the wording of Luke's account is not in strict accordance with the order of the facts. That while he relates the exposure, after giving the account of the supper, the order of the facts might have been reversed. Such a construction is indeed very unnatural, but, for the sake of getting at the argument which is drawn from it, let us for the present admit it. It does not appear to me, as to your correspondent, that if such had been the case that Judas would have been so chagrined at the disclosure as to have hurried him out of the company. With most men such would, in all probability, have been the case, but we have no warrant for believing that it would have been so with Judas. He was so thoroughly depraved and so dead to the sense of shame that he was capable of anything that was vile and nothing that was good. Only a very few hours afterward, notwithstanding the exposure, he had the hypocritical impudence to betray his Master under the guise of friendship, and hail Him with a kiss.

It is said, then, in the next place "that Judas was afraid to stay there after the exposure." How do we know that he was afraid to stay, and how does J. M. know it? It may be that he was, but there is no record of the fact. However, let this pass.

The final argument is that Christ and His apostles have declared that there are certain qualifications necessary in persons who partake of this supper; that Judas did not possess these qualifications, and the Saviour knew it. In consequence the inference is drawn that, had Judas offered to partake of this supper, it would have been denied him.

It is this argument, Mr. Editor, that I would notice particularly, as it contains the very pith and marrow of the arguments in favor of exclusive communion. That certain qualifications are necessary to this holy supper being taken beneficially is admitted, and is something about which there can be no question, and that Christ knew that Judas did not possess these qualifications is also beyond question, but that on this account the Saviour would not have given him the emblems of His broken body and shed blood, had Judas applied for them, there is no evidence.

Let us notice what Paul says in the latter part of the eleventh chapter of First Corinthians about the abuse of this institution. After giving the history of the institution, and explaining it, he says: "Wherefore whosoever shall eat this bread and drink this cup unworthily shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord." Observe that the guilt here all rests upon the person partaking and not upon the church who allows him to partake, or the person who administers. To partake of this holy sacrament unworthily, i. e., without the necessary qualifications is to purchase condemnation to one's self, and the church should clearly state this, and state what these qualifications are, but this is the end of her responsibility.

In the next verse, immediately after the one we have just noticed, Paul says: "But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread and drink of that cup." If the man examine himself, he alone can be the judge of the result, and determine whether he possesses the necessary qualifications or not. The church cannot sit in judgment upon any man's conscience. "To his own Master he standeth or falleth."

It may be a matter of little importance whether Judas partook of this supper or not. I am of the opinion, from the simple narratives in the case given by the three evangelists, that he did; but, whether he did or not, let no one claim that Jesus would have denied it to him on the ground that he did not possess the necessary qualifications, and that hence the church has the right to sit in judgment upon the conscience of any one who claims to have examined himself, and to be the judge of his own conscience.

PRIOR.

From Invalid.

MR. EDITOR: Your New Year's call was a most welcome one to us, and we felt that we had at least one constant friend—one that did not pay us a mere formal call—nor did you "despise our low estate," for your greeting was as cordial as you entered my "Bethel" as it was to those who do not prize you as their only rich treasure. You came like a carrier-dove, on unwearied wings, hasty a long mile, from the great city of the South, from the summer-land of the orange and magnolia, through marshy swamps, overshadowed by the mossy "curtains of death," where royal trees lift their giant forms toward the "ethereal blue", above them, their goodly branches festooned with luxuriant vines, and garlanded with flowers of brightest hues, breathing out fragrance on the air that grew colder as you took your northward flight, passed busy, noisy towns and peaceful vales, through sleeping hamlets and broad fields gleaned, ere the snow-shroud wrapped the old year in everlasting silence. You came "through winding ways" and varied scenes to reach my "home-nest" in the wildwood, freighted with kindly greetings and words of comfort to all, both old and young, words that brought tears to our eyes, smiles to our lips, and sunshine to our hearts. You whispered "hope" to our saddened hearts, infused new energy into our drooping spirits, made us forget self in enlisting our sympathies for others.

Yes, you brought a message to all, both old and young, to the aged grandmother, over whose head the snows of eighty-one winters have drifted, whose brow is wreathed with "almond blooms," but whose heart is still "tuned to sing His grace," for I heard her on her birthday morning singing the refrain of an old, old song:

"When we land on Canaan's shore,
We'll be safe forevermore."

But the grandmother was not the only one who gave you a welcome. There was the widowed mother, whose heart you made "to sing for joy." "Young men and maidens" extended to you the hand of welcome; and oh! to "the least of all these," your coming and kind "wishes" for the New Year, your every word of consolation, was gathered as precious jewels, and treasured in the casket of the heart. To that one it was as the touch of a gentle hand, invoking upon the bowed head the "benediction," breathing the aching brow with peace, building the heart "be of good cheer." But there was no ruby wine "giving its color in the cup," no bowl flowing with "the dark beverage to create," instead of quenching a maddening thirst. No; we keep no "dark waters" of the river of death, "in which men's souls are drowned in perdition," to tempt any one. This deadly poison has never touched the lips nor poisoned the breath of any of our "little flock." No unsteady footsteps cross our humble threshold, and I pray that death itself may claim them, every one, ere intemperance enters as a wolf into our peaceful fold. As I think of the New Year, a "diary" of three hundred and sixty-five pages, in which men write "the record of the soul," and, having written, would fain blot out with tears and even blood, I wonder, hope and try to read some "signs of promise" for the future, then pause and ask: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" "What thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

My earnest prayer to God is that He will appoint our work, and guide us by His Holy Spirit, believing and trusting in this: "As thy days may demand shall thy strength ever be." Already we have begun to record "deeds and events" upon the first pages of the unopened volume, opened only as "a new leaf" is turned for us, and alas! how many sad, bitter tears have fallen upon the blotted, interlined and, to many, almost blank pages.

Some must have dipped their pens in gold,
To write such glowing pages,
Whose story shall again be told—
Shall live in future ages.

Many will begin to write, but, ere the last leaves have been turned, death will mark with sable lines the gilded margin of the unfinished page, and with the icy hand write: "The End."

Fighting.

MR. EDITOR: Carnal wars and individual fightings have the same origin. They originate in the depraved nature of man. They are alike in their source and alike in character. The Apostle James says: "They come hence, even of your lusts that war in your members." Therefore, no man ever fights his fellow-man till he first fights in himself. There is war in his members—nerves, muscles, blood, head and heart—before fists and feet. The heat of his blood, the rush of his passions, and the storm of his wrath, cast him down to the level of a beast. Then he leaps or rushes into danger and destruction as destitute of true manhood as the wild and furious animal. And yet some great men call this courage. The historian records his deeds of chivalry, and the poet celebrates his fame in flowing strains of measured rhyme. The man who strikes down his foe with one terrible, death-dealing blow is honored, praised and idolized by the seething, surging masses of depraved humanity, while the man, in his exalted and true manhood, is censured, condemned and hated, despised and shunned, who has the moral courage and self-possession to submit to a blow given in anger without returning it, without railing for railing and blow for blow.

The fighting man follows and worships Mars, an idol, god of war, while the other follows and obeys Jesus Christ, the Son of the eternal, omnipotent God, who says thus in the sermon upon the mount: "I say unto you that ye resist not evil, but, whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." The word smite, in the original, is very strong. Rapidzo, from rapis, a stick, means to smite with a stick. Who of the worldly and sensual-minded believe this? What efforts have been made to change the language and meaning of Christ by saying that He meant to say: If any one lawly smite thee with the tongue—speak against thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also? The great Apostle Paul, following Christ in doctrine and spirit, says: "Render to no man evil for evil." This is John Wesley's translation, and it was His spirit and practice, as his life and labors abundantly show. This shows true manhood and true courage. Thus we conquer the world by conquering self. What a victory! "He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city."

Some professed Christians practically reject the rule and doctrine of the great Teacher, that come from God, and adopt the blood-thirsty and destructive theory and practice of the old Greeks and Romans and modern infidels. Hence you see Christian men going about with deadly weapons upon their persons, notwithstanding Christ says: "They that take the sword (or pistol) shall perish with the sword"—perish in body and soul for time and eternity.

Even some Christian parents will teach their noble sons to break the word and law of Christ by observing and keeping the law of retaliation—word for word and blow for blow. Perhaps this is done from a sense of self-defense, for some wicked fathers teach and command their boys to fight, and glory in their sins. What a shame.

What a pity that the peaceful and loving spirit and teaching of the Son of God cannot prevail in all communities and households! What a pity that the warlike sentiment of the ancient and modern heathen should so powerfully prevail in our so-called Christian country!

"I am not great like Cæsar, stained with blood;
But only great as I am good."

ANGUS HOWLING.

VILLULA, ALA., Jan. 27, 1881.

Centralia, Texas.

MR. EDITOR: I take the pleasure of writing you a few lines in relation to Texas, as to what it needs:

1. It should have men of firmness, that would enforce the whisky law, and put down the sale of it at all hazards.

2. We need more Methodist preachers here. If they are needed in the heathen lands they are here, as an old brother told me the other day. We need more of the old State people here also, some of those old war-horse Methodist preachers that would hold up their heads and contend for their denomination. Now, in this section of country, in Trinity county at least, there is a number of good Methodist families that never get to hear a Methodist preach, most especially around Centralia and eastward to Homer. A large scope of country all vacant. Mr. Editor, I came here one year ago, and would be well satisfied, could the country be revived with religion. This is the place for poor people to immigrate and organize churches. Fine lands and range for stock as ever could be desired, and a great opening for a good work. The Methodists could prosper in this section of country if they could send a minister here.

I remain as ever, a fervent Methodist,

H. C. COOK.

Marriages.

SELMAN—MOORE.—At the residence of the bride's father, Joseph Moore, by Rev. D. C. Langford, W. A. Selman to Miss M. A. Moore, all of Lawrence county, Miss.

SANDELL—LENOIR.—At the residence of the bride's mother, near Magnolia, Miss., January 18, 1881, by Rev. J. W. Sandell, Mr. J. M. Sandell and Miss N. E. Lenoir.

ROBERTS—CLARK.—At the residence of the bride's father, Capt. Thomas I. Clark, of Orange Grove, Jackson county, Miss., December 31, 1880, by Hon. J. W. Starr, Mr. Thomas P. Roberts, of Alabama, to Miss Mary Emma Clark.

ALPHA—ADAMS.—At the residence of the groom's father in the town of Franklin, La., January 20, 1881, by Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, Mr. Lymon Herrick Alpha and Miss Alelda Adams, both of St. Mary parish, La.

BAKER—ATKINS.—At the residence of Judge Atkins, in Madison county, Miss., January 13, 1881, by Rev. C. D. Cecil, Mr. B. L. Baker to Miss Alice Atkins, all of Madison county.

TIMS—HENDERSON.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Smith county, Miss., December 22, 1880, by Rev. R. A. Sibley, Mr. I. C. Tims to Miss Elizabeth Henderson.

GILMER—HART.—At the residence of the bride's mother, near Sharon, Miss., at seven P. M., January 20, 1881, by Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, Mr. D. H. Gilmer and Miss Lou. V. Hart.

DANIEL—EPPERSON.—At the residence of the bride's grandmother, on Bayou Boeuf, La., January 20, 1881, by Rev. J. F. Wyly, Mr. J. Monroe Daniel to Miss Ella Epperson.

APPLEWHITE—DAVIS.—At the residence of the bride's stepfather, D. D. Simmer, Tylertown, Pike county, Miss., January 13, 1881, by Hon. J. H. Crawford, Dr. E. L. Applewhite and Miss Lou. J. Davis.

GALLERAN—WELLS.—In the Methodist Church, in Edwards, Miss., January 19, 1881, by Rev. E. H. Mounger, Mr. James Galleran, of Jackson, Miss., and Miss Willie M. Wells, of Edwards.

PARHAM—HARLEY.—At the residence of W. R. Harley, on the A. M., January 5, 1881, by Rev. W. W. Graham, Mr. R. H. Parham to Miss V. E. Harley, all of Dallas county, Ark.

MIZELL—SORRELL.—At the residence of D. G. Sorrell, at two P. M., January 20, 1881, by Rev. W. W. Graham, Mr. W. D. Mizell to Miss Mary S. Sorrell, all of Dallas county, Ark.

BLANKS—FAULKNER.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Columbia, La., January 16, 1881, by Rev. T. J. Baugh, Mr. Henry Blanks to Miss Lily A. Faulkner.

PHARRIS—FERGERSON.—At the residence of Samuel Peace, Esq., January 18, 1881, by Rev. J. W. Heirn, Mr. William L. Pharris to Miss Hester Ann Ferguson, both of Wyatt parish, La.

TURNIPSEED—FANNIN.—At the residence of the bride's father, January 13, 1881, by Rev. J. L. Skipper, Mr. John T. Turnipseed, Crenshaw county, Ala., to Miss Stella Z. Fannin, of Montgomery county, Ala.

ENGLISH—NORRELL.—At the residence of the bride's father, Hon. Thomas N. Norrell, near Jackson, Miss., January 26, 1881, by Rev. W. H. Leith, Enoch A. English and Miss Laura E. Norrell, all of Rankin county, Miss.

DODDS—SMITH.—January 18, 1881, near Lynton, Miss., by Rev. C. McDonald, Mr. J. R. Dodds to Miss Louise Smith.

HUGHES—SMITH.—January 27, 1881, by Rev. C. McDonald, Mr. C. Hughes to Miss Louise Smith.

McKAY—DAVIS.—December 29, 1880, by Rev. J. W. Shores, Mr. Donald McKay to Miss Lou. Davis, all of Autaugaville, Ala.

BERAMIS—BERAMIS.—January 13, 1881, by Rev. J. W. Shores, Mr. J. Emmet Beramis, of Ala., to Miss Dixie Beramis, all of Autaugaville, Ala.

JOHNSON—POPTIS.—At the residence of the bride's father, December 22, 1880, by Rev. H. Gunn, M. C. William C. Johnson, of Jackson, Ala., to Miss Sallie M. Portis, of Clark county, Miss.

NAILOR—LEE.—At the residence of the bride's father, Dr. L. P. Lee, in Natchez, December 21, 1880, by Rev. J. Pipes, Mr. J. M. Nailor to Miss Mary Lee, all of De Soto parish, La.

STAYTON—HAYES.—At the Methodist Church, in Coushatta, January 5, 1881, by Rev. J. B. Cassity, Mr. John W. Stayton, of Red River parish, La., to Miss Bell H. Hayes, of Coushatta, La.

Obituaries.

MRS. S. E. BOLAND, wife of Rev. J. M. Boland, of the Alabama Conference, was born in Marengo county, Ala., October 26, 1836, and died in Greenville, Ala., January 12, 1881. She was the daughter of John and Sarah Remington; she was married in 1860, in 1866 she professed religion and joined the Methodist Church.

Her maturity of mind and experience in the things of God, enabled her to enter intelligently into the married relation. She became the wife of an itinerant Methodist preacher, with a knowledge of the sacrifices she was to make, the sacrifices she was to undergo, and the Christian fortitude she was to possess in order to endure the hardships of the life she chose. Having once consecrated herself to the service of helping her husband in the work of the ministry, she never faltered in purpose, spirit or life. Wherever his lot was cast she co-operated with him in "using the furtherance of the gospel."

Sister Boland had some prominent characteristics of, womanly and Christian character. She looked well to the ways of her household, and ate not the bread of idleness. Energy, industry and activity were exemplified in the discharge of the various duties of every-day life. There was an orderly and seemly arrangement in all the appointments of the house. Neatness sat enthroned in every department. The strictest economy was practiced, that her husband might not be embarrassed by debt, and that they might educate their children. Hospitality opened wide the doors of the house over which she presided, and friends particularly ministers and their families, received a hearty welcome. She made friends and kept them. There was an independence of thought and bearing about her that attracted all of like character. In all places where she lived there are many friends whom she loved dearly, and of whom she spoke touchingly in her last days. Her thoughts turned to Huntsville, Tuscaloosa, Talladega, etc., and she called up the names of many loved ones, whom she regretted she could see no more in the flesh. Cheerfulness was natural to her, patience was a possession with her.

About eight years ago an insidious disease began its work of undermining her strong constitution. Against its attacks she opposed a strong force of energy and will, and at times she and her friends hoped that she would triumph over its ravages. All this time her sufferings were great.

Two years ago last Behind transferred from the North Alabama to this Conference, thinking that a change of climate would be beneficial to her. Up to a few months ago she was able to visit occasionally her friends. The last three months were spent in bed and her decline was rapid until her death.

As her pastor I visited her frequently during her residence in this place, and always found her cheerful. Whilst she was not demonstrative in her feelings she was always ready to give a reason of the hope that was in her. To her husband she talked freely of her hopes beyond the grave, and gave him assurance of her readiness to depart and be with Christ. She was never known, but once, to show impatience under her sufferings, but her complainings were soon checked and hushed with the word of submission to the will of God.

She leaves five children, four girls and one little boy, whom she cheered and strengthened with her godly counsel to live as she leaves a bereaved husband, who will long remember her brave words urging him forward to the faithful discharge of his duty. She leaves many friends who will delight to cherish her memory. She leaves a church and community that united tearfully with her family in committing her body to the grave, there to await the day of the resurrection.

W. H. MORLEY.

ASA COLEMAN died at his residence, near Sharon, Madison county, Miss., October 27, 1880, aged seventy-five years. He was born in Adams county, Miss., April 2, 1805, was converted and born of God at the old Pleasant Grove camp ground, in August, 1838. He then and there joined the Methodist Church, and from that hour to the time of his death he continued a consistent member and devoted Christian.

The death of a good man is a public calamity. Some one has said: "It is in vain to talk of men numerically; if the passions of a man are exalted to a sublimity like the majestic steadiness with which St. Paul points out the single object of his life, and the unquenchable courage with which he walks toward it, he is a thousand men!" If we are not mistaken in the estimate of his character, this thousand men power was in the soul of Asa Coleman. But he is gone. How then shall we estimate the loss sustained by the Sharon Church and community? We feel that our loss is beyond computation, for who can estimate the value of one prayer offered to Jehovah in faith? Who can count the blessings vouchsafed in answer to such prayer? We know the "effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much," but how much eternity alone may reveal. Our loss is irreparable, but we rejoice to believe his gain is of infinite value. My personal acquaintance with Bro. Coleman was limited to one year's pastorate, but during that short term we learned to love him with all the ardor and affection due a "Father in Israel." We were impressed from the beginning with his modest behaviour and meek, gentle disposition. He was faithful and affectionate to his pastor as to his own son, true and trusty in his counsels, wise in his admonitions, and yet he was ready and willing as a little child to sit at the pastor's feet. He seemed to feel that he honored the Saviour by honoring His messenger, however humble the messenger may have been.

Brother Coleman was not a demonstrative man, but on suitable occasions he was ready to give a reason for the hope within him. His religion consisted not merely in subscribing to an orthodox creed, and the observance of rites and ceremonies, but in addition thereto he had a vital personal experience, a knowledge of the great truth that his sins were forgiven by reason of his faith in Christ and trust in the merit and efficacy of His blood to cleanse from all sin. He loved the Saviour supremely, and believing that all men were the subjects of redeeming grace, he loved the soul of every son of Adam, and fully appreciated everything that interests humanity. He was mindful of his deeds, cautious in all his acts. He never said foolish things; there was thought in all his words and wisdom in all his thoughts. He was companionable and sympathizing. There was no coldness or selfishness about him. He loved every man whom he believed loved the Lord Jesus Christ, hence he found his way to the confidence and esteem of every one, old and young, rich and poor. His heart was always to the front; so that a stranger was first impressed with the goodness of the man and the purity of his purpose; a natural draft upon his confidence which he was sure to honor. He never went anywhere that he did not carry the meek and lowly Saviour of the world with him; neither would he long continue where Christ was not welcome, and it was next to impossible to keep his society without being impressed with the loveliness and purity of the religion he professed.

In nothing was the character of Bro. Coleman more strongly marked than his decision and firmness. He had his own thoughts and came to his own conclusions; and while he was ready to hear the views of others and be advised, yet his own mind had to be made up, then he would do right without regard to cavilings, sneers or surroundings.

He was a devoted lover of Methodism, yet he was no bigot; he was a lover of peace and all good men. While he was clear in his convictions that the church of his choice was constituted for good, and was adapted to meet the wants of the masses, yet he was not blind or indifferent to the piety and usefulness of others.

Beyond price and characteristic hospitality were his distinguishing characteristics. When he had means in his possession no poor preacher could go without a horse or general outfit; no poor widow could die without bread or the means of educating her children. Benevolent institutions of all sorts were his debtors. Had he been a millionaire like Lowry he would have been a father to the blind; to the lame, a father to the poor. With his limited means, and often embarrassed, he made many a widow's heart sing for joy, and many an orphan rise up to bless him; more than one preacher will never his name and cherish its memory.

In his social relations he was peculiarly agreeable. His friendships were strong and undying. No change of fortune, though he was greatly injured thereby, changed his attachments. He never forsook, and, I presume, rarely, if ever, lost a friend. In his household the family altar was never thrown down or neglected, but all were present at the offering of the morning and evening sacrifice. His personal piety was like the rest of his character, consistent, evangelical. His whole character was a beautiful model. His death has made a wide chasm in the social and religious circles in Sharon and Madison counties. He is not lost, but gone before. In a conversation with him only a few hours before his death he said: "For more than forty years I have tried to live the life of a Christian in order to die the Christian's death." We thank God he was not disappointed, but realized the verity of the precious promise, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me," and experienced the happy truth, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.

Few men have been called from among us whose death sent such a dagger to so many hearts. But our sorrow is not without hope. A bright vista opens up before the eye of faith where a happy reunion will take place in that "land of pure delight, where saints immortal reign." May the blessed Saviour sanctify his death to the growth in grace of the Sharon church and people.

May God bless his descendants to the latest generation; may they receive Christ with power to become the sons of the Lord Almighty. May the riches of all grace bind up the broken hearted widow, give unto her "beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness," and enable her to realize, "Thy Maker is thine husband, the Lord of hosts is his name." Amen.

EASTON.

Resolutions relative to the death of the venerable Asa Coleman, of Madison county, Mississippi.

At the First Quarterly Conference for Sharon circuit, Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which met at Lone Pine, January 15, 1881, W. L. C. Hunnicutt, T. L. Halliday, and John M. Beale were appointed a committee to draft resolutions relative to the death of the veteran Asa Coleman. The committee reports as follows:

WHEREAS, Brother Asa Coleman was for many years a member of the Methodist Church, and of this Quarterly Conference, and was a regular attendant upon all the services of the church and upon all the sessions of this body, filling acceptably for years the offices of steward, trustee and Sunday school superintendent, and was remarkably faithful and resolute in the discharge of all his duties, especially in the untiring manifestation of a most fervent and honorable zeal in the cause of God; and

WHEREAS, It has pleased God since our last meeting to call Brother Coleman, in the ripeness of his years and in the fullness of his labors, from his earthly home to his heavenly reward; therefore be it

Resolved, That while we would honor his memory as a priceless treasure, and would glorify God for such a manifestation of his grace in one of our tainted race, we would also strive to imitate his worthy example and emulate his holy zeal in the Master's service.

Resolved, That though we would sympathize with his bereaved family, we would congratulate them upon the inestimable inheritance which his godly life and saintly death have bequeathed indefeasibly to them.

Resolved, That these resolutions be recorded upon the journal of this Quarterly Conference, and that a copy of the same be forwarded to the family of the deceased, and that a copy be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT,
For Committee.

MRS. CATHARINE HIMES, widow of the late John Himes, died on the morning of October 25, 1880, near Maryon, Russell county, Alabama, in the seventy-fifth year of her age.

My mother was of Scotch parentage. Her father and mother were married in Scotland, and in the first years of this century, removed from the Island Skye to North Carolina. She was the first of their children born in America, and third from the youngest in a family of seven sons and daughters, all of whom she survived by several years.

She was brought up and lived all the earlier part of her life in the Presbyterian Church, and to the time of her death she loved it; loved its sacraments, ordinances and history. For her it had sweet and hallowed memories. About the year 1844, after having first united with her parents in South Carolina, and subsequently in 1835 in Alabama, there being no church of her own near, after a struggle, and with a view to influencing my father, who was still an unconverted man, she joined the Methodist Church and remained in it. In due time her example and influence had their proper effect, and her prayers were answered. He embraced religion, joined the church with her, became conspicuous for his piety, and died (in 1856) in the faith, leaving behind him a good testimony and a glorious record.

Doubtless in every man's heart his mother is enshrined as its sainted image. But how difficult for me even faintly to portray the sweetness and consistency, the humility and trustfulness of her character, or to delineate her Christian virtues. "None knew her but to love her."

Her death was comparatively a painless death, a "falling asleep in Jesus." She was not only ready, but "anxious to depart." The night before her death, although scarcely able to speak, she repeated several verses of a favorite hymn: "I saw One hanging on a tree." And as I write these lines, and the memory of the many hours she would so affectionately ask me to sing that hymn, and how she rejoyed it; and the recollection of our old home, which was always a hospitable, cheerful home, happy home because she was there; and the remembrance of her widowhood, as well as that remotest event in my memory—her prayers and instruction, when I was yet but a child—fill me with emotion.

For nearly forty years she suffered from a wasting, fatiguing cough, which grew worse each succeeding year till her life was worn away. Through it all she was uncomplaining and resigned.

Her only two children survive her. But oh, how we miss her who is gone! To my mind the most convincing evidence of the truth of the Christian religion was her earnest testimony, "William, I know that Jesus died for me, and for you, and for all, and we can trust Him. Only trust Him." And she illustrated her faith grandly in all her life. We render devout thanks to God for such a mother.

There was hope, even consolation in her death, to us who remain are sad; but we can't comfort ourselves with this reflection. After a while, when all is over, what a meeting there will be!

W. M. HIMES.

MRS. REBECCA G. PORTIS, wife of Col. J. H. Portis, was born May 10, 1810, near Sugarville, Clarke county, Ala., the place of her residence during life, except in the year 1841, when she spent in Washington county, Texas. She was attacked with a violent form of fever November 19, 1880, and lingered until the first day of December, 1880, when at 8:30 P. M. her spirit fled to God.

Sister Portis joined the church with her husband in October, 1832, under the ministry of the Rev. Jesse Boring, D. D., and from that day, until the day of death, kept the vows which she that day took. A consistent walk, holy life, and consecrated talents have had their influence on her family. Seeing their devotion to the church, and in their liberality in the support of its institutions, indeed, the claims at this place, and on this circuit, owe much under God to the subject of this obituary. She died as she lived, in full view of the kingdom. During her illness, she asked her husband and her brother, Dr. Rivers, M. D., in feeble order. They read selections from the Scriptures and from the Christian's Secret of a Happy Life. Hymns were sung at her request by a dear lady friend, kneeling by her bedside—"Jesus, lover of my soul," and "Rock of Ages." These are always good, but eminently so by the test of a dying saint. When in the company one always felt that he was in the presence of a devout and holy woman. But her last words were her crowning days, a very good sermon filled with the Divine Spirit. When very low, her husband asked her how she would like to die. Her prompt answer was, "All right, all bright." When it was known that she was dead, a wave of sorrow passed over the whole community. The preachers have lost a good friend, the church an active, consecrated member, the family an affectionate, loving mother, the husband a devoted wife. May her goodness live and exemplary Christian character leave a lasting impression on our hearts.

Mrs. J. H. Rush, daughter of Bishop Andrew, and wife of her former pastor, writes that many eyes were suffused with tears as they read the notice of her death. I cannot tell you how bereaved I felt, when I realized that another had passed away from my circle of friends. Earth is growing more dreary to me every day, as "friend after friend departs," leaving me in sadness and tears. To the community, and especially to the preachers and their wives, in this a heavy loss. In all my life I have never known a more unselfish woman.

In every relation of life she was a model. As a wife, faithful and loving; as a mother, tender and devoted; as a daughter and sister, affectionate and kind; as a neighbor and friend, ever thoughtful and attentive. I shall never, while life lasts and memory lives, forget her as my true and faithful friend, during the five years that I lived in Suggsville. I believe there was not a day that I was not the recipient of some kindness at her hand.

J. H. JAMES.

WILLIAM C. MAYS, the subject of this memoir, was a native of Georgia; he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in early manhood, moved to Louisiana in 1847 and settled in the town of Sparta, where he lived until his death, December 9, 1880, having entered his eighty-fourth year.

Brother Mays was an active supporter of the Church and her institutions as long as he was able so to do. He was a man highly respected, both in the church and the world, by all who knew him. He was modest in his pretension to religion, but firm as a Christian. By industry and economy he accumulated a handsome fortune, and lived to see it swept away by the fortunes of the late war, and his wife and a majority of his children pass from the stage of action.

Several years before his death he lost his hearing, which deprived him in a great measure of hearing the gospel preached. He was the subject of great affliction the latter part of his life. In his last illness he was confined to his house some eight or nine months, and most of that time to his bed. The writer of this sketch was with him a good deal during his affliction, and conversed with him on religious subjects. He always expressed himself as being ready to meet his doom. He conversed freely about eternity and the great day. He spent a great deal of his time in prayer and religious thought. On Friday, December 3, he closed his earthly career and expired without a struggle.

So passed away one of our oldest and best citizens, leaving an example worthy to be patronized by every one. He was universally respected and beloved by all who knew him. His place will be vacant in the church. He will be missed in the community. His family will feel their loss, but all must submit to the dispensation of God's providence, and comfort themselves by remembering that "our loss is his eternal gain."

R. M. CHISSOM.

MRS. JULIA A. BURNETT, a member of Baker's Hailes station, Louisiana Conference, died November last, aged sixty-three years.

Three months before her death she was stricken down with partial paralysis, and from that time until she was gathered to her fathers she suffered very deeply and painfully. Three days before death it assumed its worst and most fatal form. Her absent children were sent for, and they arrived in time to receive her parting blessing. She assured them she had been, and was then, a "soldier of the cross," a soldier who followed the Lamb, was not ashamed of His cause, and who never blushed to speak His name. To own herself a soldier of the cross was to own all. This was confessing Christ before men, and she has the Saviour's promise that He will confess her before the angels of God. The good of such a name bequeathed to the church is only surpassed by the reward given.

J. P. SECULOX.

SISTER CHARITY ROGERS, daughter of Samuel and Eliza Thompson, was born March 3, 1845, in Benton Co., Alabama. Died in Smith Co., Miss., October 18, 1880.

She, with her parents, came to Mississippi December, 1855; rejoiced and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in September, 1865; was married to Timothy L. Rogers, December 18, 1866. She was a consistent church member and Christian from her conversion until she exchanged earth for heaven. She was not afraid to die, only regretted leaving her children and husband, Sister Rogers leaves eight children, and husband, with many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. May heaven's blessings rest upon them! May they all meet her in heaven!

R. A. SIBLEY.

WILLIAM THOMAS, son of George A. Thompson, of St. Francisville, La., died January 18, 1881, age seventeen months.

"Of such is the kingdom of heaven." May the bereaved parents be sustained by the grace of Him who has not said, "Seek ye my face in vain."

G. M. L.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1881.

A SONG IN THE NIGHT.

BY HANNAH NORA JOHNSON.

Blow, wintry wind! The clouds to-night
Chase silvering past the unconscious moon;
And stars far back with startled light
Peer out to hail your fitful tune;
Wild north wind, open gate-ways bright,
Where snow-drifts over heaven are strewn.

Blow, wintry wind, through branches bare;
Sweep round the house with wail and sigh;
Your wildest song brings naught of care,
Your saddest cast but murmur by.
Through storm or calm I'll onward fare,
Soon, soon to rest 'neath summer sky!

To me, so long a pilgrim here,
Full many a change hath cloudlike come;
My soul hath groped its way in fear
When Hope with weary wing sat dumb!
Now, though the way be rough and drear,
Beyond I see the lights of home!

Beyond earth's wild mist-troubled sky
Stretches the deep, unsounded blue;
And bursts of light all gloriously
By many a rift are streaming through:
And Faith, if all seemed dark on high,
Could pierce where stars clear heaven strew.

Blow, wintry wind! clouds, silver sailed,
Crowd all the blue and silent main;
Ships, angel guided, angel hailed,
Like you, my barque, speeds port to gain,
For One whose skill hath never failed
Is with me on the waves again.

Sing on, my soul! The time will come
When wind and cloud will cease to be;
I'll trust His hand to steer for home,
My Pilot o'er life's tossing sea;
Safe though all its billows foam
And track the way Love guideth me!

—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

Our Pulpit.

A Christmas Sermon.

BY REV. R. H. RIVERS, D. D., OF THE ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor.—Hebrews 2, 9.

It has been customary, from time immemorial, and among all civilized people, to celebrate the anniversaries of the birth of great men. The custom is a sacred one, and presents to us the bright side of human nature. It is well for a people to hold in perpetual remembrance the deeds, the noble deeds, of her great and good. While it bestows honors upon the deserving, it encourages the young.

We have met to-day to commemorate the birth of the most wonderful being that has ever made his record on the page of history. His birth, a miracle; his life, a succession of wonders; his death, sad and awful as it was, yet marking but a brief parenthesis in his astounding career, all establish the proposition, that there is none like him in all the earth. Modest and unassuming as he was, he has concentrated on himself a deeper interest than has ever been experienced in reference to any or all other characters. His coming had been the theme of prophets and bards for many centuries. In the most glowing language his advent had been proclaimed as marking the sublimest epoch in the march of time. It was to be the beginning of an era, whose moral force could not expend itself for the whole of coming time. It was to present humanity in a new role. It was to give to the world an example of every virtue, and in such perfection as to defy criticism on the one hand, or rivalry on the other. That advent was at once to be the most sacred and the most sublime theme of the pulpit, the highest joy of prattling infancy, the purest delight of childhood and youth, the only source of real strength in the prime of manhood, and the comfort and peace of quiet and hopeful old age. It was to be accompanied by such manifestations, and to be illustrated by such exhibitions of power and glory as would be sufficient to convince the world that the child, foretold by Isaiah, had been born; that the star of Jacob had arisen; that David's Lord had been anointed, and that Daniel's Ancient of Days had come.

I. We shall now attempt to show that Jesus deserves to be crowned with glory and honor by the human race.

1. Jesus should be honored because he is the great representative character of the human race. It is for this reason that a nation crowns with honor her chief citizens. It is on this account that such names as Fox and Pitt, as Washington and Henry, as Webster and Clay and the rest are so highly honored, both in Europe and America. These, and others like them, have ever been regarded as the great representative men of their race and age. But Jesus is the representative of all ages, and of every race of man. Born into the world a helpless infant, he is the representative of universal childhood. So along all the stages of life he is our representative. A hero, he represents heroes; the great physician, he is the representative of physicians; the noble, unselfish, and successful advocate with the judge eternal, he represents all advocates; a king, he represents royalty; a servant, he represents servitude; tender, affectionate, gentle and benevolent, he represents woman; the descendant of Abraham, he represents the Jews, and coming from Ruth, he represents the Gentiles; of the family of Shem, he represents the race of Ham on the one side, and the children of Japhet on the other. But two great historic characters have trodden this earth as the universal representatives of the race of man; they were Adam and Christ. As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. Adam brought death, Christ offers life. The former forfeited Eden, the latter purchased heaven. By man came death, and by man came the resurrection. Adam brought condemnation, Jesus brought justification. By the former we are all corrupt, by the latter we are all redeemed. Jesus was the voluntary representative of man. He took upon himself man's nature, that where sin abounded, grace might much more abound. Let us therefore crown him with glory and honor, for he is worthy.

2. Jesus is our great teacher, and therefore deserves to be crowned with glory and honor. No man ever spake like this man. He alone, of all the teachers of truth or of duty, never made a mistake. Perceiving truth with infallible accuracy, and with the clearness of intuition, he uttered it as one having authority. He pursued no metaphysical investigations and followed out no elaborate arguments in order to arrive at truth. Truth was native to his great intellect. It flowed from his lips as the crystal stream gushes from its native fountain. Never before had truth appeared so graceful, for never before had it been uttered with so much simplicity. With the simplicity of a child, without premeditation, and sometimes almost without an audience, he uttered truths which are worthy of constant repetition, until the last sand shall fall from the hour-glass of time. He uttered sentiments which have thrilled our humanity for more than eighteen centuries, and which will continue to thrill it forever. And yet he uttered these sentiments, not only without ostentation, but without effort and with a simplicity at once astonishing as inimitable. Wiser than Socrates, profounder than Plato, more learned than Aristotle, he taught a philosophy whose depths have never yet been explored, and whose heights have never yet been reached. His teachings, simple in their grandeur, lofty in their sublimity, and awful in their import, have never lost by comparison with the teachings of others, have grown brighter the more they have been examined, and have been found to need neither change, modification, nor amendment, during the lapse of centuries. We might as well think of changing the composition of water, or of modifying the elements of the air we breathe, as of changing, in the least, the teachings of Jesus. The more we study them, and the more thoroughly we subject them to the most rigid analysis, the more we feel that their origin is divine, their very elements immutable, and their destiny eternal. Furnishing themes on which thousands of volumes have been written, and subjects for poetry and song, for painting and sculpture, they have proved themselves to be as inexhaustible as they are immutable and immortal. Surely none that ever read discourses, to which he never put a pen, and which often fall from his lips in familiar conversation, but whose wisdom no one can doubt, and whose truth all must admit, can hesitate on this, the anniversary of his birth, to crown him Lord of all.

3. But still more does he deserve to be crowned with glory and honor, as he is our Redeemer. Redemption is the grandest thought that Divinity ever revealed or humanity ever conceived. It is the sublimest exhibition of the divine attributes, and it presents them to us with a fulness of display, to which creation and Providence combined, were altogether unequal. He is our Redeemer, and redemption is the greatest work of God, and the greatest blessing to man. In this work is seen the love of God, in its length, and breadth, and depth, and height. In it we see God manifest in the flesh, justified in the spirit, and received up to glory. In it mercy and truth meet together, righteousness and peace kiss each other. It is the essence of justice, the embodiment of wisdom, the soul of love, the day-spring of mercy and the fountain of life and immortality. It emptied heaven of His glory to fill earth with His praise. It linked Divinity with humanity by ties which can never be broken. It humbled Divinity that it might exhalt humanity. It crucified the Son of God that it might crown the sons of men. It created a brief silence among the angels in heaven that it might raise a prolonged shout among the inhabitants of earth. It turned the wailings of despair to the raptures of hope, and converted the gloom of the grave to the light of immortality. It found man a prisoner and unbarred the doors; it found him bound and loosed his fetters; it found him enthralled and proclaimed to him life, light, liberty and salvation. Jesus accomplished this work. Alone he trod the wine-press of the wrath of God. Alone he endured the agony which caused him to exclaim, at one time, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death," and at another and still more awful moment, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me!" This work of Christ appears to us this day with unusual power. It is to us the voice of God. Tender as Divine mercy, and gushing as the love of God, shining with truth and glowing with eloquence, it commands us to join with seraphim and cherubim, with angels and archangels, and the spirits of the pure and good, and crown him Lord of all; singing, "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts."

II. We come now to our second and last proposition, in which we wish to show how he is to be crowned with glory and honor.

1. He is to be made the perpetual and only theme of the pulpit. Here, at least, he is to have no rival. In this sacred place, language and imagination, logic and rhetoric, science and philosophy, are to bring their richest offerings and lay them at the feet of Jesus. From him the eye of the pulpit is never to be averted, and of him its inspired tongue is ever to speak. The finger must point and the lips exclaim, "Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world." The pulpit must never be be ashamed of the gospel of Christ, and it must never be so prostituted as that Christ shall be ashamed of it. It must utter no uncertain sound. With piety and learning, with zeal and energy, with boldness and truth, with love and tenderness, it must proclaim Jesus and the cross. Whatever doctrine be unfolded it must center on Jesus Christ, whatever theme be discussed, it must culminate in Jesus, whatever duty be enforced, its claims must be presented in the name of Jesus and whatever ordinances be required, they must point to Jesus, they must symbolize Jesus, all, all must end in Jesus, the Saviour of sinners. So, then, whether I preach of fact or fancy, of feeling or practice, of sin or holiness, of death or life, of God or man, of heaven or hell; Jesus at last is my great one subject, my only theme. I would not take the crown from the head of Christ, to place it on myself, or on my church, or on any ordinance, or rite, or ceremony, or on any man, living or dead; no, no, not for the world. Jesus is the center of our system, the founder of the church, the hope of the sinner, and the light of the world. In his name, through faith in his name, we preach the resurrection and the life. Any other preaching than this uncrowns the Saviour, degrades the pulpit, perverts the gospel, insults the Almighty, and leaves humanity hopeless and helpless. In preaching Christ, I allow no barrier to intervene between the sinner and his Saviour. The gospel places them together and let no man put them asunder. No prison bars, no regions of ice, no sandy deserts, no condition of body, no lack of an ordinance, no absence of a minister, can prevent a present Saviour, or delay for one moment a present and glorious salvation. And I put it, that if Jesus can not save me, except through some ordinance, or by means of some rite, ceremony, or sacrament, then, indeed, he is not a complete Saviour. I put it, that a Saviour who has to divide his glory with the priest or with the sacrament is not all-sufficient. I put it that all who confide salvation to the channel of the sacraments, give us a sacramentarian instead of a pure spiritual religion. They cut off the hope of millions, and surrendering the omnipotence of Christ, destroy his Divinity, and leave him not only without his crown, but at the will of his ministers; to the mercy of physicians, or to the accidents of climate or of disease. Oh! let not the pulpit thus falter in its great work of glorifying Christ. Let nothing be substituted for the merits of his blood. Let nothing interrupt the humble penitent in his approach to Christ. Let the Saviour, omnipotent in power, ever-present, and all-sufficient, be proclaimed from every pulpit in the land. Let there be no strife here. Let all be as one in making Christ and the cross the light of the pulpit, the glory of the church, and the salvation of the world. I would, my brethren, that there were union here among all the heralds of the cross. Infidelity takes away our Lord, and turns upon us with scorn and hisses. Judaism places on his sacred brow a crown of thorns. Mohammedanism puts him alongside of the false prophet as an earnest reformer, but makes him his inferior in wisdom and in the perfection of his system. Socinianism, in its various forms, robs him of his essential Divinity, deprives him of atoning merit and leaves him a sublime martyr to his faith, worthy of our love and of our imitation, but not of our worship. The whole pagan world rejects him as an imposter, and places the crown, which belongs to him, on the head of an idol. Now, then, is the time for all Christians to unite and crown him Lord of all. Let every living pulpit echo with his name. Let every sermon be full of Jesus. Let him be the Alpha and the Omega of every gospel discourse. Let every preacher strive to see who can elevate the standard of the cross the highest, and who can most effectually crown him with glory and honor.

2. He must be crowned with all the glory and honor that can be brought to him by devout worshippers. Let us worship him in the beauty of holiness. Let us bow down together. Let us sing praises unto him. A living faith shall crown him. A lively hope must crown him. A holy charity, warm, gushing, and tender, must crown him Lord of all. Little children must honor him, and old men must praise him. Young men must magnify him, and Christian maidens must give him honor and great glory.

Religious Intelligence.

MISSIONARY.

—From Mission Rooms of Methodist Episcopal Church:

Rev. A. Strittmater, who for seven years has been identified with our mission in China, is compelled on account of ill-health to return to America, hoping that on the high table-lands of Colorado, his life may be prolonged. This faithful laborer writes to the Missionary Secretaries as follows: "It is with a sad heart that I write to say that my usefulness as a missionary is ended. During the last two months I have been utterly prostrated, and am reduced to such a state of health that I can never hope to regain sufficient strength to be of any more active service. Indeed it is evident that I cannot live much longer in China. Had I only my own interest to consult, I think I could die contentedly at my post, as has long been my wish; but there are others whose claims upon me I cannot disregard. I have a wife and two little children—the eldest not two years old—and for their sakes, if not for my own, I feel that I ought to take measures for protracting my life. There is a chance of my doing so by returning to America. In bringing myself to consent to such an arrangement, I think I have passed through the bitterness of death; having had to resolve to abandon my life-work almost at the outset of my career."

Under date of July 14 Superintendent Hanson reports his safe arrival at Christiana, Norway. He expects, immediately upon the adjournment of the Norway Conference, to return to this country and take the appointment that shall be assigned him.

Miss Maggie Elliott writes from Mexico to the Mission Rooms: "I had a safe and comfortable voyage. Good Bro. Butler met me at Vera Cruz, making the remainder of my journey pleasant and profitable. The scenery is in many places sublimely grand. My first Sabbath in Mexico I arose at five and went with Mr. Butler to one of his appointments. I think he is good and true in his work. He wins the hearts of his people; and although his work is arduous, he and his good wife are always ready with kind words and bright smiles. Miss Swaney is one with whom I feel happy to be associated. The fifty little girls who are our especial care are bright, healthy and happy. There have not been many conversions among them yet, but many of them have an intelligent realization of the claims of the Gospel upon them."

Rev. T. C. Carter, wife and child arrived at Kinkiang, China, safely and well. Mrs. C. writes: "We arrived here the fifteenth after many days of tiresome travel. We stood the trip tolerably well, especially from Yokohama to this place. We rested one week at Yokohama. We found Bro. and Sister Hart and family well. They are noble people, and I do not know what we should do without them, just as we are starting out on this new life. We went to keeping house yesterday."

—The Rev. R. S. McLay says of missionary advantages in Japan: "It seems that, in many respects, the openings in Japan are more favorable than those in other countries. In proof of this we may briefly refer: First. To the social political changes, in the interests of progress and modern civilization, that have recently occured in Japan—changes that would constitute a new era in the history of any country, and which have already done much towards placing Japan among the Christian nations of the wold. Second. To the reverential, impressible and enterprising characters of the Japanese, a character to which the claims of Christianity have never been presented in vain, and which, in the case of the Japanese, gives brilliant promise of quick, glorious returns to the church for her evangelistic effort in this field. Third. To the success which has crowned the efforts of Protestant missions in Japan, a success achieved almost entirely during a period of eleven years (1869-1880), where by the realization of the Government's opposition to Christianity, direct evangelical work in Japan became possible, and a success partially indicated by the formation of Christian churches and the growth of Christian communities in the capital and most of the chief cities of the Empire," etc.—Presbyterian.

—And now the American Baptist missionaries in Southern China say: "The battle for religous liberty is not yet fully fought. It is true there is a toleration clause in the treaties, and if our ambassadors and other officials would insist upon its fair maintenance equally with other treaty provisions, no more and no less, it is not likely the Chinese would think seriously of ignoring it. It is quite evident that if this state of things continue, missionaries in China may be compelled to appeal to influence at home to know whether treaties are made to suit the taste of the vast confluence of the or of a few administrative officers here."—Nothern Christian Advocate.

—The American Unitarian Association, the missionary organization of the Unitarians, has held its fifty-fifth annual meeting in Boston. Receipts of $26,047 the past year were reported, an increase of $20,000 over the previous year. Besides this, there has been raised $20,000 toward the endowment of Harvard Divinity School, and $20,000 for the Channing Memorial Church, in Newport, R. I. It was stated that the mission in India, under Mr. Dall, has a school of 427 scholars, with 23 native teachers.

—There are indications in more than one quarter in China that Chinese officials mean seriously to ignore the toleration clause in the treaties. The English missionaries have had trouble at Foochow. They attribute the persecutions directed against them, which they say are of a character unknown in any Treaty Port for thirty years, to the coldness with which the missions is regarded by the British Minister and Consul.

—The Missionary Tidings asks the ladies of the Methodist Church how it is that the Congregationalist women have raised nearly $100,000 more than the Methodist women for missionary work, and have sent out more than three times as many missionaries, taking into account the fact that there are a million and a half of Methodis, and only half-million Congregationalist?

MISCELLANEOUS.

—The Seminary for Young Women, recently established at Northfield, Mass., by Mr. Moody, is at present very full, the pupils numbering a hundred, and applications from every State still continue to come in. The work of educating Indian girls is in a satisfactory condition. These girls are fourteen in number, and their ages average seventeen years. They are happy in their home there, and are bright and intelligent, mingling freely with the others, and displaying much aptitude and ability in their studies, in housework, and in music. The greatest need of the Seminary is a library. Will not those of our readers interested in this good work, show their appreciation of Mr. Moody's service to the country by sending one or more good books of reference, or one or more dollars, toward the establishment of a library.—Zion's Herald.

—Between the pretensions of the English Episcopal Church and the social relations of some of its clergy, strange things happen sometimes. A memorial window of the late Dr. Raleigh was lately unveiled at Calthorpe Chapel, and the only devotional act on the occasion was the pronouncing of the benediction. No prayer was offered, because, if there had been, a neighboring clergyman who was invited could not have attended. He had no objection to hearing a dissenter pray, but the Bishop of London would not sanction the participation of any of his clergy in a dissenting religious service.

—There was a burial scandal in the village of Lowton, in Lancashire, a fortnight ago. The vicar of the parish objected to the interment of an "out-parishioner," unless according to the rites of the Church of England. The deceased was a Nonconformist, and the father insisted on the service being conducted by his minister. A long wrangle and painful scene occurred when the body was taken to the churchyard; but the vicar ultimately gave away, and the interment took place. One of the church wardens is said to have demanded "a guarantee that there should be no breach of the peace."

—The Congregationalist publishes denominational tables for 1880 prepared under the supervision of Dr. A. H. Quint. The following are the footings: Churches formed, 105; ministers ordained or installed, 205; pastors dismissed, 70; ministers married, 47; ministers deceased, 75. The principal religious assemblies in the United States during 1880 were the Pan-Presbyterian Assembly, the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Methodist Conference, and the Congregational Conference.

—The Rev. E. P. Hammond has been holding revival meetings for upward of seven weeks in Manitoba. He has visited Winnipeg, Emerson, and four other places, holding meetings and preaching night after night in the open air, with the thermometer sometimes 20 below zero. It is estimated that there have been at least 1,000 conversions. Ministers of all denominations co-operated heartily with Mr. Hammond.

—The offer of James E. Temple to place a chime of bells in Holy Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church, Philadelphia, has been accepted, and they will be placed in position as soon as possible. The chime will consist of twenty-five bells, and will be cast in Belgium at a cost of $10,000. They will be rung by the organist, who will have complete control of them without leaving the key-box, as they will be connected by an electric attachment with the organ.

—At the recent annual meeting of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., it appeared that the church has now on its roll of membership 2,481; admitted during the year, 51. The Sunday-school has 1,061 attendants. The total revenue from the pew rents is $10,000, and from other sources $14,076.86, making the total revenue of the church $24,076.86.

—"The Parochial Fund" of the diocese of New York is to be devoted, first, to clerical support, by aiding ministers insufficiently remunerated while officiating on duty in parishes anywhere in the diocese of New York; and, second, to parsonage aid, by helping organized parishes in the purchase of glebes and erection of parsonages.

The annual meeting of the National Camp Meeting Association for the Promotion of Holiness, was held Nov. 23 and 24. It was deemed advisable to hold but two national meetings, one at Round Lake early in July, the other in Warsaw, Ind., early in August.

—Bishop Haven, while on his way to San Francisco, visited Ogden, Utah, Thursday, January 6, and in the evening gave the people an address on "Educating in Utah." The people were greatly interested, and received a new inspiration for the work of Christian education.

—A correspondent of the Lutheran and Missionary advocates the institution of the office of bishop in the Lutheran Church. He attributes the success of Methodism in this country to its peculiar episcopal organization.

—The Australian churches are complaining of a scarcity of candidates for the ministry. The Presbyterian Church of New South Wales, after existing in the country since 1809, now has only one divinity student.

—A committee of fifteen New England Freewill Baptists have selected a site at Old Orchard for a Baptist summer resort, and a village is to be erected forthwith.

—The committee on the further endowment of the Harvard divinity school announce that subscriptions have been received in excess of the sum asked for by them.

Our Young People.

BIDDING THE SUN "GOOD-NIGHT" IN LAPLAND.

[illegible] which the short, bright summer in Lapland is ended, and the sun is about to set, to rise no more for seven or eight months, the people of the hamlets and villages ascend the neighboring hills to see the last of the Day God, and chant a requiem, or farewell psalm, for the parting day.

"Come, little daughters, hasten,
Ye should be bravely dight!
Make ready, boys! for we go forth
To bid the sun good-night.

"Four months with steady shining
He's made the whole earth fair,
And myriad blossoms greeted him,
And bird-songs filled the air.

"But now October waneth;
His setting draweth near;
We shall not see his face again
For more than half a year."

So forth they go, together,
Parents and children, all,
The aged and the little ones,
Young men and maidens tall.

From many a neighboring village,
From many an humble home,
To climb the rocky summit
The thronging people come.

The sun hangs low in heaven;
He throws his slanting rays
Across their loving faces, turned
To meet his parting gaze.

And now he's gone! The darkness
Is settling like a pall,
A long low dirge of sad farewell
Breaks from the lips of all;

In mournful cadence chanting
The requiem of the sun.
"The dear bright day departed now,
The long, long night begun."

And yet with cheerful patience
They take their homeward way,
The elders talking how the time
May best be whiled away.

And many a youthful face is bright
With glad expectance still,
And many a little child
God's dancing down the hill.

—St. Nicholas.

Our Conference.

SHREVEPORT, LA., Jan. 25, 1881.

DEAR MR. EDITOR: I have not troubled you with one of my poor scrawls since the days of Grandpa Gooddale, and I hope you will pardon this intrusion, as I wish to tell you how much I enjoyed the Conference. I know it is not polite, but is it unkind to tell you that yourself and others looked more aged than I expected to see? Oh! I did so much enjoy Dr. Walker's talk to us Sunday-school children. My heart almost burned as he traveled with the dear Saviour from the manger to the cross, walking up and down the world's highways and byways, doing good, calling upon sinners to forsake their sins, healing the sick and lame people, curing those that were distressed in mind or body, and restoring even the dead to their friends. He also took little children in His arms and blessed them. What a blessed Saviour! I want to love and serve Him more and more every day.

And Dr. Kelley's dark picture of heathen lands, where this loving Saviour is unknown. A daughter's own mother does not love her just because she is a little girl. How dreadful! So different with us who have the gospel. We are the bright and sprightly ones at least—the pets of the household. I wish every little girl and boy too, who reads the ADVOCATE, would save the candy, doll and toy money for the missionary cause. I mean to give mine to the Woman's Missionary Society. But I must close, lest I weary you.

Your little friend, FLORENCE.

The Snow Storm.

PATTERSONVILLE, LA., Jan. 27, 1881.

DEAR MR. EDITOR: As I have seen but one letter from this place I thought I would write one. We had quite a little snow storm on Sunday night. The snow was about eight inches deep, and in the morning it was beautiful; the ground and the trees were covered with snow. On Monday night a very heavy frost fell, and in the morning when the sun came out, it sparkled like diamonds. The children and the grown people had a great deal of fun snow-balling. We used to take the ADVOCATE, but mamma does not take it now; a friend of ours lends it to us every week. I like to read the Young People's column. I do not go to school, but say my lessons to mamma. I am eleven years old.

From your little friend,

LILLIAN D. BESTROP.

"Only Five Minutes."

"You have been stopping on the way, Tom," said a poor widow to her son as he gave her the article he had been sent for. "Why don't you come straight home, when you know my time's so precious?"

"I did so, mother, until I got to Mr. Gaskill's," he replied, "and then I stayed to have a look through the window for only five minutes."

"'Only five minutes,'" repeated the widow, "means a great deal when you come to reckon them all up."

Tom Price looked at his mother as if he had not understood her.

"Just reach down your slate," added the widow, "and you'll see what I mean."

Tom had his slate on his knee in a twinkling; "What am I to put down, mother?"

"Well, begin with five, and tell me how many minutes you waste in a day."

Tom wrote the figures, scratched his head, and looked in the fire.

"Would thirty be too many?" asked his mother.

Tom did not think so.

"Very well," continued Mrs. Price; "there are 365 days in a year; and half an hour for each day gives you a total of 1824 hours, or upward of fifteen days of twelve hours each, lost in twelve months."

Tom Price put his pencil between his lips and stared at the sum before him.

"Suppose you put down two hours for each day instead of thirty minutes," added his mother; "that will show a loss of more than sixty days in a year."

Tom Price was a sharp lad, and soon proved the truth of the widow's statement.

"So it does mother," he said.

"But when I send you for anything I want, and you stay loitering in the street, my time has to be reckoned up as well as yours, hasn't it?"

Of course Tom could not deny that.

"Then try and remember," said the widow, "what a serious loss even five minutes are to me. You know, my boy, how very hard I have to work to pay rent, buy bread and keep you at school, so you should endeavor to help rather than to hinder your poor mother."

"I'll run all the way the next time I go," said Tom.

"No, no; I don't want you to do that. I only want you to bear in mind that our lives are made up of those same minutes, and that we cannot afford to throw them away just as we please."

Like a sensible little fellow, Tom Price took his mother's lesson to heart, and it was a long, long time before he was again heard to use the words "Only five minutes."

Let our readers also reflect on the value of precious time, so as to improve it to the best advantage. And let them remember that to help us in this, as in every duty, we need God's grace; and this we shall receive if we ask in the name of Christ. He only can "so teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."—Young Reaper.

Ancient Book-making.

The first mention of a book in the Bible is in Genesis, v. 1, where it is implied that some kinds of records are kept from the very days of Adam. Some think that the book of Job was written earlier than the books of Moses. Without doubt, it belongs to the time of the patriarchs.

Books in the early ages were written on the leaves of the papyrus, on skins, on cloth, on tablets of stone, of wood, of lead and of brass. Among the Hebrews, the sacred books were usually written on skins prepared like the parchment of modern times. To form even one principal section of the Bible, many skins had to be sewed together. When written upon, the connected skin or volume was rolled upon a round piece of wood, or if long, upon two pieces from the two ends. The reader therefore unrolled the book to the place he wanted, and rolled it up again when he ceased to read. (See Luke iv, 17-20. The volume thus rolled upon the pieces of wood could be easily tied and sealed. (See Isa. xxxix, 11; Dan. xii, 4.)

The labor of making, copying and multiplying books by hand was very great. Many persons spent their whole lives in this toilsome work. As the copying of the sacred writing required great care, in order to avoid errors and to make it readable, persons had to be trained to the task. Indeed the copying of the Scripture came to be a second art. In this way arose the profession, and as may be said, the learned caste of the Scribes. As they had the care of the rolls of volumes of the law, they were sometimes called lawyers. Not only did they make copies of the sacred text, but they claimed to explain it, and thus acquired great influence with the people. From our Lord's reproofs to the Scribs of his day, we learn that they did not always use their influence for good.

The chief Scribes among the Jews were teachers. In the outer court of the temple were many chambers, in which they sat on elevated platforms and overlooked their pupils, who sat on lower platforms, and thus at their feet.

When we remember the wars, the captivities and the persecutions of the Jews, we may well consider the safe-keeping and handing-down of the sacred records to modern times as among the wonders of Divine Providence.—Golden Days.

OUR LITTLE FRIEND THE CHIPMUNK.—The chipmunk likes to dig his hole in these dry banks, and you may often hear a rustling in the thick beds of dry leaves loud enough to attract your attention from a distance of fifteen or twenty rods. A cautious approach to the spot will show you a couple of chipmunks chasing each other round and round through the leaves. They will cease from their sports as you come near, but, if you will sit down quietly, they will soon conclude that you are not dangerous and commence again. They often include the trunk of a fallen tree in their circuit, running along its whole length; then, plunging like divers into the leaves, they rush headlong through them, seeming greatly to enjoy the noise and stir which they make. They play in this way for hours; if one stops, the other turns back to look for him and away they go again. The chipmunk can climb as well as any squirrel, and frequently does so when the coast is clear, but if danger threatens he makes haste to "descend." He never can realize that a tree affords him the least security. If you get so near before he sees you that he dare not come down, he plainly considers the situation to be very serious. Sometimes he will make a desperate rush to the ground within reach of your hand, and soon as you withdraw he comes down and scampers away, evidently feeling that he has got well out of a bad scrape. Let his larger cousins, red, black or gray, depend on trees for safety if they choose; his trust is stone walls and brush-heaps, not to mention his burrow. Within reach of these, his easy impudence is in striking contrast with his panic-stricken condition when treed.—Good Company.

WHAT THE BEAR SAID.—Two men had to go through a great wood. One of them was short and stout, and one was tall and slim.

"I could not run fast or climb well," said the short one; "if a foe, man or beast, came on me, I should have to stand my ground."

"Have no fear," said the slim man. "I can run fast and climb well; but still it is my rule to stand my ground—I would fight for you to the last. I fear no man or beast, not I. Hark! what is that noise?"

"I am sure," said the short man, "that is the growl of a bear. I know there are bears in this wood."

The bear was soon in sight. The tall man ran a short way, and hid in a tree. The short one fell flat on his face on the ground and held his breath. The bear came to him, smelt him, and thought he was dead. So he left him, and with a gruff growl or two, went his way.

When the bear was out of sight the short man arose from the ground, and the tall man came down from the tree.

"What did the bear say to you my friend?" said the tall man to the short one. "I saw him put his mouth close to your ear."

"He told me," said the short man, "to put no trust in one who brags in the way you do, for those who boast so much are not brave."

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. J. W. HESS, REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, REV. C. W. CARTER, D. D.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1881.

Values and Services.

The money value of such services, for example, as those of our connectional officers. So far as these services are spiritual and contribute to the salvation of souls and the increased piety of the church they cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. But, in so far as these services bring up the contributions to the cause of missions, doubling them or greatly increasing them, there is a basis of calculation. A book agent, or a missionary secretary, may cost twenty-five hundred dollars for salary, and possibly half as much more for traveling expenses. Besides the religious benefits, from a wide distribution of ministerial talents, is not this expenditure a wise economy in a financial point of view? Is not the value of the service rendered ten times greater than its cost to the church? A single powerful missionary address may so influence a Conference of preachers as to nearly double their collections for the coming year, and it may produce convictions in some minds that will bear fruit through a lifetime of renewed consecration and devotion to Christ. Is it not better to spend four per cent. in raising and disbursing one hundred thousand dollars than to expend one per cent. on fifty thousand dollars? An able missionary secretary is certainly worth many times more than he costs when we merely consider the increased contributions to the cause which he represents.

Our Bishops cost the church three thousand dollars each annually. They are neither seen nor heard by many congregations and individuals who are expected to contribute to their support. But do they not get the worth of their money in the value of the itinerant system to them, as well as in the good to others, which these gifted and wise men may do? It is so much paid toward maintaining a church polity which, on the whole, is perhaps the most effective in the world, and which supplies a better article of preaching, at a cheaper rate, than any other. But for this peculiar system in which Bishops are a necessary condition of the greatest effectiveness, thousands would never have heard the gospel at all, and many poor and obscure congregations would be without regular pastors. The value of a good Bishop can perhaps be best estimated at the Annual Conference, where nearly everything depends upon the proper distribution of the pastors, and the judicious guidance of the business. The interests involved are so tremendous that these forestall and overshadow that which is merely financial. And yet the Bishop may so inspire and tone up a Conference by his large connectional experience and observation, and by the discreet exercise of the appointing power, as to greatly increase the liberality of the church, and to largely promote the support of all her institutions. We might also take into account the fact that a Bishop's addresses and sermons are likely to have a wide publication through the preachers who hear him, and that the presence and labors of Bishops at District Conferences, at college commencements, and wherever they may travel, are helpful to every interest of the church. Directly they do not, and cannot, touch every point and every individual, but indirectly they do. Every congregation and every person is reached and benefitted by their connectional administration. The episcopacy is worth to us financially immeasuredly more than it costs, while its stimulating and vitalizing influence upon the piety and enterprise of the church is simply beyond estimate.

The popular objection to the presiding eldership, so far as any objection exists, is to its cost. Especially, where the stations and circuits are filled with able and experienced preachers, the feeling sometimes obtains that there is little use for presiding elders. They may do as much work as any pastor, but the preaching might be done by the pastor, and the Quarterly Conference business also. The preaching of a fresh man once a quarter, however, is worth something in almost any charge, and in weak and out-of-the-way places the presiding elder re-enforces and strengthens the work. If the strong charges enable him to help and build up the weak, is it not money well expended? The question is not, altogether, what his services may be worth to them, but what they are worth to the district as a whole. The strong ought to help the weak. There is no district in which the services of the presiding elder in the pulpit are not worth as much as that of any one of the pastors. The trouble is that those who think they have the least need of him have the [illegible] Is it not exactly as it ought to be? Ought a church, any more than an individual, to live unto itself? A presiding elder may make himself felt to advantage in every pastoral charge. He may key things up generally, promote the liberal support of the pastor, and inspire increased zeal and activity in missions, education and every great interest. Besides this there must be supervision. There must be somebody to represent the pastor and his work. The Bishop who appoints, the Conference that examines character and official administration, cannot act intelligently without the advice of some one who has a thorough acquaintance with both the preacher and his work. The presiding eldership is essential to the itinerancy, to the maintenance of a general episcopacy. To dispense with presiding elders, we must have a diocesan episcopacy, or congregationalism, our whole system must be changed, and we must cease to be Methodists. Is not Methodism as we have it, with the advantages of an itinerant ministry, and a grand connectionalism, worth much more than it costs? Those who complain of the cost of the presiding eldership are too often those who have not taken in the necessity and value of it as a part of the itinerant system. It is really, when generously supported, one of the cheapest spokes in the itinerant wheel. To endeavor to lessen its importance, to decry it, or to give it a secondary place, whether by pastors, stewards or others, is to strike at the very vitals of Methodism, and to weaken what is one of the most powerful arms of its service.

One of the grounds of assurance that we have passed from death unto life is that we love the brethren. One of the certain marks of death is the cynical doubt or denial of goodness in all others. The hatred born of selfishness animates the simply worldly spirit. To it there is no such thing as purity and uprightness, and, with such convictions, there can be no feeling but that of contempt for those who profess to be governed by a principle of benevolence. A spirit of ill will is commonly aroused in the vicious by the presence and exhibition of virtue and piety. It is affirmed that Cain slew his brother, "because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous."

To be skeptical of all goodness in others is to reveal the lack of it in ourselves. We cannot love a brother as a brother unless there be in ourselves something of the qualities which make up the Christian character. To be capable of loving goodness in others, and of discerning it, there must be goodness in ourselves. In a state of death men delight to believe that all men are, like themselves, under the dominion of selfishness. In a state of life there is the profoundest satisfaction in seeing and believing in the purity and truth of the brotherhood. To some natures it is a gratification to discover blemishes in the character of others, and to them it is as a feast of fat things, when there are intimations of inconsistency or of hypocrisy. To other and better natures such revelations are received with painful regret, and with the deepest sorrow. The emotions thus elicited are decisive of character.

It is the love of Christian brethren to which this high office of assurance is assigned. The love for all men, and for enemies, is a love of pity and compassion, and belongs to the Christian spirit; but the love of the brethren is in the nature of the communion of saints, and is connected with the closer and more intimate relation of religious fellowship. It may seem strange that the love of Christians for Christians should be set forth as proof of a saving spiritual change, and that "we know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." And yet a little reflection will show that this is one of the most conclusive tests. It clearly shows that we love God, because we love His children; and that we love Christ, because we love His followers. It evidences a great change in the heart, which is naturally enmity against God, and arrayed in opposition to Christ, when there is delight and satisfaction in the company of God's people. The force of the evidence is increased by the fact that while we discover much of imperfection and infirmity in the brotherhood this does not obscure the luster of the graces that are in them, nor abate the affection which we have for them. There was a time when we were blind to everything in the church except the defects of its members, and we regarded the best of them with a suspicious eye, and with an undisguised aversion. It was with something more than indifference. It was with decided repugnance. But all this is changed, and now we discern in Christians the beauty of holiness, and are drawn to them by the attractive power of a new life.

[illegible] which marks the Christian character, there is this special aspect of brotherly love. It is adduced as one of the prominent and decisive indications of our spiritual life, as having passed over from death unto life. The recalling of it may be helpful in the process of self-examination, in detecting the presence of selfishness and worldliness, and in determining whether we have any vital relation to the body of Christ. Nor do Christians who dwell upon this evidence of a great spiritual change depart from the sure word. It is not all the evidence, but it is one aspect and ground of assurance and comfort. If there be higher and more direct, we may verify them by this. And the earnest and depressed soul, in the absence of clearer light, and shrinking to grasp other apprehensions of comfort, may at least be cheered by the consciousness of loving the brethren.

In our social meetings this ground is often adverted to. Probably it is because at such times the full force of it is realized, and because the occasion brings out the depth and sweetness of Christian communion. It is in such assemblies of Christ's followers that the passing from death unto life is felt with peculiar joy, and that memory is busy with the contrast between the former days of darkness and the flood of light and love now irradiating the soul.

Death of Rev. W. H. Watkins, D. D.

A telegram informs us that Dr. Watkins died at the parsonage, Jackson, Mississippi, Saturday morning, February 5. At this writing we have received no particulars of the last hours. The sad announcement was not unexpected, as there has been little hope of recovery for the last two months. During this period Dr. Watkins himself entertained little if any expectation of improvement. For some time he was perfectly aware of his condition, and calmly and peacefully waited for the end—the hour of his departure. Entirely prostrate for many weeks, but suffering little pain, and in entire possession of his mental faculties, and generally able to enjoy the converse and presence of family and friends, he lingered on the confines of the better world. At the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, the Jackson station, which he had filled for the past two years, asked that he might be returned as their pastor, with a young man as an assistant, although there was then scarcely any hope that he would ever enter the pulpit again. So deeply were they attached to him that they craved the privilege of ministering to him in his weakness and affliction. In the bosom of his family, at the post of duty, and in the midst of a people whose devotion to him was most tender and considerate, he breathed out a life of consecrated labor and of abundant usefulness.

William Hamilton Watkins was a native of Mississippi, and at the time of his death was sixty-five years of age. He was received on trial in the Mississippi Conference in 1836, and had been a traveling preacher in that Conference for forty-five years. From 1837 to 1846, inclusive, he was stationed in New Orleans, filling in that period nearly all the charges that were at the time organized in the limits of this city. When the Louisiana Conference was set off from the Mississippi Conference, he chose to remain in the old Conference, and returned to Mississippi, where he continued in the pastoral work until his death.

He was a successful and popular pastor, a refined and courteous gentleman, and a minister whose purity of character, and unaffected kindness and sympathy, endeared him to his people. In the grace and urbanity of his manners and address he was a model of the highest Christian manhood. It was impossible for him to be rude or coarse, or to be, anywhere, anything but the refined and noble Christian minister. The simplicity, gentleness and polish of the outward man were only the index of a clean and pure mind—of a character that was indeed without fear and without reproach.

As a preacher Dr. Watkins ranked among the foremost of the Southern Methodist pulpit. Somewhat metaphysical, and delighting in doctrinal subjects, he was most clear and forcible in his exposition of the word of God. He preached to instruct, to convince, and to lead men intelligently to the knowledge of Christ, and to the realization of a new life. He was well posted in theology and in the science and literature of the day, and was, we believe, tolerably well versed in Hebrew, Latin and Greek. We are under the impression that his early literary advantages were not extensive, but by industry and application he had attained to a very creditable scholarship, and was a man of wide information and superior culture. He was always the advocate of liberal education, all his life [illegible] and at one time its honored president. From this institution he very deservedly received the title of Doctor of Divinity, a title which he wore with honor to himself and to the institution that conferred it.

He represented his Conference in several General Conferences, and at the sessions of his Conference was, in the absence of a Bishop, once or twice chosen to preside. He was loved and honored by the members of his Conference, and an acknowledged and trusted leader among them. His mind and heart were in every good cause, and he was ever among the foremost in his advocacy of missions, of church literature and religious education. He was always an earnest and hearty friend of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and for many years past has been one of its Publishing Committee. Only at the last meeting had he failed for years to attend the annual meetings of the committee. We have found him at all times a willing helper, a wise counselor and a true friend.

The more intimately we knew him the more we revered and loved him. It has seemed to us that during the past few years he grew more spiritual and Christ-like, and that the depth and power of his devotion to Christ increased with every interview it was our privilege to enjoy with him. Was it because we knew him better, or because he was being robed for the heavenly kingdom? For us, and for many others, the world is less fair and good now that he is gone. He had a cheerful and sunny nature, and was the life and delight of the social circle. He made himself loved, and his calling respected, among all classes, and in all the walks of life. Few ministers of the gospel had so wide an acquaintance, or were so universally esteemed. His death will be deplored in circles reaching far beyond the bounds of his church.

We shall not intrude into the home, now rendered desolate, where all that was beautiful and good in him shone with a peculiar luster. Certainly no husband and father has ever died leaving a sweeter or more precious memory, or the priceless legacy of a nobler life or a purer character. In the order of nature, he might have served his generation for a few more years, but the curtain has fallen while all the faculties were unimpaired, and before the infirmities of age had come. Better so than to "lag superfluous upon the stage," or to be laid aside through weary years of feebleness and inaction. Dr. Watkins desired that there should be no break in his effective relation as an itinerant preacher. He wished to die in harness. And God has been pleased to order it so.

The wife of his youth, one stepdaughter, two daughters and four sons survive him. To them we tender our sincere condolence. May the divine arms be underneath them in this great sorrow. The children are all grown. Two of the sons are engaged in the practice of medicine in New Orleans, one is planting in Mississippi, and the youngest, Alex., is a licensed preacher, and a student at Vanderbilt. On him may the prophetic mantle fall, and by him may the name be continued on the roll of the Mississippi Conference. We pen these hurried and inadequate lines with the expectation that a worthier and more extended memoir will be furnished by some suitable hand at an early day.

Alabaster Christians.

This figure, at once beautiful and suggestive, belongs to Mr. Spurgeon. In one of his characteristic gospel sermons he introduced the following illustration: "In the Cathedral of St. Mark, in Venice, a marvellous building, lustrous with an Oriental splendor far beyond description, there are pillars said to have been brought from Solomon's Temple. These are of alabaster, a substance firm and durable as granite, and yet transparent, so that the light glows through them. Behold an emblem of what all true pillars of the church should be!—firm in their faith and transparent in their character." The emblem is only less beautiful than the original character. Such Christians the church to-day sadly needs—Christians conspicuous for these two cardinal virtues, stability and transparency. A firmness of faith and inflexibility of purpose that cannot be swerved or compromised, united with a child-like simplicity that attracts by its transparent beauty. The one virtue resists the aggressions of sin, while the other charms and disarms the aggressor. Thus the alabaster Christian becomes more than a conqueror; he defends the faith and makes a friend out of God's enemy.

Though these virtues are at harmony, and are necessary to the symmetrical, perfect development of Christian character, they are not always united in the same person. We often see men of great firmness of will, but without this gospel transparency. Their stability is a kind of dignified awfulness—an inapproachable mysterious majesty. They are opaque bodies, through which the light never glows—spiritualized sphinxes hard to be understood. They are living epistles, but not known and read of all men. We have to study and translate them. Many of their acts must be interpreted and reconciled. As opposed to this is the alabaster Christian. He is transparent. The light flows and glows through him. He is without guile. There is in him nothing dark, nothing concealed. The world takes knowledge of the sincerity of his motives, and the earnestness and honesty of his zeal. He works for the Master with a single eye and a heart of love.

Such Christians are the most useful. They attract friends, and bind them to Christ. This writer once had a valued Christian friend, who was a splendid illustration of this truth. She had no unusual brilliancy of intellect, or marked richness of culture, or even aggressiveness of religious enterprise, yet by the transparent loveliness of her piety was a wise winner of souls. Her purity of motive was unquestioned; it shone through every act, and was voiced in every gentle word. The doubting came to her for counsel, the sorrowing for comfort, and the sin-sick for words of healing and prayerful sympathy. This transparency ought to be cultivated. Our religion was never designed to be hooded and cloistered, but to shine and sing in every home and tone.

It is especially needed in the pastorates. Children prize it above every other virtue or qualification. It wins their confidence and affection. Some men never become the pastors of children, because lacking this characteristic. In their presence the little ones are dumb with fear, while the older sit in silent awe. They are as hard to read as the strange, hieroglyphics on Oriental tablets. We must be simple, gentle, transparent to bind the children to us. Then let this virtue be cultivated. And may we all join in Mr. Spurgeon's prayer that "the great Master Builder will place many more such alabaster men in His temple."

C. W. C.

Waiting.

Many people are in the state of mind which possessed the cripple at the pool of Bethesda waiting for some special movement to be made before they expect to be benefitted. They are in need of blessing, and they realize that need, but they think that they must wait for the "moving of the waters" before they can realize healing power. This waiting for special movements is the bane of Christian life, and the great hindrance to the steady progress of Christian work. This holding back until forced forward by some mighty impulse is every day weakening the power of giants. It is a false view of religious life to suppose that tremendous efforts are the only ones that accomplish anything. When the church waits to be moved upon by the flowing tide of revival influence before any special effort is made to advance there will be but little advance. When the individual waits to be set on fire by an irresistible ambition before he looks for the accomplishment of anything in him or around him he will see very little done. When small privileges and opportunities are unappreciated and unused, in the hope that larger ones will present themselves, that hope is apt to die from the inanition resulting from waiting. And, in the practice of this error, a man's zeal sometimes runs ahead of God's commandments. The scope of Bible teaching shows that the thing next to us is the thing to be done. The gospel exhibits life, reaching its highest point and character, attaining perfection through the proper use of the little things that enter in and constitute existence. When a man overlooks these, in order to find something great to do, he is evidently far ahead of the requirements of God. The man at the pool, waiting for the angel to move the waters, was no doubt doing the best he knew, and, because he was doing the best he knew, the Lord revealed Himself in healing power; but men and women now should remember that waiting for some great impulse to overpower them, or some great opportunity to come, is not doing the best they know. When Moses told the people to "wait and see the salvation of God," the pertinency of the injunction lay in the fact that there was nothing else to do. They were completely hemmed in after they had done their best. The only people who have any right to wait, the only people who can afford to wait for blessings and power to work, are those who have come into the situation of the Israelites at the Red Sea. Those can wait, who have used every effort and expended every energy and exhausted all strength. "God helps those who help themselves." He will do for none of us what we can do for ourselves. The exhortation to these church Micawbers is: "Do not wait for something to turn up, but go to work and turn up something."

C. W. C.

Our Mexican Letter.

MR. EDITOR: Christmas has passed; its fun and mirth, its generosity and kindly feeling have become dear and pleasant memories, memories more vivid this time than ever before, because of the many novel and quaint customs connected with Christmas in this country.

Nine nights before Christmas eve begins the fun and devotion, for in all things worldly pleasure and religion are found in close though strange companionship. Rockets shoot up their short-lived glory from all parts of the city, and during the days a miniature fair has sprung up about the plaza.

Temporary booths with Christmas dulces and toys of every description, trees and moss and berries for Christmas trees, and great bunks of the familiar peanuts on the sidewalks. On the ninth night before Christmas each family, or two or more together, celebrate what they call the "Posadas." They form a procession, each person holding a lighted candle, the children going before carrying a board on which are toys of wonderful and fearful pattern, representing Joseph and Mary on their way to Bethlehem, the wise men and the shepherds with their flocks. As the procession passes through the various rooms and corridors they sing a kind of chant, in which Joseph begs for admittance at the various inns, but vainly, till the procession stops at a certain room, the door of which is opened, and the procession enters, the board is placed on a table, some hymns and prayers are sung and said to the Virgin, and then the devotional part is over, and the fun begins. Or a rope is suspended, an earthenware jar, or sometimes two or three, covered with variously-colored paper, and shaped to represent man, bird or beast. This jar is filled with candy, peanuts and fruit. One by one the people are blindfolded and placed near it with a stick, to try to break the jar. When the lucky hit is given, and the contents of the jar rattle down, you can imagine the scene of stooping to conquer and scrambling to get. After this harp and fiddle sound, and dancing is kept up till morning. Every night, for nine nights, the same programme is carried out, except that the last night, Christmas eve, the manger with the babe is shown, and additional hymns and prayers are given in His honor. Of course the wealthier the family the richer will be the toys and jars, but from the lowliest home to the highest all participate in the "Posadas."

Christmas eve we gave our school children a festival, when they received prizes and gifts. After the services in the church were over we went into the school-room, and found swinging from ropes an old man and a gorgeous goose. When one of the children had succeeded in breaking the latter a shower of paper slips rewarded the scramblers, and made them a little shy of attacking the old man, but at last he fell also, and the shower of candies and nuts amply rewarded them for the goose's well-paid joke. Such laughter, pushing and scrambling! If there had not been dignified grown people looking on I should have been tempted to get on my knees and snatch and scatter like the rest. They had a happy time with their gifts and ollas, and it made us very happy to see them so.

We have had quite a variety of weather lately. It has been so cold that the lowest mountains round about have had a cloak of snow, and, as there are no fireplaces in the houses, people have to keep warm as best they can, and memories of grates of glowing coal are very tantalizing. Yet with the snow we have the tropic sun-floods of light and warmth streaming in through the open windows, where one could be comfortably warm if there was time to sit and bask. However, most of the cold weather is over. Spring is giving signs of her coming in the tender green leaves of the Almueda trees, and the twitter of the busy birds building their new homes. Mexico is very beautiful at any time. If the day begins gray and cold it is sure to end in a glorious sunset. If the evening is curtained, the next morning comes with a seemingly greater beauty. The nights to me are a marvel. The rarity and purity of the air makes the moonlight appear more luminous and the stars larger and brighter than at home, and we very seldom have a cloudy night. So "day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge" of our Father's wonderful workmanship. Yet the people know Him not. The rich so like buttertlies in their carelessness of the future, and their absorption in the present little hour of pleasure. The poor so utterly sunk in unconscious ignorance. If they could but feel the faint stirrings of a desire for higher things! If they only knew that one waited, patient, loving and strong to help, to enter their hearts, and make it a world more bright and beautiful than any sunlight or moonlight ever shone upon! They know Him not. They need so much to be told, to be taught, to be helped. How is it that we have grown from babyhood under gracious smilings of His tender mercy, and the influence of the blessed knowledge of Him, and these people so shut away from that knowledge? The shame be ours if we do not draw near them, and share this saving knowledge and peace and rest of soul.

CHARLOTTE HALLARAN.

CITY OF MEXICO, Jan. 22, 1881.

"Committees."

MR. EDITOR: As you are supposed to know everything it is natural for an enquirer to send you a list of questions when he is in pursuit of knowledge. Of course you have the time and inclination to answer such questions. If you have not, however, no doubt many of your readers have, and your correspondent is anxious for light, from whatsoever source it may come. I have been reading lately a great deal in our Advocates about Conference sessions, and have been particularly interested in the reports of committees. It is in regard to the duties of these committees I want information, and I hope it will be in your heart to inform me.

Years ago I thought I had some well-defined ideas on this subject, and of one thing I felt very sure: that is, that committees were to consider and report upon only such matters as might be referred to them by the bodies by which they were raised. But, in reading the aforesaid reports, I find that the writers or myself must have got things strangely muddled, and just now I am where it is difficult for me to decide whether the Conferences direct the committees or the committees the Conferences. Let me explain. I have before me the report of a committee, not a very elaborate one, in which the attention of the Conference, preachers and people, is called to an interesting statement of the condition of an interest, not located within the bounds of the Conference, not sectional in its character, and in competition with similar interests under the auspices of the body to whom this report is made. Now, I am confident that no report concerning this interest was read before the Conference, and that said interest was not referred, by any vote, to said committee. Yet this interest is heartily commended to the patronage of their people. This illustration will explain the meaning of the enquiry I make. This report, though, is by no means an exception. Now and then books, the names of which are not mentioned in open Conference, are examined by the Committee on Books and Periodicals, and described and recommended in their reports. Again, other committees write lengthy essays on subjects committed to their consideration, and assume the responsibility of directing our preachers and members in terms like these: "Members of our own church [illegible] shall be dealt with," etc. Now all this may be just as it ought to be. I am not going to decide that, but I want to know, from those capable of judging, if it is. If committees can take up and report on anything, it will be well to have that fact understood, for it will make the work of writing these reports fall much lighter on those who have the writing to do. If, on the other hand, Conference has the right to say that its committees shall consider, and the right to confine them to it, then a good many things found in reports have no business there. Give us light, Mr. Editor, if you please.

X. Y. Z.

The Baltimore Episcopal Methodist, of January 26, says:

"Mr. Hayes is in receipt of letters from both Miss Dora and Miss Mamie Rankin, from which we are permitted to make some extracts. The young ladies have been on a visit to Japan, chiefly for Miss Mamie's health. On the way from Yokohama to Nezhang the boat in which they started got aground and they were compelled to complete their journey for several miles in ox-cart-arrows, which would be rather a novel mode of conveyance in America. Miss Mamie's health was much benefited by the sojourn in Japan. She writes: 'We will begin to furnish our new home as soon as I am strong enough. How grateful we are to our Baltimore friend who so generously sent us the means to make our home really homelike. There are now present in the school 17 pupils, and they are making good progress in their studies. I do not push them, as they are very much, but give them ample time to play; for I desire that the children in my school shall have pleasant memories of their childhood. They are to have a "Christmas tree," and are already begging me to tell where the things are to come from. They have never seen such a thing, and I anticipate much pleasure in initiating them into the mysteries of Santa Claus. The weather here is very cold already, and hundreds of children are crying with cold. I have already put on so many clothes that they are a bundle to me.'"

The same paper, referring to the Baltimore Churches, says:

"The interest still continues both at St. Paul's and Trinity. Brother Canter reports 12 conversions last week, and 13 accessions to the Church on Sunday. Bro. Harper received 21 into the Church at Trinity on Sabbath. About 70 or 75 have been converted during the meeting at Trinity, and thus far 39 added to the membership. God be praised!"

THE ECUMENICAL.—The western section of the Executive Committee of the Ecumenical Conference, met in the Book Room, according to call of Bishop Simpson, chairman, January 26.

Bishop McTyeire conducted the opening devotional exercises impressively and appropriately.

The officers appointed at Cincinnati were continued.

A long communication was read from the Eastern Section, on organization and topics for discussion at the Ecumenical. This was considered carefully. A committee, Dr. Summers, chairman, was raised to report on this paper from our Eastern brethren. This report was adopted and will be sent to them for concurrence.

Dr. Summers had prepared a paper on the proper organization of the Ecumenical Conference, its aim and work. This was read by request of the Western Section, and on motion of Bishop Simpson the author was requested to allow it to be published as an article in the Quarterly Review, and sent to the Business Committee of the Ecumenical. This was very gratifying to Dr. Summers' colleagues of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on this committee.

As Executive Committee of the Western Section was appointed as follows: Bishop Simpson, Bishop McTyeire, Dr. George, Dr. D. Allison, of the Methodist Church of Canada, Dr. Gardner of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Canada, Mr. Dunlevy of the Methodist Protestant Church, Rev. D. B. Byers of the Evangelical Association. Alternates for all except the first three were appointed.

A Business Committee from this continent to act with a similar one from the East during the session of the Ecumenical, was appointed to consist of eight members. I mention only the following: Gen. Fisk; alternate, R. W. Jones; Bishop T. Bowman's alternate, Dr. Stone.

A Committee was also appointed on transportation, Gen. Fisk, chairman, who will publish their arrangements when completed, in the Church papers.

The Section have worked industriously for a day and a half, and adjourned this afternoon at 5 o'clock, to meet on the call of the Executive Committee.

R. W. JONES.

The Weekly Clarion, Jackson, Mississippi, January 20, says:

"Rev. Richmond McInnis, D. D., died at Newton Station on Thursday morning last, the thirteenth. The body was brought here for interment. The funeral took place from the Presbyterian Church on Friday morning. Dr. Hunter gave an interesting sketch of the life, character and services of deceased. Dr. McInnis was a native of Mississippi, and died in his sixty-fourth year. He was one of the first graduates of Oakland College entered the ministry in 1839, was pastor at Yazoo City several years, supplied the Presbyterian Church in this city from 1845 to 1858, in connection with his labors as editor of the True Witness. This paper was removed to New Orleans in 1858, and its publication suspended in consequence of the war. For the last ten or fifteen years, Dr. McInnis devoted most of his time to preaching the gospel in destitute places, and was instrumental in the establishment of many new churches, and in the strengthening of weak ones. His whole life was one of rare consecration to the cause of his Master; he fought a good fight, he kept the faith, and has entered into his reward."

BE AWAKE!—We are gratified to see that public opinion is so rapidly changing in favor of absolute prohibition of the liquor traffic. The South Carolina Legislature has taken action upon the subject. Arkansas has called a convention to devise methods to banish the evil from the State. The people of DeSoto parish seem more than anxious to have an opportunity to vote for the local option law. But we would remind the advocates of temperance, when the test is made, that they may expect a unanimous effort made by the advocates of the drink system to defeat them. Let us be awake.

J. P.

MANSFIELD, L. S., Jan. 19, 1881.

Rev. Robert Randle, writing from Natchitoches, La., January 21, says: "I have been here during the last three weeks; was very kindly received, and entered immediately upon the work. Things are encouraging, though not flattering, but I hope, by the mercies and grace of God, to be useful to this people during the year. Pray for me. One of the sad duties of the pastorate opens our communication. I send the obituary of one of our most efficient members, and I have but few of them, yet I trust God will supply his place."

Rev. C. McDonald, writing from Trenton, Miss., January 20, says: "At one of the churches which recently fell into my charge is Bro. J. S. Wadman, the class-leader of his church, and has been for about twenty-five years; one that has year after year held class meetings. I suppose he is of the olden type, and worthy of the name. No wonder, then, that they have old-fashioned Methodist fire at that church.

—Rev. F. M. Bruce writing from Hiwassee College, Tenn., January 30, 39 says: "We are all getting on well at this school—making full and complete work daily, notwithstanding bad weather. We have seventy students (in the male department), more than fifty of whom are from a distance. Also 60 in the female college. Our Cane Creek Academy was burned last week. Loss $5,700."

The South Carolina Conference at its recent session decided hereafter to vote by ballot for candidates for "admission on trial," "admission into full connection," "re-admission," or "location." It would be well, says the Wesleyan Methodist for all our Conferences to adopt a similar measure.

—The death of Thomas Carlyle removes from the midst of the living one of the most notable men of the age. He was a fearfully earnest worker in literature, original and quaint in his style, and endowed with many of the attributes of genius. He was a voluminous author, a historian, philosopher and moralist. He was especially the enemy and exposer of shams, ironical, sarcastic and cynical, but, withal, a man of benevolence, courage and, we may hope, of faith. He had lived more than fourscore years, and had been a celebrity for more than half a century. He had been in infirm health for several years, and died from old age, gently and peacefully sinking into the sleep of death.

—Rev. J. W. Lambuth and wife are on a visit to New Orleans, and are the guests of Mr. Edwin Booth, of the Felicity Street Church. Owing to the storm prevailing last Sunday, Bro. Lambuth was not able to be present at any of our church services or Sunday-schools. There will be a union meeting of our churches and Sunday-schools at the Carondelet Street Church, Sunday afternoon, February 13, at half-past three, which will be addressed by Bro. Lambuth on the subject of our mission work in China. We have no doubt our devoted missionary will, on that occasion, receive a hearty welcome, and a full hearing from the Methodists of New Orleans.

—We call the attention of our readers to the card of Mr. A. L. Butt, which will be found in another column of this paper. Mr. Butt has produced a panoramic painting of the Apocalyptic vision of St. John on the Isle of Patmos. The first exhibition in this city was given at the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, Saturday night last. Another exhibition was announced for Tuesday night of this week. The artist, Mr. A. L. Butt, is accompanied by his father, Rev. John F. Butt, of South Carolina. These gentlemen come well endorsed, and their credentials are from respectable sources.

—A stormy Sunday was February 6. A regular cyclone prevailed from morning till night, attended by a heavy rainfall, and with thunder and lightning at times. Considerable damage was done to the shipping in port, and to buildings and fences in the city. The railroads have suffered a good deal, and telegraph lines are interrupted in every direction. The prevailing wind was from the east, the greatest velocity being about fifty miles an hour.

MINUTES. The minutes of the late session of the Louisiana Conference are out. Rev. Christian Keener and Rev. J. M. Beard prepared them for the press, and are sending them to their destination with promptitude. There are some minor typographical errors, but, in the main, it is a good job, very full and accurate. We trust the pastors and presiding elders will see that the copies sent them are properly distributed.

—Saturday night last, about eleven o'clock, the store of E. C. Palmer & Co., on Camp street, of this city, was greatly injured by an explosion of gunpowder. It was a novel attempt at incendiarism.

AN ORDINATION.—On Wednesday night, January 26, at the St. Charles Avenue Church, of this city, Rev. I. D. Wall, of the Mississippi Conference, was ordained deacon by Bishop Keener.

A memorial sketch of Rev. J. J. Smylie, prepared by Dr. C. G. Andrews, will appear in the ADVOCATE next week. It will be found to be worthy of the subject and of the writer.

—Rev. David Crenshaw, an old member of the South Georgia Conference, died January 11.

—Rev. Caleb W. Key died in Augusta, Ga., January 23.

Periodicals.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.—The number of The Living Age for the week ending January 29, has the following noteworthy articles: The Prophetic Power of Poetry, by J. C. Shairp, Fraser; The Unity of Nature, Part V, by the Duke of Argyll, Contemporary Review; Don John, by Jean Ingelow, Day of Rest; A Day with a War Balloon, Nineteenth Century; Fina's Aunt, Cornhill; Sunwarrow, Temple Bar; Bird-Lore, Chamber's Journal; George Eliot, Spectator; and the usual amount of choice poetry.

The new volume of this standard weekly magazine began January 1,—a good time for begining of a subscription. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,300 pages a year,) the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

—Theological and Homiletic Monthly for February, 1881, has: The Mission of the Peace-maker in Modern Thought; Christ's Antidote for Troubled Hearts; An Humble Apology, or, Is the Pulpit Incinerary? The Blessed Dead—a sermon, by Rev. J. C. Granberry, D. D.; The Atonement—Mr. Emerson's Theory; Sketches of Sermons, by Bishop Doggett; Editorial Miscellany. This number closes volume second, and we are glad to know that the publication is growing in circulation as it is in merit. We commend it to our preachers and laymen as a most interesting and valuable religious monthly. R. N. Sledd, D. D., editor and publisher, Richmond, Va. Price $2 50 per annum.

—The Art Amateur, February, 1881, has its usual supplement of designs, and a remarkable array of superior engravings. In the various departments the literature and illustrations are very choice and entertaining. In the department of Decorations and Furniture and Art Needle Work, housekeepers and practical people will find much that is useful and suggestive. There is also a department devoted to Music which would prove of use to amateur musicians and singers. The Art Amateur is issued monthly, Montague Marks, editor and publisher, New York. Price $4 a year.

—Good Company, January, 1881, has: Rose and the Doctor; Winter: Mine Experience—an Arizona tale; Short papers—Solitude, a Trait of Thoreau, Moulting, Seedy Friends; Mountains and Mole-hills, a story; Ireland and Irishmen—part 1; What Shall our Daughters Study? A Hero and His Work—Episodes in African History; Parents, and some Friends connected with them; George Eliot; Jane Austen; The Full Particulars—a story; Millet; Aehnet. Good Company is one of the very best of the monthly magazines. It is published at Springfield, Mass. Price $3 a year.

—The title of Dr. Bennett's new temperance paper is the Southern Crusader. It is a handsome eight page monthly, published at Ashland, Va. Price $1.25 a year. It promises to be one of the best temperance papers in the whole land. Address W. W. Bennett, D. D., Ashland, Va. Dr. Bennett is an old and experienced editor, and although president of Randolph Macon College, he will succeed in both departments. We wish the Crusader a prosperous career. It is needed and ought to have a wide circulation, North and South.

—Wide Awake, February, 1881, is something extra even for this always superior magazine. The young folks will be astonished and delighted, with the wonderful pictures and the many excellent articles and stories. Among the articles are: The Roman Boys, Trophies—A. D. 61—a poem; Raging a Thunderstorm; Rocky Fork; The Sad Story of Jan Upernavik, of Onionk; Dolly's Valentine; The Battle of the Types; The Reign of the Georges; Polly Cologne; Tangles. D. Lathrop & Co. Publishers, Boston. Price $2 a year.

—The Original Chatterbox, edited by J. Erskine Clarke, M. A., is being issued in monthly parts, with an American supplement, by Estes & Lauriat, publishers, Boston. Price, $1 per annum. This is one of the best and most popular of all the magazines for the young. The illustrations are numerous and excellent. A fine steel engraving is given as a premium to each yearly subscriber. We have received the number for January, 1881.

—Southern Musical Journal, published by Ludden & Bates, Savannah, Georgia, is usually filled with good music and musical literature. The title of one piece of music in the January number is, however, to be condemned. "Bernhardt Scottisch." The name of this notorious woman ought not to appear in connection with music designed for the use of virtuous people.

—The American Kindergarten Magazine, edited by Emily M. Coe, and published by the American Kindergarten Society is devoted to the education of children, and is the organ of the National Kindergarten, New York. It is published at $1 a year. We have received the November and January numbers.

The Monthly Cabinet of Illustrations, February, 1881, has been received. This rather unique monthly is designed for the use of preachers, superintendents, teachers and all Christian workers. Special attention is given to the International Lessons. Published by Howard Gannett, Boston. Price $1 per annum.

We have received the Southern Methodist Almanac for 1881, containing church statistics and other valuable information. It is now ready for gratuitous distribution. If you want it sent by mail, send two cents to pay postage on it. Address Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

The Corsicana Methodist has changed its name to Corsicana Messenger. Rev. M. H. Wells is still editor and proprietor. It is published twice a month at $1 per annum. It is a bright and spirited sheet and well worth the money. We wish Bro. Wells and his paper abundant success.

We have received a copy of the Minutes of the last session of the Virginia Conference. The work is edited by Rev. Alexander G. Brown. It is a voluminous but very complete exhibit of the business, and of the statistics of the Conference, and is printed in handsome style.

Appleton's Railway and Steam Navigation Guide, February, 1881, has been received. Price twenty-five cents.

American Agriculturist for February, is an excellent number of this superior monthly periodical.

ADDRESS WANTED.—The post-office of Rev. J. F. Randall would be gladly received, as business of importance demands it.

S. G. RAMSAY,
Ocean Springs, Miss.

Publisher's Department.

We shall endeavor to exclude fraudulent advertisements of every description from the ADVOCATE, and trust our friends, in ordering goods from the leading merchants of New Orleans and elsewhere, as represented in our columns, will mention having seen the advertisement in the ADVOCATE. We will also take pleasure in attending personally to any commissions for our friends in the country with which we may be favored, while endorsing our advertisers as being worthy of their patronage.

THE BEST SHE COULD DO.—A party of hotelliers who were fishing for brook trout on the Boyne River, and camping on its banks, ran out of supplies, and an envoy was sent out to beg, buy or borrow something until an order sent to Traverse City could be filled. After a walk of two miles he reached a log house in the woods. A woman, five children, three dogs and a family of lame coons occupied the one single room in the house. The furniture was all home-made, the table-ware consisted entirely of tin dishes, and only one bed was visible. The envoy stated his errand, and the woman replied:

"Flour? I reckon we run out o' flour yesterday, and we won't have any more till next week."

"Can you spare any coffee?"

"I guess not. The last coffee we had ran out on Christmas. If we get any next week I'll spare some."

"How about tea?"

"Well, tea has been purty skeerce with us for the last two months, but Ben said he thought of gittin' some 'long this fall. If you are around here when our tea comes, we'll divide with you."

"You haven't any potatoes to spare, have you?"

"Well, now you ought to have been here last week for 'taters. I cooked the last Sunday. These 'ere dogs and children sot a heap by cold 'taters and they go off like hot cakes. Ben is going to git some more 'long about Saturday."

"Haven't you any provisions at all which you can spare?" asked the discouraged envoy.

"Well, now, I don't believe we have, but we are goin' to stock up 'long in the fall. I was telling Ben only last night that I'd got kinder tired of scroochin' along on hijun and 'lasses."

"I'll buy some of that if you can spare it, for we haven't a bit of anything in camp."

"No, I can't sell any. Fact is, we had the last for breakfast, and Ben won't get any more till Saturday night."

"I'm sorry," sighed the man, as he turned away.

"Yes, so'm I," she sighed in return. "I seed your party down thar in camp t'other day, and you look like honest folks. I'd be glad to spare you some thing, but I can't. If you mean to move your camp up here and enjoy our society and use our smudge to drive away skeeters we'll do our best to make it pleasant; but when you come down to fodder, we hain't nowhar. I was telling Ben only last night that we'd be lucky if we got these dogs and coons through t'other winter."

"How old is that child?" asked the conductor. "Four years," replied the mother. Then, making you'll have to pay for him." "But's a mind; pay for him? why, I haven't been paying for him for years and years?"

"Who runs this cheese?" inquired a customer of his grocer. "Oh, I'm running it myself, I guess." "I didn't know. There are a good many skippers aboard."

A good child complained that her catechism was too hard, and seriously inquired if there were not some fifteen bibles for very bad girls.

"Father," said a wishful lass, about sixteen years of age, "I know scribbling is not grammar, but I cannot decline matrimony, nor see the reason why myself and Gilbert cannot be conjugated."

Eminent counsel: "Yes, gentlemen of the jury, you will, oh—I know you will restore my persecuted client to the arms of his wife and little ones, who—" The Court: "Your client is a bachelor."

He was sitting in the parlor with her when, a rooster crowed in the yard, and, yawning over, he said, "Chanticleer." "I wish your would, I'm sleepy as I can be." He cleared.

Mr. P. Werlein, 135 Canal street, New Orleans, deals in the leading pianos and organs. He requests you to send for his catalogues and prices before purchasing. Low prices, reliable dealing, and full guarantee are to be had at this old house.

A member of a fashionable church, being asked by a stranger why the members of his church were called on to shake hands with persons joining the church, said: "Oh, it means they go up to bid them good-bye."

Tommy went fishing the other day without permission of his mother. Next morning a neighbor's son met him and asked: "Did you catch anything yesterday, Tommy?" "Not until I got home," was the rather sad response.

"Prisoner at the bar," said the judge, "is there anything you wish to say before sentence is passed upon you?" The prisoner looked wistfully toward the door, and remarked that he would like to say, "good evening," if it would be agreeable to the company.

"Oh, for a thousand tongues," she sang in the choir. Two hours afterwards one tongue was found sufficient to scandalize four-fifths of the women in three counties.

Down by the river side they met,
Sweet Romeo and Juliet;
Her hand in his he placed and said
"Sweet Juliet, I would thee wed."
Indeed," she quoted; "Ah! let's go
Get in this boat. Oh! row me oh!"

"Singing down" is the old Methodist way of stopping those who talk too long in meeting. Mr. Beecher has another plan. To a strange young man, who was making a long, rambling speech in the Plymouth Church prayer meeting, he said: "As they say in Congress, we will give you leave to print the rest of your remarks."

"Here, lend us a hand, somebody," cried little Billy, struggling to climb over the back fence to run away to the circus. His father, who happened to be near, lent him a hand, about the size of a sugar-cured ham, sixteen or seventeen times. The hand was effectual.

"It looks like the scene of a great battle," remarked a traveler, viewing the work of a recent cyclone at the West. "Yes," said the native, sadly and without removing his pipe, "the place was ink by storm."

A woman accidentally went to church with two bonnets on her head, one stuck inside the other, and the other woman in the congregation almost died of envy. They thought it was a new kind of bonnet, and too sweet for anything.

W. C. SHEPARD & CO.—American China dinner, breakfast and tea set, 160 pieces, for $15. Equal in looks and usefulness to French China.

Business Notices.

ITCHING PILES.—The intense discomfort and suffering caused by Itching Piles instantly relieved by Kallikon. Send to Joseph Burnett & Co., Boston, for circular.

Because it Adds to Personal Beauty by restoring color and lustre to gray or faded hair, and is beneficial to the scalp, is why Parker's Hair Balsam is such a popular dressing.

CANVASSERS make from $25 to $50 per week selling goods for E. G. RIDEOUT & CO., 10 Barclay St., New York. Send for Catalogue and terms

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

NEW YORK SHOPPING

Of every description for ladies and gentlemen. Household articles bought with discretion, taste and judgment. For circular, address

Mrs. M. C. ADAMS,
P. O. Box, 598, New York.

The Apocalyptic Vision of St. John
ON THE
ISLE OF PATMOS,

Will be exhibited in New Orleans during the next month for the benefit of churches and benevolent societies who may be in need of funds to assist them. The very best of the clergy and press of the Southern States, where it has been exhibited for twelve months, speak of it in superlative terms. Twenty-two scenes 15x20 feet, with an appropriate lecture by the artist who executed the work. Any church or society in the city who may want a benefit, or more information, will be visited, by an invitation through a card or letter dropped in the postoffice directed to

JNO. F. BUTT, or
A. L. BUTT.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

MANSFIELD, LOUISIANA.

Owned, controlled and managed by the Louisiana Annual Conference.

Course of study equal to any college in the South. Its roll of pupils has nearly doubled in three months, and still they come. Noted for healthfulness of locality. All at living rates.

Total expense for Spring term, commencing February 14, 1881, only $75 in literary and classical course. Music $20. N. Orleans. Let Louisianians build up their own schools.

A specimen copy of College News free on Application. Address REV. J. LANE HORNER,
President.

MUNSEY'S SERMONS and LECTURES.

Price, $1.50.

PRESS OPINIONS 5th Edition.

This is truly a wonderful book, as might be expected from such a remarkable man as Dr. Munsey. * * * Though made up of sermons, lectures and fragments, it takes hold of the reader with the grip of a master of romance.—Theological Monthly, Richmond.

The publication of the sermons of a great preacher usually results in disappointment to his admirers. But this volume will prove an exception.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

We do not hesitate to pronounce it one of the most remarkable books of sermons that has ever come under our notice.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

It is one of the most remarkable productions of the Methodist pulpit of this or any age.—Methodist Recorder, Pittsburg, Pa.

We are convinced that this volume will not only sustain the great preacher's reputation, but increase it. When one reads his sermon on the "Divine Councils and Work," he naturally thinks of Milton's prose works, of Taylor's Holy Dying and Holy Living, of Jeremy Taylor, of Barrow and such like masters.—Appleton's Wesleyan Christian Advocate, March, 1881.

They compel us to rank with our best English classics.—Rev. Wm. Swindlehurst, of London.

These are the ripest fruit of Dr. Munsey's wonderful powers, and any one of them would make the fame and fortune of an ordinary man.—Southern Christian Advocate.

There has been but one Munsey, and Methodism will never see his like again.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

Munsey's sermons gained something by the delivery that less than in the case of many other noted preachers. Their excellence and nearly all that made them attractive are transferred to the printed page. Hence they are not a mere memorial of a wonderful man, nor the faint echo of words that charmed, but they are the man himself, and the very voice that thrilled and enchained. They are not pictures hung in the dark, but fresh and luminous, and still moist with the last touches of the pencil of genius.—New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Bishop Keener, has done his Church and all Churches good service in preparing this memorial of one of the most brilliant preachers of the South. The sermons here collected are certainly models. * * * One almost loses his breath, as he reads the fiery lines. * * * His sermons would be a profitable study to the orator of a colder clime.—Bishop Gilbert Haven in New York Christian Advocate.

Address RATHROP & WILKINS,
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF METHODISM.

BY REV. W. C. BLACK.

Concerning this work Dr. L. Parker, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, says: "The history, statistics, polity and doctrines of Methodism are clearly and compactly stated by the author, and the causes, under God, of the wonderful success of Methodism, are unfolded with much acumen and analytical power. We hope it will be extensively circulated." The Mississippi Methodist says: "The work shows the hand of a master. Everybody, friend or foe of Methodism, ought to read it." Pastors will do a good work by circulating it among their people. One order has been received for three hundred copies for gratuitous distribution. More than a thousand copies were sold within sixty days of its publication. Price 20 cents or $2 per dozen. For sale by

RATHROP & WILKINS,
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

DR. EDWARD HARRISON,

112 Canal Street, from 11 to 4 P. M.

NEW ORLEANS.

UNITED STATES
Four Per Cent. Bonds
BOUGHT AND SOLD BY
New Orleans National Bank,
38 CAMP STREET.

Carpet and Oil Cloth Warehouse.
ELKIN & CO.,
100 - - - CANAL STREET - - - 100

New styles of
MOQUETTE, VELVET, BODY BRUSSELS, and TAPESTRY BRUSSELS, with border to match.
3-PLY and INGRAINS in great variety.
OIL-CLOTHS of all widths.
WINDOW SHADES and CURTAINS, new patterns.
CORNICES and CORNICE POLES.
MATTINGS of every description.
CURTAIN GOODS, TASSELS, CORDS, GIMPS, Etc.
Our prices for corresponding qualities of goods are as low as any house in the South or West.

D. C. J. BICKHAM,

RESIDENCE AND OFFICE,
220 Jackson St., Bet. Chestnut and Coliseum.

NEW ORLEANS.

Office Hours: Eight A. M. and three to four P. M.

Sterling Music Books.

NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY METHOD FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Two parts; each, $1 50, or complete, $3 25. This is a method of established reputation, which has been in constant use in the great Conservatory, and is getting to be everywhere known and valued. Has received decided commendations from the best teachers.

DICTIONARY OF MUSICAL INFORMATION. ($1 25). Very convenient book of reference.

GROVEN DICTIONARY OF MUSIC AND MUSICIANS. Vol. I. $2 00. A grand encyclopedia.

STAINER AND BARRETT'S DICTIONARY OF MUSICAL TERMS. (Complete $3 00). A famous and useful work.

RICHTER'S COUNTERPOINT. ($2 50). RICHTER'S FUGUE. ($2 00). Two standard works on Composition.

THE WELCOME CHORUS. ($1 50). For High Schools, and SONG BELLS, ($1 50). For Common Schools, should be in the mind of every teacher in need of new books.

JOHNSON'S NEW METHOD FOR HARMONY. ($1 00). By A. N. Johnson. Is unexcelled for ease, simplicity, and thoroughness.

TEMPERANCE LIGHT, (12 cts.); TEMPERANCE JEWELS, (35 cts.) and BULL'S TEMPERANCE GLEE BOOK, (30 cts.) are our three best Temperance books. TRY THEM!

Any book mailed post free for above prices.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston,
C. H. DITSON & CO.,
No. 843 Broadway, New York.

Agricultural.

WORK FOR THE MONTH.

This is strictly the gardening month for all the Gulf States; every garden [illegible] be spaded, hoed; if a frost should cut off any crop, do not despair, sow it again; if any seed has failed, sow again. If the sowing of any variety recommended to be attended to in January has been overlooked, attend to it at once; delay is always a loss in gardening operations.

Hot-beds will now require daily attention; give air by slightly raising the sash from the back during fine weather, always closing them before evening, and never permitting the young plants to become chilled. Should the weather become cold, cover the sash at night with mats, in order to retain the heat. If the plants stand too thickly in the rows, thin them out in order to form stronger plants, or transplant them into another prepared frame.

Plant Snap Beans.—The Early Mohawk is the best for the first crop; it is more hardy than the others, and about a week earlier. Plant in rows twenty inches apart, drop the seed about an inch apart, and cover three inches deep; when up keep clean, and earth up a few inches of the stem. Second sowing, say in two weeks, may be of yellow six weeks, or Valentine, or, what is still better than their all, selected dwarf German wax, which is stringless and luscious, producing a waxy-colored pod, which, when properly prepared for the table, is as rich as marrow itself; to have fresh and tender snapshorts there should be a few sown every two weeks throughout the season. We recommend plant-selected wax beans, because they are strictly pure and very early, being fit for table use in six weeks from planting. One-half of the wax beans sold throughout the country are all mixed up with green podded varieties, which are both tough and stringy, occasioned by growing them too close to other varieties, and selling the product for seed. Sow flat dutch turnips, beets, squashes, melons, spinach, lettuce, cress, radish, carrots, cucumbers, parsnips, and, if the weather is mild, make a planting of Adam's extra early, and extra dwarf sugar corn. Cucumbers, squashes, and melons should always be protected early in the season by a covering of boxes, during nights, to prevent injury from cold.

Egg-Plant.—If you have overlooked sowing, sow at once on a rich bed, covered with sash; it will be the end of March before they are fit to plant out; they require richer ground than any other vegetable, and must have a free supply of water in dry weather; another sowing should be made in March.

Celery.—Sow thinly in rich soil, raked fine, and tramp the ground evenly and rake again, as advised for onion seed; it delights in moist ground, and must have it, or a constant supply of water in some way. When the plants are six inches high, select damp weather, and plant them in rows two and a half feet apart and six inches from plant to plant; the drill for planting them should be a few inches under the level; mulch them with short manure, and water every two or three days. Select mammoth white solid, and sandringham dwarf white solid.

Transplant cabbage, lettuce, cauliflower, and asparagus can also be planted for the formation of new beds.

Salsafy, or Vegetable Oyster.—Sow thinly in drills two inches deep, and twenty inches from row to row; when two inches high, thin out to four inches apart; the more cultivation, the finer the roots, which go deep and resist the heat and drought.

Stock-beets, such as mangel, wurtzel and white sugar, should now be sown; for shallow soil select golden Globe, and for deep soils, mammoth long red mangel. The cultivation of stock-roots is greatly on the increase in this country, being found by the agriculturists an invaluable crop.

Plant early rose, early snowflake, extra early Vermont and Peerless potatoes. In Louisiana and other extreme Southern States, this is the month to plant for general crops. Start your sweet potatoes in beds for sprouting.

A REVOLUTION IN PLOWING.—For a year past, we have been in correspondence with a gentleman who has been at work perfecting a riding cultivator and gang plow, most of last summer being devoted to experiments with it, on a river sugar plantation, above New Orleans. He tried it in every possible manner in which a plow is ever used in a cane field, even including the breaking up of old stubble, and in every case it did the work better than it was possible with any plow ever employed hitherto. Its success is owing to the fact that it is employed on an entirely new principle—the earth being cut, turned over and pulverized by a pair of revolving discs, of the shape, but many times larger than the revolving cutters used before plows where much trash lies in the way, and it is desirable to cut and turn it under. These revolving discs are about three feet in diameter, and placed at such an angle from the line of draft as to turn two furrows of twelve inches each. The plow is made wholly of iron, not liable to break, and the driver, while riding, has perfect control of the discs, raising or lowering at will, to pass obstructions or go deeper when desirable. It never clogs in any kind of soil; cannot be obstructed by weeds or vines; is a self-sharpener, so that no blacksmith has to do that work, and with the same team can do a half more and better work than the ordinary wedge plow. It will plow four acres a day in any ordinary sugar land—has plowed seven acres, in the west, where it is in successful use.—Louisiana Sugar Bowl.

WINTER PARSLEY.—The demand for this delicious herb, used for the garnishing of dishes of meat and for the flavoring of soups, is constantly increasing, and it is now one of the staple winter products of the market-gardener and is to be found in many private gardens. Its culture is very easy and simple, all that is required being a cold frame that will not freeze or a portion of a greenhouse bed.

The roots are grown in summer in the garden, precisely as carrots, and when wanted for forcing should not be shorn of their tops until they are dug in October and planted in the bed where they are to be forced. They are planted quite thickly, in rows about six inches apart, and well watered, so as to encourage growth. When planted in a cold frame, the glass is placed over them as soon as frosty nights occur, giving air on bright days, and as the cold increases covering with mats and shutters, and banking up outside the frame with any good litter at hand, to prevent frost from entering. The sun's heat is sufficient to keep up a moderate growth, and the crop can be gathered at any time as needed. It will bear cropping two or three times in the course of the winter. It is cropped until a supply can be had from the field in May or June. The glass can be taken off in April, covering the bed with shutters on cold nights.—N. E. Farmer.

ROLLING THE SOIL.—Factory and Farm, says few farmers consider that each crop that is grown and removed from the soil, has taken away so much [illegible] that is for stock and kernal is found the concentrated richness that was in the ground until transformed by the mysterious ways of nature in its transformation. Nature asks no aid from the husbandman, neither will it quietly brook being plundered, but instead, following each demand made upon it in the way of a crop, it is found reduced and worn, and will not again attain to its former merit until there is restored to it equally and in proportion as it has been taken from it.

Rotation in crops is demonstrated as being not only best, but demanded; the continual growing and gathering from the same field a harvest of the same or kindred product, will in due time deprive the soil in that field of the ability to produce that especial article, as it has taken from the soil all that is necessary for the successful production of that crop; and either fertilizer must be supplied, or the field will become wholly worthless, save for some other and entirely different kind of product. When crops fail of themselves, the failure can, as a rule, be traced to the neglect of men, and not the defect of nature or mistake of the Creator. The soil is provided in a general state of richness; if continual demands are made upon it to produce, and no return offered in way of remedies for its degenerating tendency, the outcome will be a thin crop from an exhausted soil.

The principal products of the farm are of that class that are employed in feeding the great family of consumers, and consequently it is removed in bulk from the soil, and but a minimum portion of it remains to enrich the ground for another season; the stalks and straw are loss to it, and another robbery committed. Taking from the soil those vital principles and making no return for them, is reducing each year the value of the farm per acre, in dollars and cents.

This need not be, as the product from the soil taken and transformed into other conditions, such as compost and manure, if returned to the fields, will restore to the soil its strength, and keep it ever in condition to respond to the demands made by succeeding crops.—Mobile Register.

AN OLD FARMER'S WISDOM.—One who has tilled the soil for forty years, and meantime accumulated a competence and given his children a good education, says his experience has taught him these things: 1. One acre of land, well prepared, and well cultivated, produces more than two which received only the same amount of labor had on one. 2. One cow, horse, mule, sheep or hog well fed is more than profitable than two kept on the amount necessary to keep one well. 3. One acre of clover or grass is worth more than two of cotton where no grass or clover is raised. 4. No farmer who buys oats, corn, wheat, fodder and hay, as a rule, for ten years, can keep the sheriff away from the door in the end. 5. The farmer who never reads the papers, sneers at book farming and improvements, always has a leaky roof, poor stock, broken-down fences, and complains of bad "seasons." 6. The farmer who is above his business and intrusts it to another to manage, soon has no business to attend to. 7. The farmer whose habitual beverage is cold water, is healthier, wealthier, and wiser than he who does not refuse to drink.

BEETS.—There can be no nicer vegetable than beets prepared for the table at this season of the year. Dyspeptics can eat them with perfect impunity, if boiled in water, in which a little salt has been thrown, till quite tender, then turned into a pan of cold water, and the skins entirely removed by the hand. Slice thin, spread over a little butter, and sprinkle black pepper over them; keep hot in the oven till the butter is melted. To be eaten as a relish, at either breakfast or dinner, they are a most palatable dish; some enjoy having vinegar ponred over them, but that can be left to the option of each individual, as there are some persons who can eat no acids with their food, without creating distress in the stomach, while others enjoy vinegar on almost every variety of food. There is no vegetable that contains more nourishment than beets, or is more harmless as an article of diet.

The Poultry Yard says hens fed on clear, sound grain, and kept on a clear grass run, give much finer flavored eggs than hens that have access to stable and manure heaps and eat all kinds of filthy food. Hens feeding on fish and on onions flavor their eggs accordingly, the same as cows eating onions or cabbage, or drinking offensive water, impart a bad taste to the milk and butter. The richer the food, the higher the color of the eggs. Wheat and corn give the best color, while feeding on buckwheat makes them colorless, making them unfit for some confectionery purposes.

To save cabbages from cabbage worms, steep tansy and pour it on after the cabbages begin to head. Only two applications will be necessary. "This season," says one who has tried the remedy, "the millers commenced depositing their eggs before the cabbages began to head, and I gave them a dose over two weeks ago, and there is no sign of any worm since."

Few men achieve success through luck. Especially is this true of the cultivation of the soil, where nothing is got for nothing; where there is an intimate relation between cause and effect, a just compensation for an honest day's work; a reward only for persistent effort and steady purpose.

The profits on small fruits, if properly cultivated, are very large. A fruit grower in Columbia county, raised during the past season, two hundred and twenty bushels of strawberries from an acre of ground. The variety was Monarch of the West. One hundred bushels of raspberries from the acre, is not an enormous yield.

Mr. John Burnside, cultivated 3,287 acres of sugar-cane ground, in his eight plantations in Louisiana, for the crop year 1879-80. These produced a yield of 6,084,000 pounds of sugar and 7,290 barrels of molasses. At current rates this yield would realize over half a million dollars.

As a rule, the size of the seed will indicate the depth to plant it, starting with the smallest at one-half inch, such as celery, parsnips, etc., while peas and beans may be put one and a half inches deep.

Wheat can be raised in the western United States, and shipped by rail to the Atlantic seaboard, and thence by steamer to Europe, cheaper than the Russian farmers can deliver it in Odessa.

Household.

COOKERY FOR THE MILLION.

CORNED BEEF.—Choose either a solid cut from the round, with a little fat, or a brisket piece; the latter should have [illegible] and be well [illegible] tied securely; the meat will not be harmed by washing it in clean, cold water. Let twenty minutes be allowed for every pound of meat; put it over the fire in cold water, let it gradually reach the boiling point, and boil it slowly. The scum which rises to the surface of the pot liquor should be skimmed off, and the meat simmered slowly.

If the water is changed as soon as it boils, vegetables may be cooked with the meat, time being allowed according to the season of the year. In the early fall, when they are freshly gathered and are full of their natural juices, they will cook in half the time that they require in the late winter or spring, when much of their moisture has been lost by evaporation.

If the meat is to be used cold it will be juicy if allowed to cool in the pot liquor.

If the brisket is pressed between two boards or platters, under a heavy weight, until cool, it will afford nice, compact slices when cut, and is good for luncheon or supper.

PROVENCALE POTATOES.—Peel one quart each of potatoes and onions; boil them tender in boiling water and salt, rub them palatably with salt and pepper, press them into a buttered dish or mold and bake them half an hour in a moderate oven. When wanted for the table, place a dish on the top of the mould, turn it upside down, and gently shake it so that the potato will fall out without breaking.

VEAL CUTLET WITH TOMATOES.—Peel and slice a quart of tomatoes, put them into a saucepan with a teaspoonful of salt and quarter of that quantity of pepper, and stew them gently for half an hour; then rub them through a sieve with a potato masher.

Half an hour before dinner season the cutlet, fry it brown in a hot pan containing a tablespoonful of fat, and take it up on a hot dish. Put the tomatoes into the frying-pan, heat them quickly, pour them around the cutlet, not over it, and serve at once.

LILLE CABBAGE.—Wash a large cabbage, cut it in inch pieces, rejecting the stalk, and drain it in a colander. Meantime peel and chop an onion, fry it for one minute in two tablespoonfuls of drippings or butter, add the cabbage, with a teaspoonful of salt, and quarter of a saltspoonful each of pepper and grated nutmeg, cover it, and simmer it for twenty minutes, stirring it frequently to prevent burning. Serve it hot.

CORN BREAD.—Mix together half a pound each of sugar and prepared flour, one and a half pound of Indian meal, two ounces of butter melted, four eggs, and three pints of milk; put the batter into a hot buttered pan, and bake it half an hour in a quick oven, but do not burn it.

If prepared flour is not on hand use the ordinary kind, either with baking powder or cream of tartar and soda. We give also a plain corn bread.

GEORGIA PONE.—Mix together with the hand, one quart of Indian meal, one teaspoonful of salt, and cold water enough to make a stiff batter; beat it with the hand for ten minutes; put it into a hot greased pan, and bake it forty-five minutes in a rather quick oven, but do not allow it to burn.

RHUBARB.—Stew a quart of fresh or canned berries, with sugar enough to sweeten them; when they are tender add to them two tablespoonfuls of corn starch dissolved in half a cup of cold water; boil for five minutes, stirring constantly, and cool in a mold.

If a smooth jelly is desired the berries and juice may be put through a fine sieve before the corn starch is added.

A nice cranberry sauce can be made in this way.

OMELETTES.—When eggs are available omelettes are about the easiest dish that can be made in haste; and, as many cooks fail to produce good ones, we give a few simple directions for making them. If the pan is hot and buttered, the eggs properly beaten, and the omelette handled quickly and lightly, it will be excellent; and the possibility of combining a variety of ingredients in the dish increases its advantages.

PLAIN OMELETTE.—Mix together for one minute the yolks of three eggs, half a saltspoonful of salt, and quarter of a saltspoonful of pepper; beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth; gently mix them together; put them into the hot buttered pan, set it over a moderate fire and brown the omelette evenly, loosening it gently from the pan at the edges with a fork, and shaking the pan gently to prevent sticking at the bottom; when it is cooked as preferred run a broad bladed knife under one side and fold the omelette half over. Hold a hot dish over the frying-pan; give the omelette a quick toss out upon it.

A little practice will give the required dexterity; and the dish is well worth all the trouble needed to master it.—Christian Union.

CORN FLOUR PUDDING.—"One tablespoonful of corn flour, one pint of milk, an ounce and a half of sugar, a little grated nutmeg, and two eggs. You mix the corn flour with a tablespoonful of cold milk, put the rest of the milk to boil, and, directly it comes to the boil, take the saucepan off the fire and put in the rest of the cold ingredients, viz., the mixed corn flour, the sugar and the eggs. Put the whites of the eggs on another plate, and beat them up with a little salt till they are a very stiff froth. You have meantime greased a pie-dish. When the whites are stiff enough, you mix them with the corn flour, etc., in the basin, and then put the whole mixture into the greased pie-dish, grate a little nutmeg over the pudding, and bake it for about twenty minutes."

A correspondent of The Country Gentleman, makes brown bread in this way: "Two cupfuls of Indian meal, three cupfuls of Graham flour, half a cupful of molasses, three and a half cupfuls of buttermilk, one teaspoonful of salt and one of saleratus, dissolved in a little boiling water. If the meal is very new, use only three cupfuls of buttermilk. It should be as stiff as can be stirred with a spoon. Steam about four hours, and if the top of the loaf is very wet, dry for a few minutes in the oven."

MILK CHOCOLATE.—Melt six ounces of chocolate over steam, add one quart of milk, and two ounces of powdered sugar. When scalding hot, pour upon it the yolks of five eggs, beaten up with a cup of cold milk. Add half a teaspoonful of extract of vanilla or orange-flower water, milling or stirring it very fast, and serve at once.

TO REMOVE ANTS.—Place pieces of raw meat in a cupboard, and after the ants have clustered upon them, plunge into boiling water. Preserve in this for two or three weeks, and you will soon be entirely freed from ants.

Educational.

GERMAN STUDENTS.—Our colleges in America do not keep up with the demand, and in several departments of learning it is simply impossible for young men to obtain from these institutions what is necessary in order to stand abreast with those educated at foreign universities. Those who are watching the progress that has been made in education in our country will see that with present arrangements it is scarcely possible in our colleges for a person to fit himself to carry on original investigations in most departments of science. Our professors must usually teach some three or four subjects, often as independent of each other as philosophy and ichthyology; so that they seldom have time to lead the student far into a special subject. And even if the professor has time, he most commonly finds himself without any of the literature on his subject, so that he really does not know what has already been done, and is without apparatus or money to help him in his work. If a person means to be a specialist, I think, as a rule, he will find it much better, and in the end cheaper, to come to Europe to finish his studies. This necessity will gradually modify itself as the country becomes older and institutions more settled. The hundreds of young men who come to Europe every year to study, will gradually crowd our institutions to the front. They take back what is in their judgment the best that can be found at the grand universities of the old world, and their influence must in time make an impression on the character of our students and the demands of our people. As to the matter of expense, Mr. Myers adds: If the student does not travel much, and lives principally on beer, sausages, cold meat, and black bread buttered with lard, as some German students do, it will not cost much. This, however, for the majority of persons is a very unsatisfactory way of living. In view of the advantages for learning the language and getting acquainted with the customs and thought of Germany, it is much better to board in a family. Even then many persons' digestive organs will suffer for a time from the change in diet. The expenses in the university depend very much on what a man is studying. If he hears only lectures it will cost much less than where he engages in laboratory work—as in anatomy, zoology, physics and chemistry. My chemicals alone cost about one hundred and fifty dollars last year; in addition to this, a person engaging in such studies may expect to loose one or two suits of clothes per year by fire, explosion, or other accidents in his work. On the average, one may expect his expenses to be about seven-hundred and fifty dollars a year when he buys a few books and uses a portion of his vacation for travel. It is easy to see that with coming here and returning home it will take about twenty-five hundred dollars to enable him to finish his course of three years' study.—Cin. Standard.

—Public education in Pennsylvania is flourishing. There are now 7,037 graded schools in the State, with an enrollment of 937,310 pupils, and an average attendance of 691,627. The school expenditures during the past year amounted to $7,482,577.75. The total indebtedness of all the school districts of the State, cities included, was $2,648,495.84, and at the end of the year there was in the school board treasuries $1,415,213.16. There is so much delay in the payment of the Legislature's annual appropriation of $1,000,000 that a loss has been caused to the schools of about $50,000 annually for interest and discount. Pennsylvania schools are said to have made remarkable progress since the war.

—The Boston Board of Aldermen intend to petition for a legislative act compelling the school-committee to keep within the appropriations made for the schools. The Board also call for amendments of the school laws, restricting the expenditures for any one year to $25 a scholar, doing away with the supervisors, and again placing one superintendent in charge of the schools.

—In regard to the teaching of primary geography, an Ohio teacher said the other day that it should be taught before going into the book. He does not permit his pupils to use the book before they are eight or nine years old. He teaches them the points of the compass, transferring them to a table or the floor, and illustrates the movement of the earth with an apple or a ball.

—According to the official report, just published, the Dutch universities had 1,008 students in 1878-79, Leiden, 533; Utrecht, 353; and Groningen, 182. In 1876-77 the total number of students was 1,603, viz., Leiden, 939; Utrecht, 468; and Groningen, 196. The number of students of the newly-established University of Amsterdam is not given.

—Ex-Governor A. H. Rice, of Massachusetts, has presented to the library of Roanoke College a rare old Latin Bible, printed in black letter, with rubricated capitals, on vellum, 944 pages folio. Its date is, "In the year of the Lord's incarnation; one thousand four hundred seventy-seventh, and the third kalends of August."

—Columbia College has an endowment of about $5,000,000, the last annual income of which was about $240,220.22. From students in the Department of Arts, School of Mines, and School of Law the receipts for the last year, ending September 30th, 1880, were $110,697.34, making the total income $321,917.56.

—The school authorities in Philadelphia have refused the daughter and niece of a colored man leave to attend the primary school, and the case has been carried into the courts.

—The senior class at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., have voted to dispense with class-day this year, and in place will secure an oration from some prominent person.

—The population of Yankton, Dakota Territory, has increased from 731 to 3,534 in ten years, and the public school of that town now has an average attendance of 504.

—The Chinese professor at Harvard has gained one over the number of his pupils last year. This year's class contains two. His first pupil secured a paying appointment not long ago.

—The Maryland School Fund has just been distributed to the amount of $124,500. The colored schools get out of this sum, $24,500.

—California's new Constitution has more than doubled the duties of county superintendents; but it has not raised their salaries.

—The income of the Girard estate in Philadelphia, amounted last year to $810,397. Of this amount $350,112. was expended on Girard College.

—In Texas, during the past year, a greater quantity of school land has been sold, than during the six preceding years.

—There are forty-two night schools in Philadelphia, with a registered attendance of 3,200 pupils.

EDUCATIONAL.

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE,
ABINGDON, VA.

In point of grounds, buildings, apparatus and faculty, this is one of the most thoroughly equipped schools in the South. It is located in one of the finest [illegible] of Virginia. [illegible]

Bishop McTyeire, Dr. Garland, Dr. Summers and Dr. A. W. Wilson give it their cordial endorsement.

Music is a specialty. The director of this department, Prof. V. Knieringer, is a noted teacher and composer, and his assistants are thoroughly cultivated musical artists.

A full course of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Natural Science, and Mental and Moral Philosophy is taught with great care.

The fare is good, and every care is taken of the health of the young ladies.

Parents living in the South would do well to send their daughters here to spend the summer.

$200 paid in advance will cover board, tuition, fuel, washing and lights for forty weeks. Music is $50 additional.

Spring session begins February 4, 1881. A discount of twenty per cent. to Methodist preachers, and Publishing House bonds taken from them at par.

Send for catalogue to

REV. E. E. HOSS, President.

HAMBURG (ARK.) HIGH SCHOOL,
Thirty Miles North of Bastrop, La.

This Institution, for both sexes, now in its fourth year, has 64 months yet remaining. Its facilities for educating are peculiar, and its charges are moderate. All modern improvements introduced. Faculty full and experienced. The principal boards his teachers and pupils, regarding the latter as his own children.

One hundred and twenty-five dollars will cover all school expenses, except Music.

City inquirers are referred to Judge R. B. Todd, J. M. Bonner and J. M. Lewis, Esqs. to Rev. Dr. C. W. Carter and Bishop Keener.

D. C. B. CONNERLY, Principal.

January 6, 1881.

READVILLA SEMINARY,
BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA.

A home school for girls. Thorough training in all departments. Full corps of efficient Teachers. Expenses moderate. Numbers limited.

For particulars address

MRS. MARY W. REED, Principal.

Memphis Conference Female Institute,
JACKSON, TENNESSEE.

REV. A. W. JONES, A. M., D. D., President.

This well known College of the South and West begins its Fall session the First Monday in September. Opening Concert and Address Tuesday, September 7 1880. For thirty-six years there has been an average of more than twelve graduates annually.

The Faculty is full and efficient. The determination is to stand among the foremost in the progress of Science, Language and Art.

For further information apply to the President.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE,
AT BATON ROUGE, LA.

The next session of this school will begin September 29, 1880.

This is a family Boarding School for boys. The healthfulness of the location is unsurpassed. Instruction thorough in all that is necessary to prepare the student for any grade in college or any pursuit in life. Discipline parental. The constant personal care of the principal is given to the health, morals and manners of the pupils.

For circulars, with necessary information, apply to W. H. N. MAGRUDER, Baton Rouge, La.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,
JACKSON, LOUISIANA.

Opens September 6, 1880. The last session was the most prosperous one since the war. The whole cost of board and tuition need not exceed $144 in the Preparatory Department, nor $164 in College classes for the scholastic year. Send for a Catalogue.

C. G. ANDREWS, President.

East Mississippi Female College,
MERIDIAN, MISSISSIPPI.

REV. J. W. ADKISSON, A. M., PRESIDENT.

A chartered and prosperous Southern school for girls and young ladies. Few schools have grown more steadily and rapidly in public confidence and patronage. Increased in numbers during the past seven years as the following figures 56 62 86 94 96 97 143. Commanded patronage the last year from Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee and Alabama. Its past history, increasing facilities, accessibility and methods of close and thorough instruction assure its friends of a long and prosperous future for the institution. Send for catalogue.

HIWASSEE COLLEGE,
EAST TENNESSEE.

Founded 1849, and located where
Pure waters flow,
Sleek cattle low,
Cool breezes blow,
Ripe apples grow.

Excellent and tried teachers. Terms very favorable. The Female Department is at SWEETWATER, on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad. The Male Department, at HIWASSEE COLLEGE POSTOFFICE, seven miles out in the country. A neat monthly paper, the "Hiwassee College Reporter," at fifty cents a year. Address

J. H. BRUNNER, President.

JEFFERSON COLLEGE.
HIGH SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND YOUNG MEN,

Six miles from Natchez, Miss. Session begins September 16. Full corps of instructors. Course of study thorough and extensive. Nearly fifty boarders from abroad. Pupils from a distance board with the principal. Entire expense for ten months, $145. For catalogues address the principal,

J. S. RAYMOND, Washington, Adams county, Miss.

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE,
SUMMERFIELD, ALA.,

will begin its forty-first session October 4, 1880. Great attention paid to the regular course. Teachers in the Music and Art departments selected with reference to special fitness. Charges moderate.

For further information address,

H. M. MOSS, A. M., President.

HOMER MALE COLLEGE

THE TWENTY-FIRST SESSION

will begin the

FIRST OF SEPTEMBER 1880.

Address R. A. SMITH, President.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Crescent Insurance Co.,
67 & 69 Camp Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

ORGANIZED 1849.—REORGANIZED 1880.

Cash Capital $400,000.

SOLICITS

FIRE, RIVER AND MARINE RISKS.

W. R. LYMAN.....President.
S. H. NEWMAN.....Vice President.
CHAS. E. RICE.....Secretary.

SPORTSMEN'S DEPOT,
RICHARD RHODES,
55.....ST. CHARLES STREET.....55
NEW ORLEANS.

Articles for Fishermen of all Kinds.

Rods, Nets, Hooks, Lines, and every desirable article for the Angler, wholesale and retail. Guns imported to order. J. H. Cooper's Breech and Muzzle Loading Guns always on hand. All kinds of improved artificial baits. Repairing of Guns carefully done by experienced workmen, and Fishing Rods made to order. Address Postoffice Box 1598.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS.

SIZES AND PRICES.

Diam. of Bell.	Ht. with yoke & frame	Cost of Bell & Hang's.
No. 6, 25in.	230 lbs.	$ 25 00
No. 5, 27in.	340 lbs.	36 00
No. 4, 30in.	460 lbs.	50 00
No. 3, 34in.	730 lbs.	75 00
No. 2, 38in.	925 lbs.	130 00

RUMSEY & CO., Seneca Falls, N. Y., U. S. A.

My New Illustrated Price List describing over 100 Gold and Silver Waltham Watches sent for a 3c stamp. It tells how I send watches to all parts of U. S. to be examined before paying any money. Undoubted reference. N. H. White, Jeweler, Newark, N. J.

EDUCATIONAL.

TEACHERS,

SCHOLARS

AND

DEALERS

Are hereby advised that the

Largest Stock and Most

Complete Assortment of

SCHOOL BOOKS

In the South-west is now in stock and ready to fill all orders, large or small at Publishers' prices at

112 CAMP STREET,

NEW ORLEANS.

All the books used in this section supplied at short notice, and prices guaranteed as low as they can be had elsewhere. Catalogues mailed on application. Also a general line of

School Supplies,

SLATED PAPER,
SLATED CLOTH,
LIQUID SLATING,
BLACKBOARDS,
BLACKBOARD RUBBERS,
CHALK CRAYONS,
MATHEMATICAL INSTRUMENTS,
NUMERICAL FRAMES,
SCHOOL SATCHELS,
BOOK STRAPS,
WRITING PAPER,
DRAWING PAPER,
BLOTTING PAPER,
WRITING BOOKS,
COMPOSITION BOOKS,
SLATES AND PENCILS,
INK, INK STANDS, PENS,
PENHOLDERS, CALL BELLS,

Kindergarten Material,

ETC., ETC.

Send for anything you want or address for prices.

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

In addition to the above we keep a complete line of all the standard religious publications, for pastors, members and Sunday-schools. Prices quoted on application.

South-western Agency for

Readers' and Writers' Economy Co.

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD & Co.,

AMERICAN CHINA HOUSE,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans

We append a few prices:

The American China Dinner, Breakfast and Tea Set, comprising 160 Pieces, for $12.

A Real French China Dinner Set, 115 Pieces, for $17.

English Stone China Dinner Set, 124 Pieces, for $10.

English Stone China Chamber Set, comprising 10 Pieces, for $3 50.

Decorated Chamber Sets, with different Colored Bands, 10 Pieces, for $3 50.

Glass Goblets, from 60 cents to $1 per dozen.

Particular attention given to Novelties and Specialties pertaining to the House-Furnishing Department. Orders promptly attended to. We have just received a full and complete stock of holiday goods. Call and examine before purchasing.

W. C. SHEPARD & CO

Christian Advocate.

One Night's Dissipation.

A TRUE INCIDENT.

"Oh, yes, dear, I know the band wagon passed. I could not shut my ears to its music nor to the voices of the rude crowd following, but I almost wished I was deaf."

"Why do you ask. It is too sad a story for such young ears, and yet I think I could bear to tell it, dear, if only I might hope it would influence you never, never to attend those places of low amusement; not only the circus, but all of its class."

It seems to me only yesterday that just such another procession passed through our little town, its gay music and display of animals attracting all the boys within reach. Your uncle Will was just twenty then, and as good a boy as any you know, as kind, as noble, and as generous; a favorite with every one, a comfort to us all. He came in hastily at noon that day saying, "Give me a lunch, mother, I'm off to the circus." "Oh Will, it is not worth going to," I answered, "Why not take your gun and dog for a hunt instead."

"No, no, mother, he replied, "all the boys are going and we'll have a fine time." He kissed me good bye a few moments later and I watched him pass lightly down the walk whistling merrily.

The afternoon wore away. I was busy, but now and then paused to catch the faint sound of the circus music and the muffled applause of the motley crowd. The hour came for tea, but Will had not returned; your grandfather, too, was absent and I knew would not be with us until the next morning when the early train came in. So after waiting a while, your mother and I sat down together, feeling a little lonesome without Will's cheery face and voice at the table. Nine o'clock came, ten, twelve, still he did not come. Almost sick with anxiety I waited and watched; there was no one to send out to inquire for him and I could do nothing but wait. The slow hours dragged away, sometimes I thought I must go myself, it was such torture to sit idle. He had never before stayed from home a single night without coming to tell me just where he would be and to gain my consent. At last the pale, uncertain glimmer of dawn stole through the window. The blinds were closed but I could look through into the yard, and suddenly thought I saw some movement of the gate. Yes, it opened noiselessly, and very slowly and cautiously two figures entered. I could have screamed in the intensity of my dread and apprehension, but sat motionless, straining my eyes to see the persons approaching. They came nearer, were on the door-step by the window. I did not recognize them, but directly one spoke: "Now Will, old fellow, you'll be all right after a little sleep; get in as quietly as possible." What could it mean? One of the men turned and went stealthing down the walk, the other, with a strange stumbling about the door ensured, and I heard unfamiliar steps pass through the hall, up the stairs, and then enter your uncle Will's room. I was almost wild with fright. Something terrible must have happened, and this must had come on some errand for help. A few moments I sat waiting and then crept into the hall and up the stairs. They are trying to keep it from me, I thought, but I must know, the suspense is unendurable.

Soon after tea I had lit the lamp in Will's room and it was still burning, the faint light showing through the opening of the door. I drew nearer, stood breathing, and grasped the railing of the stair for support. I gazed into the room, but saw no one, until looking towards the bed I discovered the figure of a man, thrown carelessly across, and listening I caught the sound of heavy, labored breathing. I did not see the face, and the room was too dark even to recognize the figure. I entered, a sudden horrible thought possessing me. Softly I approached the bed and passing to the other side, bent over the sleeper. I knelt by his side and laid my hand upon his flushed, feverish face. I sank upon the floor, it was my boy, my Will.

He opened his eyes slowly. I must have moaned, surely I did not speak, but he answered in words which at first I did not understand. I pressed my cheek against his and think the hot tears running upon his face must have alarmed him, for directly I felt him move and knew that his arm was about me.

"Don't, don't, mother, I can't stand it! Oh God! Oh God! forgive me."

"What is it, Will, where have you been?" I asked, when I could control my voice.

"It is whisky and the gambling hell," he said, with a groan. The hours dragged away and after awhile when he seemed sleeping I crept from the room knowing it was almost time for the train. Soon your grandfather came. I knew it would not be concealed, so him and together we sat and spoke in whispers then went to the room upstairs.

He lay almost as I had left him, but a change in the room and my heart almost stopped its beating. The blood was slowly oozing from his throat, a knife lay near. I threw myself by his side. Will! Will's my boy!" He only whispered, "I could not stand it mother; I'm tired of living."

Your grandfather rushed from the room and sent for our physician, then returned and knelt by the bedside. I found a towel about the wound, but the red drops came faster and faster.

"Oh, my darling, look to Jesus, call on His name." I waited for an answer and caught the whispered words, It is too late, too late."

They were his last, a half hour and it was gone. . . . . And now do you wonder why I turn away from the circus music—that I shudder when I hear it pass—that my heart trembles when I hear you speak of going?

At the circus he met the wild, reckless boys who always gather at such places. With them he watched the degrading performance and laughed at the rude jests. With them he took his first drink and with them he went for the first time to the saloon and spent the night in drinking and gambling, returning home under the influence of liquor he was only half himself, but was sufficiently conscious to feel the terrible depression resulting. And so, he said to me, to his mother, "I am tired of living." Evil companions had worked his ruin.

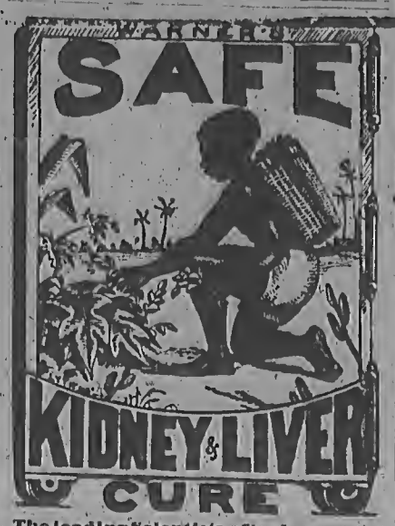
No, we have never told you of this sad sorrow before. I could not have brought myself to do it now save for the hope that you will promise me not to go to-day. That you will promise me to shun always those places of low amusement which invariably attract the dissipated and vicious.

Oh, my boy, seek pleasures and companions that are ennobling and elevating, and pray God daily to give you strength to resist temptation.

Louis Auguste Blanqui.

[Philadelphia Times.]

The death of Louis Auguste Blanqui, the noted French Communist and Socialist, took place, according to a despatch from Paris, on Thursday evening last. The story of Blanqui's early life is full of romantic and perilous interest and incident. He was born in 1805. His mother was a Republican of the most advanced school, and so thoroughly did she imbue her son with her ideas and sentiments that, having gone from his native town of Nice to Paris, he made his first bow to the public at the age of twenty-two from behind a barricade in the Quartier St. Denis, and was greeted with a bullet in the neck. Three years later, in 1830, he bore a part in the memorable Three Glorious Days in July. He had scarcely recovered from his wound when he was again in trouble and an inmate of a prison for having hissed Barthe, his class lecturer. The following year he was again under arrest as the editor of a periodical called the Friends of the People. He was acquitted of the charge preferred against him, but was fined and imprisoned for contempt of court while making his defence. The prison doors had scarcely been open to release him when they again were unbarred for admittance. In 1836 he was fined and sent to jail for two years for unlawfully manufacturing ammunition. As soon as he was set free he aided in founding the celebrated "Societe des Quatre-Saisons," which, in May, 1839, brought 850 sectionaries into the streets of Paris. The uprising failed, and for a wonder Blanqui succeeded in escaping, at least temporarily. The following October, while endeavoring to leave Paris, he was arrested, and in 1840 was condemned to death by the Chamber of Paris, but the sentence was subsequently commuted to life imprisonment.



He remained until the revolution of 1848, when he hurried to Paris and assumed the Presidency of the Societe Republicaine Centrale. In a celebrated speech he denounced the guillotine as infinitely less effective than "domiciliary massacre." Lamartine and Louis Blanc intercede with the Government in his behalf, but notwithstanding their entreaties his arrest was determined upon. When the officers visited his home they found him, surrounded by a score of his friends, armed to the teeth, and they prudently withdrew. May, 1848, found him at the head of a rising against the Assembly, and before the close of the same month he was arrested and sentenced to ten years penal servitude. He effected an escape, but only to be recaptured. Napoleon's advent brought him no relief. In 1859 he accepted the amnesty, but revolution and conspiracy possessed an irresistible attraction for him, and in 1861 he was again sentenced to prison for five years. After the expiration of his term he was again arrested as a conspirator and imprisoned. In August, 1870, the police again laid their hands upon him for participation in the demonstration of La Villette. When the Napoleon dynasty went down in the smoke and carnage of Sedan, he was in prison, and he almost stepped from his cell to the head of the column which made the memorable attack on the Hotel de Ville on the last day of the latter. He next figures as one of the leaders in the December insurrection of 1870. In 1870 he became one of the chief leaders of the Commune, and was to a great measure responsible for its outrageous excesses. He was arrested by the Thiers Government, and the refusal to release him was answered by the assassination of Archbishop Darboy and other hostages. In 1872 he was sentenced to transportation for life. It was on this occasion that on being asked his usual place of residence, he made the memorable answer: "My usual place of residence? I am usually in prison." In April, 1879, while yet in the prison of Chirvaux and disqualified from holding a seat in the Chamber of Deputies, he was returned second on the poll lists at the supplementary election in Bordeaux. There was an informality in the election, and a second ballot resulted in the triumphant election of the imprisoned agitator. His election was declared invalid and the Government refused a pardon until the following June. In August of the same year he again sought a seat in the Chamber from Bordeaux. Although he headed the poll he failed of an absolute majority, and on a second ballot he was defeated. He next sought a seat from Lyons, but was again defeated.

Blanqui was the typical French revolutionist of the day. He was bold, audacious, careless of his own life and of that of others. The opponent of every Government that France has seen in half a century, it is safe to say that if he could have lived for fifty years to come he would be a conspirator and a revolutionist. In private life he was gentle and amiable. The only bright spot in his career was during the few years of his wedlock, and even that was dimmed and obscured by one of his periodical terms of imprisonment. His wife died of grief, and to the end he wore on his wrist one of her bracelets.

A SENSIBLE MOTHER. It is really pitiful to see a good, conscientious little mother resolutely shutting herself away from so much that is best and sweetest in her children's lives, for the sake of tucking their dresses an ruffling their petticoats. How surprised and grieved she will be to find that her boys and girls, at sixteen, regard "mother" chiefly as a most excellent person to keep shirts in order and to make new dresses, and not as one to whom they care to go for social companionship! Yet, before they are snubbed out of it, by repeated rebuffs, such as "Run away, I'm too busy to listen to your nonsense," children naturally go to their mothers with all their sorrows and pleasures; and if "mother" can only enter into all their little plans, how pleased they are! Such a shout of delight as I heard last summer from Mrs. Friendly's croquet ground, where her two little girls were playing! "Oh, goody, goody; mamma is coming to play with us!" She was a busy mother, too, and I know would have much preferred to use what few moments of recreation she would snatch, for something more interesting than playing croquet with little children, not much taller than their mallets. She has often said to me, "I cannot let my children grow away from me; I must keep right along with them all the time, and whether it is croquet with the little ones, or Latin grammar and base ball with the boys, or French dictation and sash-ribbons with the girls, I must be in it, as far as I can."

—Lasting reputations are a slow growth. The man who wakes up famous some morning is quite apt to go to bed some night and sleep it all off.—Josh Billings.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time, and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial Fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for Females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb.

As a blood purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the orgins that make the blood.

READ ITS RECORD.

"It saved my life."—E. B. Lakely, Selma, Ala.

"It is the remedy that will cure the many diseases peculiar to women."—Mothers Magazine.

"It has passed severe tests and won endorsements from some of the highest medical talent in the country."—New York World.

"No remedy heretofore discovered can be held for one moment in comparison with it."—Rev. C. A. Harvey, D.D., Washington, D. C.

This Remedy which has done such wonders, is put up in the LARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by druggists and all dealers at $1.25 per bottle. For Diabetes, enquire for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy.

H. H. WARNER & CO., Rochester, N. Y.

E. HEATH,

IMPORTER AND DEALER IN

Carpets, Floor Oil Cloths,

UPHOLSTERY GOODS, Wall Paper, Window Shades, Cornices, Lace and Nottingham Curtains, Mirrors, Moldings, Chromos, Engravings, etc.

Frames made to order—a specialty.

No. 99 Camp street, New Orleans.

SPENCERIAN

SPENCERIAN COMMERCIAL

STEEL PENS

of the Very best European Make, and unrivaled for Flexibility, Durability, and Evenness of point.

REAL SWAN QUILL ACTION.

Ten 20 Numbers, A reliable Sample Card, for trial, by mail on receipt of 20 Cents.

A Sample Card of 10 of the Leading styles, for trial, on receipt of 10 Cents.

IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR & CO.,

138 & 140 Grand St., New York.

All Farmers, Mothers, Business Men, teachers and others who are debilitated by worry and overwork, and are troubled with Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sleeplessness, with Bowel, Kidney or Liver Complaints, will find a safe, sure and speedy cure in

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC

If you are wasting away with Consumption, Debility, Nervousness, Weak Stomach, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Blood Disease, Weakness, Dissipation or any Sickness or Weakness, you have pimples, and your blood needs purifying, you will find PARKER'S GINGER TONIC the Best Health & Strength Restorer you can use. It acts superior to Bitters, and other Tonics, as it searches up the System, but never intoxicates. It Has Saved Hundreds of Lives; and May Save Yours.

Buy a bottle and be sure the signature of H. A. & Co., N. Y., is on outside wrapper.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM Removes Dandruff. Elegantly Perfumed. Restores Color. Prevents Baldness.

NO MORE RHEUMATISM OR GOUT

ACUTE OR CHRONIC

SALICYLICA

SURE CURE.

Manufactured only under the above Trade-Mark by the

EUROPEAN MEDICINE CO.,

OF PARIS AND LEIPZIG.

IMMEDIATE RELIEF WARRANTED. PERMANENT CURE GUARANTEED. Now exclusively used by all celebrated Physicians of Europe and America, becoming a Staple, Harmless and Reliable Remedy on both continents. The highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 95 cures out of 100 cases within three days. Secret. The only dissolver of the poisonous Uric Acid which exists in the Blood of Rheumatic and Gouty Patients. $1 a box; 6 boxes for $5. Sent to any address on receipt of price. INDORSED BY PHYSICIANS. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS. Address,

DANIEL ROMMEL, Sole Proprietor,

Office 62 Fulton street, New York.

For sale by C. L. Lyons and E. J. Hart & Co., New Orleans.

BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER.

Has received the greatest number of indorsements (by reliable endorsement) that any remedy or remedy for pain ever received from physicians, druggists and the public. A single trial will prove its superiority over all other external remedies.

5000 Physicians and Druggists of good standing voluntarily endorse them as a great improvement on all other plasters.

Sold by all Druggists. Price 25 cents.

BEWARE OF FRAUD.

THE MILD POWER

CURES

Humphreys' Homeopathic Specifics

Proved from ample experience an entire success. Simple, Prompt, Efficient and Reliable, they are the only medicines adapted to popular use.

	PRICE
1. Fevers, Congestion, Inflammations,	.25
2. Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic,	.25
3. Crying Colic, or Teething of Infants,	.25
4. Diarrhea of Children or Adults,	.25
5. Dysentery, Griping, Bilious Colic,	.25
6. Cholera Morbus, Vomiting,	.25
7. Coughs, Cold, Bronchitis,	.25
8. Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache,	.25
9. Headaches, Sick Headaches, Vertigo,	.25
10. Dyspepsia, Bilious Stomach,	.25
11. Suppressed or Painful Periods,	.25
12. Whites, too profuse Periods,	.25
13. Croup, Cough, Difficult Breathing,	.25
14. Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions,	.25
15. Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains,	.25
16. Fever and Ague, Chill, Fever, Ague,	.50
17. Piles, Blind or Bleeding,	.50
18. Catarrh, acute or chronic, Influenza,	.50
19. Whooping Cough, violent Coughs,	.50
24. General Debility, Phys'l Weakness,	.50
27. Kidney Disease,	.50
28. Nervous Debility; Spermatorrhœa,	1.00
30. Urinary Weakness, Wetting the Bed,	.50
32. Disease of the Heart, Palpitation,	1.00

For sale by druggists, or sent by the Case, or single Vial, free of charge, on receipt of price. Send for Dr. Humphreys' Book on Disease, &c., (144 pages), also Illustrated Catalogue, FREE.

Address, Humphreys' Homeopathic Med. Co., 109 Fulton St., New York.

MISCELLANEOUS.

25,000 SOLD!

FARMER'S AND MECHANIC'S MANUAL

Edited by GEO. E. WARING, JR.,

Author of "Elements of Agriculture," "Draining for Profit and for Health," and formerly Agricultural Engineer of Central Park, New York.

500 Octavo Pages—Over 200 Illustrations.

Worth to any Thinking, Working Farmer $25 per Year.

This book is for the most part a work of facts and figures—assured analysis and demonstrations, about which there can be no dispute. The design was to produce a work of substantial and enduring value, and of universal application and use. This work is offered as containing more that has been proven by long use to be of value, more that is most necessary for every farmer and mechanic to know, and more of promising novelty, than any other that has ever been presented to the farmers and mechanics of America. It is complete in every particular in which it is possible for such a book to be complete; and, in addition to this, it is sufficiently suggestive in many other respects to induce its readers to read more, to think more, to experiment more, and to become more intelligent and more successful in the management of their business as well as really happier and wiser men.

Price, In Extra English Cloth, Gilt Back, Only $2 50.

Sent postpaid on receipt of price. Address

LATHROP & WILKINS,

New Orleans, La., or Houston, Tex.

B. T. WALSHE,

SHIRTS,

Winter stock now ready. Prices moderate. Assortment of

MEN'S FURNISHING GOODS

Very Complete.

No. 13 ST. CHARLES STREET, New Orleans.

Country orders carefully and promptly filled. C. O. D.

YOUNG MEN'S Christian Association,

OF NEW ORLEANS.

ROOMS, 87 CAMP STREET.

Open from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M., except Sunday, and on Sundays from 2 to 8 P. M., where may be found the leading daily and weekly papers of the most important cities of the United States.

SERVICES.

Tuesday, 7:30 P. M., Devotional.

Thursday, 8 P. M., Singing Class.

NOON-DAY PRAYER-MEETING.

Daily, 12 to 12:30.

Rules—Prayers and Remarks are limited to three minutes.

FURNITURE

JOHN BOIS,

DEALER IN

Parlor, Bed and Dining Room FURNITURE.

291 Camp St., cor. Calliope, New Orleans.

Repairing, Upholstering, Varnishing, etc., promptly done. Country orders promptly attended to. Spring, Hair and Moss Mattresses made to order. A full line of common Furniture on hand; suitable for the country.

Unequaled Low Rates now Ruling at

JOHN GAUCHE'S

MAMMOTH

QUEENSWARE HOUSE.

We announce to our patrons that we are now offering our celebrated ROYAL SEMI-PORCELAIN DINNER SETS, 160 pieces, for $12.

ENGLISH STONE CHINA DINNER SETS, 134 pieces, $10.

REAL FRENCH CHINA DINNER SETS, 124 pieces, $17.

ENGLISH PRINTED TOILET SETS, $3 50.

ENGLISH CHINA PRINTED DINNER SETS, $20.

ENGLISH CHINA GOLD BAND and FLOWERED TEA SETS, 44 pieces, $5 50.

THE BEST SELECTION OF

CROCKERY

Glassware and Housefurnishing Goods

OF ANY HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

The assortment for both city and country is very large, and the prices are guaranteed as low, if not lower than any establishment North or South.

REMEMBER THE PLACE, IT IS

JOHN CAUCHE,

AT THE MORESQUE BUILDINGS,

109, 111, 113 & 115 Camp Street.

Branch House, Nos. 108 and 110 Chartres Street.

HOLIDAY MUSIC BOOKS.

DITSON & CO. call attention to their elegant and useful music books suitable for presents, and especially to their

VOLUMES OF BOUND SHEET MUSIC.

Prices of each in cloth, $2 50; Fine Gilt $3.

THE CLUSTER OF GEMS. 43 pieces of high character.

GEMS OF THE DANCE. 79 of the best pieces of new dance music, by the most celebrated composers.

GEMS OF STRAUSS. 80 splendid and Brilliant compositions.

PIANOFORTE GEMS. 100 select plain pieces.

HOME CIRCLE. Vol. I. 170 easy pieces for beginners.

HOME CIRCLE. Vol. II. 142 pieces, of which 22 are for 4-hands.

PARLOR MUSIC. 2 Vols. 129 easy and popular pieces.

CREME DE LA CREME. 2 Vols. 85 select pieces of some difficulty, suited to advanced players.

FOUNTAIN OF GEMS. 97 easy and popular pieces.

WELCOME HOME. 70 easy and popular pieces.

PEARLS OF MELODY. 80 pieces of moderate difficulty.

PIANIST'S ALBUM. 102 pieces. Fine collection.

All the books above named are alike in size, style, binding and price

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston

C. H. DITSON & CO.,

843 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NEW DICTIONARY HOLDER.

These holders are so arranged that they press the book firmly together when it is closed. In short the Dictionary Holder is perfected in form, finish and operation, and will be found one of the most elegant and desirable articles for schools, literary or professional reference and library use. Every one who uses a Dictionary should have one of these patent holders, and have the unwieldy Unabridged ready for reference. Place the dictionary in the holder and keep it there. There is no more occasion to take it out of the holder, than out of its binding. Children and grown people refer to a dictionary if mounted in one of these holders and the book does not become racked, soiled and spoiled. You have but to open the book and it remains open; close it and it remains closed. As played by your side when reading, or writing, the task of looking up words is not deferred and then forgotten, but done instantly, and easily. The holder is high enough if you stand, low enough if you sit, and has received unlimited praise from clergymen, and teachers, and all others who have used it. The Unabridged Dictionary, either of Worcester or Webster, fits in them exactly.

Price finished in hard jet black Japan, ... $2 00

" " while, or nickle wash, ... 3 00

Address LATHROP & WILKINS, Agents for the Southwest, 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

D. H. HOLMES,

155 Canal Street, - - - 15 Bourbon Street.

Our Stock of Spring Goods is now complete, consisting of the latest novelties in Silks, Laces, Dress Goods in Worsted Fabrics, Black Groundines in Silk and Wool, Linen Lawns, Organdies and Percales.

HOSIERY in all Styles and Colors. A Complete assortment of MATTINGS.

SAMPLES SENT FREE OF CHARGE.

D. H. HOLMES,

155 Canal Street, New Orleans

WHEELER & PIERSON,

(Successors to Darcy & Wheeler and Pierson & Hewes.)

CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS,

Nos. 13 & 15 CAMP STREET, New Orleans.

Black Cloth Suits, $20 to 40. Business Suits, $12 to $25

6 Shirts for $9 Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.

Orders from Clergymen solicited and liberal reduction made to them.

Rules for self-measurement sent on application, and goods sent C. O. D.

Plantation Clothing for Country Stores at very low prices from Wholesale Department up stairs.

CATARRH Is a Terrible Disease. Its fearful effects—corruption running down the throat, weak eyes, deafness, loss of voice, loss of smell, disgusting odors, nasal deformities, and finally consumption. From first to last it is ever aggressive. Ordinary treatments are worse than useless. Unneglected while a cure is possible, it may rapidly develop into quick consumption. The most thorough, successful and pleasant treatment is

Dr. M. W. CASE'S CARBOLATE of TAR INHALANT

FOR CATARRH, ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION, Bronchitis & Deafness.

It does not require long nor severe tests to demonstrate the value of Carbolate of Tar, the most healing remedial agent known to science. Balsams and Cordials, the most healing and soothing properties are so combined with Pine Tree Tar, that the mere breathing converts them into a dense smoke or vapor. This is inhaled—taken right to the diseased parts. No heat, no hot water, simply inhaling or breathing it, and you feel its healing power at once. This treatment is endorsed by physicians everywhere, and highly commended by thousands, who have used it with perfect satisfaction. FULL TREATMENT—Circulars, etc., Sent Free—cent. Satisfaction Always Guaranteed. Address, DR. M. W. CASE, 933 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

HOW TO PAINT.

A new work by a Practical Painter, designed for the use of tradesmen, Mechanics, Machinists, Farmers, and as a Guide to Professional Painters. Containing a plain common-sense statement of the methods employed by painters to produce satisfactory results for plain and fancy painting of every description, including formulas for mixing paint in oil or water, tools required, etc. This is just the book needed by every person having anything to paint, and makes

Every Man His Own Painter.

Full directions for using white lead, lamp black, green, yellow, vermillion, brown, whiting, glue, gamboge stone, asphaltum and spirits of turpentine, oils, varnishes, varnishing furniture, milk paint, preparing kalsomine—

Paint for Out-Buildings,

Whitewash, paste for paper-hanging, hanging paper, graining to oak, maple, rosewood, black walnut staining, decalcomanie, making rustic pictures, painting flower stands, mahogany polish, rosewood polish, varnishing furniture, waxing furniture, cleaning paint—

Paint for Farming Tools,

and for machinery, and household fixtures,

To Paint a Farm Wagon,

to re-varnish a carriage, to make plaster casts.

The work is neatly printed, with illustrations wherever they can serve to make the subject plainer, and it will save many times its cost yearly. Every family should possess a copy.

Price by mail, post paid, 50.

LATHROP & WILKINS,

New Orleans, La., and Houston, Tex.

Good News! Good News!

Mammoth Furniture House

OF

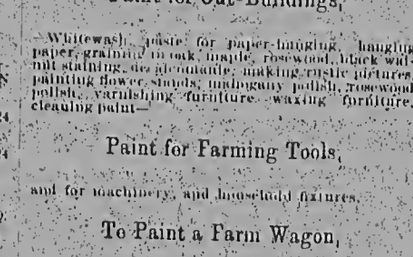
McCRACKEN & BREWSTER,

33 & 35 Royal Street,

Now have the largest stock of Fine and Medium Chamber Sets, Ebony Gilt and Walnut Parlor Sets, Dining-Room and Hall Furniture to be found in the South. Also a large and various stock of cheap and durable Furniture suitable for the country trade.

THONET BROS., VIENNA,

BENT WOOD FURNITURE.



Our motto—small profits and quick returns.

McCRACKEN & BREWSTER.

J. H. KELLER,

MANUFACTURER OF

CARBOLIC,

Office, 110 Gravier St. ESTABLISHED 1842

All Kinds of Laundry and Toilet Soaps.

Send for Circular.

BENT WASHER AND WRINGER

in the World. Guaranteed to do perfect work or money refunded. Warranted for 5 years. Price of Washer, $8. Sample to agents, $3 50. Price of Wringer, $7 50. Sample, $4 25. Circulars free.

ERIE WASHER CO., ERIE, PA.

MENEELYS' BELLS.

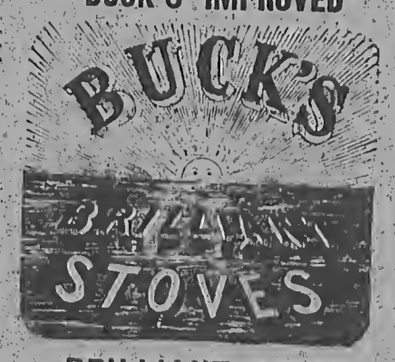
For Churches, etc., known to the public since 1826, are made only at "THE MENEELY BELL FOUNDRY," West Troy, N. Y. Catalogues free.

WATCHES.

LADY'S GOLD WATCHES, $30 and upward.

GENT'S GOLD WATCHES, $15 and upward.

GENT'S SILVER WATCHES, $12 and upward.



BOY'S SILVER WATCHES, $12 and upward

All guaranteed.

A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.,

Cor Canal and Royal Sts.

BUCK'S IMPROVED

BRILLIANT STOVE

Is acknowledged to be the Best Cook-Stove Made.

SOLD BY

H. HALLER,

NEW ORLEANS.

DEALER IN ALL KINDS OF

Cooking and Heating Stoves of the most Improved makes, Stamped, Plain and Japanned Tin-ware, Tinned and Enameled Hollow-ware, Iron and Clay Furnaces, Tinner's Stock, Granite Iron-ware, Lamp Burner and Wick to suit, Tinned Iron Spoons an Forks, Coffee Mills of all kinds Plaished-ware, Irons, Fire-Grates, Fluting Machines, etc.

H. HALLER,

No. 55 Camp St., New Orleans.

Price lists mailed on application.

GRATEFUL. COMFORTING.

EPPS'-COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us, ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette

Made simply with boiling water or milk.

Sold only in tins 1/2, 1, and 5 labelled

JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

Also makers of Epps' Chocolate Essence for afternoons

AGENTS WANTED.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings, with HEEL and TOE, complete, in 20 minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 409 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

AGENTS WANTED, to sell Dr. CHASE'S 2000 RECIPE BOOK. Sells at Sight. You double your money. Address Dr. Chase's Printing House, Ann Arbor, Mich.

$777 A YEAR and expenses to agents. Outfit free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

PRICES CURRENT.

REVISED AND CORRECTED WEEKLY.

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
New Orleans, Monday, Feb. 7, 1881.

Our readers should bear in mind that our quotations represent prices for round lots, and that in filling small orders higher prices must be paid.

SOUTHERN STAPLES.

	To-day.	Sat.
Cotton, ₱ lb.
Low ordinary	7⅞	7⅞
Ordinary	8⅝	8⅝
Good ordinary	9⅜	9⅜
Low middling	10⅜	10⅜
Middling	11⅛	11⅛
Good middling	12⅜	12⅜
Middling fair	13⅛	13⅛
Sales to-day	3,200 bales.
Receipts since our last	19,067 bales.
Receipts previously	1,028,583 bales.
Sugar, ₱ lb.:
Fair	— —	6
Fully fair	— —	6⅛
Prime	6⅜	6⅜
Choice	— —	— —
Yellow clarified	7⅝	7⅞
White clarified	8	8⅛
Powdered	— —	— —
Crushed	— —	— —
Molasses, in bbls., ₱ gallon:
Common	23	25
Fair	33	34
Prime	36	38
Choice	45	46
Rice, Louisiana, ₱ lb.:
Common	4	4⅛
Fair	5⅛	5⅜
Prime	5⅞	6
Choice	6¼	6⅜
GROCERIES.
Butter, ₱ lb.:
Western	10	31
New-York	17	30
Coffee, ₱ lb.
Rio, ordinary	11	11¼
Rio, fair	13	13½
Rio, prime	14	14⅝
Cheese, ₱ lb.
Western factory	— —	— —
English dairy	15½	16
Candles, ₱ lb.:
Best brands	— —	12⅜
Corn Meal, ₱ bbl.:
Choice K. D	3 05	3 10
Flour, ₱ bbl.
Superfine	3 50	3 75
XX	4 25	4 50
XXX	4 75	5 00
Choice XXX	— —	— —
Choice family	— —	— —
Fish:
Mackerel, No. 1, in bbls	— —	8 00
Half barrels	— —	4 50
Kits	— —	95
Mackerel, No. 2 in bbls	— —	6 75
Half bbls	— —	3 50
Kits	— —	85
Mackerel, No. 3, in bbls	5 50	6 25
Half bbls	3 00	3 70
Kits	75	— —
Codfish, ₱ lb	5½	6
Herring, ₱ box	30	35
Oils, ₱ gallon:
Coal, in cases	25	30
Coal, in bbls	19	22
Linseed, raw	56	58
Linseed, boiled	59	61
Cotton seed	38	40
Lard	73	75
Soap, ₱ box:
Magnolia	— —	1 65
Olive	— —	2 40
Palm	— —	— —
Castile	— —	2 40
Soda, ₱ lb	— —	— —
Starch, ₱ lb	3½	5½
Salt, ₱ sack
Coarse	1 02½	1 05
Fine	1 40	1 45
GRAIN AND FEED.
Corn, in sacks, ₱ bushel:
Yellow	— —	— —
White	— —	58
Mixed	— —	— —
Oats, ₱ bushel:
Western	45	46
Red rust-proof	— —	70
Bran, ₱ 100 lbs:
Choice	— —	1 20
Hay, ₱ ton:
Prime	23 00
Choice	— —	25 00
Cow Peas, ₱ bushel:
Mixed	— —	— —
Clay	— —	1 25
PROVISIONS.
Bacon, ₱ lb:
Breakfast	9¾	10
Shoulders	— —	5¾
Sides, clear rib	— —	8¾
Sides, clear	— —	8¾
Hams, sugar-cured	9½	10¾
Mess Pork, ₱ bbl	14 00	14 75
Dry Salt Meat, ₱ lb:
Clear rib sides	— —	7¾
Clear sides	— —	7¾
Shoulders	5	5¼
Lard, ₱ lb.:
Choice, in kegs	— —	10¾
Choice, in tierces	9¾	10¼
EDULENTS.
Potatoes, ₱ bbl:
Irish	2 65	3 00
Sweet	— —	— —
Onions, ₱ bbl.	4 50	5 25
Apples, ₱ bbl.	2 25	4 25
Cabbages, ₱ box	— —	— —
Sour Kraut, ₱ bbl	11 00	12 00
BALING STUFFS.
Bagging, ₱ yard
India	— —	— —
Jute	— —	— —
Baling Twine, ₱ lb	— —	17
Ties, ₱ bundle
20 ties and buckles	— —	1 85
SUNDRIES.
Poultry, ₱ dozen:
Grown chickens	— —	4 00
Young do	2 50	3 00
Ducks	2 50	3 00
Geese	— —	5 00
Turkeys	12 00	13 00
Eggs, ₱ dozen:
Western	— —	— —
Southern	— —	32
Honey:
Strained, ₱ gallon	— —	— —
Comb, ₱ lb	— —	— —
Pecans, ₱ lb
Louisiana	8	10
Texas	8	9
Oranges:
Louisiana, ₱ bbl	— —	— —
Foreign, ₱ box	— —	2 00
Wool, ₱ lb.:
Louisiana	— —	28½
Texas	— —	— —
Feathers, ₱ lb
Geese	— —	— —
Hides, ₱ lb.
Country green	6	6½
Dry salted	— —	11
Dry flint	— —	13
Ox Horns, each	— —	6
Tallow, ₱ lb	5¾	6¼
Cotton Seed, ₱ ton
In sacks	— —	10 00
Meal	— —	21 50
Oil cake	22 50	23 75
Cooperage, ₱ each:
Sugar hogsheads	3 00	3 25
Molasses barrels	1 30	1 55
Half barrels	— —	1 05
Kegs	— —	70
Oak Staves, per 1200:
Kegs	— —	— —
Barrels	— —	— —
Extra claret	90 00	100 00
Extra hogshead	130 00	135 00
Extra pipes	140 00	175 00
Tobacco:
Low lugs	— —	4¼
Medium	— —	— —
Good to fine	— —	— —
Low leaf	5¾	5¾
Medium	6¾	7
Good	7¾	8
Fine	7¾	8
Selections	10	12

It is a foolish mistake to confound a remedy of merit with the quack medicines now so common. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Rheumatism and Dyspepsia, and when worn out by overwork, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE
In Nervous Debility and as a Tonic.

I have used Horsford's Acid Phosphate during the past six months, with great satisfaction, in a large number of cases of nervous debility, and as a tonic after fevers.

W. B. FLETCHER, M. D.
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 1.—The senate finance committee to-day agreed to amend the house funding bill so as to make the bonds redeemable in five years and payable in twenty years from their dates of issue, and to fix the rate of interest both for bonds and treasury certificates at 3½ per cent. The fourth, fifth and sixth sections of the bill were not reached for action to-day.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 1.—Advices from New Mexico, state that detectives have ascertained that Col. Potter, of the United States Geological Survey, who has been missing since October last, was murdered and robbed by a party of Mexicans while on duty in the field. One of the murderers was hanged a few days ago for horse stealing, and another, who is believed to have belonged to the gang, and to have been a party to the murder, is now under arrest at Albuquerque.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 1.—It began raining in the central and northern part of the State again to-day. The floods in the rivers are abating very slowly. At Shasta up to this afternoon, there has fallen this season, the enormous quantity of 81.40-100 inches of rain, and the damage in that section of the State cannot be approximated.

In Klamath, Delnorte, Trinity and Siskiyou counties rain fell very heavily. All the streams in this country have overflowed their banks, flooding the alleys, destroying farms, carrying away the bridges across them, and many sawmills and houses. Much grain and stock has been lost.

The property destroyed is estimated up in the millions. In Colusa county the rain fell lighter, but even in that county half a million of dollars could not pay for the property destroyed. The late storm was by far the most extensive and destructive that ever occurred on the coast since the whites settled here.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Judge Manning, of Louisiana, was on the floor of the Senate to-day. He comes to attend a meeting of the trustees of the Peabody educational fund. It is understood that a Secretary is to be chosen in place of Rev. Dr. Sears, who died.

Although this fund has been paraded as a donation to the South, its administration has been studiously denied to Southern men, and the controlling influences have been from the North. Mr. Evarts, one of the trustees, is reported as having said that there was nobody at the South fitted to be Secretary in place of Sears.

MOBILE, Ala., Feb. 2.—The town of Scooba, on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, was partly destroyed by fire this morning. Loss $35,000, insurance $7500. Eight stores are a total loss.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The population of Mississippi, according to the schedules returned to the Census Office, is as follows: Males 597,137, females 564,455; native 1,122,421, foreign 9168; white 479,371, colored 652,221. Total 1,131,592.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 2.—The flood in Sacramento River culminated this morning. At Sacramento, the water being within a foot and a half of the top of the levees of that city, the levee below town broke and the country was overflowed. The town of Washington, Yolo county, opposite Sacramento, is inundated. The damage in both cities reach an enormous sum. The entire Sacramento Valley presented the appearance of an inland sea.

Numberless houses have been swept away, but fortunately the loss of life, so far as reported, is very small. Hills, high ground and levels in the overflowed district are covered with live stock, and there is great demand for boats to save the cattle, sheep, etc., remaining, as a great number have been drowned.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The Board of Trustees of the Peabody Fund were in session to-day at the Riggs House. Miss Sears, daughter of the late general agent, submitted an informal report of the work of her father during the past year, which evidenced gratifying progress in the cause of education throughout the South.

Secretary Evarts, Chief Justice Waite, Judge Manning, Judge Jackson and Bishop Whipple, committee appointed to report as to the future policy of work under the fund, reported a resolution directing the general agent to expend, as far as possible, the revenues in the education of teachers for Southern schools, but giving authority to the general agent and executive committee to expend a sum not exceeding two-thirds of the income for destitute schools. The election of successor to the late general agent resulted in the selection of the Rev. J. L. M. Curry, of Richmond, Va. There were also about twenty applicants for the position.

The Treasurer's annual report showed an available income for the coming year of over $90,000. Judge Manning, of Louisiana, was appointed a committee to present to the Governor and Legislature of Mississippi, a memorial concerning the Mississippi State bonds, which Mr. Peabody gave to the board, for the purpose of their trust, amounting to $1,000,000, and which the State of Mississippi has repudiated. The memorial will urge payment of these bonds by the State, for the benefit of the fund.

MOBILE, Feb. 4.—Chas. LeBaron, Consul of Spain and Mexico, and one of the oldest citizens of Mobile, died here last night.

OPELOUSAS, La., Feb. 4.—The United States mail was robbed on the way down from Alexandria to this place last night. The driver was halted from a tree on the roadside, and not complying instanter was fired at. The robber demanding the pouches, some empty ones were delivered, but the lock pouch was demanded and the driver was compelled to surrender it, as he had no arms with which to defend himself. Rev. J. M. Johnson, presiding elder of this district, was in the stage. Officers start immediately to investigate the matter.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 5.—It has been fairly brought out that the portion of the State which is under water (and rivers and creeks are filling everywhere) is about 3500 square miles. Sacramento is under water. The losses cannot even be guessed at, at present, but the aggregate will be a stupendous sum.

PENSACOLA, Feb. 5.—Another disastrous fire broke out in the kitchen of the Delmonico Restaurant, at 9 o'clock. At this hour, 12, the fire is under control.

The Delmonico Restaurant and saloon, the largest in the city, was totally destroyed. Bell & Bell, ship chandlers, the Schad Saloon, Kline's grocery and residence, Webb's residence, Schreiner's confectionary, etc., are all in ruins.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 7.—A dispatch from Stockton says: All the islands in San Joaquin are to a greater or less extent covered with water, as is also the main land on the lower portion of the river. This morning it is raining again all over the northern and central portions of the State.

PENSACOLA, Feb. 7.—The heaviest gale known for years has been blowing for twenty-four hours. Several vessels have lost their moorings and fouled each other. The large bark broke through three wharves, and is now ashore flying a signal of distress. It is impossible to obtain particulars until the storm lulls. The Havana steamship Admiral did not sail last night, but will await fairer weather.

FOREIGN.

IRELAND, Feb. 4.—A Dublin dispatch says: Suspension of the Irish members of Parliament and the arrest of Michael Davitt has caused considerable commotion, but nothing like the excitement which might have been expected. The only effect the arrest of Davitt appears to have had, was to cool down the popular ardor and produce disappointment and depression. It was felt to be a severe blow to the agitation, and a remarkable change is observed in the tone of the Land Leaguers.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Thomas Carlyle died at half-past eight this morning. He passed away without a struggle. Mr. Carlyle was in his 86th year.

From 5 o'clock last evening, until his death, Carlyle was unconscious; his respiration was extremely feeble, and the heart's action barely perceptible. He suffered no pain during the last thirty-six hours. His niece was with him to the last.

The Pall Mall Gazette says: We understand that Mr. Carlyle will be buried in the churchyard of his birthplace, Ecclesfechan, Dumfriesshire.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The Dublin correspondent of the Times says: Accounts from all parts of the country represent that a very decided change for the better has occurred. The tenants of several estates, who have hitherto refused to pay rent, are now beginning to do so, but application which the emergency committee has reached from boycotted landlords in the west and south of Ireland for laborers, show that terrorism has not diminished in some districts. Burning of hay ricks and midnight visits of armed parties to farm houses are still reported.

The storm which swept over the city of New Orleans and vicinity on Sunday morning was a severe one, and resulted in great damage both to the shipping in port and to the country generally for miles around. Where the land was low and contiguous to the Lake and Gulf it was inundated, and the tracks of the several railroads were swept away or rendered impassible, and as a consequence the trains both to and from the city were delayed.

The shipping in port suffered severely, more especially where the bends in the river placed vessels moored to the wharves at the mercy of the winds and the waves, for the river at these exposed points assumed the aspect of the ocean in a storm, more than that of a land-locked river. From Desire street in the Third District every vessel suffered more or less damage, and the earthen bulkheads succumbed to the action of the water and caved in, in some localities for a distance of sixty or seventy feet.

THE NEGRO IN THE SOUTH.—Except in some rare instances, there is no oppression of the black man in the South to-day. He is paid fair wages, and he has all the work he cares to do. His work, however, is altogether in the field. He is not a success—at least, the present generation is not a success—in the factory. He has not the steady application that is needed around machinery. If a circus passes he rushes to the window to see it. If a stranger goes into a factory where colored men are employed, the chances are ten to one that every one of them will forget all about what he is doing, and stare at him until he leaves the place. The next generation may be better in this respect, but I have no hope for the present one. Hence it is that in nearly all the Southern factories the persons employed are white. It is a curious fact that the abolition of slavery has had as great a beneficial effect upon the poor whites as it has had upon the blacks. Their condition has improved wonderfully, and in a few years they promise to become what white men everywhere ought to be—enlightened, intelligent and self-respecting. There is, however, one great evil so far as the negro is concerned, and it seems almost impossible to find a way to remedy or remove it. The negro is mercilessly cheated by a class of people, who as a rule, have gone down there from the North—I mean the small traders who make advances in provisions, clothing, seed, liquors, tobacco, etc., while the crops are ripening. Some of these small traders are so rapacious and unprincipled that when the account comes to be squared the negro is without a dollar. He finds himself in debt to the full value of his little crop.—Col. McClure.

A TALENT FOR CONVERSATION.—A talent for conversation has an extraordinary value for common, every-day uses of life. Let anyone who has this gift enter in a social circle anywhere. How every one's face brightens at his entrance. How soon he sets all the little wheels in motion, encouraging the timid, calling out unostentatiously the resources of the reserved and shy, subsidizing the facile, and making everybody glad and happy.

To converse well is not to engross the conversation. It is not to do all the talking. It is not necessary to talk with very great brilliancy. A man may talk with such surpassing power and splendor as to awe the rest of the company into silence, or excite their envy, and so produce a chill where his aim should be to produce warmth and sunshine. He should seek the art of making others feel quite at home with him, so that no matter how great may be his attainments or reputation, or how small may be theirs, they find it insensibly just as natural and pleasant talking to him, as hearing him talk. The talent for conversation, indeed, more almost than anything else in life, requires tact and discretion. It requires one to have more varied knowledge, and to have it at instant and absolute disposal, so that he can use just as much or just as little as the occasion demands. It requires the ability to pass instantly and with ease from the playful to the serious, from books to men, from the mere phrase of courtesy to the expressions of sentiment and passion.—Prof. Hart's "Mistake of Educated Men."

MOODY AND SANKEY.—Information has been received in the city, that the proposed visit of the evangelists Moody and Sankey will not take place. These gentleman will not commence their work in San Francisco until March first, and as they have been away from their families for a great length of time, and both are worn out and broken down in health, it has been decided that they postpone their visit to New Orleans indefinitely, and return to their homes to prepare for their projected visit to Europe in the summer. No mention of their future movement was made, but it is probable that they will not visit New Orleans for some years.

Quarterly Conferences.

UNION SPRINGS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Greenville station	Jan. 1, 2
Greenville circuit, at Oak Grove	8, 9
Fort Deposit circuit, at Letohatchee	15, 16
Oaky Streak circuit, at Antioch	22, 23
Rutledge circuit, at Rutledge	29, 30
Rocky Mount circuit, at Rocky Mount	Feb. 5, 6
Union Springs station	12, 13
Troy station	19, 20
Pine Level circuit, at Hill's Chapel	23
Olustee mission, at Briar Hill	23
Brundidge circuit, at Clay Hill	26, 27
Mount Meigs circuit, at Mount Meigs	Mar. 5, 6
Union circuit, at Mount Hilliard	12, 13

(53) J. M. BOLAND, P. E.

MONTGOMERY DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Auburn station	Dec. 25, 26
Tallassee station	Jan. 1, 2
Hurtville circuit, at Seal	8, 9
Elmore circuit, at Carolina	15, 16
Crawford circuit, at Crawford	22, 23
Tuskegee circuit at Cotton Valley	29, 30
Salem circuit, at Salem	Feb. 5, 6
Loschapoka circuit, at Notasulga	12, 13
Tuskegee station	19, 20
Opelika station	26, 27
Franklin, mission, at Franklin	Mar. 4
Montgomery station	5, 6
Tallapoosa circuit, at Tabitha Chapel	13, 14

The District Stewards will meet at the District parsonage in Auburn, February 15, at eleven o'clock A. M. A full meeting is very much desired.

53 T. F. MANGUM, P. E.

GREENSBORO DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Havana circuit, at Havana	Jan. 15, 16
Green circuit, at Salem	22, 23
Livingstone and Kujaw, at Livingstone	29, 30
Demopolis, at Demopolis	Feb. 5, 6
Forkland circuit, at Forkland	12, 13
Gainsville circuit, at Gainsville	19, 20
Belmont circuit, at Wesley Chapel	26, 27
Cuba circuit, at Yurk	Mar. 5, 6
Gaston circuit, at Coke's Chapel	12, 13
Butler circuit	Wednesday 16
Choctaw circuit, at Tilley's	19, 20

3 R. URQUHART, P. E.

MOBILE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

St. Paul	Jan. 1, 2
Whistler	8, 9
St. Francis Street	15, 16
Franklin Street	22, 23
Eastern Shore, at Bay Minette	29, 30
Citronelle, at Mauvilla	Feb. 5, 6
Tomhinville, at Four Mile Post	12, 13
Grand Bay, at Grand Bay	19, 20
St. Stephen's, at New Hope	26, 27
Bladon Springs, at Bladon Springs	Mar. 5, 6
Okatuppa, at Bethel	12, 13
Suggsville, at Suggsville	19, 20
Grove Hill, at Mt. Zion	26, 27

53 O. R. BLUE, P. E.

SELMA DISTRICT.—FIRST ROUND.

Clifton circuit	Jan. 1, 2
Trumbert Hill	5
Choctaw Corner	8, 9
Lower Peach Tree	12
East Selma	15, 16
Brush Creek	21, 22
Marion	22, 23
Uniontown station	29, 30
Uniontown circuit	Feb. 1
Greville	5, 6
McKinley, at McKinley	12, 13
Snowmerhead	19, 20
Spring Hill	26, 27
Perryville	Mar. 5, 6
Cahaba mission, at Ivy Chapel

District Stewards meet at Selma, Tuesday March 15.

53 W. A. M'CARTY, P. E.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

OPELOUSAS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Morgan City	Feb. 5, 6
Franklin	12, 13
French Mission	16
New Iberia	19, 20
Vermillionville	26, 27
Abbeville	Mar. 5, 6
Lake Charles	12, 13
Sugar Town	19, 20
Opelousas	26, 27
Plaquemine	Apr. 2, 3
Washington	9, 10

5 J. M. JOHNSTON, P. E.

ALEXANDRIA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Bayou Boeuf and Evergreen	Jan. 15, 16
Alexandria and Pineville	22, 23
Rapides	29, 30
Jena	Feb. 5, 6
Castor	Tuesday 8
Columbia	12, 13
Winnfield	19, 20
Harrisonburg and Trinity	26, 27
Sicily Island	Mar. 5, 6
Little River	12, 13
Cottile	Thursday 17
Spring Creek	19, 20
Sabinetta	26, 27
Avoyelles French mission	Apr. 2, 3

3 F. G. HOCUTT, P. E.

HOMER DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Homer, at Homer	Jan. 8, 9
Tulip, at Salem	15, 16
Sparta, at Sparta	22, 23
Vernon, at Douglass	Feb. 5, 6
Indian Village, at Indian Village	12, 13
Rochester, at Rochester	19, 20
Haynesville, at Haynesville	26, 27
Minden, at Minden	Mar. 5, 6
Arcadia	12, 13
Downsville	19, 20
Farmerville, at Shiloh	26, 27
Webster, at Andrew Chapel	Apr. 2, 3

District Stewards will meet at Tulip, January 29-30. Preaching on each day. R. W. Greer, Homer, B. F. Ried, Tulip, Lovick Wynn, Meridian, G. T. Wynn, Haynesville, E. L. Holland, Vernon, W. P. Kimball, Webster, — — Norton, Arcadia. The Stewards from Sparta, Farmerville, Downsville, Indian Village and Rochester, together with the brethren named, will please meet me at the above time and place.

3 J. A. PARKER, P. E.

SHREVEPORT DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Logansport mission, at Reynold's S. H.	Jan. 8, 9
Caddo circuit	15, 16
South Bossier, at Bellvue	22, 23
North Bossier, at Red River	29, 30
Mooringsport	Feb. 5, 6
Shreveport	12, 13
Mansfield	19, 20
Coushatta, at Coushatta	26, 27
Springville, at Springville	Mar. 5, 6
Pleasant Hill	12, 13
Many, at Negreie	19, 20
Anacoco, at Holly Grove	26, 27
Natchitoches circuit, at New Hope	Apr. 3, 4
Natchitoches station	10, 11

District Stewards' meeting at Shreveport, February 12, 1880. 12, 5 T. H. M'CLENDON, P. E.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

JACKSON DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Hinds mission, at Lane's	Jan. 1, 2
Canton	8, 9
Sharon, at Lone Pine	15, 16
Thomastown, at Lone Pine	15, 16
Madison	22, 23
Soule Chapel	29, 30
Edwards	Feb. 5, 6
Bolton	12, 13
Jackson	19, 20
Benton	26, 27
Mt. Carmel	Mar. 5, 6
Fletcher's Chapel	12, 13
Silver Creek	19, 20
Lodi	19, 20
Yazoo City	26, 27

The district Stewards will please meet at the parsonage in Canton, at ten A. M., on Tuesday, January 25. (0) W. E. C. HINNICUTT, P. E.

WOODVILLE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Jackson station	Jan. 1, 2
Clinton station	8, 9
Amite City	15, 16
Pipkins and Port Hudson, at Pipkins	22, 23
Winans, at Winans	29, 30
Bayou Sara, at New Hope	Feb. 5, 6
St. Helena, at Pine Grove	12, 13
Wilkinson, at Bethel	19, 20
Woodville station	26, 27
North Wilkinson, at Hopewell	Mar. 5, 6
Amite, at Liberty	12, 13
Franklington, at Franklington	19, 20
East Feliciana, at Olive Branch	26, 27
East Baton Rouge, at Bethel	Apr. 2, 3
Livingston, at Bayou Barbary	9, 10

53 JAS. A. DUBBERLY, P. E.

BOOKHAVEN DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

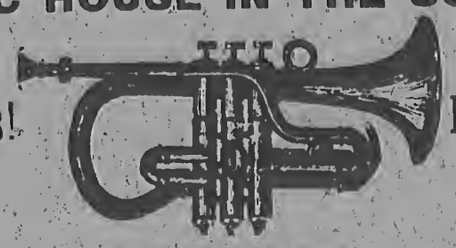
Brookhaven and Wesson, at Brookhaven	Dec. 25, 26
Crystal Springs station	Jan. 1, 2
Summit and McComb, at McComb	8, 9
Hazlehurst station	15, 16
Brandywine, at Beboboth	22, 23
Magnolia, at Magnolia	29, 30
Kitama and Boguechito, at Bethel	Feb. 5, 6
Scotland, at New Hope	12, 13
Beauregard, at Bahala	19, 20
Spring Ridge, at Byram	26, 27
Bayou Pierre, at Union Chapel	Mar. 5, 6
Georgetown, at Bethesda	12, 13

53 H. F. JOHNSON, P. E.

A Physician of Great Prominence

In Thirty-sixth street, New York city, was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Paterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE CROSS STYLOGRAFIC PEN OR FLUID PENCIL.

A pencil that writes with Ink; never needs sharpening and never wears out. Made of hard vulcanized rubber, silver, gold, platinum and iridium. 14 kinds from $2 50 to $5 each. Call and see them or send for circular.

LATHROP & WILKINS, Agents for the Southwest,
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

LEON ARLAUD
DRUGGIST,
Corner Customhouse and Dauphine sts., New Orleans.
PURE AND GENUINE DRUGS. GUARANTEED UNADULTERATED.
Medicines, Perfumery, etc. Specialty of Bather's Eau de Cologne.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR
MUSIC HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

Easiest Terms! Lowest Prices!

General Agency for the Celebrated
Steinway, Knabe, Pleyel, Weber, Fischer Pianos,
And the Popular Organs of
CLOUGH & WARREN AND PELOUBET, PELTON & CO.,
Everything in the Music line at rock bottom prices. Send for illustrated catalogues.
LOUIS GRUNEWALD,
Grunewald Hall, New Orleans.

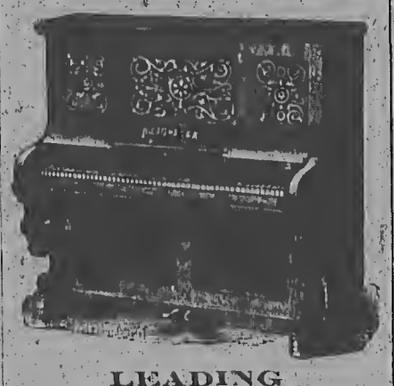
LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE
INSURANCE COMPANY.

SOUTHERN DEPARTMENT:

OFFICE: CORNER CARONDELET AND GRAVIER STREETS.

The capital of the Company is TEN MILLION DOLLARS, to which there must be added the unlimited liability of the proprietors.

Fire assets, excluding paid-up capital	$9,831,426 21
Paid-up capital	1,228,200 00
Total fire assets	$11,169,626 21
Fire liabilities	3,944,358 23
Making the surplus for policy-holders	$7,165,267 98



Losses by Chicago Fire in 1871, $3,239,001
Losses by Boston Fire in 1872, $1,129,720

Fire risks of all kinds respectfully solicited. The Board of Directors is fully empowered to adjust and pay all losses from this city, thus placing the Company on an even footing with the local companies chartered under the State laws.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

J. F. SCHRODER, Esq., Chairman, of Leopold Christ & Co.
NEWTON BUCKNER, Esq., of Buckner & Co.
PERRY NUGENT, Esq., of Nugent & Lallande.
PETER ANDERSON, Esq., of Anderson and Simpson.
HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary.
JULES P. ROUX, Ass't Resident Secretary.
NEW ORLEANS, October 20, 1880.

P. WERLEIN,
135 Canal Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

LEADING PIANOS!
ORGANS!
MUSIC
AND
Musical Instruments.

Send for my catalogues and prices before purchasing.

$25 TO $35.
STEWART'S NEW IMPROVED
SINGER
Sewing Machine.

Great Reduction in Prices!
Down with Monopolies!
Hard Times Demand Low Prices.

We warrant all our Machines to be NEW, LATEST-IMPROVED and PERFECT for

FIVE YEARS.

Our NEW MACHINE is supplied with a LOOSE BALANCE-WHEEL, which is a great improvement over the old SINGER, as it enables the operator to wind the bobbin without running the machine, or removing the work from the needle. This is the most important improvement ever put on the Sewing Machine.

Also dealer in all first-class Machines, such as the WHEELER & WILSON, GROVER & BAKER, DOMESTIC, WILSON, WEED, Etc.

Cotton, Silk, Flax, Oil and Needles for all kinds of Machines. Address

M. A. PECK,
General Sewing Machine Agent
153 CANAL STREET,
Next to Holmes' Dry Goods Store,
New Orleans.

B. J. MONTGOMERY. C. KIRST
R. M. & B. J.
MONTGOMERY
FURNITURE
AND
MIRROR EMPORIUM
Corner Camp and Poydras Sts.

After a sojourn of over six weeks among the Factories North, East and West, we open the Fall and Winter Trade with the largest and best selected stock of Furniture, French and German Plate Mirrors, Ornamental and Fancy Goods, Upholstery Goods and Cabinet Makers' Hardware ever brought to this city. We select our goods in person from the best factories, and are determined not to be undersold. Our assortment being too extensive and varied to be enumerated in detail, we request our customers and the general public to call and inspect for themselves.

On hand a full line of the celebrated Vienna Bent-Wood Work and Invalid Wheel Chairs.

Goods packed and delivered F. O. B.

THE
NEW HYMN BOOK
Everybody is Delighted with it.

Prepared by authorization of the General Conference of 1878, and especially adapted to revival, prayer and social meetings. The arrangement in the Standard Hymn Book has been preserved, as well as the most common hymns in that work, so that it can be used in connection with it. It contains 344 hymns, besides benedictions and doxologies, etc., the order of public worship, baptismal service of infants and adults, and form of reception of church members. It is strongly bound in cloth, stitched with wire. The low price at which it is supplied renders it particularly available for general use, in all churches for congregational singing.

Single copy by mail, postpaid, twenty-five cents.

In quantities of twenty-five or more, by freight or express, twenty cents per copy. Address

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

FURNITURE.

W. G. TEBAULT
47 Royal Street,
desires to inform the public and his patrons that his Stock of Parlor Suits, Chamber Suits and Dining-Room Suits, both fine and medium, has never been as complete as at present, with prices lower than ever.

His stock of Furniture suitable for country trade is very large, and special inducements are offered to wholesale buyers.

Orders from the country will have especial care and prompt attention.

W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
New Orleans.

D. MERCIER & SONS,
Better Known as Cheap John.
NO BRANCH STORE IN TOWN.
MEN'S, BOYS' AND YOUTH'S
CLOTHING
HATS, BOOTS, SHOES, FURNISHING GOODS, ETC., ETC.
Cor. Dauphine and Bienville sts.,
New Orleans, La.

Orders from Country Merchants promptly executed on most reasonable terms.

DR. BLY'S CELEBRATED PATENT ARTIFICIAL LEGS AND ARMS have all the motion of the natural limbs. Perfect satisfaction in all cases or no pay. Prices reduced. Send for pamphlet.

A. McDERMOTT, Manufacturer,
153 Camp St., New Orleans.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 27.—NO. 7. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1881. WHOLE NO. 1341.

PUBLISHED FOR THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

G. T. LATHROP & CO., Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, . . . $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.
REV. H. D. MOORE.
REV. O. R. BLUE, D. D.
REV. J. O. ANDREW.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. H. WATKINS, D. D.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. JOHN MATHEWS, D. D.
REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

HEAVEN.

DR. MUHLENBERG.

Since o'er thy footstool, here below,
Such radiant gems are strewn!
Oh, what magnificence must glow,
My God! about thy throne!
So brilliant here those drops of light—
There the full ocean rolls how bright!

If night's ebon curtain of the sky,
With thousand stars be wrought,
Hung like a royal canopy,
With glittering diamonds fraught—
Be, Lord, thy people's outer veil;
What splendor at the shrine must dwell!

The dazzling sun at noontide hour,
Forth from its flaming vase,
Flinging o'er earth the golden shower,
Till vale and mountain blaze—
But shows O Lord! one beam of thine
What, then, the day where thou dost shine!

Ah, how shall these dim eyes endure
That noon of living rays?
Or how thy spirit, so impure,
Upon thy glory gaze?
Awful, O Lord, amid thy sight,
And robe me for that world of light.

Thirty Conferences—No. 2.

NOTES ON THE ALABAMA CONFERENCE AT MARION, DECEMBER, 1852.

BY REV. F. M. TRACE.

Set out from my father's house and rode ten miles the first evening to reach the nearest railroad depot, at Randolph, forty miles north of Selma the next day. At sunrise crossed the mountain which bounded my native county. The trees were all covered with sleet, a most beautiful scene, and I knelt on the mountain top and gave myself to God and His work, looking backward, I seemed to bid farewell to all my earthly life, and looking forward I took in the vast range of future hopes and promises bound up in the everlasting gospel.

The next night I put up at old Bro. Cox's, near the depot. Here I found Bro. Joseph T. Curry on his way to Conference. The next morning I saw the first railroad in my life, and took the train for Selma. Arrived there, Bro. Curry and myself spent several days attending a State Temperance Convention, to which we had both been appointed as delegates. In this convention I became acquainted with Dr. N. B. Powell, and his son, Col. R. H. Powell, of Chunnenuggee Ridge; with the Rev. Mr. Sturgis, who wrote the essay on the duties of masters and servants, which was published in the same volume with McTyeire's essay on the same subject, that took the prize of three hundred dollars offered by the Baptist State Convention; with Alex. B. Clitherall, of Pickens county, who was so long secretary of the Legislature of Alabama; with Dr. Wm. T. Hudson, of Newbern, who was my friend from that time till his death, and with many other good and noble men who have now passed away.

Bro. Clitherall was introduced to me with the remark that he was one of the best Methodists in Pickens county. "Yes," said he, "a mighty good Methodist, but a very poor Christian." Alex, once loaned his pastor, a young man of reckless habits in money matters, three hundred dollars. At the end of the year he asked for the note, and carefully folding it up, lighted his pipe with the paper. Alas, that so generous a spirit should have fallen within the toe he was then so nobly fighting!

From Selma we must needs go by Summerfield, at that time the Jerusalem of all Alabama Methodism. From here I rode horseback again with Bro. C. C. Calloway, to Marion. It was November. The autumn leaves were sadly changing. The streams were low, and we often forded them where the bottoms of the channels were covered with fallen leaves. Bro. Calloway gave me an account of his early days. How he had attracted the attention of his friend, from whose house we had started, Col. Robert A. Baker, by reading the Declaration of Independence on the fourth of July, how Brothers Baker and Price Williams had taken hold of him and encouraged him to become an itinerant preacher; the great success he had had on his first circuit, where some thousand or twelve hundred members had been received into the church in one year. Arrived in Marion I found my home in a Baptist family, Mr. Jesse B. Nave. In company with Walter H. McDaniel, John F. Hughes, who died the next year of yellow fever in the city of Mobile, and one other whom I have now forgotten. We had a good place and a good time, only Bro. Mac. couldn't let out on the Baptists as much as he had been inclined to, and so he turned his attention to me.

The class in which I was admitted contained more than thirty names, of which I will mention only those who have either died in the work, or who still continue in it, "faint, yet still pursuing."

"Partakers of the Saviour's grace,
The same to mind and heart,
Nor joy, nor grief, nor time, nor place,
Nor life, nor death, can part."

From old Lagrange College, Alabama, there were these: James S. Belton, missionary to China, who went out with Lambuth and died in New York City, on his return homeward, at the house of Bishop Janes.

James M. Patton, now of the Alabama Conference, and James A. Peebles, now of Arkansas.

From Emory College, Georgia, there came these: John W. Starr, Jr., who died the next year of yellow fever in Mobile; Mark S. Andrews and Lewis F. Dowdell, now of the Alabama Conference.

From the Citadel Academy, Charleston, S. C., Joseph B. Cottrell, now of Bowling Green, Ky.

From the University of Virginia, Walter C. Harriss, well-known to the older readers of the ADVOCATE as "Ignatius, Jr.," who died in Eutaw, Ala., February 11, 1855. From the ranks of the medical profession, Dr. Silas H. Cox, now of the Alabama Conference. From the school-room Ethelbert S. Smith, now of Texas, and Robert Scales, superannuate, of North Alabama Conference. From what are called the "humbler walks of life," there were a number who have retired from the itinerancy, and but two known to me, who have finished their course in the work: Francis M. Crain died at Greensboro, while serving a colored mission. Francis Walker died in Texas only a few years ago.

An old local preacher once remarked to me that educated men could not stand the "wear and tear" of the itinerancy. I cited him to the history of my class, in which ten or twelve out of thirty, were college bred men, and these are now almost the only ones to be found in the ranks. The truth is that they went into the work with better preparation, and with more defined purpose, and hence have continued steadfast.

The Conference at Marion was held by Bishop Capers, a man of slight form, with perfectly white hair, but a bright black eye, and eloquent manner. I had the honor of dining with him one day at the Female Seminary then in charge of my former friend and colleague at Summerfield, the Rev. James K. Armstrong, who died of yellow fever at Grenada, Miss., in 1879. There were present at the table Dr. Taylor, who died at Parkland last year; the Rev. Walter H. McDaniel, who had once been Dr. Taylor's pastor on Prairie Creek circuit; L. Q. C. DeYampert, an old South Carolina preacher who had known Bishop Capers for forty years; young Walter C. Harriss, a friend of Bro. Armstrong in their native county of Wilcox, and others not remembered. Bro. DeYampert asked Bishop Capers how his pecuniary interests in South Carolina had prospered since Bro. De. had left that country. The Bishop answered gaily that his temporal affairs had never done any good for want of his personal attention, having given his entire time to the traveling ministry. Bro. DeYampert replied with great solemnity: "Bishop I know what it is to bury a wife, and I know what it is to bury a child, but the hardest trial of my life was when I had to quit the itinerancy!" Bro. DeYampert had retired from the South Carolina Conference in early life on account of bad health and had accumulated a large fortune.

Dr. Taylor and Bro. McDaniel commenced a conversation about the old Asbury Church and Prairie Creek circuit. It was Bro. McDaniel's boast that he had traveled the richest circuit in Alabama with a straw hat on that cost only twenty-five cents. "I have been preaching seventeen years," said he, "and I am worth seventeen thousand dollars. I don't know where I got it; I know I never made it; I know I never stole it; and I know that nobody ever gave it to me, and yet I know I've got it." The fact was that his prudent wife by staying at home and taking care of her small patrimony had supported her family and Bro. McDaniel's salary was clear gain. Dr. Taylor asked Bro. McDaniel if he remembered the time when his nose had bled in the night and the Doctor had sent him in a clean shirt to put on the next morning. Bro. McDaniel remembered it, saying it was one of those strange shirts that opened at the neck behind, and that never having seen such a one before, he had put it on wrong side foremost, and came out to breakfast with the bosom behind and the open part in front. Alas! that all that noble company have left this world except Bro. McDaniel and the writer.

The preaching was done by the Bishop, Wm. H. Milburn, H. N. McTyeire, and others whose sermons I have now forgotten. Milburn's text was: "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee." He began by saying that he had lately read a very fine book—McCosh on the Divine Government—and after complimenting it very highly, he said it had one fault, it was "too supercilious." I forget the manner in which he treated the subject, but it was a new style of preaching to which I had never listened, and which while brilliant and entertaining, seemed not to strike the heart. I heard him again on another text: "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness," in which sermon he made a very able analysis of man's moral nature, and showed that the seat of true religion was in the affections rather than the intellect.

Bro. Thomas H. Foster, who died of yellow fever in Baton Rouge in 1855, preached a fine sermon at this Conference on Paul's sermon at Athens.

But the great sermon of the Conference was by H. N. McTyeire, then a young man and editor of the New Orleans CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. It was on this text: "Ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things." It was mostly addressed to young preachers, and the effect was overwhelming.

One day during the Conference, my presiding elder, Bro. Koger, called me back to the door, and introduced me to an old, gray-headed man, who told me that he had understood that I was to be their preacher the next year. I told him I was in ignorance of my appointment up to that time. "Well," said he, "Bro. Koger has told me you are the man. I live," said he, "eight miles up toward Greensboro. Come to my house. That will be your home." This was Bro. DeYampert, and O what a home I found there the next year! A furnished room, and room-mate, who was the private teacher of the boys, Leo. G. Jones, who graduated in the last class that Dr. Olin taught at Middletown, a fine library, a servant to wait on us, and a father and mother in Israel!

At last the great event of the session came. The appointments were read out in the Baptist church at night. That grand old hymn was sung, which I then heard for the first time,

"And let our ladies part,
Two different chimes repair," etc.

It thrilled me through and through till it reached the fourth stanza:

"The glory and the Lord
Before his labors fled,
And to we see the Sacred reward
Which waits us in the skies."

Here I could contain my feelings no longer, but wept aloud. Next morning we awoke before day, and lying in bed Bro. McDaniel said: "Bro. Grace, you have received your appointment, and after being with you a week, I fear you are poorly prepared for the work of the itinerancy." I replied that I felt so too, and with that burst out crying again, at which Bro. McDaniel seemed to get sorry for me and said no more.

Poor Bro. Hughes was in the same room with us. He had been promoted, as he thought, by being taken from the Bible Agency, and stationed at Franklin Street, Mobile. Augustus H. Powell had also just been appointed to St. Francis Street. Alas! they both died the next summer of yellow fever.

Dr. Neely was stationed this year at Marion, with James A. Peebles, of my class, as assistant. L. J. Hutchinson at Greensboro, O. R. Blue at Tuskaloosa, who told them if they would hold the next Conference there he would promise them a collection of one thousand dollars for the Missionary Anniversary, a promise which he fulfilled to the letter. Joe Cottrell was appointed junior to Dr. Oliver, at Montgomery, Walter Harriss, junior to old Bro. Hearn on Cedar Creek circuit, Thomas H. Foster to Demopolis, James M. Wells, to the Prairie Creek colored mission, with head quarters at Newbern, and myself to Newbern and Oak Grove.

F. M. TRACE.

February 2, 1881.

Wesley Without the Profession of Christian Perfection.

In the ADVOCATE of December 16, 1880, there appeared an article under the caption, "Wesley without the experience of Christian perfection. (?)" An Alabama brother with a promptness worthy of a good cause, answered the article and pointed out what he conceived to be hurtful errors, and advises that these errors be crushed out at the very sprout, as poisonous weeds in the kitchen-garden.

In a later issue of February 3, another brother, after changing the caption of the article both as to word and meaning, uses it as a warp upon which to weave his article.

This brother impanels an imaginary jury, of which he himself is the foreman. The accused is John Wesley. The indictment is the profession of the experience of Christian perfection. Witnesses for the prosecution are called. The first witness is Dr. Bangs, with a tract of John Wesley, written in 1744. The tract sets forth "The Character of a Methodist," and in the description of this character, Wesley uses the terms "pure in heart," "cleansed," and "purified," all of which terms the Holy Ghost uses of him who is "complete in Christ." Dr. Bang's Syllogism is: A Methodist is purified, cleansed, pure in heart. Wesley was a Methodist, therefore Wesley was cleansed, purified. Here is the first proof as irresistible as logic. The second witness called to the stand was Wesley's plain account of Christian perfection. However plain the account may be, it was not a profession of the experience, and this plain account has been the battle ground of many a controversy.

To accept this plain (?) account as evidence against Wesley, is to argue that intellectual apprehension is the same as experience. That to know and teach a doctrine one must realize it.

That Wesley could not see how one who has experienced this great blessing could keep from professing it, is not proof that Wesley ever professed it. There is a vast difference between the mental apprehension of doctrine and the spiritual realization of it—the one may exist with the other, or without. We may comprehend with all saints without experiencing one thousandth part of their realizations. However perfectly Wesley may have described this great accomplishment of grace, he never professed it and he never claimed to have attained unto the experience.

The next witness is an extract from Moore's Life of Wesley, in which it is proved that Wesley had known and taught the doctrine for above twenty years. Some of our best posted defenders of the doctrine are men who do not profess it, and never have.

The last witness called is Dr. Dodd's letter from Wesley—a disjointed quotation with neither date nor context, "This is my experience, and also my brother's, besides hundreds of others in England whom I personally know." What is that experience? It is unfortunate that it was not recorded in the article.

Here the case is dismissed, and the jury retires without hearing any of the witnesses for the defense, and the foreman comes in and announces the verdict, Guilty. Poor Wesley. What injustice to make a poor man perfect in spite of his teeth. Give him a rehearing, there is later information. Call in the witnesses for the defense.

A letter of John Wesley, published April 3, 1767, some eleven years after Wesley's first correspondence with Dr. Dodd, in answer to an article of Dr. Dodd's, on Wesley and Perfection, in the Christian Magazine:

"SIR: Many times the publisher of the Sunday Magazine has attacked me without fear or wit, and he has convinced his impartial readers of one thing, that his fingers itch to be at me and that he has a passionate desire to measure swords with me.

"The occasion of his late attack, is this: Five or six and thirty years ago, I published the character of a perfect Christian drawn by Clemens Alexandrinus. A thought came into my mind of drawing such a character myself, only in a more scriptural manner, and mostly in the very words of the Scriptures. This I entitled, the 'Character of a Methodist,' believing that curiosity would incite more people to read it and that some prejudice might thereby be removed from candid men. But that none might imagine I intended a panegyric either upon myself or my friends, I guarded against this in the very title page, saying in the name of them and myself, 'Not as though I had already attained, or were already perfect.'

"For the same effect I speak in conclusion, 'these are the principles and practices of our sect, these are the marks of a true Methodist (that is, a true Christian, as I immediately explain myself) by this alone, do they, who are in derision so called, desire to be distinguished from other men. By these marks do we labor to distinguish ourselves from those whose minds and lives are not according to the gospel of Christ.'

"Upon this Mr. Dodd says, 'A Methodist, according to Mr. Wesley, is one who is perfect, and sinneth not in thought, word, or deed.'

"'Sir, have me excused, this is not according to Mr. Wesley. I have told all the world I am not perfect, and yet you allow me to be a Methodist. I tell you that, I have not attained the character I drew. Will you pin it upon me in spite of my teeth.'

"'But Mr. Wesley says the other Methodists have.' I say no such thing. What I say after giving a scriptural account of a perfect Christian, is this. By these marks the Methodists desire to be distinguished from other men, by these we labor to distinguish ourselves.'

(Signed.) "JOHN WESLEY."

The above letter is an important one; it is direct testimony, and refutes all the exparte testimony. His profession of the experience is proved by implication and by intergence, and by roundabout argumentation on the part of his accusers, which here, in plain terms, he refutes. For above thirty years he taught the doctrine of Christian perfection, and here he flatly denies that he has attained it. He taught it because he believed the Bible taught it, not because he felt it.

From all the facts before us, Wesley and Wesley's teachings, we may reach the conclusion that there is such a thing as being perfect without professing it. That the tenet so strictly insisted upon by some, that to have the experience you must profess it, won't do in all cases. Wesley, they say, was in the enjoyment of this blessing, but he never confessed.

We conclude the non-professors can teach as well as the professors, and in most cases better. Those who do not claim the attainment are not to be hushed up and cried down.

We believe Wesley is the best teacher of this state of grace, second to the Bible and the Holy Ghost. That he ever experienced and publicly claimed it he flatly denies. Why did he not? To give a common sense answer I should say he was too busy, too much occupied with the care of the churches, he was too human and healthy. These are not conditions favorable to high spiritual accomplishments, and so he waited until his hard life work was done before he addressed his mighty spirit to this last work of Christian development.

C. K.

An Adventure.

On the evening of the second inst. I mounted the stage at Bibb's Bridge, in Rapides parish, Louisiana, for Opelousas, a distance of fifty-three miles, arriving at Chicot between eight and nine o'clock at night, having made half our journey by stage. I was told by the next driver that he could not take me on, because of a broken hack, which compelled me to remain over until the next night, and I had no choice but to comply. On Thursday night, about nine o'clock, we started again for Opelousas, where we were to arrive in time for the seven o'clock train for Morgan City. The driver and I, a young man some eighteen or twenty years of age, were driving along slowly through a very dense swamp (known as the Overtun Swamp) and I cautioning the young man of the danger there was in young men keeping bad company, having driven about four miles from Chicot. When all of a sudden a voice called out from behind a large tree, pretexting the word, halt, with a terrible oath. We thought no evil betided us but that some one desired to see if they could not scare us, so we drove on, but the cowardly assassin still repeated the word, halt, being sheltered behind a large tree, some fifteen or twenty feet from us. After calling the third time, he fired on us, judging from the blaze of fire from the mouth of his pistol, I think the ball passed just to our backs, above our heads. I do not think he aimed to hit us the first shot. We then, halted, the driver being a young man was so much frightened he could not or did not speak. So I called out to the wretch, and asked, "what do you want?" at the same time telling him to hold on for there was a passenger in the hack. He replied all right, but to throw out the mail sacks. I thought to deceive him by throwing out some empty sacks which lay over our feet. But he was not to be deceived. He cried out to the driver to throw out those locked sacks; the driver threw out one of the locked sacks. He still called out for the other sack, saying there were two locked sacks in the hack. All the sacks being thrown out, he said to us, still keeping up his terrible oaths, to get away quick, which we did without any further question.

Now, Mr. Editor, after relating the above, I want to relate something of my experience on the evening before taking the stage at Chicot. I was much depressed in my feelings, so much so, I retired to my room to engage in prayer. I felt as if I must pray for some one, so I continued in prayer until near the arrival of the stage. When I started I felt as if my trouble was gone, and I could go on my way in peace, knowing that "the Lord was my sun and shield," and I feel sure that that wretch instigated by the devil has made me stronger in the hope of our blessed gospel, and to go where ever duty calls.

J. M. JOHNSTON.

MORGAN CITY, February 9, 1881.

Field Notes.

AUBURN, ALA., Jan 18, 1881.—We are just entering upon our second year at Auburn. We have here many kind friends and we find this, in every respect, a pleasant home. Last Friday evening there was a reunion of the members of the church at the parsonage. The evening was inclement, but quite a number of the members of our own church, with several members of other churches, came, and all brought with them some substantial evidence of regard for our comfort. We enjoyed very much their presence and cheerful conversation, and appreciated highly their donations, but we value most of all the affection which prompted this demonstration of regard. Steps are being taken to make the parsonage and lot more comfortable by furnishing and repair. The circumstances under which we begin the year are all favorable and pleasant, and our greatest desire is that our stay here may be a blessing to the community, and that God may repay them a thousand fold in spiritual blessings for all their kindness to us.

MRS. JAMES M. MASON.

WHISTLER, ALA., Feb. 7, 1881.—Bro. Lambuth and wife was with us last Monday night. God has blessed their labor among us. There was organized a society of woman's missions to women, and also a number to pledge themselves to educate a child in China, which is meeting with success. Our Sunday-School Missionary Society is doing well; organized by Bro. Chilton two years ago. Meetings on the third Sunday evening of each month; dues ten cents per month. We assist the church here in paying the missionary assessments. The ADVOCATE is a welcome visitor, and is looked for with great interest, on Friday mornings of each week, by the few subscribers. I would like to hear of every family in the church here taking a copy of the ADVOCATE. I know it is needed, from the quantity of light literature circulated here. If one copy of the ADVOCATE was in every family in the Methodist Church here the results would be glorious.

R. E. DALY.

PEARLINGTON, MISS., February 8, 1881.—Weather continues bad. Last Sabbath was said to be the worst day ever witnessed here. The town was submerged with water. No business done on Monday. On Saturday, about 11 A. M., our new church was blown down. About $450 had been spent on it. All ready for roofing and weather boarding, and we hoped soon to finish it so that we could use it; but alas! our "hopes are deferred," and our "hearts are sick." May our desire yet come as a "tree of life." What we may do in the matter of rebuilding the future must determine; all looks gloomy now.

P. HOWARD.

GADSDEN, ALA., Feb. 9, 1881.—Gadsden is growing very rapidly, and many new citizens are coming in. Our church and Sunday-school are growing. I have received since Conference ten members, and expect others soon to join. Last year and this sixty-five have united with us. We are taking steps to furnish our Sunday-school with a fine library. A Mrs. Brockway, of Brownsville, Tenn., gives us twenty-five volumes, and her son, a member of our church, gives $10 toward it. Other members of the church are giving liberally toward it. Our prayer meetings are encouraging. May the Holy Ghost be sent in power upon us. I appreciate your paper very highly. It seems to meet every requirement of a first-class religious periodical. If it has any objectionable feature I am unable to detect it. Our State Sunday School Convention meets here in June next, the same month in which the International Sunday-School Convention meets in Toronto, Canada. As I am one of the delegates to the latter, I should be glad to attend, if a good Providence will permit it. As I have never visited the North, and have never taken a month's recreation since I have been in the Conference, I am inclined the more to make the trip.

C. H. OLIVER.

YAZOO CITY, MISS., Feb. 12, 1881.—And the rains descended and the floods came. Rain, rain, rain! We have had six months rain. That remark needs very little qualification. Such weather was, I presume, never known before in this country. Plows ought to be moving now, or certainly in a week or ten days, but the ground is almost flooded, and the rain still comes down. Throughout all the low water season the Yazoo river has been from ten to twenty feet high. Health is good, and peace and quiet reigneth. Preachers on circuits cannot do much. I hear not much church news hereabouts. Preachers all in position, so far as I know.

R. ARMEY.

—A letter from Van ten Constantinople paper describes the condition of the Christian population of Van and vicinity as most deplorable. Those scourges, the Kurds, who have been raiding also in Persia, are continually plundering and murdering Armenian Christians, it says: "During the last three months I venture to say not a single day has passed without new oppressions, murders, and outrages being practiced by Kurds and Turks on Armenians; but not one of the criminals has been punished." The local government is both weak and indifferent and affords no protection. The Kurds are armed with the best Martini rifles, and it is hardly possible to go about the country without falling into their merciless hands. They not only kill and plunder, but attack most fiendishly the wives and daughters of the Christians. Some of the Armenians have attempted to defend themselves, notably in Nardoz, where, after a severe contest, lasting several hours, the Kurds were defeated. The scheme of reform adopted in answer to the "identical note" of the European Powers is the appointment in some districts of two Armenians to ghont ton Kurdish Mudirs, who are to be held responsible for the preservation of the peace. The Mudirs have not a single policeman to enforce their authority. The protection of the Armenians, it is to be feared, will have to be undertaken by themselves, as in Nardoz. The missionaries in Persia are so fortunate as to enjoy the friendship of the Kurdish leader, Sheikh Abdullah, who has caused in several instances property plundered from the Christians by his men to be restored and has brutally punished the offenders. But the thievish invaders are making awful havoc in the country, killing, burning, plundering.—New York Independent.

—The question was once asked in a party of children which character in "Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress" they liked best. One replied: "I like Christian best;" but another said, "I like Christiana best, because she took the little ones along with her."

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1881.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"THE LORD WILL PROVIDE."

TO "PATIENCE." BY INVALID.

Your greeting, dear "Patience," of "peace and good will"
Like fragrance of flowers with me lingers still.
While time rolls along like the ocean's dark tide,
Your message still comforts—"The Lord will provide."

It came when life's skies were o'er clouded with care,
When hearts were o'erflowing with grief and despair;
When the "Phœnix" of hope from our sad hearts had flown,
And the promise of Jesus sustained us alone.

It came your sweet message of comfort and love
Like an olive of peace on the wings of a dove,
"Whose wings are like silver" with feathers of gold"
It came over waters, through tempests and cold.

It came when the sun hid its face in a cloud,
And the snow, for the old year was wearing a shroud,
While to God for his mercy in anguish we cried,
I read your glad message "The Lord will provide."

It seemed that an angel had brought from above,
A message, an answer, of God's tender love;
Just as I, like Peter when sinking, I cried,
A voice whispered "courage"—"The Lord will provide."

Your message seemed written in letters of gold,
Encircled with fair flowers, and buds that unfold
The promises of Jesus whose word will abide.
This promise I'll cherish "The Lord will provide."

Tho' cares still environ, and clouds darker grow,
And though "the deep waters" around us still flow,
Though the sun for a season its glory may hide,
I trust and believe that "The Lord will provide."

Like ravens to God in our winds we will cry,
I know that his children He can not deny.
No "thought for the morrow" shall trouble my soul,
I'll trust him though billows should o'er me roll.

I know, as I look on those letters of gold,
His purpose like buds, shall in sweetness unfold,
And in their fair beauty, shall be "opened wide,"
Till then I will pray that "the Lord will provide."

Foxes or Sheaves?

MR. EDITOR: Not long ago a gentleman of your city asked me if I did not believe that the word "foxes," as occurring in Judges xv, 4, was a mistranslation for "sheaves of wheat." Not having access to the original at the time, I could not then fully reply. I have since examined the passage, however, with such assistance as I could command, and the search convinces me that the statement of the English text is true—that Samson really caught, or procured, three hundred foxes.

Regard it in the light of whatever criticism you will, the version of King James, with all its errors and imperfections, is an excellent one. True, modern toil has removed many of the huge difficulties with which the earlier translators wrestled; but let us be sure that these grand old workmen in many instances reached positions of absolute truth, and issued interpretations of such correctness that all subsequent attention can but admire and confirm them. The present is a case in point. Their translation need not here be departed from; save, by a shade of modification in the words they have given us.

Let us approach the original text as it lay on the desk of these learned men, prior to their own preference, and regardless of the applause or condemnation which afterward greeted it, and we shall see that the reasons which led them up to their choice were in accordance with the acquirements of critical scholarship and the canons of linguistic usage. The troublesome word, as it stands untouched, is a genuine Hebrew plural—shualim. Turning to a standard lexicon, it is easily and quickly found that the root-word shoal (or shaal) is indeed allowed to mean "hand" or "handful," and thence naturally "a handful of grain, a sheaf." This would be conclusive but for the obstinate fact that the plural of this word is not the text word, shualim, but quite a different form shalim. Kennicott did indeed find the latter word in several ancient manuscripts, as Clarke admits, and early suggested that it be rendered "sheaves," pointing to the possibility of the insertion of an extra letter by the masoretic sifrers. But the genuine and commonly received text shows no other form than shualim. What, then, is the singular of this, and what its meaning? It is not shoal, but shual, and, whatever else it may mean, certainly does not mean a "sheaf." For descending still further, and turning the microscope of close analysis upon the skeleton structure of the singular in its absolute or simplest state, it will be seen that it cannot be twisted into a sheaf. No noun of the class to which it belongs—the technical peculiarities of which it is unnecessary to enumerate can mean "sheaf," nor can it mean any other dead, inactive substance, for the simple and basic reason that all nouns of this peculiar structure are either active participials or active substantives. The law of etymology, which requires action, or at least activity to inhere in such a substantive, seems to admit no exception. Prof. Green, of Princeton, a pupil of the celebrated Dr. Addison Alexander, and himself a standard author on such topics, though he makes no special reference to this passage, yet bears witness that, from its essential formation, such a noun must represent an agent or doer. A literal equivalent of the word before us is "digger; one that digs;" and a legitimate inference specifies for us the little wild animal, abundant in Judea, which may be termed at pleasure a fox, a wolf, or, perhaps more accurately, a jackal.

In addition to this bit of verbal criticism, I might urge that the great weight of scholarly opinion, with such men as McClintock and Strong and Lange as its exponents, favors the authorized reading. And although we are not to cling blindly to old conclusions, while the old paths sometimes run through ruts of ignorant prejudice, they must not be hastily abandoned for causeless visions of novelty, mirages often that are, at best, dangerous delays to true progress and ultimate accuracy.

But, looking at this passage regardless of its authority, divine or human, and of its composition, literal or verbal, the charge against it is that the statement it contains is improbable, and some even say absurd. On the contrary, it is neither. Historical precedent, natural surroundings, concomitant circumstances, opportunity of action, motive for attempt, possibility of accomplishment, all speak in proof; and each of these might be elaborated into definite and remarkable testimony, but I was requested merely to weigh the proofs furnished by a rigid translation of the original. Besides, others have argued the case in all the length and breadth of its possibilities and probabilities. Almost any extensive comment on this passage, or any tributary historic or illustrative reading, may be consulted in confirmation of the view here taken. It is unnecessary to reproduce these well-known points. See Clarke, in his unanswerable reply to Kennicott. See Rosenmuller. See Ovid, Fasti IV.

I am tempted, however, to add a word of reflection and regret concerning the incomplete and one might almost say crude, condition of Oriental scholarship. Much has been done, it is true, but much still remains to be done. One cannot walk long in this field without the conviction that much of it has never been traversed, or, if traversed, its beauties never observed, its resources never utilized. The greatest scholars have apparently effected but scant analysis and meager uses of the Hebrew language. Adam Clarke, a man to whom thirty languages lent their lexicons and their literature, and whose giant work still rises in many points above the attainments of half a century of subsequent study, seems never to have caught the full glory of Eastern imagery, and certainly not the full measure of Eastern knowledge.

The Orient, unlike other more favored climes, did not have a hundred facile pens to record, in contemporaneous columns of varied expression, her ideas and her actions. And, by this very lack, the body of her language demands the closer and more thorough study. The zoologist picks up a single bone or tooth from one of the early periods, and builds from it the bulky frame of the mastodon; but how? Not content with the mere possession of his material, nor even with the knowledge of its age and its owner, he studies it till he knows it in itself through and through. Now, numerous as are the sources of reference to Jewish life and language, they are but surviving fragments of the great body that once throbbed with life, now dead forever; fragments the mere preservation and possession of which are but half their use. Upon this odd-looking word an entire verbal system must be constructed; from that central root form, hundreds of derivatives must be traced and assigned to their places; and upon this disjointed and mysterious sentence are hung the history and social life of a century of the world's existence and activity. These must be worked out. In many languages, the task of the student ceases with the acquisition of the alphabet, paradigms, vocabulary, and a degree of facility in reading. Not so in the Shemitish. These gained, they become but the basis for the student's real work. The philosophy of the principles but now appear which are to be his guide. Many have paused here. So-called ripe scholars, preferring a hazardous guess to a tedious and perhaps fruitless search, have played upon the surface, dealt out dogmatic assertions, affixing to them the stamp of an exaggerated reputation, heaped up abnormal and ungainly piles of classifications, and rested from their arduous labors. The causes, the proofs, they do not know; or if they do, they resemble the Cambridge sophomore who had learned (in a revel the night before) all about the aurora borealis, but could not, just at the critical juncture, tell the professor. "Ah!" exclaimed the old gentleman, "what a pity!" The only man in the world who ever knew the real nature of this phenomenon has forgotten it."

Others, all honor to them, have worked faithfully. Progress is evident. Lexicons and grammars of the old religions can no longer be used. The Jews themselves, but a few centuries ago, had to sit at the feet of Christian scholars and learn that the Hebrew vowel points had not always formed part of the written text.

But there is no computing the work here yet to be done, not by cursory readers, but by consecrated specialists. Many are now entering this field. It is a vast, inviting, remunerative one. Rare beauties abound. Beneath the cover of this battered, aged Hebrew Bible, hidden yet from human sight, repose buried treasures of glorious sentiment, grand theology and truthful revelation.

W. R. SIMS.

Bhaskon, Miss., January, 1881.

"The Two Bills."

When our Baptist friends have exhausted every other means to get our people into the water they often wind up with their great argument of "The Two Bills," seeming to think that the logic of this ad hominem illustration will fully accomplish the work. And we must admit that in too many instances, from not discovering its constant fallacy, it has been successful.

"Suppose," they say, "I owed you ten dollars, and I offer you in payment the choice of two ten-dollar bills; but, as you are not well acquainted with either of them, you seek advice from others. Now all," they continue, "admit this bill is good; some say the other is, but others pronounce it bad. Now, which would you prefer? Would you not take the one which all declare is good? Would you not prefer a bill which will pass everywhere with everybody? Now, the first bill," they add, "is Baptist immersion; the other is Protestant sprinkling."

Apart from the premium contained in this argument, on misscriptural exclusiveness and want of true Christian charity, there is a huge untruth in asserting that "everybody admits the Baptist baptism good," for full three-fourths of all the Christians of the world utterly ignore it. But as they have risked their ordinance on a commercial basis, we will try it on this ground. Now, they say, their bill of baptism will pass well "everywhere." But I go to all the great commercial centers of the world, to London, Amsterdam, Berlin, Paris, Vienna, Liverpool and New York, and I find their bill will hardly pass at all, scarcely one in a thousand will have anything to do with it, while almost every one, in all those mighty Christian cities, uses ours. I go to the mountain, and theirs is useless; to the desert, and theirs is worthless; and to a dying bed, when the last life chance and greatest need has come, and lo! it will not pass even there, while the other, in all the varied circumstances of human life, is as easy as the gospel terms, as simple as the light of day, and as universal in its facility of application as the glorious gospel of the Son of God.

But another sophism in this "bill" argument or illustration is that the impression is falsely made that the two bills have come from different banks; whereas I take them and read, and they both proclaim themselves to be on the same good bank of heaven, both signed in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, and both alike in the hands of Heaven's ministers. Both are in these respects alike, and the only real difference in them is that while ours is a convenient, ready bill, about the size of a man's hand, theirs is a great, broad sheet, full large enough to enshroud and bury a man in.

G. T. V.

Rev. James J. Smylie.

The death of this useful member of the Mississippi Conference was to his brethren and friends a most painful shock. At the last session of the Conference, and, indeed, up to the very time he was stricken, he looked the picture of health. Buoyant and hopeful, ruddy and robust, sanguine and full of busy planning, his appearance, his conversation, his actions suggested living and only living—active, honorable, useful living. But, alas! for us, the news came that on the first day of this year, while in pleasant conversation with his friends, he was seized with apoplexy, reclined his head upon his hand, and passed into unconsciousness with only a momentary pain.

It is hard for us to realize, and distressing because so unexpected, yet this, surely, was the most desirable way for a Christian soldier to die—with armor on, and with eye undimmed and with natural force undiminished. This was realizing Charles Wesley's desire:

"My body with my charge lay down,
And cease at once to work and live."

We write of Bro. Smylie with more of feeling than that which has its origin from association in the same Conference, strong as that is. Our acquaintance began when we were students together at Centenary College, in about 1856-7. We recited in the same class, mingled in debate in the same literary society, and together talked over the offerings of the great world before us. It is but natural that for those things there should always have been a kind of sympathy that strengthened and made more tender our Conference relations.

James J. Smylie was born in Copiah county, Miss., October 9, 1836. His ancestors have been Presbyterians for several generations, and the family have furnished to the Presbyterian Church several eminent divines. His father was also a Presbyterian, but, when he settled in Copiah county, there was no Presbyterian Church near him, and he joined the Methodist Church for the time being. His house was open to the preachers, and it was thus that his son James received an early fondness for the Methodist Church, which in his youth he joined. At first he was very devoted to religion, and felt distinctly a call to preach; but, ambitious for success in another field, he resisted the call, grew cold, withdrew from the church, and sought good only in the world.

God's method with the majority of those who disobey the voice of duty is to withdraw His favor and send punishment, but it was not so with our brother, at least for many years. Pleasure and prosperity attended him in his young manhood. October 21, 1854, he was married to Miss Sallie E. Stovall, an accomplished, gifted young lady, who proved to him all that a wife could be. They were blessed with interesting children. They had a delightful home, surrounded with comforts and conveniences. They were possessed of a handsome estate. Bro. Smylie's educational advantages and continued familiarity with all topics of profit and interest brought his services often in demand. Though perhaps he never formally entered upon the practice of the law, yet his familiarity with the theory, as well as the practice, made him a standing referee and counselor of his neighbors. He mingled successfully in politics, and served his adopted county, Hinds, in the Legislature with benefit to her interests, and with the approval of his fellow-citizens. When his native South demanded his services in her struggle for independence, he cheerfully gave them, and, on the tented field and in diplomatic circles, faithfully bore his part. His fortune, being much impaired by the war, he resorted to school teaching, for which he ever had a fondness, and for which he seemed to have a natural talent. Though he was never graduated academically, yet his training at Centenary, of Louisiana, and afterward at Oxford, of Mississippi, made him conversant with almost the entire collegiate course; but, over and above this, he had a peculiar gift in imparting knowledge, and in simplifying truth, that stamped him a born school teacher.

While engaged in teaching a large and flourishing male school in Brookhaven, Miss., two of his children died suddenly, and in quick succession. He had a tender heart, and was a fond father. This stroke of Providence ruthlessly exposed the evanescent character of all earthly good. In his extremity he turned to the God of his father, the God of his own youth, and found pardon and consolation. Along with his return to God came again the call to preach; this time it was heeded, and in December, 1871, he was admitted into the Mississippi Conference, from which he had just received his tenth consecutive appointment to the care of souls, only a few weeks before he was appointed to a higher sphere.

It was a matter of unceasing and heartfelt regret that he had not devoted the vigor of his youth and the freshness of his intellect to the service of his God. He said that he should do his best to repair the error, he should "study to show himself approved unto God," but that he felt so painfully the lack of those qualifications for the glorious work for which only early training could have qualified him.

His testimony was that in the midst of all his other pursuits, during the many years, even when attaining success and honor, there would come a feeling of emptiness and dissatisfaction, and the conviction that truer joy, more real success and higher honor lay in another sphere. Then, when acknowledging and obeying the call, he entered his Master's vineyard, he realized that this was his life work, that all his other efforts had been mere vagaries, that now a conscience serene, through faith in God, shed a halo over daily experience, and toil and self-denial were cheerfully borne from the conviction that compensation was made sure by this promise: "They that are wise shall shine with the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever."

Bro. Smylie took position in the Conference as soon as he joined, and was gaining continuously in the estimation of the ministry and the church. Being a man of varied attainments and thorough knowledge, and, withal, of an earnest consecration, he was fitted for any work in and out of the Conference.

One thing he felt keenly, viz.: his inability to preach satisfactorily to himself without a manuscript; and this was the stranger and sadder to him, because in the debating society and on the hustings he had always been a fluent off-hand speaker. There seemed to be that want of confidence in himself, which grew either out of his early neglect of the ministry or in his very high regard for the sanctity of the place, that made him afraid to adventure into that method, which he believed to be the most eloquent and the most powerful of pulpit utterances—the true extemporé. But he hoped to come to it, and doubtless he would, had he lived.

He leaves a wife and six children; to them his loss is irreparable. His genial good nature make his brethren to mourn sincerely his death. His consecration to the ministry, his sermons steadily growing in breadth and power, make the church poorer, because his voice is no more to be heard. God buries His workmen, still the work goes on. We question not the wisdom of His doings, nor the dispensation of His providence, nor will He rebuke us when, because of the death of the genial comrade of our earlier years, our strong, gifted co-worker in the ministry, we exclaim with heartfelt sorrow: "Alas! my brother."

C. D. ANDREWS.

Mississippi Conference.

Admitted on Trial.—Newton M. Clarke, Ambrew H. Miller, Levi S. Jones.

Remain on Trial.—Wm. M. Cammack, Joseph T. Nicholson, Major T. Calloway, Edward F. Edgar, John W. Chambers, Joseph J. Lovett.

Discontinued.—Martin A. Hall.

Admitted Into Full Connection.—Isaac D. Wall, Isaac L. Peebles, R. French Flowers.

Received by Transfer.—James P. Dancer, from the North Mississippi Conference; James M. Pugh, from the Texas Conference.

Deacons of One Year.—H. M. DuBose, Thomas C. Bradford, B. F. Jones, D. M. Rush, in elder's orders.

Traveling Preachers Elected Deacons.—Isaac D. Wall.

Local Preachers Elected Deacons.—John W. Chambers, Levi S. Jones, Edward F. Edgar, Mager C. Calloway.

Traveling Preachers Elected Elders.—Benton S. Rayner, J. Perry Drake, Inman W. Cooper.

Local Preachers Elected Elders.—Alexander Scarborough.

Located.—John T. Graham, T. W. Campbell.

Supernumerary.—George T. Vickers, Robert B. Downer.

Superannuated.—John G. Jones, Wm. Spillman, Levi Pearce, E. B. Strickland, H. W. Dilliehay, J. N. Williams, Thomas Price, E. A. Flowers, Joseph Nicholson, W. E. M. Linfield.

Died.—Andrew Day.

Number of local preachers, 148; members, 23,561; infants baptized, 1,179; adults baptized, 849; number of Sunday-schools, 261; teachers, 1,439; scholars, 8,279; collected for Conference fund, $1,926 30; for Bishop's fund, $835 40; for foreign missions, $2,737 15; for domestic missions, 1,287 05.

Assessed for foreign missions, 1881, $4,260; for domestic missions, $1,960; for Conference fund, $2,500; for Bishop's fund, $900.

Joint Board of Finance for 1881.—Clerical: R. D. Norsworthy, H. R. Singleton, W. B. Lewis, T. W. Brown, B. Carradine, C. W. Calhoun, D. A. Little. Lay: W. L. Nugent, J. H. Thompson, H. Bradford, George Wood, S. B. Watts, W. M. Thornton, Thomas A. Holloman.

Secretaries, 1880.

Marriages.

BELL—MILLING.—At the home of the bride, Dallas county, Ala., December 2, 1880, by Rev. F. A. Bliss, Mr. Samuel Bell to Miss Bettie Milling.

GLOVER—BEDFORD.—At the Methodist Church in Como, Miss., by Rev. C. N. Terry, Mr. C. C. Glover and Miss Unella Bedford, all of Como, Miss.

STINSON—WOODRUFF.—At the residence of the bride's mother, October 12, 1880, by Rev. R. A. Davis, Mr. T. W. Stinson to Miss C. A. Woodruff.

HARRIS—WOODSON.—At the bride's residence, October 13, 1880, by Rev. R. A. Davis, Mr. W. Ellis Harris to Mrs. Millie Woodson.

BOGGS—SWINDLE.—At the residence of the bride's father, November 4th, 1880, by Rev. R. A. Davis, Mr. W. B. Boggs to Miss E. E. Swindle.

ARNOLD—DOUGHERTY.—At the residence of the bride's mother, January 26, 1881, by Rev. R. A. Davis, Mr. C. W. Arnold, Jr., to Miss Gussie Dougherty, all of Lesser parish, La.

SKINNER—WRIGHT.—At the residence of Mr. J. H. Vaughn, January 13, 1881, by Rev. John A. B. Jones, Mr. A. A. Skinner, of Louisiana, and Miss Sallie Wright, of Claiborne county, Miss.

WATSON—LEONARD.—At the residence of the bride's father, St. Bernard parish, La., February 3, 1881, by Rev. I. W. Cooper, Mr. Lilly (or Watson) to Miss Mary Leonard.

BOSTYN—MATHEWS.—At the residence of W. J. Hamil, near Walnut Grove, Miss., January 20, 1881, by Rev. Irvin Miller, Mr. W. B. Bostyn to Mrs. Sarah A. Mathews.

COLLINS—TESSERO.—At the Methodist Church in the town of Franklin, St. Mary parish, La., January 27, 1881, by Rev. T. K. Fant, LeRoy, Mr. Jessie Hilton Collins and Miss Laura Anne Tessero, both of St. Mary parish, La.

SHIRLEY—WHITSON.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Northport, Ala., February 3, 1881, by Rev. John L. Ferguson, Mr. Abner Shirley to Miss Mattie Whitson, both of Northport, Ala.

Obituaries.

DR. JAMES HUMPHREY HALL died at his residence, near Jackson, Tennessee, December 20, 1880.

The deceased was born in Brownsville, Miss., and graduated at Mississippi College. The torch of war having scarcely been extinguished, he enlisted in the Confederate army, and followed its fortunes until its star had set to rise no more. It was here that the writer first knew him, both having joined the same company (Seven Stars Artillery) in 1861. Though not at that time a member of the church, his life was a perpetual rebuke to many who had assumed the vows of discipleship. Within the circle of my acquaintance I do not remember a single individual who, without the restraints of church membership, and the holy aspirations begotten by a conscious communion with the Father of spirits, so perfectly maintained his integrity during the wide of that long period of widespread and apparently contagious demoralization. The godly precepts of Jesus parents he preserved in perennial freshness on memory's tablets, the hallowed influences of Christian home were led in the distant havens and amid the scenes of sanguinary strife.

"High-minded, honorable," these epithets acquired a new and higher significance to one who became thoroughly acquainted with J. H. Hall. No man ever had a more supreme contempt for the little, the low, the mean of human character and conduct. And he comprehensive in its grasp and strength, aided by an extensive and varied culture, a courage which pendant nobility from the post of duty, of of honor, a generosity whose delight it was to promote the happiness of others, a modesty which might be rejected by a maiden, a patriotism as pure as the vestal flames on Roman altars, a refinement and delicacy in feeling which would be ornamental to womb loveliness; these were the qualities which endeared, not to his friends and challenged the admiration of all who knew him. Soon after the close of the war he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and ever afterward remained a consistent member thereof.

His death was befitting such a life. The coming of the bridegroom found him with his lamp well filled. He quailed not in the presence of "the king of terrors." Calmly, joyfully he embarked on the dark tossed stream, sending back, ere he passed from sight with the boatmen pole" joyful messages to the watchers on the mundane shore. "Meet me in Heaven" was his farewell message to the friends who sat beside his dying couch.

W. C. KNACK.

MRS. LUCY M. DAVIS was born August 25, 1851, and died at White Hall, Dallas county, Ala., December 25, 1880.

She recognized and heeded the Master's tender voice as He pressed His gracious offers on her facile heart, and hastened from the rugged ways of sin and folly, ere the billows of death rolled over her pathway, and swept from beneath her feet the glittering sands of life. The icy touch of death was bereft of its sting and terror by the beaming smile of her Redeemer, as He stooped to earth and tenderly whispered "Come." The last desire that stirred the depths of her soul and moved upon her dying lips was an earnest admonition to dear relatives lingering behind, to seek "the narrow way," and meet her beyond the tide, where travel worn feet will falter no more, and God will wipe all tears away.

In vain the feeble voice essayed to gather volume and strength sufficient to sing the soul-stirring hymn, "Jesus, lover of my soul," other tongues gathered up the sweet old strain and wafted the gentle notes out on the evening zephyrs to be echoed far up in the shining vaults of Heaven by the angelic band as they watched and waited at the beautiful gates to receive the tender lamb of the Good Shepherd's fold. "In afflictions, in necessities, in distresses," her heart grew fuller and fairer day by day till the love of Jesus was the anchor of her soul, a priceless heritage that deterred every deformity from the temple of her heart and scattered deeds of kindness along the wayside of life. When trained with the rod of affliction she was patient and faithful, and acknowledged with joy that God was good to her and had fulfilled all his promises.

Memories sacred and tender will ever linger around that dying bed, and treasure within the ruby cells of the heart the sweet assurance that all is well.

Over yonder on the quiet hill-side the dear dead face with its meekly closed lips and drooping eyes hid beneath the soft veil, but alive, O, how alive, mouldering there in the silent tomb, the gem that filled it still sparkles bright and beautiful in the celestial city, "where moth and rust doth not corrupt," but where the Alpha and Omega shall gather all the glory and honor of the saints and give them true life, and light, and joy, and peace forever more.

S. A. FARRY.

JUDGE MATTHEW K. MISTER, my father, late of Grenada, Mississippi, was born in Dorchester county, Maryland, January 2, 1810. He died at Grenada, December 15, 1880.

Up to the age of thirty he lived in Maryland. Since then—except an interval of five years, during which he lived in Baltimore—his residence was in Mississippi. Nearly all his life, except the last seven years, he was a merchant and planter. His character, in all commonalties, was that of an upright, just and fearless man, of great indexibility and tenacity of purpose, of singular independence of mind and heart, of heroic fortitude and constancy, and of unbending and untarnished integrity. Even as a young man his virtues were so reverenced that a friend of his, speaking of him at that time, said, "Oh, we all thought Matthew Mister a prince." And so, throughout his life, homage was paid to the grand integrity of his heart and purpose. But above all, he was a consistent Christian, with the faith of Abraham and the humility of Moses towards God. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Church, South, for about fifty years.

His life was one of exceptional trial. Five times he suffered losses by fire, often by shipwreck, and repeatedly by the calamities of war. Frequently his life was in great peril, in the fearless maintenance of honest convictions; but, in these cases, even his enemies revered him. Three members of his family were taken from him by death; and, last of all, a few years ago, his devoted wife, herself one of the noblest and grandest of characters, and universally beloved. Amidst all these afflictions his faith in God never faltered, and his energy arose superior to every emergency, while his generous sympathy and friendly help were extended to all within his reach.

From another filial pen, whose fervid appreciation was inspired by the knowledge of his character gained from unclouded companionship with our father from childhood to the hour of his death, we add the following:

"There can be no doubt that he fully realized his situation, and that death had come to clothe him and to meet the issue calmly and quietly, and accordingly, like the giant that he was, satisfied that he carried with him a record for honesty of purpose, kindness and generosity of heart, that could not be impugned, and that he was prepared to meet whatever might come fearlessly, with a conscientious trust of success towards God and man. And he settled his affairs out sweetly and calmly, like an old man going to sleep. We buried him with all the honors of war, and of peace, in the tender, yet sad, glow of a life honestly and honorably spent; and the friends and neighbors followed his remains with heads full of grief and sorrow, and with his grave will honor him for years. Since he has been taken, though a great deal about him, and have come the conclusion that he was about the grandest man ever saw, and that a tribute to his memory is just deserved in this.

"There is there was no manlier manly man. He died with but little warning, but was fully prepared, and has gone to his reward. There are few lives so noble, so straightforward, generous, unscrupulous and consistent as his, and such also was the character of his Christian life. His last work was to the Saviour he loved, and on whom he rested to the end.

JAMES F. MISTER.

MRS. ANICE ELLEN FOWLER wife of Mr. W. W. Wigington, died at the family residence in New Orleans, February 3, 1881; aged twenty-nine years.

She was the only daughter of Joseph F. and Ann Fowler, a native of Alsace, Fifth District, New Orleans, and was brought up in the Methodist Sunday-school. At a very early age she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, professed conversion, and lived always a consistent Christian life. Her death was sudden, and from the nature of the case there was scarcely any opportunity for last words. These were needless to assure her friends of her readiness for her change. A good and exemplary life is better than any dying testimony, and this she leaves as a precious memory to those who knew and loved her. To all the relations of life she adorned the doctrine of Christ. Her stepchildren found in her a devoted and affectionate mother. Her own children everything that a mother's piety and love could secure. A devoted wife, the heart of her husband safely trusted in her. As a daughter she was fond and dutiful, ever seeking to cheer and brighten the lives of her parents. As a member of the church she was loved and esteemed for her consistent, cheerful piety, and for her quiet and earnest devotion to the cause of Christ. Her death came in the prime of her years, and she has been snatched away from a home of which she was the light and joy. Her motherless children, her bereaved husband, her sorrowing parents are left in sadness and in grief. But it is well with her. She has joined the blood-washed company on the fearless shore, and has passed beyond the regions of pain and sorrow. She did what she could for her Lord, she fulfilled patiently and lovingly in the duties of her earthly sphere, and now she doubtless rejoices in the possession of the heavenly crown.

MRS. MARY CATHARINE CABANESS, daughter of John and Mary Reagan, was born June 29, 1859, departed this life November 7, 1880.

She professed Religion, and joined the church in 1875, under the pastorate of Bro. Miller; her conversion was during a protracted meeting, held at Liberty Chapel, (or this circuit, Webster, then known as Bethany circuit, while Rev. R. M. Crowson was assisting the pastor in the benevolent duties of Christ. We first met Sister Cabaness at a protracted meeting this same year during which she was enabled to glorify God in the deed of his love to her. Her life was one of continued trial. She had four little children, that are rapidly linked for her husband preceded her to the better world, seated at Christ only one week. Truly can we say, that we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for our sister gave evidence of the truth of the promise. The burden of her song was, "Precious promises, precious rest, angels in waiting to bear me away."

During her illness, which was only one week, she was conscious of her approaching death, and was prepared to meet the issue; her only concern was for the little ones. The evening before she died, she asked all who were present to engage with her in prayer that she might commit them to the Lord. After prayer, she said she had given them into the hands of the Lord, and He had assured her that He would care for them. Her's was truly the triumphs of death, full of bliss and immortality. Well may David say, "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my end be like his." She seemed expectant all the while for the messenger; and would often sing, "Roll on, roll on, sweet minutes, and let the hour of my pilgrimage go home." Her end was peace.

H. S. COLLIER, P. C.

JOHN MCINTIRE was born in Washington county, Pennsylvania, February 22, 1793, and died in Tigerville, Terrebonne parish, Louisiana, January 26, 1881.

The writer regrets that he knows so little about the history of this somewhat remarkable man, except as it does back into the early part of this century. Bro. McIntire has been expecting that his last death was near months before he was called away. For months before death actually came he was confined to his bed. In speaking of this event he has often expressed his desire and willingness to be with his Saviour. He was very much pleased at all times, whenever convenient for the preacher to do so, to read and pray with him. Some years ago he lost his oldest son, which had a great effect upon him although his son died praising and glorifying God.

When I first knew him he seemed to be peculiarly hard to please, nothing seemed to suit him; but those who tended him during his last hours say that all this was changed; that he became quiet and gentle, and when spoken to would say, "Yes, thank you, that will do, God bless you."

Bro. McIntire did not in words leave any token behind as to the state of his soul; but he died peacefully and calmly, without a struggle or groan. We think, though, he died in the faith of the blessed Master Jesus.

He leaves behind a widow and son, to whom we extend our sincere sympathy, and pray that the same Saviour who passed husband and father over the river of death, may lead them to His banks of light, and reunite them once again in the realms of eternal life.

T. H. JONES.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1881.

THE RIGHT MUST WIN.

Oh, it is hard to work for God,
To rise and take his part
Upon this battlefield of earth,
And not sometimes lose heart.

He hides himself so wondrously,
As though there were no God;
He is least seen when all the powers
Of ill are most abroad.

Or he deserts us at the hour
The fight is all but lost;
And seems to leave us to ourselves
Just when we need him most.

Ill masters good, good seems to change
To ill with greatest ease;
And, worse than all, the good with good
Is at cross purposes.

Alt God is other than we think
His ways are far above,
Far beyond reason's height, and reached
Only by child-like love.

Workmen of God; oh, lose not heart,
But learn what God is like;
And in the darkest battle-field
Thou shalt know where to strike.

Blest, too, is he who can divine
Where real right doth lie,
And dare to take the side that seems
Wrong to man's blinkard eye.

For right is right, since God is God;
And right the day must win;
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To fail would be sin.

Our Pulpit.

A Nation on the Waves.

BY REV. CHARLES L. DEEMS, D. D., LL. D.

Delivered before the American Seamen's Friend Society.

It may be well to begin my remarks by confessing, before our Lord and this large and cultivated congregation of Christians, my own shortcomings of interest and labor in behalf of sailors. In common, it is feared, with many of my brethren in all branches of the church, I have allowed the multitudes of men who go down to the sea in ships to sail away, so far as I have been concerned, from all notice, all sympathy, all prayer, all effort for their salvation. Lately my mind and heart have been strongly drawn toward seamen, and I was glad when I was to make a brief speech in their behalf to-night.

I. In the first place, the number of mariners is so large as to demand attention. It is estimated that there are half a million of American sailors, twice as many British, and of all nations fully three millions of men, whose business is in ships and with the sea, actually engaged in the navies and the commercial transports of the world. Three millions of human beings! three millions of immortal souls! In the computation of the living Teacher, the loss of one these souls would not be compensated by the gain of a whole world, and the loss of these millions could not be made good by the gain of all the solar system, with all its worlds and forces and resources.

Imagine a city of three millions adult population all then in the vigorous use of their powers. What a sight that would be! What a field for Christian effort! How philosophy would study the social problems it afforded, and how religion would yearn over that vast mass of humanity! That all these are scattered over the world does not diminish, but rather vastly increases, their importance. For

II. Be pleased to consider that while, to a sailor, his own soul is of no more worth than is the soul of any other man to himself, there may be something in the employments and position of sailors which renders them more important to the world than other men. And there is. The sailorhood of the world is the world's propaganda. Sailors are the circulating medium. They go everywhere. They carry everything, especially themselves, into all parts of the world, from India to the poles; from the hut where the stunted, blubber-eating Esquimaux shiver, to the kraal where the naked cannibal sweats. If these men were all confined to a certain limit and the world excluded, they could only influence one another. If they were settled in a certain city, they would influence only themselves, and those who came to them.

But they move, they circulate. They wait not to be visited, they visit. It is unfortunate for an inhabitant of an inland mountain village to be narrow and sordid and vicious. But in such a case the evil does not spread extensively or rapidly. But sailors spread all of wisdom or ignorance, of vice or virtue, which they possess. Fancy those three millions on an island unvisited by men. A loathsome contagious disease might invade them. It could spread only to the limit of that population, and its ravages would cease for want of material. They might all die. There the destruction would stop. But fancy every one of those three millions to be infected of the small-pox, and from that island to be transported to every known part of the world and turned loose among the inhabitants.

What consternation, what horrors, what destruction would they not propagate among all people! The same holds good of their power and opportunities to propagate the virus of vice. Better have any other three millions of men upon earth, weak, ignorant, and wicked than your three millions of itinerant, restless, irrepressible sailors!

III. Regard the debt of gratitude the world owes its sailors. But for them, to say nothing of peopling continents and islands, how slow would be the progress of civilization! Each nation would have to struggle on as best it could, gathering from its own soil what wealth it could, and shaping it as well as practicable, without the benefit of the example, the aid, and the stimulus of other nations, and without the product of other lands and without the fabrics produced by other populations.

To bring this home to ourselves, let us fancy that before to-morrow morning there should be suddenly taken out of this great city every book, picture, statue, engine, implement, wrought work of every kind; fine and coarse goods, and every idea and every man that have been brought to us from every part of the world during the last quarter of a century! No! We are not equal to that fancy. We are not sufficiently conscious of our indebtedness to other lands to paint to ourselves the picture of emptiness, the disruption, the desolation there would be.

The goods would leave a thousand stores and warehouses bare; splendid mansions would be dismantled; manufactories would be silent, because the machinery had departed; "the stone would cry out of the wall," Farewell! "and the beam out of the timber would answer it." The [illegible] and the alcoves of libraries would be stripped of their most precious treasures, and the opera houses would be hushed for the singing men and singing women would have flown, and there would be no display of belles and beaux on Broadway and the Avenue.

For she that should put off her silks and laces, and fine linens, and jewelry after to-night's entertainment, would awake in the morning poor "Elvira McElimsey, of Madison Square," and absolutely and literally with "nothing to wear;" and her "nice" young friend, Frederic Augustus Sholdy, whose father grew so rich in the war by cheating the soldiers and swindling the Government, that Frederic Augustus has nothing about him that is not foreign, would awake to find his wardrobe suddenly reduced to the summer costume of a Fiji Islander; and the poor draymen's occupation would be gone, and rents would fall, and the Atlantic cable be drowned, and business stagnate, and amid all this new and high distress all the great and beautiful concepts, ideas, fancies, and thoughts which the artists of foreign lands have sent us would be absent.

But I cannot go on. I do not know what it is that sailors have not brought us. But in so much as we should be impoverished if we should lose all that hath come to us from afar in ships in the last quarter of a century, in so much are we the debtors of the sailors of that period. And in the extremest mountain cove of our land it would probably be impossible to find a man who was not debtor to the unearned for sailor.

IV. The sailor is indispensible. That you may feel how true that is, say that from this hour there shall be no more sailors. Disband the whole marine force of the world. Ships would rot in the docks, the products of the earth would rot on distant plantations, seaports would be emptied, for men would fly for food, all city property would become worthless, all city heart and intensity which stimulate the mental activity of the world would be gone. Paris must be as far from us, for all uses, as any city that may exist in the planet Venus.

You should have no more foreign books, pictures, statues, preachers, lecturers, singers, machinery, materials, and ideas. You could send nothing abroad, not even your invalid daughter for her health and your gifted artist boy for his culture. Your coasting would all be done away, and even your home products would become more difficult of transportation. Science would have a vast domain of observation cut away. Your planet would be reduced to the continent you inhabit. The shrinkage would be sudden and prodigious.

You can do well enough without your soldier, the epauleted and strutting "fuss and feathers," the costliest piece of worthlessness modern civilization insanely maintains and idolizes. But you cannot do without your sailor. If there had been no cannon or sword, no general or private, no army or armor in any part of the globe during the past century, who does not believe that the world would have been happier? But would it have been happier if there had been no ship, no sailor, no white sails on the seas, and no smoke-track across the ocean? And yet you parade your soldiers, and remember them and pay them well, and give them honors, and erect monuments to them when they are dead.

Did they ever dare more than the sailor? Is the picket outpost more dangerous than the yard-arm in a heavy sea? Did you feel the force of the stanza which you sung a few moments ago?

"How little know ye, who are peacefully sleeping,
On beds of repose, unawakened and warm,
The woes of the sailor, his dreary watch keeping
Amid all the horrors of midnight and storm."

Think of his strange and lonely and unappreciated life! Think of the Arctic colds that benumb him, and the tropic suns that scorch him! Think of his battles with the fierce storms, when seas come down upon his ship with the impetuosity of a cavalry charge, and a thunder like the crash of artillery! And his battles are fought without the stimulus of drum and trumpet and wheeling squadrons, and the long shout of men, and the prancing of the snorting war-steeds, and all the kindling electricity of a thousand eyes that flash the same fire as his and witness his deeds of daring. They are performed in the solitude of mid-ocean; they are achieved unapplauded in the heart of unsympathetic darkness. Through all the night he is straining every faculty and power that is in him to bring your child and my wife and thousands of treasures safe to port; and in the night he may be swept from the deck, or fall from the yard-arm amid the howl of a tempest that drowns his death-scream, and it was only a sailor lost!

No chronicles, no poets for him, no orators, no monument! Why, there is probably not a month in which six hundred sailors do not dare all that the British Light Brigade did at Balaklava. Of sailors, as of soldiers, it is true:

"Theirs not to reason why,
Theirs not to make reply,
Theirs but to do and die."

And, in the awful emergency of ocean life which have overtaken them among icebergs or the cyclones,

"Billow" to right of them,
Billow" to left of them,
Billow" in front of them"
"Volleyed and thundered."
Mid storm "like shot and shell,
Boldly they "sailed" and well,
Into the jaws of death,
Into the mouth of hell,"
Many a "Six hundred."

If they had been soldiers, a laureate would have sung their praises; but being only sailors, no one sings,

"Honor the brave and bold,
Long shall the tale be told
Yes, when our babes are old
How they sailed onward."

V. When the gentleman, whom we shall probably agree to pronounce the chief of the men of science America has produced, projected "the wind and current charts," they were placed in the hands of every navigator who would take them, so that the observations of as many persons as possible, and in as many places as possible, might be discussed, so that the results might be presented in charts "for the improvement of commerce and navigation." The value of this plan attracted more and more attention, until in a few years the United States, Great Britain, France, Russia, Sweden, Norway, Holland, Denmark, Belgium, Portugal, Spain, Prussia, Sardinia, the Pontifical States, the free city of Hamburg, the republics of Bremen and Chili, and the empires of Austria and Brazil, were all co-operating on the same plan of observation. Lieutenant Maury well says:

"Rarely before has there been such a sublime spectacle presented to the scientific world; all nations agreeing to unite and co-operate in carrying out one system of philosophical research [illegible] they may be enemies in all else here they are to be friends. Every ship that navigates the high seas with these charts and blank abstract logs on board may henceforth be regarded as a floating observatory, a temple of science."

Dear Christian brethren, is not this a profound and sublime lesson for us? Suppose we could make all the sailors of Christendom real workers for Christ, how soon the world would be regenerated! Will the world ever be Christianized while our sailors are so neglected? We can never forget the exciting words of the prophet Isaiah (lx. 5) in which he addresses the church: "Then shalt thou see and brighten up, and thy heart shall throb and swell, because the abundance (or multitude) of the sea shall be converted unto thee, and the forces of the Gentiles (or thenations) shall come unto thee."

Look at the comparatively feeble results of modern missionary effort. Why is it? Why, brethren, so long as we attempt to Christianize a foreign continent or island of the sea by sending over a ship containing two missionaries, twenty boyscheads of New England rum, and a crew of profane, drunken, licentious sailors, we never shall Christianize these people. While the two missionaries are learning the rudiments of the language the sailors will have made such an impression of Christianity upon the natives as a generation of preachers cannot erase. No, my brethren, we cannot have the world won to Jesus while our sailors belong to the service of Satan.

To the end that they be enlisted for Christ, the energies of Christendom must be turned to the conversion of its sailors. Do you not believe that if every man that left every port were truly, simply, earnestly, a real servant of Jesus, a witness for Christ, an example of the power of Christian principles upon human character, you would have little need of missionary Societies?

I do believe that the words of Isaiah were spoken in logical order as well as in poetic splendor. I do believe that the forces of the Gentiles shall not come to our Zion until first the abundance of the sea be converted to her. Let us turn our powers, our energies, our will, our faith, our love, our prayers, toward these too long neglected men; let us enlist them for truth and the Lord's Church, and then, instead of the stillness which is upon the nations and the hollow echoes which come to us from abroad, we shall be able to shout what it were false to sing to-night:

"Hark! the songs of jubilee,
Loud as mighty thunders roar
Or the fullness of the sea,
When it breaks upon the shore
Hallelujah! for the Lord
God omnipotent doth reign;
Hallelujah! let the Word
Echo round the earth and main."

Religious Intelligence.

MISSIONARY.

The Moravians appear to have chosen to establish their foreign missions in the hardest fields. Their mission in India is on the borders of Tibet; their mission in Australia is among the lowest and most degraded of human kind; and, not to exhaust the list, their mission in Greenland is among a people of little intellect. The Greenlanders admit that they have very "small thoughts." They display some shrewdness, but their ideas are much restricted. They live from hand to mouth, toiling hard for what they get, and seem to be content when they have made provision for present necessities. Though their life is a rude one, with but little of enjoyment in it, they are not lacking in the virtues of gratitude. "Childishness is no small element," says the Moravian Missionary Monthly, "in their disposition. In the missionaries they have great confidence; so much so, indeed, that they have occasionally to be warned against a tendency to regard them as mediators between God and man." Some of them think that, if they fall into sin, "confession of their transgression to the missionaries is all that is required of them." Many believe that attendance at church is the chief duty of Christians; hence they are regular, at the cost often of comfort, in the performance of that duty. In Surinam, the largest of the Moravian mission-fields, there are thirty-two missionaries, who minister to 24,000 souls at sixteen stations. Seventeen of the missionaries are in Paramaribo, which is the most important of the stations. The aspect of the mission-work has changed very much since the abolition of slavery, in 1863, and the cessation of the Government supervision of the blacks, in 1872. The blacks also were formerly attached to the soil and could always be found; now, being at liberty, they are scattered. Pastoral supervision and church discipline, therefore, have become difficult. The Coolies and Chinaman are even more difficult of access. Their stay in the country is usually short, as they go home as soon as their contract is finished. "Although," says the annual report of Moravian missions for the past year, "a very great number of natives in Surinam have been brought under the influence of the Gospel, the heathen still predominate." The missionaries do what they can for them in their itinerary tours; but they are sadly in need of schools. Superstition and idolatry exercise a great influence and numerous idol-houses and places for sacrifice to idols are to be found, especially in the Para district. The idol-houses are store houses; not places of worship for idols. "With this idolatry are connected most obscene orgies, the practice of poisoning, and not a few phenomena which baffle the investigation of the men of science." In the Bush country, on the Upper Surinam, where missions were undertaken first in 1735, and again in 1851, and abandoned on both occasions because of the unhealthfulness of of the country, another attempt has been made to establish a station. A European missionary has resided in the country since December, 1879, and some good results have been obtained. New York Independent.

"The Lord's work" in Western Africa writes the Rev. F. Fletcher, a Wesleyan missionary on the Gold Coast, "is as wonderful as it is deadly."

"In the last forty years," he says, "more than 120 missionaries have fallen victims to the climate; but to-day the converts to Christianity, very many of whom are true disciples, number at least 30,000. In this district alone (the Gold Coast) we have over 6,000 in church membership and about 3,000 scholars in our schools; and though our people are poor, yet last year they raised over £5,000 for evangelistic an educational work among themselves and in the surrounding countries. Our native ministers, catechist, and teachers are a noble band of men, whose hearts the Lord hath touched, and I look forward to the time when, in this part of the field especially, the Africans shall carry the tidings of the Cross to their fellow-countrymen, in the crown tongue wherein they were born. Kumasi has been closed to mission effort since 1862. I am in treaty with the King of Ashantee just now as to opening the mission and, D. V., visit him in his capital about the end of January.

"Our work here is hazardous and hard. The deadliness of the climate renders it impossible for wife or children to reside here (Cape Coast Castle); so in my own case, whilst engaged in the special work that has been intrusted to me, I have this burden of separation to bear for the Master's sake. I trust that you may find His grace abound toward you, and that your sympathy with us in this great work of preaching Christ to the heathen and of consolidating the native churches and fitting them for further aggression may be deepened. I am sure it would if you could see the seventeen young men we have in training for mission work, or if you accompany me when I start on Tuesday (early in November for a month's visitation tour among the country stations of the district.

—The Missionary Society of the Methodist Church of Canada has paid off its debt of $65,000; but has to face shrinking of $1,000 in its year's income and has been obliged to make large reductions in its appropriations. At the same time, a large reinforcement of missionaries is needed immediately in Manitoba and the Northwest; a considerable awakening is reported among the French Canadians, and the calls are loud from Newfoundland and Japan. The contributions last year averaged $1.50 a member.

—Ancient Nazareth is now the site of an orphanage under the supervision of the Education Society of England. It has been opened four years, and there are in it now 30 girls, of ages varying from 1 to 15. Here, whether of Greek or Latin, Moselem or Jewish, parentage, they are all taught to love the one true God, and Jesus Christ whom He has sent. They have a beautiful house, built by the generosity of English travelers.

—The first Chinaman taken into the Methodist Church in Montana was received by Rev. Mr. Shannon, pastor of Grace Church, Virginia City, at the quarterly meeting, Jan. 2. This convert, we are informed, seems to be of excellent spirit, and is already zealously at work among his fellow-countrymen. The pastor's wife and another sister have a class of fifteen or twenty Chinese, and the prospect of the gospel work in this direction is very promising.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—A Greek Codex of the Gospels. During the past year two theological professors, Von Gebhardt, of Gottengen, and Harnack, of Giessen, in Germany, undertook a journey to Italy for the purpose of study. At Rossano, in Calabria, they made a very important discovery, which has been reported by Professor Schurer, of Giessen, in his Theologische Literaturzeitung, and reprinted in the Deutscher Merkur, the translation of which is as follows: On inquiring for ancient MSS., the professors were informed that a very remarkable old book was in the possession of the archiepiscopal curia there. Being allowed to inspect the work, they saw to their surprise that it was a splendid Greek Codex of the Gospels, in uncial writing, the great antiquity of which appeared evident at once beyond a doubt. The Codex, which by this fortunate incident has been brought forth from long seclusion, consists of 188 parchment leaves, and contains the Gospels of SS. Matthew and Mark. Only the last verses of the conclusion of St. Mark's Gospels, xvi. 9-19, are wanting. Originally the Codex must have contained all of the four Gospels. The text is written in silver letters on the fine bluish-purple coloured parchment. On this account it is remarkable, for hitherto but one purple Codex in Greek has been known (Codex N), and even that is quite fragmentary. The text is written in double columns, each having twenty lines, without accents and separation of the words, with very simple interpunctation, and in beautiful, regular, Greek uncial writing. On paleological grounds it may be concluded with tolerable certainty that the MS. cannot belong to a later date than the sixth century. For textual criticism it is not a document of great value. On the other hand, it is of greater significance for the history of early Christian art. Of the 188 leaves, eight are ornamented with very finely executed miniatures, chiefly representing scenes from our Lord's Passion. They belong to the period of the transition from the antique classical to the Byzantine style of painting, and confirm the opinion gained from the character of the writing, as to the age of the Codex—namely, that it belongs to the sixth century. Very few miniatures of that period are extant, and as none of those previously known represent scenes from the Gospel history, the new discovery is of the greater importance in this respect. The editors have completely collated the text of the manuscript and obtained tracings of the miniatures. London Watchman.

—The Committee of the Presbyterian Assembly to urge upon President Hayes measures to secure justice for the Indians presented a memorial to the President and his Cabinet, which expressed the opinion that the best way to elevate the Indian is "1st. Give him a home, with a perfect title in fee simple.

"2d. Protect him by the laws of the land, and make him amenable to the same.

"3d. Give him the advantage of a good education; and,

"4th. Grant him full religious liberty."

—The Wesleyan Methodist Calendar for 1881 gives the income of the various funds of the Wesleyan Connection as follows. We have translated pounds sterling into dollars: Foreign Missions, $827,490; Theological Institutions, $81,900; Home Mission and Contingent fund, $166,570; General Chapel fund, $15,740; Education fund, $36,315; Worn-out Ministers' fund; $114,550; Schools' fund, $60,175; Children's fund, $132,905. The amount of $6,111,795 of chapel debts has been discharged or provided for during the last twenty-six years. Methodist.

—The report of the Wesleyan Metropolitan Chapel Building fund shows that the past year has been the most prosperous one it has known.

—It is estimated in an English paper that ten per cent. of the clerical livings in the Church of England (which number about 13,000 in all) are in some way sold or bartered every year.

—Fifty-five persons united with the Congregational Church, Salt Lake City, Dec. 5. Of this number all but five united on a confession of their faith.

Our Young People.

SUPPOSING.

BY LAURA LEDYARD.

If I should write a valentine
And send it to my lady;
And you should be the messenger,
My darling little Maddie;

You think you'd tie your bonnet on,
And putting up your mittens,
Go running with my sonnet, on
Two feet as fleet as kittens?

Oh, no; your pardon I must beg,
For you'd untie your bonnet
And hang your mittens on a peg,
And sit down with my sonnet;

And in my cold'd-iced lots of love,
And written on the cover
"A Valentine for Maddie from Her most devoted lover."

Wide Awake.

Monroe, Louisiana.

DEAR MR. EDITOR: I thought I would write you a letter for your good paper. I am ten years old. I am going to the Methodist school. My teacher is Miss Virgie Williams, and we all like her very much. Our superintendent is Mr. Dave Trowsdale; we all like him very much. Thinking my letter is long enough, I remain as ever your little friend.

I hope my letter will not be thrown into the waste basket.

NONIE FROST.

Stories About Crows.

A pet crow usually becomes a very cunning and wise bird. An old gentleman has just told me incidents of one that lived sixty years ago. It was like Mary's little lamb, "it went to school with him one day," and enjoyed the sport so much that it formed a habit of going there on every school day. Scolding did no good. Jack's keen eyes watched every move of his master and when he saw the little dinner-pail in his master's hand away he flew, and was on the play-ground first.

On the days when the boys were kept at home to "help on" the farm, Jack had some way of his own for deciding about the school, and fearing that he might be captured, his master clipped one wing.

Jack attempted to fly, finding that he could not do that, started off along the dusty road on foot scolding all the way, no doubt, about the trick which had been played on him. He was very angry when his master overtook him and carried him back home. Day after day he would run away to have a play with the scholars, until the bump that bustled along as fast as he could, he was sure to be caught in the road, then he gave up and turned his attention to some new mischief.

One of his tricks was to call the farm hands to dinner, and if the mistress of the house called them first without speaking to Jack, he would come to the kitchen door and scold her until she caught up her broom and started after him; that would end his noise for that time; for he hated the broom, for he had been punished with the brush end so many times that he knew all about the discomfort of it.

There there was a crow I know whose name was Dick; his home was in Illinois. Dick was a very droll bird, and Harry had many hours of fun with him, but Harry's papa, who was a very dignified clergyman, detested Dick, and the wise bird knew it very well and appeared to derive actual pleasure from any annoyance which he could create in the path of that gentleman. He would hop along just out of reach of his enemy's cane and croak in the saucicst way, perking his head on one side and then the other, until the gentleman would be so vexed that he would threaten to have Dick killed.

Harry would plead for his pet and Dick would fly upon Harry's shoulder and give expression to his gratitude in many odd manoeuvres—for he seemed to know when a dispute had been settled about him.

One day when he had torn up some papers, and had scattered them over the yard, some one began to sweep them up. Dick was almost frantic and soon had the fragments all back again placing them about apparently with great care; then he flew up into a tree and scolded away at a great rate, as though he were saying: "Now see here, all you people, I have put those things there; they suit me, and you must let them alone."

Another day Harry's mamma had a tub of green crab apples placed on the porch. They had been gathered with great care and were intended to be preserved with the stem all perfect. Great preparations were made for the event, but when all else was ready, the apples were missing.

"Dick!" called the lady.

"Caw!" answered Dick in his mildest tone hopping up the steps. "Did you steal my apples?"

"Caw!" "But there, did you steal them?" "Caw, caw, caw!" answered Dick excitedly.

"I have a mind to wring your neck, you little thief."

"Caw!" answered the culprit with his head on one side.

"Fetch them now!" commanded the lady. Dick scuttled off, the lady following, around the house, across the garden, into the bonnery, through the berry bushes, but no apples rewarded his peeking and chattering.

Just then Harry came whistling along the road from school. The truth is Harry was quite as noisy as Dick. Away went Dick to meet his friend, and made known to him that he was in trouble again.

"Mamma," shouted Harry, "what has Dick been doing now?"

"He has stolen nearly every crab apple out of that tub."

Harry laughed and Dick was encouraged by that to offer some important comments, if any one could have understood his language.

"Never mind, mamma, I'll find them for you; shut the door and leave the rest there. I will watch and find out where he has hidden them." Dick had been busy all the afternoon no doubt, and had traveled so far in his round with his treasures, that the novelty was quite worn away, and he did not carry off the rest of them.

Possibly he knew that he was watched at that time, and was too shrewd to be caught. Two days after Harry found him hopping along among the dried weeds in the yard, transferring his apples from one little hollow to another, and they were recovered uninjured.

At another time I watched him as he purloined some bits of freshly-cut chicken through the kitchen window, and with the solemnity of the sexton proceeded to bury them in the folds of the clergyman's garden coat as it lay on a rustic settee. His revenge prepared, he flew to his favorite perch and awaited the result, but some one else brought in the coat, dropped the bits unheeded, and Kitty seized them, much to Dick's displeasure.

[illegible] cannot Dick to lose his little shining black head.

When Harry reads this he will recall many more incidents in the life of his pet, and he and his mamma will have a hearty laugh over them, while papa turns back to read his paper and wonders how anybody could be so silly as to write a story about a crow. New England School Journal.

True Stories of Little People.

Queen Victoria awards yearly a gold medal to the lady on the Worcester training-ship who is "likely to make the finest sailor."

St. John's Guild, New York, has a Floating Hospital for the sick children under six years of age, the mothers going with the little ones. Arrangements have just been made by the Guild to give daily excursions to poor children and their mothers, who are not ill. "A friend of little children" has just given $200 to help forward this work.

From Americus, Kansas, C. W. Gullett writes: My nephew and I were riding along in a buggy. The horse was busy switching the flies off; I was lost in contemplation of the finite and infinite. Suddenly the little fellow cried, "Uncle Charlie, does Ned call his tail his tail?" "Why, of course," said I. "Does Ned call his tail his tail?" he repeated. "I don't know," I replied, doubtfully. "Why?" "Why, I didn't know but he called it his fly-brush," was the earnest response.

The London Methodist tells this reference to Wellington: Did you know, little people, that the great duke was very fond of children? At one time he took care of a boy's pet toad. The boy received two or three letters from the duke, describing the health of his toad. One day a lady and her two children had strayed unwittingly into a prohibited part of the grounds near Walmer Castle. The duke happened to ride up just as one of the servants was requesting her to withdraw. The lady, much frightened, apologized for her mistake; but the duke not only told her to walk wherever she pleased, but invited her and her children to visit him next day. After a pleasant luncheon of substantials and fruits, their noble entertainer showed them the castle and many objects of interest; and, kindly listening to a sovereign, tied with a blue ribbon, round the neck of each child, dismissed his delighted guests.

WHAT WILL YOU MAKE OF IT?

"What are you making, Tom?" asked a lounger in a blacksmith's shop of the new apprentice, who was hammering away vigorously upon a piece of iron.

"I don't know," replied the embryo Vulcan, "but I reckon if I keep working on it, it will make something."

So he put the bit of iron again into the fire, and blew the bellows until the ruddy glowing light reached every corner of the little, dingy shop, and a bright shower of sparks fell around. Then when it was red hot he put it again upon the anvil and hammered it this way and that, expending a great deal of time and muscular energy. At length he threw it aside exclaiming: "There! I didn't make any thing, after all."

I have often thought that many young people are living like the young blacksmith. They have materials, time, health, and talents, of which something noble and useful should be made; but they just live along, without an aim at anything in particular, and with no idea of what they will be or do. And so, before they are aware, the close of life comes upon them, and they find they have "not made anything, after all." There are some who have an object in view, but it is a low one, unworthy the toil of immortal beings. It may be the heaping together of riches, sensuous pleasures, or gratifications of some landable ambition. But if it is pursued without taking our duty to God and our fellow creatures into account, and gained, it will prove so poor, so unsatisfying in the end, that the same regret will be felt that "nothing has been made, after all."

But those who have a high, pure aim in life, some noble end to be accomplished for the benefit of our fellow creatures and the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom, if such an object is labored and striven for, in the strength of the Lord, something precious and beautiful in the sight of God and the angles, will be formed a full and completely rounded life, answering the end for which it was created.

NEVER FORGET ANYTHING. Charge your mind with your duty. That is largely the true definition of faithfulness. But memory and mistakes are used as apologies a great deal oftener than necessary. A boy beginning business life will generally lose his place who pleads such an excuse more than once or twice.

A successful business man says there were two things which he learned when he was eighteen, which were afterwards of great use to him, namely: "Never to lose anything, and never to forget anything." An old lawyer sent him with an important paper, with certain instructions what to do with it.

"But," inquired the young man, "suppose I lose it; what shall I do then?"

The answer was with the utmost emphasis: "You must not lose it."

"I don't mean to," said the young man, "but suppose I should happen to?"

"But I say you must not happen to! I shall make no provision for any such occurrence. You must not lose it!"

THE CHILD MISSIONARY. One Sabbath, on an island in the Indian Ocean, a minister was studying a sermon to preach in the language of the people. A little boy about half-clad, came in and said:

"Oh, I do so love my Jesus! May I do something for his house?"

"And what can you do?" said the missionary.

Blushing and stammering, as if afraid to say anything, he replied: I will do it dood. Please let me ring the bell."

While he was a boy he rang the bell that invited the people to church, and when he became a man he preached to his people the some glad news that he commenced calling the people to hear when he rang the Sabbath bell.

Little boys begin while you are young to call the people by bell, or mouth, or tract, or inviting children to Sabbath-school; and as you grow up you will be trained servants and soldiers to serve Jesus Christ. New York Christian Advocate.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. J. W. REID. REV. W. L. C. HENSCOTT.
REV. O. B. GALLOWAY. REV. C. W. CARTER, D. D.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1881.

One Office of the Spirit.

George Muller says that "one office of the Spirit is to bring things to remembrance." The reference we suppose to be to the words of Christ: "He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." The teaching and the bringing to remembrance are two parts of one process and operation of the Comforter. What Christ had said to His disciples was to be vividly and accurately recalled, and the meaning was to be made clear. They had heard much that they did not understand. The Spirit when given would bring to remembrance, and also explain. The memory and the understanding were both to be quickened and acted on. The promise was fulfilled in the inspiration of the apostles, but does not the promise also point to some of the ordinary operations of the Holy Spirit in the experience of all who are brought in contact with revealed truth? While there is no proper inspiration, there must be a divine illumination in order to the apprehension of spiritual things. As Paul declares, God must shine into the heart, "to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

A great deal that Christ had delivered to His disciples was neither remembered nor comprehended until after the Pentecostal baptism. It remained dormant in the mind and out of the sphere of consciousness until the power of the Spirit brought it forth.

Something like this seems to take place when those who have long been familiar with the words of Scripture, are awakened and brought to repentance. Promises and warnings, that had long been forgotten, come thronging into the mind, and they come with a force and meaning that they had never had before. In the hour of conversion the soul is often flooded with light, and Scripture, that had previously been distasteful and mysterious, is called up and made attractive and luminous. In times of trouble and great emergencies, passages that had hitherto excited no particular notice, and that had no apparent lodgment in memory, come forth with amazing clearness and promptitude, and with a new meaning, to meet the needs of the tempted and distressed soul. But with reference to the unconverted who have been religiously instructed in childhood, or have been hearers and not doers of the word, is not the Spirit busy with them in waking up the memory? For long periods there may be utter forgetfulness of the early lessons of piety, and the Scriptures committed, and the sermons heard, may appear to be buried in oblivion. More than this, there may be the purpose to forget, and to banish all serious convictions. Impressions are sought to be overcome and driven out by absorbing pleasures, vicious indulgences, engrossing business pursuits. And thus for years the seed sown is apparently lost, and no trace of the truth is to be discerned. But ever now and then comes an awakening, the prodigal comes to himself, and he remembers his father's house, and the long-forgotten lessons come teeming in upon the heart with overwhelming freshness and power. Such instances reveal an important fact in reference to this one office of the Spirit in bringing to remembrance the things we have heard, and which we are disposed to neglect.

Not in all cases does this work of the Spirit end in the repentance of those in whom it is felt. The Spirit may be resisted until he takes his departure, but, nevertheless, he strives mightily and long to clear up the clouded memory of sin, and to restore the convictions that have well-nigh faded out forever. There is this ground of hope for parents who see little immediate effect of their painstaking instructions. Their children may forget, and they may not now comprehend, but they may prayerfully count on the Holy Spirit as their ally in the endeavor to bring their children to Christ. Thousands who hear the word carelessly and casually, and who pass out from the house of God, and from the preacher's sight and knowledge, carry with them that upon which the Spirit fastens, and which he wields with power and persistence for their salvation. It is a ground of hope that Christ's word has been lodged in the mind. The Holy Spirit will look after that word, and watch over it ever afterwards, and when long forgotten, and obscured and overlaid by years of neglect, will bring it forth as the battle cry of an aroused conscience, and make it the instrument of a moral revolution. "The just shall live by faith" struck Luther on the stairs of the Vatican, slew his self-righteousness, and made him a new creature in Christ. It was through the teaching of the Spirit that Wesley, after ten years of perplexity and struggle, got his first clear conception of faith, and experienced that amazing change in which he felt his "heart strangely warmed."

This office of the Spirit has much to do with the growth and progress of the spiritual life after conversion. All truth cannot be present to the mind at once, nor can it be fully displayed in a moment. The Spirit is continuously bringing to remembrance, and teaching. Duties are recalled, privileges exhibited, doctrines explained, experiences cleared up. There is no inspiration of new truth, no revelation apart from the written word. And yet there is a wide and wonderful field of divine illumination, by which the memory is acted on, and the spiritual understanding is quickened. How prone we are to forget, and how slow to understand! These are among the infirmities of believers, and out of them arise their greatest perils. As it was at first so is it now. And the Comforter is promised to us to teach us all things, and to bring all things to remembrance. This office was not limited to the inspiration of apostles, but it has a continual use and exercise in connection with the ministry of the word, and with the experience of all who are brought into contact with the gospel. It lies at the foundation of our hope of the world's salvation, and of the final triumph of Christ among the nations. Only by the Spirit can Christ be glorified in the heart, or made glorious in the world. But for the Spirit operating with freshness and power everywhere and always, the gospel would be preached in vain. It is because he teaches and brings to remembrance that we are sure that the word of the Lord shall abide forever.

The notorious and bright particular star of the French drama has come and gone. She and her troupe have taken away with them many thousands of dollars, some of which, it is said, has been contributed by those who profess the religion of Christ. About the moral character of the actress we have nothing to say, beyond the suggestion that it is probably such as is not uncommon in the profession, and that it is of a piece with the theater as an institution. Those who can conscientiously patronize the theater need not stickle about the character of this or that performer. It is a corrupt and demoralizing thing. There may be a difference in actors and in plays, but the general drift is to impurity and licentiousness; and, to be a popular success, there must be a considerable spice of the illicit and the scandalous.

The Grand Opera House is said to have been crowded every night. The opening performance was on that stormy Sunday night when the churches were almost deserted because of the inclement weather, and yet the actress was greeted by an overflowing house. Take the character of the play, the performers, the time, and what must have been the audience, and if anything more needed to show how utterly opposed to godliness is the theater, and everything connected with it? The theater and the church stand as much opposed to each other as darkness and light. The one is the tent of wickedness, the other the house of God. The one ministers to sin and licentiousness, the other to righteousness and purity.

The incidents of the recent brilliant theatrical engagement only serve to emphasize those contrasts. There was nothing exceptionally flagrant or immoral about them. They were unusually brilliant, and attended by the sensation of a celebrity founded upon genius and upon scandal, but substantially they represent what the theater is ordinarily. There is nothing moral about it. It is the temple of worldliness, an institution unfriendly to good morals, and that antagonizes everything that is spiritual and good. People who can get their consent to patronize the theater at all need not have scrupled to attend at the recent exhibitions of the French troupe. These were characteristic, and but little if any worse than the average of theatrical entertainments. The church and the theater are on the opposite sides of the line—they belong to different Kingdoms

---

These per capita estimates of contributions to religious and charitable objects are in some respects misleading, and reflect unjustly upon the few who do their duty. Where a Conference gives fifteen cents a member for foreign missions the facts beneath the surface are that some members have given one hundred dollars, others ten, five or two dollars each, while the most have given nothing whatever. Those who give the money, in this constructive way are deprived of due credit, while those who have given nothing are credited with what others have given. If the reports showed how many give anything, and how many give over a certain amount each, we should have a clearer conception of the grace of giving in a charge or a Conference.

This is, we suppose, impracticable, and possibly no important end would be gained. In a membership there are some children, some poor widows, some who are dependent upon charity, and many altogether who can give almost nothing. Some churches are much richer than others. A per capita of fifteen cents might be a fair showing for some very poor charges. At least we are willing to imagine that there are works in a Conference that can conveniently give no more. But there are others in which, according to means, ten dollars per member would not be more than generous. We cannot determine how nearly any individual or church comes to the standard of duty without a knowledge of property and income. There is this inevitable inequality of credit and blame about all these per capita estimates and statements. We must read between the lines how in a church of two hundred members one-half either would or could pay nothing, and that, of those who paid something, six persons made up nearly all that was given. Now, it would be just to these six persons, and also to the residue of 194, that the facts should appear in the lines rather than between them. But we suppose the world could hardly contain such voluminous statistics, even if they could be obtained. The truth is our actual giving is not per capita at all. The heads missed are more than those that are hit in any collection or assessment. Nevertheless, we think these figurings upon the amount paid per head may be of use, especially if they lead to the adoption of some system by which every one shall give something.

Work.

There are some people who never get out of the attitude of receptivity. They believe in enjoying themselves. Self-enjoyment is the principle which governs. "Pro bono publico" belongs to an age gone by. There are many church people in this condition of mind. Too many are in this habit of life. The enjoyments derived from the means of grace do not constitute the ends for which those means were instituted. Christian fellowship is a very precious privilege. The maintenance of sound doctrine is a wise policy. The ordinances of the house of the Lord are very edifying to Christian character. But are not these all subordinate matters? Are they not means rather than ends? Are they not helps to something beyond themselves, which is more valuable? From the life of Christ, and the teaching of the apostles, we conclude that the business, paramount to all others, is the business of saving souls from sin. The church has nothing else to do. If it engages in any other work it ceases to be the church of Christ. All other works are valuable, and can be pursued only so far as they contribute to the success of this work. If Christian fellowship encourages to Christian work it is meeting the end for which it was designed. If sound doctrine stimulates to activity in soul-saving, its true value comes to light. If the ordinances are used for the purpose of gaining strength to work for Christ, the profit cannot be computed. But fellowship, only for the sake of its enjoyments, and sound doctrine, for the sake of exactness in theory, and worship for the sake of consistency, are very far from showing the divine institution and authority of the church. The best evidence of the authority, and the strongest vindication of the claims of the church, is the exhibition of souls saved through her work. Jesus said: "The works that I do bear witness of me." He said: "Though ye believe not me, believe the works." This significant verse is recorded in the Acts: "And, beholding the man which was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it." Saving souls from sin is the best, the highest, the most conclusive of all the Christian evidences. Skepticism always gets the advantage when, by its methods of attack, it diverts the church from her true work. The only argument worth anything is this: the gospel proposes to save men from sin; if it can save them it is true, because it does what it proposes to do. To show its truth, the church has only to make an exhibition of saved sinners. As in the days of the apostles, so it is now; skepticism is dumb before that argument. The work, then, for each individual member of the church is the work of saving souls, and in this work each one contributes to establish the truth and exhibit the power of the gospel. All sermons and songs, all prayers and gifts, every act of daily life should tend toward this great work. Each living concentrates fellowship and doctrine and worship into the exceeded purpose of helping to accomplish that for which Christ died. The reaction of such living lifts the individual up into peaceful communion with Jesus, and the two become co-workers in the grandest work that ever engaged attention. As to the enjoyments of religion, the only substantial enjoyments come as the result of work for the Master. The philosophy of happiness is the simplest of all philosophy. Work in your proper sphere, as an immortal being, for the good of immortal beings, and your happiness is assured. The only legitimate work, the only great work, is to save souls from sin. "This do and thou shalt live."

C. W. C.

Alabama Notes.

MR. EDITOR: The severity of the winter has greatly belated the beginning of all outdoor work in these parts of Alabama. But at last the gardeners are fixing their hotbeds and putting in their earliest seeds. The farmers are arranging for meat, corn, fertilizers and other needed supplies, and the faithful mule is answering in the forrow to the persuasive lick, jerk and word of the negro, who knows so well how to give all three in one dose.

It is doubted if more than one farmer in ten made feed enough to last him to the first of February, a fact which, again, puts the planter in complete dependence upon the merchant. The simple truth is, the merchants absolutely control the planting business, and the farmers are really their agents to manage the annoying affairs of plantations, risking life and health to make and gather the crops and put them in market. This is certainly a very vicious state of things, for these two great branches of industry should be mutually dependent and helpful, and if either is naturally independent of the other, farming is manifestly the one. The results of such an abnormal condition are already to be seen in many forms of disaster widespread and increasing. The merchant is satisfied and content to abide still in the land, but the farmer is dissatisfied, and ready to sell to the first buyer. The towns and cities look well, and property is at something like its proper value, but the country looks old and neglected, and property has hardly any fixed value at all. Young men, as soon as old enough, and often before, leave home and go West, or to town, in clerkships. If they marry they domicile their wives in town, and themselves spend the week in the fields, and, like the old-time slave, go to their wives' houses Saturday nights. But few new homes with young families are started in the country. Schools are few, with small numbers of children, and often inferior teaching. No young people take hold vigorously of church matters. Congregations and Sunday-schools are small. And thus every interest, material, social and religious, in the country is damaged, and country life sadly at a discount. How long this unnatural state of things will last no one can tell, but a change can be made only by the farmers themselves. They brought it about, they keep it up, and they only can put a stop to it. Whenever they make at home food enough for the animals, human and brute, needed to cultivate their fields, then they will have taken the first step and the last step, both to independence and the restoration of prosperity. Less cotton, more oats, corn, hay, hogs, cows and horses is clearly the programme. Oh! for floods of small farmers who never saw a cotton bloom, and who would not plant a cotton seed for ten years! Let them come from the North, England, Ireland, Scotland, Sweden, Germany, France, Italy, or anywhere else, except Africa and China. Of Africa we have now too much, and of China we want none at all forever. Cuff is too thriftless and John too thrifty, and neither has honor or conscience enough to make a number one American citizen. But if they would come by ten thousands from other countries we should welcome them with hospitable hands, and help them to comfortable homes.

I asked an influential friend to go to the Legislature at the beginning of the session and get a million or so appropriated for this purpose, but suppose little or nothing has been or will be done by that august body in the matter.

Our Legislature, however, is doing something—something very wonderful, too—judging by the bills prohibiting the whisky traffic, which have been passed. It might have been better, perhaps, if a general law, covering the entire State, had been enacted. But the Legislature seems to be simply granting petitions, and petitions have come from all parts of the State. Beats, townships and whole counties now have it forbidden. School houses and churches, from Tennessee to Florida, have been made the centers of circles within which the whisky brothers, (Rye, Bourbon and Dexter,) and all their hybred offspring, are forbidden to enter under heavy legal penalty. This is a very old and popular firm—"whisky brothers"—having entered the State with the first immigrants, and done a big business in many ways down to the present time. They took part in all the Indian wars, in the log-rollings, corn-shuckings, elections, and now and then in legislation, too; wound up a great many wealthy estates, gave business to courts, doctors, mechanics and preachers, gave striped clothes and lodging to large numbers in the city of Wetumpka, and are at this time, I understand, paying quite a nice revenue to the State by means of convict labor. They have many warm friends. And don't you know when these see old Rye and Bourbon and Dexter fettered and imprisoned, and banished they will gnash their teeth, and howl their wrath and sorrow, and curse the Legislature of 1880-81 for being a set of the meanest Puritans and vilest tyrants the world has ever hatched. In the church there are a few wholesalers, a few retailers, and a few jug suckers, who will doubtless join in the cry of oppression and unconstitutionality. But they may protest and lament till their heads turn gray, and their noses, like the stem-ends of meerschaum pipes well smoked, shall deepen in color and brighten in sheen to the highest point of beautifulness, but they will not stop the tide in the church and out of it. For thousands upon thousands of the devout and patriotic are rejoicing before God that they have lived to see this day. Wives, daughters, mothers, sisters, parents and children are everywhere praying for divine blessings upon this Legislature as they never prayed for one before, and out of pure and grateful hearts, with tongue and pen, in words of holiest benediction, are encouraging the leaders of this wonderful movement.

The Legislature is also working on what is known as the Railroad Commission Bill, the design of which is to lay down limits beyond which these great carrying companies shall not go in their business. It is a very grave and delicate question, and there is great danger of passing such measures as will drive capital from the State and prevent other capital from being invested here. Such results would be calamitous, and it is hoped they will not follow any action of the body. But I must close, as it is time, and as my presiding elder, Dr. Mitchel, has just come in to hold my first Quarterly Conference. The old doctor is now beginning his fiftieth itinerant year, is seventy-four years old, and said when I asked, "Well, doctor, how are you?" "Well, brother, I believe I never felt better in my life."

J. W. R.

PRATTVILLE, ALA., FEB. 11, 1881.

Is the Church Going Backward?

We have quoted from time to time from our Northern Presbyterian exchanges, somewhat concerning the unsatisfactory state of religion among them. We do not think, however that affairs are quiet as bad with all the Protestant denominations. The Methodist reports, especially the Southern Methodist, are better. An increase in the latter last year of 51,000 members shows some signs of life and progress. The Christian Work, a New York Presbyterian Journal, under the question, "Is the Church going backward?" says:

It is not pleasant to read that in more than two hundred of the five hundred and twenty-six Congregational churches in Massachusetts, with an aggregate membership of over twenty-two thousand, there was not a solitary addition made in 1879, and that during the past year over 100 Congregational churches of Illinois received no additions to their membership on confession; that 5,000 Presbyterian churches have only a net increase of 4,200 in the membership for 1880 over that of the previous year, while the conversions are 51 per cent. less than in 1876; and that in the same time the total membership of the Reformed [Dutch] Church is 220 less than at the same time last year. No, this is not pleasant reading, but it is the truth, and a truth that is appalling. And the worst is that there is no reason for believing that the other Protestant denominations—the Protestant Episcopal possibly excepted—can make a much better exhibit. Such a condition of affairs, as we have said, is appalling, and raises the inquiries, to what is it all owing?—and what are the Christian Churches going to do about it? As to the first inquiry, the reply will naturally be, "It is all owing to the spiritual dearth that prevails all over the land." But what causes the dearth? God is as ready to hear and answer prayer as he ever was; He is as ready to pour out a blessing as He ever was; how is it that the churches find themselves in such a stagnant state? And right here let us ask how comes it that when our Sunday school system is perfected as never before in its various lesson-helps and other modern appliances, and when we are told, as a leading religious journal stated the other day, that never was the passage from the Sunday-school to the church more easy; how is it that so few Sunday school scholars find their way into the communion of the church? Why, one scholar from every Sunday school class in the country brought into the church would give such a revival as would move the whole spiritual world. We are confronted with the appalling fact that in thousands of the Sunday schools of the country, with their armies of children counted by tens of thousands, not one scholar has been brought into the church! What a showing this is!—appalling is the only word for it—and in view of such a record may we not well ask, Do the Sunday schools pay for all the time and labor and money spent on them? By their fruits we must judge. It is all very well to have Sunday schools and Sunday school festivals, Christmas trees laden with gifts for the children—these are all good in their place, and we would not abolish them. But, Christian brethren, if this is all your Sunday schools can show, we can tell you they do not pay. We call the Sunday-schools "nurseries of the church." That is precisely what they ought to be, not what some nurseries are, play rooms for the children, but a place where they receive such spiritual food as shall prepare them for confessing their Saviour. No: it matters not how well appointed a Sunday school may be, how perfect its order, how admirable the singing, how complete in all its accessories:—a Sunday school of fifty or one hundred or two hundred or five hundred members that in a whole year leads not one child into the communion of the church, is not a successful school.

A Glimpse of Japan.

Rev. W. W. Royall, Missionary to China reached Shanghai December 8th. In a letter to the Richmond Christian Advocate he gives some interesting glimpses of Japan. He says:

"The Japanese, as a rule, so far as I have seen, are small and slender. I suppose the average weight of the men I have seen would not go much over one hundred and twenty pounds. The police especially in their uniforms of blue, with yellow stripes down the pantaloons, and with their batons in their hands, make such a ludicrous attempt at looking very fierce and important as always excites my risibles. Fancy such a manikin arresting any one—a big Irishman for example! But their politeness is truly praiseworthy. They are always smiling and bowing, full of life and animation, perpetually sunshiny. If the parallel be allowable, I would compare the Japanese to the French, the Chinese to the English or German. There is the same sprightliness, adaptibility and polish to the one—the dogged perseverance, painstaking, laborious application and carefulness about entering untried fields in the other. The Japanese is always ready to imitate; the Chinaman is slower, but more thorough. The Japanese will go in debt; the Chinese avoid it. John Chinaman wants to see his way out of a thing before he goes in. The French seems to have a good deal of intrepidity in a certain way with the Japanese. The postal cards we used there are French "carte postal" is on the back of each one.

There are several daily papers in Yokohama, published at the moderate subscription price of $30 a year! These are in English. There are also native newspapers. From one of the English papers I take the following: "Christianity is gradually making progress in this country, and its devotees, it is said, have decided to build a church in Shinnabara, Tokio. Besides this they are holding consultations as to building forty other churches throughout the country. Our priests had better look out, and give up the quarrels that take place amongst the Fraternity." This extract is from the Japan Daily Herald, a paper published in Yokohama. I give it verbatim. The same extract is, I see, quoted by the North China Daily News, published in Shanghai.

We left Kobe on the evening of December 4, and arrived at Nagasaki Sunday afternoon at about 4 o'clock. The place of which Bishop Marvin speaks as not having remembered the name is Simonoseki.

I soon found myself talking to Rev. J. C. Davidson, of the Methodist Episcopal Mission, who had called to see us. We went ashore with him, and heard our first sermon in Japanese. Brother Davidson has been here for eight years, and speaks Japanese fluently. He and Brother Long, his colleague, are very pleasantly situated. Their houses are on a steep slope to the south of the bay, and they have good air, good water, and pleasant houses. They showed us every attention and kindness, had us to their houses to dinner, and Brother Davidson gave Brother Loche and me a pleasant lesson in lawn-tennis. The Methodist Episcopal Board seems to be liberal with its missionaries, and they are doing a grand work in return. Some of the boards (ours is not one of them) are not liberal, and force the missionaries sometimes to deny themselves things that are really necessary for comfort, health, and efficient work—a miserable and ruinous policy.

Our Court Religion.

The New York Herald says:

"Among the gifts of our worthy president-elect is the gift of faith. He became at an early age a member of a body of Christians called the Disciples. This modest denomination never aspired beyond the dignity of a small frame church in Washington City. Here the brethren have met in peace for years and years and Garfield among them. Other denominations built ambitious, showy churches, and fashion, pride and power worshipped God with some degree of splendor. The Disciples kept in mind John the Baptist in the wilderness, and preferred a religion of locusts and wild honey. So long as Garfield was a modest [illegible] worshipped. The 'boys,' the statesmen, the 'boodle-hunters' and 'bone-takers' never go to a church that does not pay, and it has happened that the paying church in Washington, since Johnson's time, has been the Methodist. Methodism flourished with surprising vigor under Grant and Hayes. There were court chaplains and favored clergyman. And when these worthy divines were not expounding the faith as delivered to the saints, they were sidling about the departments, on the lookout for vacancies for sons or cousins or other relatives. The number of Methodists appointed to office by Grant and Hayes would make a Presbyterian affirm the essential article of his faith. The church is so large that these appointments made no impression, and beyond a complaint now and then from one brother about another, having a slice or two extra from Uncle Sam's pantry, the matter never excited much attention.

"Now, it is different! The fact that the Disciples have the government has produced a great sensation. The boys want to be on the inside, but the church is not large enough. The inquiry at the Congressional library from Western congressman for books about the Disciples' faith, so that they can be well up on the theme when they come to talk, post-office, has become so great that Mr. Spofford, the librarian, suffers from nervous prostration. Indian agents and post-office contractors spend their evenings over the life of Campbell. They knew all about John Wesley and Moody and Sankey's hymns; but this knowledge does not count. Mr. Schurz captured the White House by his exquisite rendering of the 'Sweet By and By;' but Garfield does not believe in such things, and our musical secretary is said to be at work on Campbellite anthems. The newsboys on the Mentor train are making money by selling Disciples' tracts to visiting statesmen. Collector Merritt, with that judicious appreciation of the proprieties which has won him golden opinions, proposes to have classes for the instruction of his weighers and tidewaiters in Disciple doctrine. Surveyor Graham began his studies last fall after the Indiana election, and is now one of the best informed men in New York on the subject. Postmaster James says he never knew there was so much truth and beauty in a faith. Mr. Hiss is preparing a vivid and instructive lecture on the peculiar doctrines of the Disciples' Church, which he proposes to deliver at the invitation of Mr. Davenport, Mr. Shook, Mr. E. D. Webster, Judge Dittenhoefer, Judge Davis, ex-Collector Murphy, Mr. J. L. O'Brien, Mr. Daggett and other representative Republicans. It is not often that a political event has such important theological results. If some worthy citizen should start a series of Disciple meetings between now and the 4th of March, the congregations would surpass those of Moody and Sankey days."

VERY BAD.—The Methodists of Boston it seems sometimes go astray, and what is worse their theological students and young ministers are sometimes seen at the opera. We have heard of no such irregularities among our Southern Methodist theologues. What would Dr. Summers think if such cases were reported in connection with Wesley Hall, and the Vanderbilt? Zion's Herald, Boston, says:

One of our religiously-educated young men, who was rather surprised to find himself in the theatre of the Museum, saw before him, as he took his seat, with no little astonishment, a theological student. There was enough of sensitiveness of conscience in himself to be not a little shocked to see this young minister in such a place. A son of one of our members, not himself a member of the church, but with very proper sentiments as to the ministry, indulging himself with a visit to the opera, was surprised to recognize at the performance another of the theological students. If this is the character of the self-indulgence young pastors are nurturing in themselves, how can they warn their youthful hearers against worldly amusement? It is not wonderful that such men clamor for a price when asked to enter active service, and refuse to preach unless an adequate salary is offered. Out of such stuff we can not hope to make Henry Martyns or William Taylors.

The Richmond Christian Advocate is delivering strong broadsides for our Mexican missionary work. In a recent article it says:

Mexico is just on the threshold of a great commercial career. The foreign capitalists—Americans chiefly—with their army of engineers and artisans, are swarming through the Mexican States. Six thousand miles of railroads are under contract. These iron ways will carry blessings on their cars to every province. It is a dictum of Macaulay that excepting the invention of the alphabet and the printing press, that contrivance that abridges distance and opens rapid intercourse between nations and states has done most for the civilization of man. The vast system of internal improvements in progress in Mexico has the promise and potency of great moral results to that people. In a few months new and swift routes will be ready for use. In four years the great trunk lines from its Capital will join in Texas, New Mexico, and California, our net work of railroads. There will hardly be a State from the Rio Grande to Yucatan without communication by locomotive and cars.

Ten millions of people without the gospel, and at our doors, challenge our religious zeal and invite our missionaries. They are spending mints of money in commercial highways which will give the messengers of God swift approach and rapid access to every section. The government protects the preacher. The language of the continent [illegible] all the tongues on the habitable earth. Soon in every town and district in Mexico an energetic American colony will be found. The missionary will turn pastor, and feeding the sheep in the wilderness and the flock from the old pasture. The mission will cost little in traveling expenses, and will be presently self-supporting.

The emigration to Mexico will be from the Southern States. There is somewhat in common between the people on the banks of the Rio Grande. The Southern Church must not pass on the other side while its neighbor needs help.

The Mexicans will soon send Pullman cars to the doors of our Conferences, and give a "clergyman ticket" to the missionary. Surely our sacred courage will accept the courtesy of the polite unbeliever. Was ever the Church beckoned with plainer providences to a grander enterprise? Did ever a nation stretch out such welcoming hands to the apostles of religion?

Our Church ought to make ready a hundred men for Mexico. Let us go up and take the land. Our tribe ought to be the van cohort in this advance.

We have received the Thirteenth Annual Report of the Freedman's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, 1880. The report says:

The Society has received, during the year, $90,287 33; an increase over last year of $15,126 51. To obtain and disburse this sum cost $5,321 17, of which the salary of the Corresponding Secretary, including traveling expenses in supervising the schools, office expenses, and clerk hire, amount to $4,171 61. The entire cost to the Society for running expenses is less than 6 per cent, and the salaries of the officers amount to only a little above 4.5 per cent.

The indebtedness of the Society at the close of last year was $9,326 91. A loan of $13,112.18 was effected to meet the increased indebtedness of the present year, incurred in the erection of Christman Hall and other buildings, making a total indebtedness at the close of this year, July 1, 1880, of $22,738 82. Subscriptions to the amount of several thousand dollars have been made, towards the pledge of Bishop Haven for the erection of Christman Hall, which, when received, will considerably reduce the debt of the Society incurred for this purpose. It is the policy of the Society to expend its funds only as it collects them, and thus keep out of debt; but in an exigency like the above there was no other way to avoid peril to a great undertaking, essential to our success in the South; but to assume the responsibility, increase our debt, and save the enterprise.

Bishop Doggett's Manuscripts. Dr. John E. Edwards, writing to the Southern Christian Advocate, says:

I am still engaged in the examination of Bishop Doggett's manuscripts, culling, assorting and arranging for the first volume of his sermons, lectures and addresses.

The first volume will consist of sermons, exclusively. This may be followed by a volume of lectures and addresses, including his great address on "The Progress of Methodism in the 19th Century," which he delivered first, in Raleigh, N. C., at the centennial meeting held in that city in 1874, and which was repeated by him in the bounds of almost every Conference in the domain of Southern Methodism. I find, also, a number of Commencement addresses, which ought to be preserved and perpetuated in our standard Methodist literature. Much will depend upon the favor with which the first volume shall be received, as to the further publication of his writings.

The Rev. J. Butler in the Central Methodist says:

It is true that the presiding elders do twice as much preaching as do the preachers in stations and first class circuits. It is true that they are not paid proportionately with the preachers in our first class stations and circuits. The salary allowed each should exceed that of the preachers in our first class stations and circuits. Why? Because of the expense of travel; of exposure to inclement weather, rain, snow, cold, and heat; because he is not often made the recipient of gifts, gets but few marriage fees. The preachers in charge get these, and they go a long way in the year's support.

Mrs. John N. Davies, the widow of a member of the South Carolina Conference, died recently, having in her will, two thousand dollars bequeathed to the fund for the support of the superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans of the preachers of the S. C. Conference, and to assist in making up the salaries of preachers who may fail to receive the amount appropriated to them; three hundred dollars to the Missionary Society, two hundred of which is to be appropriated to China and one hundred to Foreign Missions; and two hundred dollars to be applied to the Orphans' Home, under the care of said Conference.

The World's Conference of the Young Men's Christian Associations is to be held this year in London, at Exeter Hall, on Aug. 3. The delegates from this country are to leave New York on July 16 by a special excursion steamer, the Devonia, of the Anchor Line, for Glasgow. The arrangements for working the excursion have been placed in the able hands of Mr. E. M. Jenkins, No. 257 Broadway, New York. Mr. Jenkins, who was formerly the American manager of the firm of Cook, Son & Jenkins, made similar arrangements for the delegates to the great Conference in Switzerland in 1878.

The following persons have been elected or selected to represent the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America in the Ecumenical Conference to convene in London next September: Bishop Holsey, of Augusta, Ga.; Rev. C. Westly Fitzhuge, of the Virginia Conference; and Rev. H. H. Mitchell, of the North Mississippi Conference. Lay delegates—Mr. Lewis Carnish, of Washington City, D. C.; Mr. Peter Postell, of Hopkinsville, Ky.; and Mr. James H. Harper, of Augusta, Ga.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Brethren who raise their domestic missionary collection at an early day in accordance with a resolution of Conference, can forward to me, by post office order on Livingstone, Ala., or by sight draft on Mobile, or by registered letter to Coutopa, Ala. My address is Coutopa, Ala.

J. M. PATTON,
February 9, 1881.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.—Please acknowledge receipt of following sums for French Mission: Dr. Foster, Ville Platte, La., December, 1880, $1; Moss Point circuit, Miss., February, 1881, $4; L. H. Dantzler, Moss Point, Miss., $6.

W. J. PICOT, Missionary.

—A memoir of our lamented friend and brother, Rev. Dr. W. H. Watkins, prepared by Rev. Dr. C. K. Marshall, will be published in the ADVOCATE of next week. It is very full and complete, and will, we doubt not, be read with interest by thousands of our subscribers. Dr. Watkins left five sons, instead of four, as we stated last week. The youngest, Benjamin Drake Watkins, is seventeen years of age, and will soon enter the State College, at Starkville, Mississippi. The funeral and burial services of Dr. Watkins were conducted by Dr. Marshall, Sunday, February 6, assisted by Dr. John Hunter, H. F. Sproles and A. W. McLairin. The remains were deposited in a vault in the Jackson cemetery, whence they will be removed to the family burial ground in Jefferson county.

—Rev. J. W. Lambuth and wife have made a fine impression upon our New Orleans people, and their presence and addresses have awakened a deeper interest in the China missionary work. There was a large gathering last Sunday afternoon at the Carondelet Street Church. There was singing by the children, and Brother and Sister Lambuth made very interesting addresses. They addressed a good congregation also at St. Charles Avenue on Sunday night. Sister Lambuth has met the ladies on two or three occassions and addressed them on women's work in China. It has given our people great pleasure to have these devoted missionaries among them. The only regret is that they could not stay longer. They expected to leave Thursday, February 17.

—The storm of Sunday, February 6, drove the waters of Lake Pontchartrain upon the back part of the city, overflowing and breaking through the protection levees, and inundating about eleven square miles of the corporate limits. The homes of thousands of the people were from six inches to four feet deep in water, and great distress prevailed. Relief committees were organized, funds raised by subscription, and food and other necessary aid was extended to more than ten thousand people. At this writing the waters have greatly abated, and we suppose they will be gone entirely in a few days. The cause of this terrible overflow must be attributed to negligence on the part of the city authorities, and to the general mismanagement of our city affairs. The storm was extraordinary, but due and timely diligence might have prevented the disaster.

We were much gratified this week by a call from our old friend, Rev. John Pauly, of the Southern German Missionary Conference. Bro. Pauly was for many years a pastor in New Orleans. For sometime past he has been in Texas, and is at present in charge of a mission work in Houston. He is spending a few weeks in New Orleans, and assisting our German brethren in protracted meetings. Our German charges here are enjoying considerable revival influence, there have been a number of conversions at Crap street, and this week they are having a good meeting at Hyades street. Bro. Pauly is now in his seventy third year, but with zeal and power unabated. May he long continue to live and labor for Christ.

Our excellent cotemporary, the Southwestern Presbyterian has come out in new form, as an eight page sheet. The change, we think, is an improvement. The Southwestern is one of the best religious papers that come to our table. Its able editor is doing a noble work for Protestant Christianity in the South.

Bishop Keener and Dr. Wilson had a very pleasant passage to Vera Cruz, reaching that port on Monday, February 7. The Bishop was in improved health. Neither he nor Dr. Wilson were troubled with sea sickness during the voyage.

Hon. Fernando Wood, member of Congress from New York, died at Hot Springs, Ark., February 13. He was a leading Democratic politician and a statesman of large experience and ability. His death will excite general regret.

—It is now announced that the revised New Testament will not be published before [illegible].

—Rev. Robert Brown, a member of the North Carolina Conference, died January 30.

Personal and Other.

—"I saw Victor Hugo riding in the Bois the other day," the Paris correspondent of the Boston Journal, "and was surprised to notice the extreme heartiness of his look. The old poet seems good for ten or fifteen years of life yet. He had on a straw hat, although it was a cold day, and he was riding unconcernedly in a hired cab, which was decidedly the worse for wear. His face is quite red, and is set in a frame of white beard. He always wears his hair cut quite short, and in the park a stranger might readily have taken him a merchant or a bourgeoise retired from business. But when his face is lighted up by strong emotion—when he is speaking on some topic in which he is very much interested the expression becomes exceptionally fine. He continues to go out in all weathers, and never complains of being ill, which is pretty good for a man who was already a celebrity in 1826."

—Rev. Dr. Hickok, ex-President of Union College, better known for his valuable contributions to mental and moral science, though now, says the New York Observer, in his eighty-second year, has been relieved at the Carney Hospital in Boston, of a cataract which had formed on his right eye. In consequence of a similar affection steadily progressing over the left eye, the doctor has become nearly sightless, and while still in the full possession of his mental faculties was shut off from the enjoyment of books and the pleasure of writing with his own hand. Many friends of Dr. Hickok will be glad to learn that after a fortnight's stay he has returned to his home in Amherst, in the hope of resuming his former habits of reading and study.

MORMONISM SPREADING.—The worst thing about Mormonism is its aggressiveness. It pushes itself everywhere it can find an opening. Governor Ward, of Idaho, in his annual message to the Legislature of that Territory, calls attention to the "rapid introduction" of polygamy, and says the Territory is becoming a second edition of Utah. He hopes measures will be taken to crush out the practice; advises the punishment of those who preach polygamy, and recommends that Congress be memorialized to amend the act of 1862, so as to make polygamous cohabitation, after marriage in another Territory an offence. Something ought to be done to get rid of the cancer where it is, which will prevent its spreading.—Christian at Work.

—Since 1820, it is calculated that at least 3,500,000 Germans have emigrated; out of these 3,000,000 have gone to the United States. Between 1820 and 1830, both years inclusive, the total number of emigrants was only 8,000; between 1831 and 1840 the number 157,000; between 1841 and 1850, 385,000; between 1851 and 1860, 1,130,000; and between 1861 and 1870, 970,000. From 1870 to 1872 inclusive again of both years, 270,000 emigrants left Germany, but in the seven years which followed, from 1873 to 1879, the whole number only amounted 350,000.—America.

Christian K. Ross, the father of Charley Ross, is quoted as saying: "The only tidings I have ever received of Charley since he was stolen was the demand for a ransom of $20,000. If I had paid that I would have had him long before this. As it is I have spent $60,000, and have not got him. I still have detectives employed and hope in time to find him. I have examined more than three hundred lost children in the search, some of whom had been stolen, but none of them was Charley."

One of the new Cunard steamers is to be made of steel. Among the advantages claimed for this material is a saving in the weight of hulls, it being found, it is said, that the weight of a steel hull is less by 150 or 200 tons per 1,000 tons than that of an iron hull of less strength. The steel ship can therefore carry more freight proportionately to its size than its iron competitor. It is believed, also, that the steel ships will be safer in case of stranding or striking concealed rocks.

This strange story is going the rounds: Mrs. Owen Dougherty, of Chester, Md., dreamed three nights in succession that there was gold under a certain rock near Rising Sun. This took, in her mind, had an ancient mossy-covered look upon it. She visited the locality, and found the rock with a brick on it as seen in her dream. On digging under the rock gold to the value of $15,000 was discovered, and the digging is still going on.

The churchmen of Liverpool, England appear to be determined to have a full choral service daily in their cathedral church of St. Peter, and are putting forth strenuous efforts to accomplish it. It will cost $3,000 a year, which they intend to raise. The interest in religious affairs has greatly increased since the establishment of the new diocese, and the installment of Bishop Ryle to it; the results are tangible in his labors, and it is gratifying to find that the people appreciate them.

The New York Evening Post says: "Columbia College has an endowment of about $2,000,000, the last annual income of which was about $201,220 22. From students in the Department of Arts, School of Mines, and School of Law the receipts for the last year ending September 30, 1880, were $110,187 51, making the total income $321,917 51."—N. Y. Observer.

The Rev. Howard Henderson, D. D., we learn, says the Nashville Christian Advocate goes to Hannibal, to supply the pulpit left vacant by the removal of the Rev. G. W. Horn, late pastor, who has gone to Texas. Dr. Henderson's health has improved.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—At the last session of the Mississippi Conference, the Rev. Louis Kendall, one of its members, was deposed and expelled on a charge of immorality. He immediately appealed to the General Conference. This holds the case in suspense until a final decision can be had. Without the knowledge of Mr. Kendall, and without intending the slightest reflection on the committee of trial or any member of it, we express our confident belief that the verdict was erroneous and that it will be reversed by the General Conference. We therefore respectfully ask for a suspension of public opinion until a final trial can be had.

R. VARNEY,
S. B. WATTS,
R. CARRADINE.
January, 1881.

Publisher's Department.

☞ We shall do our best to exclude fraudulent advertisements of every description from the ADVOCATE, and we ask our friends in ordering goods from the leading merchants of New Orleans and elsewhere, as represented in our columns, will mention having seen the advertisement in the ADVOCATE. We will also take pleasure in attending personally to any commissions for our friends in the country with which we may be favored, while endorsing our advertisers as being worthy of their patronage.

A withered and aged African who announces himself as "Judge Thomas of Canada," entered an office near the ferry dock and said he was collecting money to help the Southern negroes emigrate to Liberia. "How many want to go?" asked the man at the desk. "Well, sah, I reckon on about five thousand." "When do you intend to start them?" "Aidy to the Spring, sah." "How much have you collected thus far?" "In de neighborhood of sixty cents, as near as I kin reckon." "And if I should give you a nickle, that would be sixty-five cents?" "Yes, sah." "Would sixty-five cents be of any great help toward sending five thousand colored people to Liberia?" "Well, sah, it wouldn't go a great ways when you come right down to de actual expenses, but I reckon that it would start a powerful industrious if it was only handled right."—Detroit Free Press.

One of our citizens was going home at a late hour recently, when he was suddenly confronted by a foot-pad, who, with pistol pointed at his head, demanded his money. The citizen assured the fellow that he had no money. That "he had been to a fair." Before he could say more the rascal dropped his pistol, put it in his pocket, and presently took out his wallet, and, crushing something into the citizen's hand, said, in grief-broken accents, as he turned on his heel: "Been to a fair? Pour fellow. Take that. I wish it was more." He was soon lost in the night. Upon approaching a street lamp the citizen found that the unfortunate had given him a ten dollar bill. Verily, one touch of nature makes the whole world kin.

A Sunday-school superintendent in Kentucky found the following advice chalked on his blackboard:

PLEES MR. SUPERINTENENT DONT PUT BEF STORIES EVRY SUNDAY AT FS Days WITH an AWful Exampel of a Kid, Boy to Each of Them

"GOTTA REST"
GO TO THE DEVIL
To Stay.

Literary young man at a party: Miss Jones, have you seen "Crabbe's Tales." Young lady, scornfully: "I was not aware that crabs had tails." Literary young man: "I beg your pardon, I should have said, read 'Crabbe's Tales.'" Young lady, angrily: "And I was not aware that periwinkles had tails either." Exit young man.

A Western paper suggests the following plan for paying off the national debt in six weeks: "Let the government levy a light tax, not to exceed three mills on the dollar, on the poetry written in the United States, for that is very poor, and the value of its own poetry." Let us do it.

Tupper says: "A baby in the house is a well-spring of pleasure. When the baby is well and good-natured, idem of spring and lots of pleasure. But when he has something on his mind or nights, there is more spring than pleasure. A cool head is found to equilibrium."

A priest was addressing his flock in Ireland on the dangers of intemperance, and concluded his harangue with these words: "Drink, my children, makes you beat your wives, starve your families, and shoot your landlords aye, and miss them, too."

There was a fight imminent between two boys a few evenings ago. One of them darkly intimated that he was bigger than the other. The smaller, who was the son of a deacon, defiantly retorted, "I don't care if you are as big as a church debt; you can't scare me."

A Texas paper speaks of the late George Eliot as a very gifted but very ill-favored man. To which another paper replies: "Yes, poor old fellow, he had his weakness; but as a pugilist he stood unrivalled. England will not soon forget his celebrated Mill on the Floss."

Lady Carlaret, wife of the Lord Lieutenant, said to Dean Swift: "The air of Ireland is very excellent and healthy." "For mercy's sake," said Swift, "don't say so in England, madam, or if you do they will certainly tax it."

One who has adopted one church for another, without any intelligent idea of what he was doing, said that he "had abandoned the errors of the church of Rome and adopted those of the Church of England."

He was informed that a lady had called to see him in his absence. "A lady," he mused, aloud, "a lady." A pair of spectacles upon his nose suddenly brightened up and added, "Oh, that was no holy, doh was my wife."

"If you are a quiet, honest citizen of Galveston, how did those skeleton keys and brass knuckles happen to be in your coat pockets?" "I reckon, judge, me and the policeman must have changed coats in the scuffle. We were very much excited."

Mr. P. Werlein, 235 Canal street, New Orleans, deals in the leading pianos and organs. He guarantees his goods to stand for ten years before purchasing. Low prices, reliable dealing, and full assortments are to be had at this old house.

"You are nothing but a demagogue," said a tipsy fellow to Tom Marshall, who promptly paid him back. "Put a wisp of straw around you, and your wall be nothing but a dem'gogue."

"Dear Christ," said a loyal Pennsylvania lady of the world, "you have you got all the dirt on your face." "But, ma, I am so near sighted."

Why is a tube in the house like wheat? It is first shelled, then thrashed, and finally becomes the "flour" of the family.

W. C. SHEPARD & CO.—American China dinner, breakfast and tea set, 160 pieces, for $15. Equal in looks and usefulness to French China.

A Maryland man has a Bible 12 years old. Strange how long a Bible may be made to last by economic usage.

When the contribution box comes round, nodding assent won't do.

A mosquito always settles before he presents his bill.

A wag said of an egotistical writer: "Somebody should take pity on his readers and put out his I's."

Business Notices.

For sore lips from fever, colds and chills, apply Barnett's Kalliston, which at once allays the burning pains and irritation, and heals as by magic.

Because it adds to Personal Beauty by restoring color and lustre to gray or faded hair, and is beneficial to the scalp, is why Parker's Hair Balsam is such a popular dressing.

CANVASSERS make from $25 to $50 per week selling goods for E. G. RIDEOUT & CO., 10 Barclay St., New York. Send for Catalogue and terms

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

WANTED A SITUATION FOR AN EXperienced and well qualified teacher. References to members of faculty of Vanderbilt University.

JOHN HUGHES,
Jackson, Miss.

NEW YORK SHOPPING

Of every description for ladies and gentlemen. Household articles bought with discretion, taste and judgment. For circular, address

Mrs. M. C. ADAMS,
P. O. Box, 598, New York.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

MANSFIELD, LOUISIANA.

Owned, controlled and managed by the Louisiana Annual Conference.

Course of study equal to any college in the South. Its roll of pupils has nearly doubled in three months, and still they come. Noted for healthfulness of locality. All at living rates.

Total expense for Spring term, commencing February 14, 1881, only $75 in literary and vocal course. Music $30. No extras. Let Louisianians build up their own schools.

A specimen copy of College News free on application. Address

Rev. J. LANE BURGESS,
President.

MUNSEY'S SERMONS and LECTURES.

Price, $1.50.

PRESS OPINIONS 5th Edition.

This is truly a wonderful book, as might be expected from such a remarkable man as Dr. Munsey. Thought made up of sermons, lectures and fragments. It takes hold of the reader with the grip of a master in romance.—Theological Monthly, Richmond.

The publication of the sermons of a great preacher usually results in disappointment to his admirers; but this volume will prove an exception.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

We do not hesitate to pronounce it one of the most remarkable books of sermons that has ever come under our notice.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

It is one of the most remarkable productions of the Methodist pulpit of this or any age.—Methodist Recorder, Pittsburg, Pa.

We are convinced that this volume will not only sustain the great preacher's reputation, but increase it. . . . When one reads his sermon on the "Divine Councils and Work," he naturally thinks of Milton's great works of Eyskine, of Jeremy Taylor, of Barrow and such like masters of expression.—Western Christian Advocate, Cincinnati, Mason, G.A.

This ought to rank with our best English classics.—Rev. W. Lowell Brown, of London.

These are the ripest fruit of the Munsey's wonderful powers, and any one of them would make the Congress and lecture platform opulent.—Lyceum Christian Advocate.

There has been but one Munsey, and Methodism will never reckon his organ. Raleigh Christian Advocate.

Munsey's sermons gained something in the delivery but less than in the case of many other gifted preachers. Their extemporaneous delivery all that made them attractive are transferred to the printed page. Hence only the most eminent of a wonderful class, for the full power of words, like the sword, left the man himself, and the very vigor that thrilled and fascinated. They are not to express hang in the dark, but fresh and luminous, and still [illegible] with the last touches of the pencil of genius.—New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Bishop Keener has dared his Church and all Christendom a real service in preparing this memorial of one of the most brilliant preachers of the South. The sermons here collected are certainly marvels. . . . The world at large loses, but breath as he reads the fiery lines . . . His sermons would be a profitable study to the orator or scholar alone.—Bishop Gilbert Haven in New York Christian Advocate.

Address EATHROP & WILKINS,
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF METHODISM.

BY REV. W. C. BLACK.

Concerning this work Dr. L. Parker, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, says: "The history, statistics, polity and doctrines of Methodism are clearly and compactly stated by the author, and the causes, under God, of the wonderful success of Methodism, are unfolded with much acumen and analytical power. We hope it will be extensively circulated." The Mississippi Methodist says: "The work shows the hand of a master. Everybody, friend or foe of Methodism, ought to read it." Pastors will do a good work by circulating it among their people. Our order has been received for three hundred copies for gratuitous distribution. More than a thousand copies were sold within sixty days of its publication. Price 20 cents or $2 per dozen. For sale by

EATHROP & WILKINS,
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

W. F. MELLEN,

Attorney at Law,

12 CARONDELET ST.,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

DR. EDWARD HARRISON,

112 Canal Street, from 11 to 4 P. M.

NEW ORLEANS.

Carpet and Oil Cloth Warehouse.

ELKIN & CO.,

100 - - - CANAL STREET - - - 100

New styles of

MOQUETTE, VELVET, BODY BRUSSELS, and TAPESTRY BRUSSELS, with border to match.
3-PLY and INGRAINS in great variety.
OIL-CLOTHS of all widths.
WINDOW SHADES and CURTAINS, new patterns.
CORNICES and CORNICE POLES.
MATTINGS of every description.
CURTAIN GOODS, TASSELS, CORDS, GIMPS, Etc.
Our prices for corresponding qualities of goods are as low as any house in the South or West.

DR. C. J. BICKHAM,

RESIDENCE AND OFFICE,

220 Jackson St., bet. Chestnut and Colleen

NEW ORLEANS

Office Hours: Eight A. M., and three to four P. M.

FIVE FAMOUS OPERAS.

MIGNON. (3) By AMBROSE THOMAS. This very successful opera first became known in Paris, where it slowly but surely worked its way to permanent distinction, and has become one of the standards. It is very full, occupies 305 pages, and furnishes to the purchaser quite a library of music of a high order.

AIDA. (2) Grand Opera by VERDI. Composed in the first instance for the ruler of Egypt and first given in that ancient kingdom, where also the scene of the story is laid. The strange life of old forgotten ages comes before us, and is made vivid by the thrilling music of one of the most brilliant of composers.

CARMEN. (2) By GEORGES BIZET. A Spanish Opera, introducing Spanish Gypsies, Soldiers, Spanish Dons, a Toreador, and Spanish Contraband Traders. We are in contact with the bizarre ways and intricacies of the Spanish Peninsula, and the music is quite in consonance with the prevailing brightness.

MEFISTOFELE. (2) By A. BOITO. Mefistofele is the true devil, according to Goethe, whose poem is closely followed throughout. A daring composition, remarkable and weird, now wholly given, and pronounced a success.

FATINITZA. (2) By F. von SUPPE, whose melodiousness, light, free and easy and harmonious way the Russians and Turks during the war. Very popular.

Any book mailed, post free, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston

C. H. DITSON & CO.,

843 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Agricultural.

ABOUT LIMESTONE AND LIME AS FERTILIZERS.—No other single topic has recently brought so many queries. This is due to the extraordinary claims of parties selling ground limestone, or making machinery for grinding it. Limestone is a most widely distributed mineral, one of its purest forms being known as marble, and is found almost all over the country, of various qualities and degrees of purity. It is a Carbonate of Lime, that is lime combined with Carbonic Acid. If a fragment of limestone is placed in a glass of water, and a little strong acid is added, the Carbonic Acid is set free, and we see it pass off as bubbles rising through the water. Limestone is so slightly dissolved by water that it is tasteless. It takes 1,000 parts of water to dissolve one part of limestone. Water, in which there is much Carbonic Acid, dissolves a considerable amount of Carbonate of Lime. If a small piece of limestone be kept at a strong red heat for some hours, it will be only about half as heavy as the original stone. What has it lost in the burning? If tested with acid, as before, no bubbles of gas will be given off. The heat has driven out all the Carbonic Acid: it is no longer a Carbonate of Lime, but simply lime, an oxide of the metal Calcium, or Calcic Oxide as the chemists have it. Limestone burned in kilns produces lime, often called Quick-lime. If a lump of freshly burned lime have water gradually put upon it, it soon becomes hot, in a little while it swells up, cracks and falls into a very white powder; though much water has been added, the powder is quite dry. The water has united with the lime, making a solid, Caustic or Slaked Lime. Lime exposed takes up moisture from the air, and we have Air-slacked Lime. Slacked lime with enough water forms whitewash, or "Milk of Lime." On standing, the greater part of the lime will settle, leaving clear lime-water—a saturated solution of lime; that is, the water has taken up all it can dissolve, for at ordinary temperature it requires seven hundred parts of water to dissolve one part of Quick-lime. If clear lime-water be placed in a glass, and with a straw or pipe-stem the breath be forced into it, the lime-water will soon become cloudy, and then milky. Set the glass aside, and a fine white powder will settle at the bottom, leaving the water clear above. The breath contains Carbonic Acid; this, when forced into the lime-water, unites with the lime, forming Carbonate, the same as unburned limestone, which, being little soluble, separates as a white powder. As we continue to breathe into the lime-water, after it has become milky, it will soon become perfectly clear as at the start. The continued breathing supplies more Carbonic Acid than is needed to convert the lime into an insoluble carbonate; the excess of Carbonic Acid in the water re-dissolves the carbonate. Heating this solution drives off the excess of Carbonic Acid, and the Carbonate of Lime will be deposited again. Carbonic Acid is always present in the atmosphere, and when slaked lime is long exposed, it takes up this Acid and slowly becomes Carbonate of Lime.

Why we Use Quick-Lime upon the Land.—All cultivated plants contain lime in their ashes, and it is considered necessary to their proper growth. But as soils generally contain enough lime, and we apply it for its action upon the soil, lime gets upon and greatly aids the decomposition of organic matter in the soil. It is thought to neutralize the organic acids contained in what are called "sour soils." In a complicated manner it aids in the fixing of Ammonia. It also acts upon the inorganic or mineral constituents of the soil, and aids in converting them into forms in which they can be taken up by the plants, especially in liberating Potash from its combinations. The effect of lime upon the mechanical condition of the soil is an important feature. Upon heavy clay soils its effect is most marked; the particles lose their adhesiveness, and allow air and water to enter. These are the leading effects that follow the use of lime. In view of the claims made for ground, unburned limestone, it is an important question how far it can produce the above effects. That the unburned limestone will supply the demands of the plant for lime, that it may slowly neutralize organic acids, and help the mechanical texture of the soil seems very probable. But that it will perform one of the most important offices, the decomposition of organic matter in the soil, and convert that into plant food, seems improbable, because the ability of lime to do this depends in a great measure upon its avidity for Carbonic Acid, while limestone being already a carbonate, has no need of more. That limestone cannot produce all the effects of lime is shown by the well-known fact that soils underlaid by limestone, and naturally containing a large proportion of finely divided Carbonate of Lime, are as much benefited by the use of Quick-lime as are soils deficient in limestone. The advertisements of ground limestone, that we have seen, make great use of the experiments of one person in Pennsylvania, who states that his yield of wheat treated with ground limestone, was more than double that to which slaked lime had been applied. He also claims to have found it a much cheaper fertilizer than lime and bone dust, and more profitable than Guano or Superphosphate. These statements have been sent by several who ask our opinion. Our "opinion" is, that we do not accept as final, the results of any one experimenter, when they are in direct opposition to the accumulated evidence of those whose practice runs through many years. In nothing more easily than in agricultural experiments, can an effect be ascribed to the wrong cause, and when we see the fertilizing value of ground limestone placed above Guano or Superphosphate, we do not accept it. American Agriculturist.

SOME NOTES ON A FARMER'S EDUCATION.—At the Farmers' State Convention, held at New Britain, Conn., December 15, 16, and 17, the leading topic was: "What the farmer ought to know, and how he may learn it." The following remarks are extracts from our notes upon the lectures and discussions:

The old view that anybody could be a farmer is passing away. Farmers are "looking over the fence" more than ever before; they observe, and imitate when it seems desirable. This awakening of thought has developed into the establishment of various agricultural schools, many of which have been unsuccessful, and for various reasons. Too much was expected of them; the teachers were not trained to their work, and the pupils, in many cases, have been educated away from the farm. The love for farming and farm life must be developed in the child. The home teachings mainly shape the farmer boy's future. Object lessons, instead of book lessons, must interest and instruct the young—and the farm with all its plants and animals offers the very best opportunities for the training of the powers of observation. Study nature and refer to books, and not study books and afterwards refer to nature.

The great lack in the farmer's education is system and balance. In no occupation is there greater demand for independent thought and accurate judgment. To obtain these he must read the best agricultural papers, establish and attend farmers' clubs, take part in the [illegible] possible meet his fellow farmers, that by so doing he may increase his knowledge.

There is much work for agriculture to be done in the common school. The apparatus required is simple and cheap, and plants, etc, are always at hand. A text-book of the rudiments of farming could be put into every common school with great advantage to every child, and as Professor Johnson remarked, we should then have "more brotherhood and less dish-water in our schools." Scientific methods should be cultivated in youth; the method is as valuable as the facts.

The only reason for this lack of agricultural instruction is the indifference of the people. Boards of Education and Boards of Agriculture should put their heads together and help to bring in this new dispensation. The village and city school should share in this work; the whole system leading up to the Agricultural College, where the highest and most thorough education can be obtained. As a stimulus and an aid in bringing about this system in agricultural education, schools of a few months' duration, in the winter season it may be, might be held at various points in the State. The nation is safest only when the youth are educated thoroughly—and agriculture is on a sound basis only when the boys, and girls too, are instructed in the elements of farming. American Agriculturist.

WATERING PLANTS AND TREES.—Speaking of watering shrubs and trees, the Gardener's Chronicle says: "It is the incessant dribbles that do the harm, for it frequently happens that the top soil looks sodden when the portion about the roots is almost dust dry." This remark is worthy of being recorded, although the season for outdoor watering has passed. But it will apply well to house plants, which must receive an artificial supply of water the year through. Their treatment, however, is generally well understood. It is more frequent that outdoor watering is wrongly performed, and very often the watering does more harm than good. Some years ago an experiment was made on a row of newly-set cherry trees in a dry season. A portion was occasionally watered; in another portion it was omitted; a third was mulched. The watering soaked the surface, which was afterward baked into a hard crust, excluding from the soil below all subsequent waterings, and preventing the benefit derived from a mellow surface. Most of these watered cherry trees died the same summer. Nearly all the unwatered ones lived; but they did not have a vigorous, healthy appearance. The trees which were mulched several inches deep with old hay, as soon as the hot weather of summer came, all lived, and the leaves had a green, healthy appearance. This contrast might not occur in moist seasons. In hot, dry weather, nothing is more important for newly-set cherry trees than mulching. It appears to be less important for other trees, for which a clean, mellow surface for several feet appears to be the best. We have recommended on former occasions, when watering became necessary, the removal of the soil from the surface down to the roots, then pouring in the water copiously and replacing the earth. But unless this operation is repeated often enough to keep the soil about the roots constantly moist, it will be of little service. The greatest amount of water is taken up by plants and trees in a thrifty, growing condition, with plenty of leaves; but these plants have already thrown out roots far enough to obtain the needed supply, provided the soil has been kept loose and mellow, and grass and weeds have not been permitted to pump the moisture from the earth below.—Country Gentleman.

OUR VANISHING FORESTS.—The American people boast of their quickness to profit by the logic of events, but in respect to many things in the line of the general duty of society, they are as slow to learn as was the ancient ruler of Egypt, who resisted a number of very convincing arguments with which the Lord had entrusted Moses. There can be no doubt, in the light of events, that the greed of man, and not the unkindness of nature, must be held responsible for the increasing frequency of droughts in this country. By such an extensive denudation of our forest-lands as is now being practiced, we are seriously disarranging nature's economy and interfering with the conditions that are essential to her healthy processes. It is a generally understood fact, upon which scientific men have now no monopoly, that the increase of drought is, in the long run, in direct ratio to the destruction of the forests and general tree supply. A statistician, who claims to have made accurate calculation, declares that the pine forests of Michigan will be exhausted in thirteen years, and those of Wisconsin and Minnesota in thirty or forty years. There is little reason to doubt the approximate accuracy of this estimate. Twenty years ago this region had scarcely been touched by the ax. The disappearance of forests will make the economy of wood a matter of duty, could a generation habitually thoughtless of its descendants be influenced by such a remote axiom. We are a little too much inclined to regard the claims of our descendants as did the miserly humorist, who, when asked to do something which insured, to the good of after ages, asked why he should be called upon to do anything for posterity, since posterity had never done anything for him. Wood must always enter more or less into building enterprises. If for no other purpose, our forests should be spared from wanton destruction. If we can economize them by using the more substantial building materials with which nature has so lavishly supplied us, and at the same time save moisture for the parched country and add safety, beauty and durability to our cities and villages, it is certainly worth our while to make the effort.—New York Shipping List.

YIELD OF CORN. The average yield of corn, says the New York Times, is less than one-half of the possible yield. When one thinks how little the second half of one hundred bushels of corn costs per acre, the profit of growing such a crop becomes apparent, and it is easy to produce such a yield. One wants the right kind of corn, good land, and a little extra work in cultivation. The cost of the land and of planting and tending the crop is the same for twenty bushels as for one hundred bushels per acre.

Wood ashes makes an excellent fertilizer for pear trees. Mixed coal and wood ashes may also be applied with advantage. For fruit trees of all kinds, ground bones are better than fermenting manure.

Household.

KEEPING THE STOVE IN ORDER.—Don't take the mica from the stove in order to clean it, and don't wait till the fire burns low to do so. Take a little vinegar and water and wash the mica carefully with a soft cloth; the acid re- [illegible] taken to thoroughly clean the corners and to wipe them dry the mica will look as good as new. If the stove is very hot tie the cloth to a stick, and so escape the danger of burning your hand. It is a great care to see that stoves are kept in proper order, and not many servants can be trusted to do it as it should be done. The task might be made somewhat easier by choosing stoves which are not too highly ornamented; unless the trimmings are kept absolutely spotless and bright, which is a very difficult thing to accomplish, they can not lay the least claim to being ornamental; indeed, a stove which by reason of its excessive decoration is rendered the most prominent feature of the room, demanding the attention the moment one enters, is certainly in bad taste. A clean, well-polished stove, with graceful shape, which fulfills the end of its being by heating the house, is all that a stove should be. The fire may be, as it has been, called the soul of the room, but it ought not to ask too much attention to its body.

BREAD-MAKING IN WINTER.—Housekeepers sometimes object to the use of the dry yeast-cakes purchased at groceries, because bread made with them is so slow to rise, especially in winter. I like to use these cakes in hot weather on that very account. The bread sponge never sours on the hottest nights. But in winter it is advisable to set a small sponge in the afternoon about four o'clock—in this way: A scant pint of flour is mixed with a pint and a half of warm water. To this add a cake of yeast previously soaked in a little warm water taking care not to scald the yeast, and beat all well together. By seven o'clock this, if kept covered in a warm place near the stove, will be very light. Now set your bread sponge as usual, using this smaller sponge for your yeast. Cover warm, and in the morning you will be almost sure to find it very light and entirely sweet. Now, if you have a good deal to attend to, you can defer kneading the dough until after breakfast; provided you stir in considerable flour and mix it thoroughly with the spoon. American Agriculturist.

HEATING MILK IN WINTER.—The Lewiston Journal speaks emphatically on this subject. It says:

"Heating the milk of small dairies in winter is very necessary where the temperature of the milk-room is much below sixty degrees, for thin bodies of milk will raise very little cream with the temperature at fifty degrees or below. Heating the milk to one hundred and thirty or one hundred and forty degrees will cause nearly all the cream to rise while the temperature is falling to fifty degrees. Cream rises faster while the temperature of the milk is falling. If heated milk is set six to ten inches deep, in a room at a temperature of forty-five to fifty degrees, it will take several hours for the temperature of the milk to fall ninety degrees, and the cream will principally rise during this time.

PINEAPPLE CRACKER PUDDING.—We take the following from an exchange: "Roll enough crackers to make two teacupsful of fine crumbs. Melt half a teacupful of butter, mix with the crumbs thoroughly. Slice thin two pineapples. Butter a pudding dish and put in crackers, and the sugared slices in layers. The crackers should make the last layer. Pour over half a teacupful of water, cover with a dish and bake slowly one hour and a half. Remove the cover just before it is done and brown the top.

ERASIVE SOAP.—The Manufacturers' Journal gives an excellent recipe for making genuine erasive soap that will remove grease and stains from clothing. Dissolve two pounds of good castile soap and half a pound of pearl-ash in half a pint of hot water. Cut the soap in thin slices, boil it with the pearl-ash until it is thick enough to mould in cakes. Add alcohol, half an ounce; hartshorn, half an ounce. Color with half an ounce of pulverized charcoal.

CITRON PRESERVES.—Peel and cut the citron into pieces one inch square; boil in water until the fruit is easily pierced with a spike of broom-corn; then drain and weigh the citron. To every five pounds add five pounds of sugar, one pound of raisins, one lemon sliced thin, half an ounce of whole cloves and one ounce of stick cinnamon. Dissolve the sugar in a part of the water drained off the fruit, and when hot add the citron and spices, and simmer slowly two hours.

TO LOOSEN A GLASS STOPPER.—When the stopper of a glass bottle or decanter becomes set or too tight to be removed by ordinary means, wind a cloth wet with hot water around the neck, which will cause the glass to expand, when the stopper can easily be taken out. Or, wind a string twice around the neck and then pull it rapidly back and forward so as to heat the glass by friction.

LITTLE RED ANTS.—A correspondent writes: "I have found by experience that little red ants cannot travel over wool or rag carpet. I covered my floor with coarse baize, set my safe on that, and have not been troubled since. Cover a shelf in your closet or pantry with flannel, set whatever you wish to keep from the ants on it, and they will at once disappear. I have tried it."

Household decorators are invited to listen to the following hint from the columns of the American Cultivator:

"There is nothing that looks so pretty in the shops and so ugly on the walls as a paper in which there is a great deal of gilt. It kills every bright color in the furniture, spoils all the pictures, and belittles statuettes and china. Nothing but a gorgeous Japanese fan will tone it down, and half-time fire tires of Japanese fans.

BAKED BANANAS. Take ripe, firm bananas, with the skins on, and put them in a hot oven for fifteen minutes; serve hot. They will be found a delightful vegetable, and far more digestible than when eaten raw.—Cultivator.

BAKED TOMATOES. Scald, peel, and slice them. Take out the seeds, then put them into a deep dish, in alternate layers of bread crumbs, nearly as much crumbs as tomatoes, and some butter. Season with pepper and salt. Serve hot.

TO PRESERVE EGGS. Make a solution of lime in rain water, and allow the eggs to remain in it for several days. The lime will form a coating over the shells and in the pores. Pack the eggs thus prepared in sawdust or chopped straw.

Scientific.

—On the tomb of Rameses, at Thebes, a plant is represented which has hitherto been regarded as the Hedera, or common European ivy, notwithstanding the fact that the ivy is not a native of Egypt and there is scarcely a probability that [illegible] had a knowledge of the plant. Plutarch refers to it as really having been cultivated there, and calls it Chenosiris, or the plant of Osiris; but it is by no means certain that Plutarch correctly identified the plant. Lady Wilkinson is editing materials collected by Sir Gardner Wilkinson in Egypt, and she is strongly of opinion that the plant of Rameses's tomb, is one closely allied to a well-known plant of American gardens—the "Grecian Silk-vine," or Periploca Graeca, and known botanically as Periploca Secamone. This plant seems to have been one of uncommon interest to the Egyptians; at least, Lady Wilkinson says it is to the Arabs of the present day, and doubtless was to the ancient proprietors of the soil. By the Arabs it is known as Ghulga, and they mash the leaves and stems between stones, and then use the pounded mass for tanning. The skins are put into salt and flour for three days, and cleaned from fat and all impurities. The bruised Ghula is then mixed with water and applied to the inner surface of the skin, and in less than twenty-four hours all the hair falls off. The rapidity with which this asclepiadaceous plant does the work is astonishing, and suggests the idea whether some of its near relatives, natives of our own country, may not have similar useful properties.—N. Y. Independent.

—Dr. Arthur Mitchell, discussing the nature of civilization in his work on "Past and Present," represents that the prevalence of primitive customs and the use of primitive implements, do not necessarily imply a low grade of civilization and intelligence. The spindle and whorl are still used in districts enjoying civilization, and are not likely to be supplanted by other apparatus so long as with them, spinning can be combined with an out-of-doors occupation; and netting and knitting by hand will continue while they afford profitable occupation for the long hours of a winter's evening; and the people who engage in these occupations may have quite as much intellectual development as those who rely on machinery when it "pays best." Dr. Mitchell believes that in dealing with the human race, as a whole, there never was a time when states both of high and of low civilization may not have existed, and when there may not have been in society persons potentially as good—exhibiting as high a capacity—as any among those who now go to make up mankind.

A new skating surface, called "crystal ice," has been invented by Dr. Calantarients, of Scarborough, England. Considering that, after all, ice is merely a crystalline substance, and that there is no lack of substances that are crystalline at ordinary temperatures, Dr. Calantarients experimented with a variety of salts, and after a time succeeded in making a mixture consisting mainly of carbonate and sulphate of soda, which, laid as a floor by his plan, can be skated on with ordinary ice skates. It has a surface resistance just equal to that of ice, and looks like ice. An experimental floor has been laid with it, and has proved very successful. The surface, when it has been roughened up, as happens to it the same as with ice floors, can be made smooth again with a steaming apparatus, and the floor when once laid, will last for many years. It is interesting to observe that the mixture of salts used, contains about sixty per cent. of water of crystallization, so that, after all, the floor consists chiefly of solidified water.—New York Christian Advocate.

—We have noticed the theory of M. Delauney, that earthquakes are the result of disturbances produced at the time of planetary conjunctions. Two other theories of earthquakes have recently been proposed. Prof. R. Falb believes that they are due to subterranean volcanic outbreaks, produced by coolings of the liquid interior of the earth in conjunction with the attraction of the sun and moon. Dr. Novak suggests that the earth may have other motions in space besides those of its diurnal and annual revolutions, in consequence of which its axis and equator shift their position, causing a variation of the forces influencing its form, to which it has to adapt itself. All of these theories, it will be observed, admit cosmical influences.

THE SPECTRA OF METALLIC ALLOYS. Serious doubt has been thrown by recent experiments upon the supposed infallibility of the spectroscope in indicating the presence of both metals in an alloy subjected to it. It appears that the differences between the spectra which are obtained from a double metal are often so slight as to be indeterminable, and when the two metals in the alloy are near akin in their constitution, the spectrum variation is really inappreciable. In an alloy of gold with copper, the latter metal say four-fifths of the mass, the gold lines are hardly visible. In pure metals the spectrum is sensitive enough and reliable; but this defect of the prism in cases of alloys is something for which scientists have not yet accounted, and which, indeed, they have hardly suspected.

IRON IN THE ARCTIC SNOWS. Fine spicules of iron have been found in snows collected on the summits of the mountains in arctic regions, where no blast-furnace or factory is found to account for their presence. Some physicists seize upon this fact to frame a theory for the origin of the auroral light. They suppose that these iron particles are drawn from the solar regions by the earth's magnetic attraction, and moving with the velocity of the earth, and ignited in its atmosphere and produce the auroral phenomena. To our own mind, the hypothesis is far less reasonable than that of streams of electricity flowing from the equatorial atmospheric heights in curved currents to the magnetic poles of the earth.

—The American Water-Color Society just held its fourteenth exhibition. The exhibition was successful and satisfactory. About eight hundred works appeared on the walls, the most of which were meritorious. Their noticeable characteristics were fidelity to nature and avoidance of conventionalism. An increasing majority of the members show a preference for transparent colors over what are called opaque body colors. The Society has been developed from "The Society for the Promotion of Painting in Water-Colors in the City of New York," which was founded about thirty years ago, and eight of whose original members are living to observe the progress which their art has since made.

Much success has been attained by the audiphone, in making deaf persons hear. Experiments are now to be made with a class of deaf mutes to determine whether such unfortunates can be taught to speak by the use of this instrument. This result is strongly indicated by results obtained thus far.

EDUCATIONAL.

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE,

ABINGDON, VA.

In point of grounds, buildings, apparatus and faculty, this is one of the most thoroughly equipped schools in the South. It is located in one of the finest sections of Virginia, 2,000 feet above the sea.

Bishop McTyeire, Dr. Garland, Dr. Summers and others have given it their cordial endorsement.

Music is a specialty. The director of this department, Prof. V. Knerlinger, is a noted teacher and composer, and his assistants are thoroughly cultivated musical artists.

A full course of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Natural Science, and Mental and Moral Philosophy is taught with great care.

The care is good, and every care is taken of the health of the young ladies.

Parents living in the South would do well to send their daughters here to spend the summer.

$200 paid in advance will cover board, tuition, fuel, washing and lights for forty weeks. Music is $50 additional.

Spring session begins February 4, 1881. A discount of twenty per cent. to Methodist preachers, and Publishing House hands taken from them at par.

Send for catalogue to

REV. E. E. ROSS, President.

HAMBURG (ARK.) HIGH SCHOOL,

Thirty Miles North of Ilastrop, La.

This institution, for both sexes, now in its fourth year, has 64 months yet remaining. Its facilities for educating are peculiar, and its charges are most easy. All modern improvements introduced. Faculty full and experienced. The principal boards his teachers and pupils, regarding the latter as his own children.

One hundred and twenty-five dollars will cover all school expenses, except Music.

Fifty together are referred to Judge R. B. Todd, J. M. Hamer and J. M. Lewis, Esqs.; to Rev. Dr. C. W. Carter and Bishop Keener.

Jannary 6, 1881. D. C. H. CONNERLY, Principal.

READVILLA SEMINARY,

BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA.

A home school for girls. Thorough training in all departments. Full corps of efficient Teachers. Expenses moderate. Numbers limited.

For particulars address

MRS. MARY W. REED, Principal.

Memphis Conference Female Institute,

JACKSON, TENNESSEE.

REV. A. W. JONES, A. M., D. D., President.

This well known College of the South and West begins its Fall session the First Monday in September. Opening Concert and Address Tuesday, September 7, 1880. For thirty-six years there has been an average of more than twelve graduates annually.

The Faculty is full and efficient. The determination is to stand among the foremost in the progress of Science, Language and Art.

For further information apply to the President.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE,

AT BATON ROUGE, LA.

The next session of this school will begin September 29, 1880.

This is a family Boarding School for boys. The healthfulness of the location is unsurpassed. Instruction thorough in all that is necessary to prepare the student for any grade in college or any pursuit in life. Discipline paternal. The constant personal care of the principal is given to the health, morals and manners of the pupils.

For circulars, with necessary information, apply to

W. H. N. MAGRUDER, Baton Rouge, La.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,

JACKSON, LOUISIANA.

Opens September 6, 1880. The last session was the most prosperous one since the war. The whole cost of board and tuition need not exceed $144 in 105 Preparatory Department, nor $164 in College classes for the scholastic year. Send for a Catalogue.

C. G. ANDREWS, President.

East Mississippi Female College,

MERIDIAN, MISSISSIPPI.

REV. J. W. ADKISSON, A. M., PRESIDENT.

A chartered and prosperous Southern school for girls and young ladies. Few schools have grown more steadily and rapidly in public confidence and patronage. Increased in numbers during the past seven years as the following figures, 5, 6, 2, 8, 6, 9, 4, 9, 6, 9, 7, 14, 3. Commanded patronage the last year from Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee and Alabama. Its past history, increasing facilities, accessibility and methods of close and thorough instruction assure its friends of a long and prosperous future for the institution. Send for catalogue.

HIWASSEE COLEGE,

EAST TENNESSEE,

Founded 1849, and located where

Pure waters flow,
Sleek cattle low,
Cool breezes blow,
Ripe apples grow.

Excellent and tried teachers. Terms very favorable. The Female Department is at SWEETWATER, on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad. The Male Department, at HIWASSEE COLLEGE POSTOFFICE, seven miles out in the country. A neat monthly paper, the "Hiwassee College Reporter," at fifty cents a year. Address

J. H. BRUNNER, President.

JEFFERSON COLLEGE,

HIGH SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND YOUNG MEN.

Six miles from Natchez, Miss. Session begins September 16. Full corps of instructors. Course of study thorough and extensive. Nearly fifty boarders from abroad. Pupils from a distance board with the principal. Entire expense for ten months, $145. For catalogues address the principal,

J. S. RAYMOND, Washington, Adams county, Miss.

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE,

SUMMERFIELD, ALA.,

Will begin its forty-first session October 4, 1880. Great attention paid to the regular course. Teachers in the Music and Art departments selected with reference to special duties. Charges moderate. For further information address,

H. M. MOSS, A. M., President.

HOMER MALE COLLEGE

THE TWENTY-FIRST SESSION

will begin the

FIRST OF SEPTEMBER 1880.

Address R. A. SMITH, President.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Crescent Insurance Co.,

67 & 69 Camp Street,

NEW ORLEANS.

ORGANIZED 1849. REORGANIZED 1880.

Cash Capital $100,000.

SOLICITS

FIRE, RIVER AND MARINE RISKS.

W. R. LYMAN.....President.
S. H. NEWMAN.....Vice President.
CHAS. E. RICE.....Secretary.

SPORTSMEN'S DEPOT,

RICHARD RHODES,

55 ST. CHARLES STREET.....55

NEW ORLEANS.

Articles for Fishermen of all Kinds.

Rods, Nets, Hooks, Lines, and every desirable article for the Angler, wholesale and retail. Guns imported to order. J. H. Cooper's breech and Muzzle Loading Guns always on hand. All kinds of improved artificial baits. Repairing of Guns carefully done by experienced workmen, and Fishing Rods made to order. Address Postoffice Box 1569.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS.

SIZES AND PRICES.

Diam. of Bell.	Weight with yoke & frame.	Cost of Bell & Hangs.
No. 6,	251lbs.	230 lbs. $ 25 00
No. 6½,	275	140 lbs. 30 00
No. 7,	360	490 lbs. 50 00
No. 8,	534	734 lbs. 75 00
No. 9,	880	925 lbs. 130 00

RUMSEY & CO.,

Seneca Falls, N. Y., U. S. A.

My New Illustrated Price List describing over 100 Gold and Silver Waltham Watches sent for a 3d stamp. It tells how I send watches to all parts of U. S. to be examined before paying any money. Undoubted reference. N. H. White, Jeweler, Newark, N. J.

EDUCATIONAL.

TEACHERS,

SCHOLARS

AND

DEALERS

Are hereby advised that the

Largest Stock and Most

Complete Assortment of

SCHOOL BOOKS

In the South-west is now in stock and ready to fill all orders, large or small at Publishers' prices at

112 CAMP STREET,

NEW ORLEANS.

All the books used in this section supplied at the lowest, and prices guaranteed as low as they can be had elsewhere. Catalogues mailed on application. Also a general line of

School Supplies,

SLATED PAPER,
SLATED CLOTH,
LIQUID SLATING,
BLACKBOARDS,
BLACKBOARD RUBBERS,
CHALK CRAYONS,
MATHEMATICAL INSTRUMENTS,
NUMERICAL FRAMES,
SCHOOL SATCHELS,
BOOK STRAPS,
WRITING PAPER,
DRAWING PAPER,
BLOTTING PAPER,
WRITING BOOKS,
COMPOSITION BOOKS,
SLATES AND PENCILS,
INK, INK STANDS, PENS,
PENHOLDERS, CALL BELLS,

Kindergarten Material,

ETC., ETC.

Send for anything you want or address for prices.

LATHROP & WILKINS,

New Orleans.

In addition to the above we keep a complete line of all the standard religious publications, for pastors, members and Sunday-schools. Prices quoted on application.

South-western Agency for

Readers' and Writers' Economy Co.

LATHROP & WILKINS,

New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD & Co.,

AMERICAN CHINA HOUSE,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

We append a few prices:

The American China Dinner, Breakfast and Tea Set, comprising 160 Pieces, for $12.

A Real French China Dinner Set, 112 Pieces, for $17.

English Stone China Dinner Set, 130 Pieces, for $10.

English Stone China Chamber Set, comprising 10 Pieces, for $2 50.

Decorated Chamber Sets, with different Colored Bands, 10 Pieces, for $2 50.

Glass Goblets, from 60 cents to $1 per dozen.

Particular attention given to Novelties and Specialties pertaining to the House-Furnishing Department. Orders promptly attended to. We have just received a full and complete stock of holiday goods. Call and examine before purchasing.

W. C. SHEPARD & CO

Christian Advocate.

The Religious Care of the Indians.

The Annual Report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, just issued, contains many items of interest as to the religious condition of the tribes cared for by the Government. The whole number of these Indians, exclusive of Alaska, is 240,136, divided into 68 agencies, besides 15,802 other Indians not under the control of agents. During the year 60 boarding and 10 day schools have been in operation, besides those among the five civilized tribes of the Indian Territory. These were attended by over 7,000 children and taught by 338 teachers. This educational work is much limited by inadequate appropriations by the Government. Boarding-schools are needed. Only three new ones were put in operation last year; but 13 are to be opened this year, being the first provision for 8,000 San Carlos Apaches and Western Shoshones and 25,000 Indians at other agencies where day schools have been a failure. At Hampton 66 Indians youths are being instructed, and 96 at Carlisle, Pa.

An interesting table gives the number of church buildings, of missionaries, and of money expended by religious societies for educational and religious purposes among the Indians. From it we learn that there are 71 missionaries besides teachers supported by the Government, and 154 church-buildings, among the five civilized tribes; and among the other tribes 126 missionaries, 138 teachers, 118 church-buildings, 14,781 Indians who can read, and that $91,615 were contributed for religious purposes by religious societies, $46,333 for school purposes (unless these two in part overlap), and $249,297 by the Government for schools. Among the appropriations by societies, we notice Round Valley Agency, $400, by the Methodists; also by the same, Fort Peck, $2,400; Yakama, $1,598. To the Episcopalians are credited Cheyenne River Sioux, $11,372; Ogalala Sioux, $2,250; Rosebud Sioux, $4,681; Yankton Sioux, $18,500; Chippewas, $16,700. The Catholics are credited with $1,864 for the Devil's Lake Agency Sioux and $1,200 for the Standing Rock Sioux. The Congregationalists give $2,800 for the Fort Berthold Indians; $2,379 for the Sisseton Sioux; $637 for the S' Kowsmish Indians, with their proportion of the $1,726 at Hampton institute now under their care. The Presbyterians give $2,168 for the Nez Perces and $1,800 for the Pueblos. The United Presbyterians give $2,297 for the Warm Spring Indians. The Friends, with the Congregationalists and Episcopalians, expend $23,338 on the Santee Sioux. This is pretty much all that is reported, except among the civilized tribes of Indian Territory, New York, Michigan, etc., where there are no agencies.

The following paragraphs from the reports of the agents will be of interest, especially to some missionary boards. The agent of the Colorado River Agency, Arizona, writes that these Indians have made slow progress, and continues:

"Though this reserve is under the control of a religious denomination, nothing has ever been done in the direction of religious teaching, though I believe the Indians would readily accept such instructions."

This agency is assigned to the Reformed (Dutch) Church. From the Pima agency, assigned also to the Reformed Church, the agent writes that an excellent lady in Auburn, N. Y., helps support a Methodist minister, who preaches every Sabbath alternately at different villages. The San Carlos agent, same denomination, says no attention to missionary work had been paid till he arrived, ten weeks before, and began some services himself.

At Round Valley Agency, Cal., under Methodist direction, the agent reports faithful work on the part of a preacher and some revival influence. He is most troubled by loose marriage relations and frequent practical divorces, and says:

"I had thought of uniting them by mutual obligation, after the manner of Father Wilbur, at Yakama Agency, who says that he 'marries them and unmarries them,' as circumstances and their good demand."

At the Las Pinos (Col.) Agency (Episcopalian) the agent regrets that there are no schools and no mission work. This is Ouray's tribe of Utes.

The Devil's Lake (Dakota) agent (Catholic) reports excellent progress in the schools conducted by the Gray Nuns of Montreal.

The Fort Berthold (Dakota) agent (Congregational) reports diligent and successful missionary work. At Lower Brule, Dakota (Episcopal) the mission work is "most satisfactory" and the missionary a native Indian; and a similar prosperous condition is reported at Bisseton Agency, under the same denomination. At Sisseton, Dakota (Congregational), large churches and a satisfactory condition are reported. The agent at Standing Rock, Dakota (Catholic), reports the father, brothers and sisters seeing his missionaries "entirely satisfactory." The Yankton (Dakota) Agency is well supplied by both Episcopalians and Presbyterians.

In Idaho, among the Lemhi Indians (Methodist, 372 in number), "there is not one who can either read or write." Among the Nez Perces (Presbyterian), 1,508 in number, schools are progressing, and "the church membership has increased from 303, at my last report, to 375, a gain of 75 during the year."

In Montana, the Flat Head Agency is under the Catholics, and "wonderful" progress is reported in educating the people, all of whom (1,238) are "professed Catholics," and their district is crowded, and the largest but one in Montana. At the Fort Peck Agency, with 2,250 Indians, the agent writes:

"This agency is under the control of the Methodist Episcopal Church; but that organization has done nothing in the way of missionary work. The Presbyterian Church obtained leave last June to establish a mission here, and appropriated $2,100 to erect buildings and support a missionary the coming year."

In Nebraska, among the Santee Sioux, successful work is reported by the Friends, who have the agency, and the Congregationalists and Episcopalians.

In Nevada, at the Nevada Agency, with 3,000 Indians, all wearing citizen's dress and inclined to civilized industry, the agent says:

"All the Indians of this agency, so far as my observation goes, possess and practice, at the present day, at least, no form of religious worship. They appear to be irreligious in the sense of non-religious. They have learned to some extent the wicked man's profanity, vices, and vulgarity; but not one of them, so far as I know, has learned the pious man's devotion, or cherishes the Christian's hope, or looks up devoutly and trustfully to a Dying Redeemer. This is one of two agencies under the auspices of the Baptists, whose missionary hand, so faithfully extended to others all over the land, in their spiritual want, has never reached these benighted souls. Here is an abounding harvest waiting to be garnered, but an absolute dearth of reapers and sickles."

In Oregon, at the Grand Ronde Agency (Catholic), healthy missionary and school work is reported. From the Klamath Agency (Methodist) Sunday services and slow progress are reported. Among the Siletz Indians, also Methodist, a similar condition is reported. At Umatilla (Catholic) good religious progress is reported. The agent with the Warm Spring Indians (United Presbyterian) writes, August 6th, 1880:

"There has been no missionary here since the first of last October, so that the religious and moral work has been carried on mainly by myself, assisted by my employes. There have been no additions to the church, as no meetings have been held conducted by a duly ordained minister for the purpose of receiving members. Very interesting meetings were held last winter and quite a number professed conversion."

In Utah, among the 350 Uintah Valley Indians (Presbyterian) "no school or mission has been in operation during the last year;" but that is now corrected.

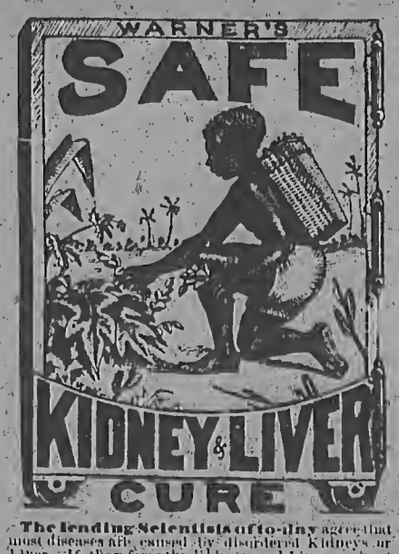
In Washington Territory, at the Colville Agency (Catholic), the Sisters of Charity and the Jesuit Fathers have done very faithful and successful work. Among the Nisqually Indians, where is a Presbyterian mission, "there is much Christian zeal and sincerity among them, more so than in any community of whites of like size in this territory." Of the Quinaielt Indians, the agent says:

"The Methodist Church, to which this agency has been assigned, has never made any effort toward missionary work in any form, and the only contributions made were by the employes for such books as were necessary for Sunday-school purposes."

Among the Tulalip Indians (Catholic) "all schools are kept up, and "about 2,400 of the 2,808 Indians are Catholics, who are very sincere and devout in the discharge of their religious duties." At the Yakama Agency Methodist Father Wilbur reports the building of a large church and "the almost universal acceptance of the truths of the Christian religion."—New York Independent.

Rev. John Summerfield.

The early part of the present century produced many distinguished pulpit orators, whose fame has been enshrined in the traditions of the church. But the memorials they left are few and meagre, and insufficient to enable posterity to review the verdict of their contemporaries. Types may reproduce and perpetuate the substance of a discourse or the statement, the argument the illustrations; but they cannot render the overpowering effect of the delivery any more than a dry skeleton can represent the man clothed with flesh and instinct with life.



Some of their pulpit and platform efforts were influenced in a degree by local circumstances and surroundings, and all were imbued with an inherent force, and pervaded by a subtle aroma which could not be transmitted. Hence, to judge them, we must, in imagination, hear their auditors or derive from the testimony of others the elements of our individual judgments. To aid, however slightly, in doing this, the writer, a contemporary eye-witness and auditor, has ventured to present a few pen sketches of some of them which, while they give his own expressions, may help to represent the feelings of the time.

Among my memories of old-time preaching there are none more vivid and distinct than those which pertain to the subject of this sketch. Charmed by his matchless eloquence and deeply interested in his short and brilliant career, every event connected with him has been recalled, over and over again with mournful interest. Summerfield was a young Methodist divine who entered very early into the ministry. Like Spurgeon, at the beginning of his career he might have been called the "Boy Preacher," as he was only twenty years old when he received ordination. He had preached in England about two years before he came to this country in 1821, and had already achieved a brilliant reputation. The writer first heard him in Philadelphia, in the old St. George Methodist Church, on Fourth street, near Race, in 1822. It was not the practice in those days to advertise popular preachers in the daily papers, but the fact that he was to preach there seemed to be spread by some mysterious communication throughout the religious community. As soon as the doors were opened, the people thronged in, and in a few minutes all the available space, in pews, aisles and galleries, was densely filled. His appearance was very striking, about the medium height, slender and graceful, with dark hair and black, eloquent eyes; and a mien, when in repose, of languor and exhaustion, which showed that the seeds of disease had already been planted in his system. His features were delicate but well defined, and there was an expression of sweetness and purity about the mouth and eyes which gave to his countenance an appearance almost seraphic. There was an unaffected solemnity in his manner, arising, perhaps, from the conscious presence of a disease which placed his life in constant jeopardy and made him feel that as the spider's most attenuated thread, is cord, is able to man's tenure on life." He preached entirely without notes. His sermon was evidently not memorialized, but seemed like the outpouring of an exhaustless fountain of thought and feeling. His quotations, from Scripture were apt and striking, and his illustrations, though highly poetical and imperative, were so restrained and chastened by his native taste and judgment as not to offend the most fastidious. His voice had considerable compass, and was so flexible and sympathetic that, like his conscience, it seemed to express and interpret every passing emotion. His gestures were graceful and appropriate, the spontaneous exponent of present feeling.

I can at this moment distinctly recall his appearance as leaning over the rim of the old-fashioned pulpit he descanted upon the text—"For these things the angels desire to look into;" and almost see, as he used to do, the heavenly of heaven gazing over its celestial battlements, entranced with wonder at the work of man's redemption transpiring upon earth. Though his mind was essentially poetical, his reasoning powers were vigorous and well cultivated, and it the tendency of his preaching did not lead him to abstruse speculations, he was always ready to discuss thoroughly any subject which came within purview of his text. Pathos, however, was his forte, and to this his physical endowments—face, eyes, voice—greatly contributed. The writer well remembers the unconscious tribute he himself once paid to his power as an orator.

The sermon, a most remarkable one, was from the passage, Mark viii. 36; "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" I was fully absorbed in the subject, standing with eyes, ears, and, I suppose, mouth wide open, determined nothing should escape me. When he closed his discourse with one of these wonderful perorations in which the power of his genius was fully displayed, I found myself stretching upward, as if to follow him, and, when the climax was reached, breathing a sigh of relief, as if the pressure of brain and heart was removed, and settling, as it were, down on my feet again; for I had been raised in the excitement of the moment and was apparently standing on tiptoe.—New York Observer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time, and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical fruit of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial Fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for Females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb. As a blood purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

READ ITS RECORD.

"It saved my life."—E. R. Lukely, Solon, Me.

"It is the remedy that will cure the many diseases peculiar to women."—Mothers' Magazine.

"It has passed severe tests and won endorsements from some of the highest medical talent in the country."—New York World.

"No remedy here or elsewhere discovered can be held for one moment in comparison with it."—Rev. C. A. Harris, D.D., Washington, D. C.

This Remedy which has made such wonders, is put up in the EARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine in the market, and is sold by druggists and all dealers at $1.25 per bottle. For Diabetes, ensure for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy.

H. H. WARNER & CO., Rochester, N. Y.

E. HEATH,

IMPORTER AND DEALER IN

Carpets, Floor Oil Cloths,

UPHOLSTERY GOODS, Wall Paper, Window Shades, Cornices, Lace and Nottingham Curtains, Mirrors, Moldings, Chromos, Engravings, etc.

Frames made to order a specialty.

No. 99 Camp street, New Orleans.

All Farmers, Mothers, Business Men, teachers and professional men, who are tired of living a dull, listless life, and all who are miserable with Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sleeplessness, Dumb Chill, Kidney or Liver Complaints, you can be invigorated and cured using

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC

If you are wasting away with Consumption, Debility, Weakness, age, dissipation or any sickness or have pimples, and your blood needs purifying, you will find PARKER'S GINGER TONIC the Best Health & Strength Restorer you can use. Contains no poison or bitters, and other Tonics only build up the system, but never intoxicates. It Has Saved Hundreds of Lives; and May Save Yours.

Buy a genuine bottle and be sure the signature of Hiram Ross & Co., N. Y., is on outside wrapper.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM Restores Dandruff. Elegantly Perfumed. Restores Color. Prevents Baldness.

NO MORE RHEUMATISM OR GOUT
ACUTE OR CHRONIC
SALICYLICA
SURE CURE.

Manufactured only under the sole Trade Mark by the

EUROPEAN MEDICINE CO.,

OF PARIS AND LEIPZIG.

IMMEDIATE RELIEF WARRANTED. PERMANENT CURE GUARANTEED. Now exclusively used by all celebrated Physicians of Europe and America, becoming a Staple, Harmless and Reliable Remedy on both continents. The highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 90 cures out of 100 cases within three days. Secret. The only dissolver of the poisonous Uric Acid which exists in the Blood of Rheumatic and Gouty Patients. $1 a box; 6 boxes for $5. Sent to any address on receipt of price. INDORSED BY PHYSICIANS. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS. Address

DANIEL ROMMEL, Sole Proprietor,
Office: 52 Fulton street, New York.

For sale by L. L. Lyons and E. J. Hart & Co., New Orleans.

BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER.

Has received the greatest number of magistorial, scientific endorsements that any external remedy ever received from physicians, druggists, the press and the public. All praise them as a great improvement on the ordinary porous plasters and all other external remedies.

5000 Physicians and Druggists of good standing voluntarily endorse them as a great improvement on all other plasters.

Sold by all Druggists. Price 25 cents.

BEWARE OF FRAUD.

THE MILD POWER
CURES
Humphreys' Homeopathic Specifics

Proved from ample experience an entire success. Simple, Prompt, Efficient, and Reliable, they are the only medicines adapted to popular use.

LIST PRINCIPAL NOS. CURES	PRICE
1. Fevers, Congestion, Inflammations,	25
2. Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic,	25
3. Crying Colic, or Teething of Infants,	25
4. Diarrhea of Children or Adults,	25
5. Dysentery, Griping, Bilious Colic,	25
6. Cholera Morbus, Vomiting,	25
7. Coughs, Cold, Bronchitis,	25
8. Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache,	25
9. Headaches, Sick Headaches, Vertigo,	25
10. Dyspepsia, Bilious Stomach,	25
11. Suppressed or Painful Periods,	25
12. Whites, too profuse Periods,	25
13. Croup, Cough, Difficult Breathing,	25
14. Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions,	25
15. Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains,	25
16. Fever and Ague, Chill Fever, Ague,	50
17. Piles, Blind or Bleeding,	50
18. Catarrh, acute or chronic, Influenza,	50
20. Whooping Cough, violent, Coughs,	50
24. General Debility, Physical Weakness,	50
27. Kidney Disease,	50
28. Nervous Debility, Spermatorrhea,	1.00
30. Urinary Weakness, Wetting the Bed,	50
32. Disease of the Heart, Palpitation,	1.00

For sale by druggists, or sent by the Case, or single Vial, free of charge, on receipt of price. Send for Dr. Humphreys' Book on Disease, &c., (144 pages), also Illustrated Catalogue, FREE.

Address, Humphreys' Homeopathic Med. Co., 109 Fulton St., New York.

MISCELLANEOUS.

25,000 SOLD!

FARMER'S AND MECHANIC'S MANUAL

Edited by GEO. E. WARING, Jr.,
Author of "Elements of Agriculture," "Draining for Profit and for Health," and formerly Agricultural Engineer of Central Park, New York.

500 Octavo Pages—Over 200 Illustrations.

Worth to any Thinking, Working Farmer

$25 per Year.

This book is for the most part a work of facts and figures—assured analysis and demonstrations, about which there can be no dispute. The design was to produce a work of substantial and enduring value, and of universal application and use. This work is offered as containing more that has been proven by long years of actual use to be of value, more that is most necessary for every farmer and mechanic to know, and more of practical novelty, than any other that has ever been presented to the farmers and mechanics of America. It is complete in every particular to which it is possible to such a book to be complete; and, in addition to this, it is unlikely suggestive in many other respects to induce its readers to read more, to think more, to experiment more, and to become more intelligent and more successful in the management of their business as well as really happier and wiser men.

Price, in Extra English Cloth, Gilt Back, Only $3 50.

Sent postpaid on receipt of price. Address

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans, La., or Houston, Tex.

B. T. WALSHE,

SHIRTS,

Winter stock now ready. Prices moderate. Assortment of

MEN'S FURNISHING GOODS

Very Complete.

No. 13 ST. CHARLES STREET, New Orleans.

Country orders carefully and promptly filled C. O. D.

YOUNG MEN'S Christian Association,

OF NEW ORLEANS.

ROOMS, 87 CAMP STREET.

Open from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M., except Sunday, and on Sundays from 2 to 6 P. M., where may be found the leading daily and weekly papers of the most important cities of the United States.

SERVICES.

Tuesday, 7:30 P. M.—Devotional.

Thursday, 7:30 P. M.—Singing Class.

NOON-DAY PRAYER-MEETING.

Daily, 12 to 12:30.

Rule—Prayers and Remarks are limited to three minutes.

FURNITURE

JOHN BOIS,

DEALER IN

Parlor, Bed and Dining Room FURNITURE.

291 Camp St., cor. Calliope, New Orleans.

Repairing, Upholstering, Varnishing, etc., promptly done. Country orders promptly attended to. Spring, Hair and Moss Mattresses made to order. A full line of common Furniture on hand; suitable for the country.

Unequaled Low Rates now Ruling at

JOHN GAUCHE'S

MAMMOTH

QUEENSWARE HOUSE.

We announce to our patrons that we are now offering our celebrated ROYAL SEMI-PORCELAIN DINNER SETS, 100 pieces, for $12.

ENGLISH STONE CHINA DINNER SETS, 124 pieces, $10.

REAL FRENCH CHINA DINNER SETS, 124 pieces, $15.

ENGLISH PRINTED TOILET SETS, $3.50.

ENGLISH CHINA PRINTED DINNER SETS, $20.

ENGLISH CHINA GOLD BAND and FLOWERED TEA SETS, 44 pieces, $5.50.

THE BEST SELECTION OF

CROCKERY

Glassware and Housefurnishing Goods

OF ANY HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

The assortment for both city and country is very large, and the prices are guaranteed as low, if not lower than any establishment North or South.

REMEMBER THE PLACE, 127 18

JOHN CAUCHE,

AT THE MORESQUE BUILDINGS,

109, 111, 113 & 115 Camp Street,

Branch House, Nos. 108 and 110 Chartres Street.

HOLIDAY MUSIC BOOKS.

DITSON & CO. call attention to their elegant and useful music books suitable for presents, and especially to their

VOLUMES OF BOUND SHEET MUSIC.

Prices of each, in cloth, $2.50; Fine Gilt $3.

THE CLUSTER OF GEMS. 43 pieces of high character.

GEMS OF THE DANCE. 78 of the best pieces of new dance music, by the most celebrated composers.

GEMS OF STRAUSS. 80 splendid and brilliant compositions.

PIANOFORTE GEMS. 100 select piano pieces.

HOME CIRCLE. Vol. I. 170 easy pieces for beginners.

HOME CIRCLE. Vol. II. 142 pieces, of which 22 are for 4-hands.

CAROL MUSIC. 2 Vols. 129 easy and popular pieces.

CREME DE LA CR. ME. 2 Vols. 85 select pieces of some difficulty, suited to advanced players.

FOUNTAIN OF GEMS. 97 easy and popular pieces.

WELCOME HOME. 170 easy and popular pieces.

PEARLS OF MELODY. 50 pieces of moderate difficulty.

PIANIST'S ALBUM. 102 pieces. Fine collection.

All the books above named are alike in size, style, binding and price

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston

C. H. DITSON & CO.,

843 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

MISCELLANEOUS.

D. H. HOLMES,

155 Canal Street, - - - 15 Bourbon Street.

Our Stock of Spring Goods is now complete, consisting of the latest novelties in Silks, Laces, Dress Goods in Worsted Fabrics, Black Grenadines in Silk and Wool, Linen Lawns, Organdies and Percales.

HOSIERY in all Styles and Colors. A Complete assortment of MATTINGS.

SAMPLES SENT FREE OF CHARGE.

D. H. HOLMES,
155 Canal Street, New Orleans

WHEELER & PIERSON,

(Successors to Darcy & Wheeler and Pierson & Hewes.)

CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS,

Nos. 13 & 15 CAMP STREET, New Orleans.

Black Cloth Suits, $20 to 40. | Business Suits, $12 to $25
6 Shirts for $9 | Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.

Orders from Clergymen solicited, and liberal reduction made to them.
Rules for self-measurement sent on application, and goods sent C. O. D.
Plantation Clothing for Country Stores at very low prices in our Wholesale Department up stairs.

WASHING

WITHOUT LABOR, BY USING THE

Improved Robbins Family Washer and Bleacher.

THE LATEST AND BEST.

Manufactured under Patent of December 21st, 1880.

The original and only perfect self-operating machine in the world.

No rubbing required. No more yellow clothes, nor hard work in washing day.

It will wash any thing from a lace curtain to a horse blanket.

It reduces the labor so that a mere child can do an ordinary washing.

It will do work quicker and better than can be done in any other way.

It will not wear or injure the most delicate fabric, good soap and soft water only being used.

It is perfectly simple in its principle, and cannot wear out or get out of order.

Will save 50,000 of the Original Robbins Washers, in successful operation which confidently recommend the Improved washer, which will work in any round or flat bottomed boiler or iron pot, as perfect in every respect.

Send for descriptive circulars.

"The best we have ever known, we speak from experience."—Ladies' Companion.

"The Robbins Family Washer and Bleacher is as represented."—N. Y. Weekly Sun.

"We have no hesitancy in recommending it to the attention of our Lady readers."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"We would pay many times the price asked rather than do without one."—Farm & Fireside.

We send sample No. 4 Washer prepaid to your nearest railway express office in any part of the United States east of the Rocky Mountains for $3.50.

As to the reliability of this company we refer you to the Mercantile National Bank of New York, or any express company in New York.

In ordering, write plainly your name, post office, county and State. Also the name of the express office to which you wish the washer forwarded.

CASH MUST ACCOMPANY ALL ORDERS.

Remit by Post Office order, registered letter or draft on New York.

Beware of cheap sheet metal imitations. All other similar articles are infringements, and will be prosecuted.

Good Agents wanted, both Male and Female.

Send for sample and secure a business that will pay you well.

When you order or write please mention this paper. Address,

BISSELL MANUFACTURING Co., 50 Barclay St., New York.

CATARRH

Is a Terrible Disease. Its fearful effects—corruption running down the throat, weak eyes, deafness, loss of voice, loss of smell, disgusting odors, nasal deformities, and finally consumption. From first to last it is ever aggressive. Ordinary treatments are worse than useless. If neglected while cure is possible, it may rapidly develop into quick consumption! The most thorough, successful and pleasant treatment is

Dr. M. W. CASE'S CARBOLATE of TAR INHALANT

FOR CATARRH, ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION, Bronchitis & Deafness.

It does not require ten minutes to demonstrate the value of Carbolate of Tar, the most healing remedial agent known to science. Balsams and Cordials of the most healing and soothing properties are so combined with Pine Tree Tar, that the mere breathing converts them into a dense smoke or vapor. This is inhaled—takes right to the diseased parts. No heat, no hot water, simply inhaling or breathing it, and you feel its healing power at once. This treatment is endorsed by physicians everywhere, and highly recommended by thousands, who have used it with perfect satisfaction. FULL TREATMENT—Circulars, etc., Sent Free—Sent. Satisfaction Always Guaranteed. Address, DR. M. W. CASE, 933 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

H-O-W T-O P-A-I-N-T.

A new work by a Practical Painter, designed for the use of tradesmen, Merchants, Mechanics, Farmers, and as a Guide to Professional Painters. Containing a plain common sense statement of the methods employed by painters to produce satisfactory results in plain and fancy painting of every description, including formulas for mixing paints in oil or water, tools required, etc. This is just the book needed by every person having anything to paint, and makes

Every Man His Own Painter.

Full directions for using white lead, lamp black, green, yellow, vermillion, brown, whiting, glue, pumicestone, asphaltum and spirits of turpentine, oils, varnishes, varnishing furniture, milk paint, preparing kalsomine—

Paint for Out-Buildings,

—Whitewash, paste for paper-hanging, hanging paper, graining in oak, maple, rosewood, black walnut, imitating mahogany, making rustic pictures, painting flower stands, mahogany polish, rosewood polish, varnishing furniture waxing furniture, cleaning paint—

Paint for Farming Tools,

and for machinery, and household fixtures.

To Paint a Farm Wagon,

to re-varnish a carriage, to make plaster casts.

The work is neatly printed, with illustrations wherever they can serve to make the subject plainer, and it will save many times its cost yearly. Every family should possess a copy.

Price by mail, post paid, 50.

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans, La., and Houston, Tex.

Good News! Good News!

Mammoth Furniture House

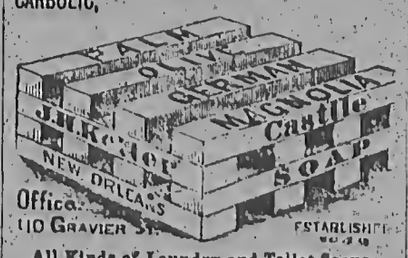
OF

McCRACKEN & BREWSTER,

33 & 35 Royal Street,

Now have the largest stock of Fine and Medium Chamber Sets, Ebony Gilt and Walnut Parlor Sets, Dining Room and Hall Furniture to be found in the South. Also a large and various stock of cheap and durable Furniture suitable for the country trade.

THONET BROS., VIENNA,
BENT WOOD FURNITURE.



Our motto—small profits and quick returns.

McCRACKEN & BREWSTER.

J. H. KELLER,

MANUFACTURER OF

CARBOLIC,

Office: 110 Gravier St. ESTABLISHED

All Kinds of Laundry and Toilet Soaps.

Send for Circular.

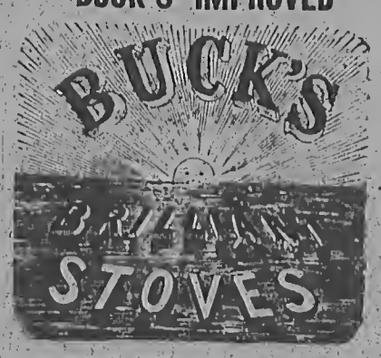
BEST WASHER AND WRINGER

in the World. Guaranteed to do perfect work or money refunded. Warranted for 5 years. Price of Washer, $8. Sample to agents, $3 50. Price of Wringer, $7 50. Sample, $4 25. Circulars free.

ERIE WASHER CO., ERIE, PA.

MENEELY'S BELLS.

For Churches, etc., known to the public since 1826, are made only at "THE MENEELY BELL FOUNDRY." West Troy, N. Y. Catalogues free.



WATCHES.

LADY'S GOLD WATCHES, $30 and upward.
GENT'S GOLD WATCHES, $15 and upward.
GENT'S SILVER WATCHES, $12 and upward.
BOY'S SILVER WATCHES, $12 and upward

All guaranteed.

A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.,
Cor Canal and Royal Sts.

BUCK'S IMPROVED

BRILLIANT STOVE

Is acknowledged to be the

Best Cook-Stove Made,

SOLD BY

H. HALLER,

NEW ORLEANS.

DEALER IN ALL KINDS OF

Cooking and Heating Stoves of the most Improved makes, Stamped, Japan and Japanned Tin-ware, Tinned and Enameled Cloth ware, Iron and Clay Furnaces, Tinner's Stock, Granite Iron-ware, Lamp Burners, and Wick to split, Tinned Iron Spoons Forks, Coffee Mills of all kinds, Planished-ware, Irons, Fire-Grates, Plating Machines, etc.

H. HALLER,
No. 55 Camp St., New Orleans.

Price lists mailed on application.

GRATEFUL. COMFORTING.

EPPS'-COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us, ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk.
Sold only in tins (¼ lb. and ½ lb.) labelled
JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

Also makers of Epps' Chocolate Essence for afternoons.

AGENTS WANTED.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings, with HEEL and TOE complete, in 20 minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 409 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

AGENTS WANTED, to sell Dr. CHASE'S 1000 RECIPE BOOK. Sells at Sight. You double your money. Address Dr. Chase's Printing House, Ann Arbor, Mich.

$777 A YEAR and expenses to agents. Outfit free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

PRICES CURRENT.

REVISED AND CORRECTED WEEKLY.

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
New Orleans, Monday, Feb. 16, 1881.

Our readers should bear in mind that our quotations represent prices for round lots, and that in filling small orders higher prices must be paid.

SOUTHERN STAPLES.

	To-day.	Sat.
Cotton, ₱ lb.
Low ordinary	7	7
Ordinary	8¼	8⅜
Good ordinary	9⅝	9⅝
Low middling	10⅞	10⅞
Middling	11⅛	11⅛
Good middling	12⅜	12⅜
Middling fair	13⅝	13⅝
Sales to-day	9,500 bales.
Receipts since our last	56 240 bales.
Receipts previously	1,260,478 bales.
Sugar, ₱ lb.:
Fair	— —	6¾
Fully fair	— —	6¾
Prime	— —	6⅞
Choice	— —	— —
Yellow clarified	7⅝	7⅞
White clarified	8	8⅛
Powdered	— —	— —
Crushed	— —	— —
Molasses, in bbls., ₱ gallon:
Common	23	25
Fair	33	34
Prime	36	38
Choice	45	46
Rice, Louisiana, ₱ lb.:
Common	4⅝	4⅝
Fair	5⅝	5⅝
Prime	6	6⅛
Choice	—	6⅝
GROCERIES.
Butter, ₱ lb.:
Western	10	25
New York	17	34
Coffee, ₱ lb.:
Rio, ordinary	11	11⅛
Rio, fair	13	13⅜
Rio, prime	14	14⅜
Cheese, ₱ lb.:
Western factory	— —	— —
English dairy	— —	16
Candles, ₱ lb.:
Best brands	— —	12
Corn Meal, ₱ bbl.:
Choice K. D.	— —	2 90
Flour, ₱ bbl.:
Superfine	3 50	3 75
XX	4 25	4 50
XXX	4 75	5 00
Choice XXX	— —	— —
Choice family	— —	— —
Fish:
Mackerel, No. 1, in bbls.	— —	8 00
Half barrels	— —	4 50
Kits	— —	95
Mackerel, No. 2 in bbls.	— —	6 75
Half bbls.	— —	3 50
Kits	— —	85
Mackerel, No. 3, in bbls.	5 50	6 75
Half bbls.	3 00	3 70
Kits	75	— —
Codfish, ₱ lb.	6¼	6
Herring, ₱ box	30	35
Oils, ₱ gallon:
Coal, in cases	25	30
Coal, in bbls	19	22
Linseed, raw	56	58
Linseed, boiled	59	61
Cotton seed	31	40
Lard	73	78
Soap, ₱ box:
Magnolia	— —	1 95
Olive	— —	2 40
Palm	— —	— —
Castile	— —	2 40
Soda, ₱ lb.	— —	— —
Starch, ₱ lb.	— —	3¾
Salt, ₱ sack:
Coarse	1 02½	1 05
Fine	1 40	1 45
GRAIN AND FEED.
Corn, in sacks, ₱ bushel:
Yellow	— —	— —
White	— —	57
Mixed	— —	— —
Oats, ₱ bushel:
Western	— —	44
Red rust-proof	— —	55
Bran, ₱ 100 lbs
Choice	— —	1 25
Hay, ₱ ton:
Prime	22 00	23 00
Choice	24 00	25 00
Cow Peas, ₱ bushel:
Mixed	— —	— —
Clay	— —	1 25
PROVISIONS.
Bacon, ₱ lb.:
Breakfast	9	10
Shoulders	— —	6½
Sides, clear, rib	8¾	8¾
Sides, clear	9	9¼
Hams, sugar-cured	9¾	10¾
Mess Pork, ₱ bbl	14 75	16 00
Dry Salt Meat, ₱ lb.:
Clear rib sides	— —	8
Clear sides	— —	8½
Shoulders	5¾	5¾
Lard, ₱ lb.:
Choice, in kegs	10⅝	10¾
Choice, in tierces	10	10½
ESCULENTS.
Potatoes, ₱ bbl.:
Irish	2 75	3 00
Sweet	— —	— —
Onions, ₱ bbl.	4 50	5 50
Apples, ₱ bbl.	4 00	4 50
Cabbages, ₱ lb	— —	— —
Sour Kraut, ₱ bbl	11 00	12 00
BALING STUFFS.
Bagging, ₱ yard:
India	— —	— —
Jute	— —	— —
Baling Twine, ₱ lb.	— —	17
Ties, ₱ bundle:
30 ties and buckles	— —	1 85
SUNDRIES.
Poultry, ₱ dozen:
Grown chickens	— —	4 50
Young do.	— —	3 00
Ducks	— —	3 00
Geese	— —	5 00
Turkeys	15 00	16 00
Eggs, ₱ dozen:
Western	— —	20
Southern	15	20
Honey:
Strained, ₱ gallon	— —	— —
Comb, ₱ lb	— —	— —
Pecans, ₱ lb.:
Louisiana	— —	10
Texas	8	9
Oranges:
Louisiana, ₱ bbl	— —	— —
Foreign, ₱ box	— —	2 50
Wool, ₱ lb.:
Louisiana	— —	27
Texas	— —	— —
Feathers, ₱ lb.:
Geese	— —	— —
Hides, ₱ lb.:
Country green	— —	6
Dry salted	— —	11
Dry flint	— —	13
Ox Horns, each	— —	6
Tallow, ₱ lb.	6¼	6½
Cotton Seed, ₱ ton:
In sacks	— —	10 00
Meal	— —	23 00
Oil cake	23 50	24 00
Cooperage, ₱ each:
Sugar hogsheads	3 00	3 25
Molasses barrels	1 50	1 55
Half barrels	— —	1 05
Kegs	— —	70
Oak Staves, per 1200:
Kegs	— —	— —
Barrels	— —	— —
Extra clear	90 00	100 00
Extra hogshead	30 00	135 00
Extra pipes	150 00	175 00
Tobacco:
Low lugs	— —	4⅞
Medium	— —	— —
Good to fine	— —	— —
Low leaf	5¾	5¾
Medium	6¾	7
Good	7¾	8
Fine	7¾	8
Selections	10	12

More People Die.

from diseased Kidneys than of consumption, but not one fatal case in a thousand would occur if Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure was taken in time. By all means try it.

A Physician of Great Prominence

In Thirty-sixth street, New York city, was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Paterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

BILOXI, Miss., Feb. 8.—The steamer Josephine, from Havana, broke up this morning at 3 o'clock. The passengers and crew were all saved. After seven hours floating we were picked up by the tugboat Bacon. H. Franko and two of the family lost everything.

PEARLINGTON, Miss., Feb. 8.—There have been no mails to this place since Saturday. The new M. E. Church, about half completed, was blown down on Sunday morning.

Mrs. L. E. Armstrong, an old lady well known, died this morning.

BILOXI, Miss., Feb. 8.—The damage done from the late gale at this point will reach at least ten thousand dollars. All wharves and bath houses completely demolished with one or two exceptions. The storm was one of the severest known since the gale of 1860.

BILOXI, Feb. 8.—The schooner Elmira, this afternoon brought in the passengers and crew of the steamer Josephine, of the Morgan line, from Havana to New Orleans. She foundered this morning about six miles south of Ship Island. The steamer was off South Pass Saturday afternoon. The force of the gale obliged her to put to sea again. She withstood the storm until two o'clock this morning. The fires were then out, the engine stopped, and the ship sinking. The passengers and crew took to the boats and avoided the breakers until daylight, when they were picked up by the tugboat John Bacon, of Mobile. All were saved, but the cargo and baggage were lost. There were thirteen passengers, including seven families. The passengers give unqualified praise to the skill, coolness and courage of Capt. Staples, of the Josephine. All are now comfortably quartered at the Montross House.

MANCHAC, La., Feb. 9.—A terrific storm of wind and rain from the southwest, struck this place this morning, about half-past three o'clock, sweeping away every building in the place, including the depot and telegraph office.

No lives were lost, but the citizens lost everything in the way of household effects, provisions, etc.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The scene in the Capital to-day on the electoral count was grand and imposing. The galleries were filled to overflowing, long before the time. The entrance of the Senate was the signal for the House to rise. Mr. Conkling resorted to the trick of a late entry, and marched up the middle aisle so as to attract attention.

The count proceeded in an orderly manner, and the Vice President did not count the electoral vote. He presided with dignity and special ability.

MACON, Ga., Feb. 10.—The Macon and Augusta Railroad bridge over Ocmulgee River, at this point, was washed away yesterday for the second time within thirty days.

GALVESTON, Feb. 10.—The News' special dispatch from Orange, Texas, says: The steamer Vicksburg was reported wrecked off Sabine Pass, during the storm on Saturday.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—At 8:30 P. M., three spans of the Long Bridge across the Potomac were carried away, and the ice is still running high.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Feb. 14.—Hon. Fernando Wood, a member of congress from New York, died at Hot Springs, at 10 o'clock last night.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 14.—Senator Jones, of Florida, leaves for his home, in Pensacola, to-night, with the remains of his son, William H., seventeen years of age, who died last night.

VICKSBURG, Miss., Feb. 14.—The P. Line barge, Lucy Kerne, left Sunday night for Big Black River, with a lot of bread-stuffs and lumber, to be used in building a bridge over that stream for the Ship Island Railroad Company. Piles for the bridge are all that is required to complete the structure.

Capt. Ed. Outlaw, general freight agent of the Little Rock and Mississippi River railroad, is in this city, en route to New Orleans. He represents that his road will be completed to Little Rock in ten days. It starts from Arkansas City, on the river, and runs through Pine Bluff, and will be a competitor for business going in that territory.

FOREIGN.

PANAMA, Feb. 5.—French engineers have arrived to begin work on the Panama canal, and have taken a cursory look over their field of future operations. Evidently the prospect, at a nearer view, is not so exhilarating as it was made to appear to them in Paris.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The relatives of the late Mr. Carlyle have declined the proposal of Dean Stanley, that Mr. Carlyle's remains be buried in Westminster Abbey, because he had expressed a decided wish to be buried with his wife at Haddington.

DURBAN, Feb. 9.—Gen. Sir Geo. P. Colley's forces yesterday attacked and defeated the Boers between Newcastle and the frontier, at Ingago River. The British loss was one hundred killed and wounded. The officers killed were: MacGregor of the Engineers, Grier of the Artillery, and O'Connell, and Garret, both of the 60th Regiment. The Boers lost heavily.

PANAMA, Feb. 3.—News by the last mail from the south confirms the reports concerning the fall of Lima. The fight began January 13, at 4 A. M., when the Chilians had advanced on the Peruvian position under cover of a dense fog. They advanced in three columns. They first attacked the Peruvian centre with the bayonet, pierced it and turned its disordered fragments back on the right wing, which, after two hours' resistance, was completely routed.

The Peruvian left wing held its ground for some time against the second column, when it retired to the hills above Chorillos, where it made another stand until 4 P. M., and then retired on Miraflores, as it had been outflanked by the third column. At Miraflores were some four thousand of the regular army—remnants of the left wing and six thousand of the reserve, composed of young business men and property owners of Lima. They made a brave stand for five hours, but were overborne by superior numbers and cut to pieces.

Miraflores, as well as Chorillos and Barranco, was devoted to the flames. Pierola, Commander in Chief and President of Peru, was reported to have been in both battles, but could do nothing to withstand the effect of the surprise of the 13th nor the slaughter of the 15th.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The Baroness Burdett-Coutts and Wm. Ashmead Bartlett, were married this morning at Christ Church, in Down street, Piccadilly.

DUBLIN, Feb. 12.—The Nationalist press denounced the arrest of Davitt, but there is a marked moderation in the tone of most of the articles. They advise the Land Leaguers to stand firm and not to leave their country. Flight would, they say, give more satisfaction to the Government than their arrest. Their kindred in America, who have contributed largely toward the Land League funds, will naturally not be pleased at anything like a stampede from Ireland to escape from tyranny.

Beecher and Talmage.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Presbyterian writes:

I had not heard Mr. Beecher for thirteen years, and in the meantime he had culminated to his grandest eloquence and his greatest popularity, and also had had his sad obscuration and bitter tribulation. I was, therefore, anxious to hear him again; and being off duty for one Sunday, I accepted the invitation of a friend, a member of Plymouth Church choir, to go with him in the morning to hear Mr. Beecher, he agreeing to go with me in the evening to hear Dr. Talmage.

Plymouth Church, seating two thousand eight hundred, was, as usual, packed. Mr. Beecher is grayer than when I saw him last, but in other respects seemed but little changed. His voice is still full and clear, and his gesticulation is as emphatic as ever. The language and thought of his prayers were beautiful, but for some reason the prayers themselves did not touch my heart. His text was, "Fervent in spirit," and the "air" of the sermon, separated from the "variations" upon it, was a plea, and a good and strong plea, for enthusiasm in religion. To the "air" there could be no objection, but to some of the "variations" I, for one, had strong objections. I objected to the stale abuse of theology, as one of the hindrances to the progress of religion. I objected to the sneers at and mimicry of doctrinal preaching as the cause of much of the prevalent infidelity. I objected to the slander that all the hatred, bitterness and persecution of the church, by the world during the past eighteen centuries did not equal the hatred, bitterness, and persecution of the church by the church. And I objected to being told that the common definitions of faith from the pulpit were false—that when he was asked to believe what he did not understand he simply answered, "I won't," and that he commanded every other man who gave the same answer—that faith was not belief in the unknown and incomprehensible on divine authority, but was "the expansion, the enlargement, the enlightenment of the reason by a spiritualized imagination." He told us he knew this to be true in his own experience—that when he first stood before the great paintings of the old masters in the Louvre and the Luxembourg his imagination flamed forth, and that under its heat and light his reason expanded, giving him visions of things otherwise impossible to him. No one questions the possibility of such an experience, but in the name of all the heroes and heroines of the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, what has such an experience to do with Bible faith? I was glad to have heard him once more, but I do not even care to hear him again.

Dr. Talmage I had never heard or seen. I was prejudiced against him. I knew he was eccentric. I believed he was sensational and theatrical. I feared he was a mountebank and a fraud. An usher known to my friend gave us two of the best seats in the church, in the sixth row of pews back and directly in front. The church was brilliantly lighted. Every word and whisper, therefore, of the preacher we could distinctly hear, and every look and expression we could distinctly see. The church seats four thousand five hundred, and was crowded even up into the platform, and with many standing round the wall. I was all eye; all ear—alert in body, mind, and soul. If Dr. Talmage was a mountebank and a fraud I wished to know it. If he was an earnest, honest and sincere, but very eccentric man, I wished to know it. His Bible reading was good, his hymns were good, his prayers were good. Now for the sermon. He got up, shambled forward, and stood some time fumbling aimlessly with his hands, and looking up and around as if about to say something to the sexton touching the ventilation of the church. He had no Bible before him nor in his hands. But suddenly and unexpectedly (to me,) while thus fumbling with his hands and looking around, he thundered out his text, "Hebrews, twelfth, second: 'Looking unto Jesus,'" and plunged (figuratively and almost literally) heels over head into his sermon. I was startled, but interested. His grimaces were both painful and ludicrous. His antics, at times, were those of a gigantic monkey. His gestures were awkward, aimless and extravagant. His voice was horrible—the horrible blare of a twisted, dented, smashed big tin trumpet. And yet—and yet he held that audience in breathless attention from the beginning to the end, and at times moved it to tears. I was fascinated, entranced. He took me out of myself, lifted me up, carried me to the cross, and left me melted at the feet of Jesus. I could have listened to him as long as he chose to go on preaching. He made a fool of himself twenty times, but I didn't care nor think any the less of him. And I went out of the house thanking God that there was in Brooklyn, a man who could preach and hold such audiences while he preached to them Jesus Christ and him crucified; and saying to myself: "Mr. Talmage, I understand you now, and can explain you. You are not a mountebank and a fraud. You are honest, sincere and in earnest. You are as natural as a child. But you are eccentric to the very edge of craziness. Your centre of gravity is so near being outside of you, that you cannot be judged in all respects as we judge others. You do wrong sometimes, but you do not mean it. And God uses you to preach his gospel to thousands, who would not go to hear it from the lips of decorous, graceful, logical, level-headed men." These were my conclusions, and on comparing them with my friend's I found that his were essentially the same.

THE LANGUAGES IN INDIA.—The number of spoken languages in India is said to be two hundred and forty-three, and including dialects five hundred and forty-nine. Translations of the Bible, or part of it, exist in about seventy or eighty of these languages and dialects, but those who have a Christian literature are much fewer. Some half a dozen of the leading tongues—Urdu, Hindee, Bengali, Mahrati, Tamil and Telugu—possess a number of Christian volumes of all sorts, the result of half a century or more of labor, but the rest are very destitute, and a most formidable undertaking it will be to make them anything else. The English language ought to be simplified and then made the one medium of communication in all the East. The rapidity with which its use is growing in India, under the present system of education in that tongue in both Government and mission schools, is almost startling. In the last twenty-two years the Madras University alone, has examined about 25,000 candidates for the matriculation examination, all of them possessing a fair knowledge of English. As many as eight thousand or ten thousand candidates go up now annually for this examination in the three great universities of India, and English is the chief language used. This stream of influence year by year is telling very strongly upon the country, more so than many suspect. The Indian Mirror, a native paper, said the other day: "Foreigners can hardly realize the extent to which the English language is spoken and written among the educated classes in India, almost superseding in some instances the use of the vernaculars. When educated Hindoos meet they talk English; when they write letters to each other, they show a decided preference to English."

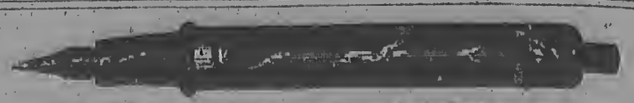
DOMESTIC MONEY ORDERS.—The money order system continues to grow in popular favor, its operations having been increased from a little over $1,000,000 in 1865 to more than $100,000,000 in the past year. At the present rate of charges the business has been conducted during the past five years with no cost to the Government. The fees have covered the expenses, with a slight margin of profit. The system is so near absolute perfection that losses to the senders or payers of money orders are only possible through their own negligence. It is believed that this voluminous exchange has interfered very little, if at all, with the banking operations of the country. Most of the 3,829 money order offices are at points where there are neither banks nor bankers, and the sums transmitted are mostly too small to justify the use of bills and drafts. It appears from a report of the Money Order system, hereto appended, that fully one-half of the orders issued are for sums less than $5. How to transmit these trifling amounts with reasonable security, and at the same time with the least possible trouble and expense to the public, has been a problem both in this Department and in the British General Post-Office. While our fractional currency was in circulation it supplied a tolerably convenient medium for the small exchanges of the country, but coin is particularly unfit for transmission through the mails. Recent legislation in Parliament has provided for a postal note for sums less than one pound sterling. Before adopting this plan in the United States, it will be well to observe its workings long enough to discover latent defects, if any such there shall prove to be. Meantime the Superintendent suggests a scheme which seems to me entirely feasible, and which is commended to the attention of Congress. Briefly stated his plan is to reduce the fees for money orders not exceeding five dollars to five cents, and to extend the maximum limit of an order from five to one hundred dollars, so that the increased commission received for large orders may offset the loss resulting from the reduced fee for small orders. Report of Postmaster-General.

THE PETITE ANSE SALT MINES.—The Galveston, (Texas,) Journal of Commerce, has the following to say about the American Salt Company:

This is another one of the growing institutions of Galveston, with Mr. Gustave Ranger, as President, and a paid up capital of $500,000. This great salt mine is situated at the mountainous island of the Petite Anse, parish of Iberia, in Southwestern Louisiana.

The company have for some time past been taking out a fair quantity of rock-salt, and with the improved machinery soon to be in working order, will increase the daily capacity to three thousand sacks. The salt is beyond any point of controversy the best in the world. As to purity, no other salt mine in the world can compare with it. As a preserver of meat, and dairy productions, it has no equal. Up to this date about forty thousand sacks have been received here in Galveston. Arrangements are now being made to construct a warehouse near the wharf and water-front, of a capacity for storing eighty thousand sacks. A railway track will also pass on the south side of the building, so that cars can be loaded at a trifling expense. The dredging fleet of George Forbes & Co., of Baltimore, have, since October 1st, been cutting a canal eight feet deep from Vermilion Bay to the wharf of the salt company, located at the mine. When this is completed, the steamboat now used to lighter the salt will be dispensed with, and vessels of eight feet draft, will receive their cargo at the works. This canal will be completed within the next few weeks. The salt already finds a quick sale all along shore, from Mobile to the mouth of the Rio Grande. It is unquestionably destined to erect Galveston into the largest, as well as the cheapest and best salt market in the United States.

THE SITE OF THE OBELISK.—The obelisk is on its pedestal, but not yet ready for the public inauguration. Commander Gorringe, proposes to cut away the hill down to the primeval rock on which the foundations are built, thus getting a level space between the obelisk and the East Side Dive, so near the Metropolitan Museum of Art, that it may be viewed as a monument at the gate of a temple. The surface below the base of the obelisk will be paved with marble in mosaics and about a hundred and fifty spinter feet surrounding buried in. The fence is to be of copper, cast in either lotos leaf or papyrus designs, and to be as high as a man's breast, so that all may look over it, but none get in to destroy. Two of the crabs that once supported the obelisk are to have a place on the pavement in the enclosure, where the public may see them. The obelisk is watched by Park police officers, night and day, to guard against the hammers of relic-hunters who might deface the stone.—New York Observer.



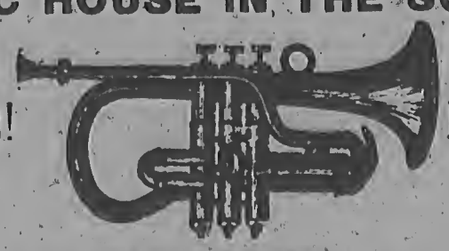
A Chattanooga special, Feb. 4, to the Louisville Courier-Journal, says:

A special to the Chattanooga Times says: On Thursday last, at Mountain Home, Ala., about one hundred miles from Chattanooga, near the Muscle Shoals Canal, Bob Letson, shot Wm. Davidson and Rev. J. M. Pickens, killing the latter instantly. Letson asserts that Davidson grossly slandered his daughter. Pickens was in no way implicated in this, but being present when Letson attacked Davidson, having assaulted him on a public highway, he tried to prevent the shooting, whereupon Letson shot him three times, having first shot Davidson, who yet lives, but probably will not recover. Pickens is a Campbellite preacher. He was the Greenback candidate for Governor of Alabama, during the November election, and received a heavy vote. He was a cultured man, and his death is greatly regretted in this section. Letson has been arrested.

—In Pennsylvania there are four coal mines burning: Kooley Run, near Shenandoah, has been burning six months; the Coal Castle mine has been burning since 1835; the Summit Hill mine, at Pittston, has been burning for three years.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE should be taken by those who perform mental labor. It acts as a brain-food.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE CROSS STYLOGRAFIC PEN OR FLUID PENCIL.

A pencil that writes with Ink; never needs sharpening and never wears out. Made of hard vulcanized rubber, silver, gold, platinum and iridium. 14 kinds from $2 50 to $5 each. Call and see them or send for circular.

LATHROP & WILKINS, Agents for the Southwest,
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

LEON ARLAUD
DRUGGIST,
Corner Customhouse and Dauphine ts., New Orleans.
PURE AND GENUINE DRUGS. GUARANTEED UNADULTERATED.
Medicines, Perfumery, etc. Specialty of Bather's Eau de Cologne.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR
MUSIC HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

Easiest Terms! Lowest Prices!

General Agency for the Celebrated
Steinway, Knabe, Pleyel, Weber, Fischer Pianos,
And the Popular Organs of
CLOUGH & WARREN AND PELOUBET, PELTON & CO.,
Everything in the Music line at rock bottom prices. Send for illustrated catalogues.
LOUIS GRUNEWALD,
Grunewald Hall, New Orleans.

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE
INSURANCE COMPANY.

SOUTHERN DEPARTMENT:

OFFICE: CORNER CARONDELET AND GRAVIER STREETS.

The capital of the Company is TEN MILLION DOLLARS, to which there must be added the unlimited liability of the proprietors.

Fire assets, excluding paid-up capital	$9,831,426 21
Paid-up capital	1,228,200 00
Total fire assets	$11,109,626 21
Fire liabilities	3,944,358 23
Making the surplus for policy-holders	$7,165,267 98

Losses by Chicago Fire in 1871, $2,239,091
Losses by Boston Fire in 1872, $1,129,729

Fire risks of all kinds respectfully solicited. The Board of Directors is fully empowered to adjust and pay all losses from this city, thus placing the Company on an even footing with the local companies chartered under the state laws.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:
J. F. SCHRODER, Esq., Chairman, of Leopold Christ & Co.
NEWTON BUCKNER, Esq., of Buckner & Co.
PERRY NUGENT, Esq., of Nugent & Lallande.
PETER ANDERSON, Esq., of Anderson and Simpson.
HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary.
JULES P. ROUX, Assistant Resident Secretary.
NEW ORLEANS October 20, 1880.

P. WERLEIN,
135 Canal Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

LEADING PIANOS!
ORGANS!
MUSIC
AND
Musical Instruments.

Send for my catalogues and prices before purchasing.

$25 TO $35.
STEWART'S NEW IMPROVED
SINGER
Sewing Machine.

Great Reduction in Prices!
Down with Monopolies!
Hard Times Demand Low Prices.

We warrant all our Machines to be NEW, LATEST IMPROVED and PERFECT for

FIVE YEARS.

Our NEW MACHINE is supplied with a LOOSE BALANCE-WHEEL, which is a great improvement over the old SINGER, as it enables the operator to wind the bobbin without running the machine, or removing the work from the needle. This is the most important improvement ever put on the Sewing Machine.

Also dealer in all first-class Machines, such as the
WHEELER & WILSON,
DOMESTIC, GROVER & BAKER,
WILSON, WEED, Etc.
Cotton, Silk, Flax, Oil and Needles for all kinds of Machines. Address

M. A. PECK,
General Sewing Machine Agent
153 CANAL STREET,
Next to Holmes' Dry Goods Store,
New Orleans.

UNITED STATES
Four Per Cent. Bonds
BOUGHT AND SOLD BY
New Orleans National Bank,
58 CAMP STREET.

B. J. MONTGOMERY. C. KIRSCH
R. M. & B. J.
MONTGOMERY
FURNITURE
AND
MIRROR EMPORIUM,
Corner Camp and Poydras Sts.

After a sojourn of over six weeks among the Factories North, East and West, we open the Fall and Winter Trade with the largest and best selected stock of Furniture, French and German Plate Mirrors, Ornamental and Fancy Goods, Upholstery Goods and Cabinet Makers' Hardware ever brought to this city. We select our goods in person from the best factories and are determined not to be undersold. Our assortment being too extensive and varied to be enumerated in detail, we request our customers and the general public to call and inspect for themselves.

On hand a full line of the celebrated Vienna Bent Wood Work and Invalid Wheel Chairs.

Goods packed and delivered F. O. B.

SPENCERIAN
NO. 1 FINE ROUND
NO. 2 COMMERCIAL
STEEL PENS
of the Very Best European Make, and unrivaled for Flexibility, Durability, and Evenness of point.

REAL SWAN QUILL ACTION.

In 20 Numbers. A complete Sample Card, for trial, by mail on receipt of 20 Cents.
A Sample card of 10 of the Leading Styles, for trial, on receipt of 10 Cents.

IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR & Co.,
138 & 140 Grand St., New York.

FURNITURE.

W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
desires to inform the public and his patrons that his Stock of Parlor Suits, Chamber Suits and Dining-Room Suits, both fine and medium, has never been as complete as at present, with prices lower than ever.

His stock of Furniture suitable for country trade is very large, and special inducements are offered to wholesale buyers.

Orders from the country will have especial care and prompt attention.

W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
New Orleans.

D. MERCIER & SONS,
Better Known as Cheap John.
NO BRANCH STORE IN TOWN.
MEN'S, BOYS' AND YOUTH'S
CLOTHING,
HATS, BOOTS, SHOES, FURNISHING GOODS
ETC., ETC.
Cor. Dauphine and Bienville sts.,
New Orleans, La.
Orders from Country Merchants promptly executed on most reasonable terms.

DR. ELY'S CELEBRATED PATENT ARTIFICIAL LEGS AND ARMS have all the motions of the natural limbs. Perfect satisfaction in all cases or no pay. Prices reduced. Send for pamphlet.
A. McDERMOTT, Manufacturer,
93 Camp St., New Orleans.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 27.—NO. 8. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1881. WHOLE NO. 1342.

PUBLISHED FOR THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

G. T. LATHROP & CO., Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, . . . $2 per annum.

Widows and wives of deceased Preachers Half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.
REV. H. D. MOORE.
REV. O. R. BLUE, D. D.
REV. J. O. ANDREW.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. H. WATKINS, D. D.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. MUNNICUTT.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. JOHN MATHEWS, D. D.
REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

DEAD CALM IN THE TROPICS.

The fair breeze blew, the white foam flew,
The furrow followed free;
We were the first that ever burst
Into that silent sea.

Down dropt the breeze, the sails dropt down,
'Twas sad as sad could be;
And we did speak only to break
The silence of the sea!

All in a hot and copper sky,
The bloody Sun, at noon,
Right up above the mast did stand,
No bigger than the Moon.

Day after day, day after day,
We stuck, nor breath nor motion;
As idle as a painted ship
Upon a painted ocean.

Water, water, every where,
And all the boards did shrink;
Water, water, every where,
Nor any drop to drink.

The very deep did rot: O Christ!
That ever this should be!
Yea, slimy things did crawl with legs
Upon the slimy sea.

Coleridge.

The Sunday School.

BY REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

First Quarter: Lesson X.

Subject: Witness of Jesus to John.

SUNDAY, MARCH 6.—LUKE VII, 18-30.

18 And John's disciples told him of all these things. And John calling unto him two of his disciples,
19 Sent them to Jesus, saying, Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?
20 When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?
21 And in that same hour he cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits; and unto many that were blind he gave sight.
22 Then Jesus answering, said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, to the poor the gospel is preached.
23 And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.
24 And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak unto the people concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderness for to see? A reed shaken with the wind?
25 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they which are gorgeously apparelled, and live delicately, are in kings' courts.
26 But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet.
27 This is he, of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.
28 For I say unto you, Among those that are born of women there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist: but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he.
29 And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John.
30 But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him.—Luke vii, 18-30.

NOTES ON THE LESSON.

John's ministry had closed. The Messiah had come in the person of Jesus. John had proclaimed him publicly, as the "Lamb of God." His disciples, for the most part, had left him and had flocked to the standard of Jesus. He was superceded in his ministry by One before whose light other lights must wane. "I must decrease and he must increase," said he, "before this One whose shoe-latchet I am not worthy to unloose. He is mightier than I." John's ministry had lasted only two years, when for truth's sake, he was imprisoned in a dreary, damp dungeon, under the keepers, in danger of death, very moment, from the hate of a wicked king and the jealousy of a revengeful woman. Wearied and disheartened, he heard of the wondrous words and works of Jesus, and wondered if there was none to be wrought for him. "The Messiah was to open prison doors and set captives free; if Jesus is the Messiah, will he not set his friend and kinsman, free? Would all his wondrous work be done for strangers, and none for me?" Amidst his wondrous works, John sends his disciples to Jesus to inquire. Jesus sends to the right place, and in the right way, to solve his doubt.

Verse 19. John in prison, had communication with the world through his disciples. Some still loved him, they visited him in prison and his misfortunes did not estrange him from all his friends. They told him of the works of Jesus. The question he asks, "Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?" John was asking this question for himself and his disciples, who, no doubt, shared in their beloved master's doubts. His question does not necessarily imply doubt as to the person of Christ, but as to his mode of action, this to John was a riddle. Matters move too slowly for him, especially as he is now condemned to a life of inactivity.

He waits for a speedy declaration of Messianic dignity, for him to assume the reigns of government, to usher in His kingdom. A fiery trial had come upon the prophet. Physical suffering in a gloomy dungeon. Reaction of high endeavor, from a life of activity in the beautiful world of light and life, to a life of gloom and supine inactivity. God seemed to have forsaken him. Is it a wonder for the eagle's wings to droop and his eye to dim when taken from his mountain home, and caged in a gloomy cavern?

This question of John's was but the prayer of a soul in great trial, "Lord, I believe; help my unbelief."

Verse 21. "He cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits, and unto many blind he gave sight."

What a magnificent present! sight! Christ points to these as his credentials, these John could not fail to recognize as the fulfillment of the prophecies of Isaiah concerning the Messiah.

He tells them to report to John all they saw and heard. The works of Christ are the witnesses of Christ, the last and latest.

Our doubts must be solved by those evidences of Christianity which are open to all. No new promises are to be given, but those which are already given, are to be studied more earnestly. "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead." This is the only instance in which Christ refers to his works in support of his mission, and here he does not do it to convince an unbeliever, but to increase the faltering faith of a friend. The argument is potent to-day. The poor have the gospel preached to them, is given us an evidence of the kingdom of Christ being set up—an unheard of thing before, it stands last with another unheard of thing, the raising of the dead. The church that preaches not to the poor is not of the kingdom of Christ.

Verse 23. The new beatitude. Blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in me. What a gentle reproof! what an encouraging message? Tell him I know his temptations and his fiery trials; but let him comfort himself with the thought that he that endures shall receive his reward, do not be offended with me, but trust me; great is the reward. The answer was sufficient; for he remained steadfast to death, and received a martyr's crown.

Verse 24. The question of John was calculated to make a false impression on those who heard it, of John's true character. Christ immediately sets them right by vindicating John against all suspicions that may have risen. Who did you go in the wilderness to see? Not a vascillating character whose principles change with the wind, like the supple reed that rustles in the gentle breeze, and bends to the ground when the hurricane rages. No voluptuary, in fine clothing, such as Herod would send out as a representative of his kingdom. No; the wilderness is no place to find these. A prophet, more than a prophet, the greatest of prophets, great in his relation to Christ, great in the only true sense of greatness, because he himself was the object of prophecy, he was the last in the succession, and the clearest in his prophecies; being last he was nearest to the Messiah, he touched him, he was near in his life, and his tragic death was like the tragedy of Calvary. What an honor to be eulogized by Jesus! This gives us the finishing of the beatitude. String on to the chain of beatitudes this pearl. Blessed is he whosoever is not offended in me, for I will not be offended in him, but will honor him before my Father, and all the holy angels.

The promised blessing is for you and me, for he adds that the least in the kingdom is greater than he. The means in point of privilege. The little child of to-day, if instructed, holds a position of light and privilege above John's. The greatest among the less is less than the least among the greater. It does not mean that the least in the kingdom is a better Christian than John, but that our opportunities are better. "He was a burning and shining light;" but we may become sons of God, and shine like the stars. We are born to a better inheritance.

Letter from Shreveport.

MR. EDITOR: As Bro. Carter, the corresponding editor for Louisiana, is too far away from this section to tell you much about it, I suppose a few lines from a man actually here will not come amiss. After a month and longer of very severe weather, and of slipping about most of the time in mud, such as I imagine abounds here as nowhere else, the last few days have been mild, with occasional sunshine. To-day we left the Cumiston Hotel, where we have been since our arrival, and now we are in our own hired house. Our stay at the hotel was made very comfortable and pleasant by the kind attentions of Mr. Cumiston and his estimable wife; nevertheless we are glad to be in our own home, which we find in every way delightful. Our house sets up high and will overlook the proposed passenger depot of the Pacific and New Orleans railroad. We have just rooms enough for ourselves, and one to spare for stray preachers or others who think enough of us to tarry awhile under our roof. It has been well furnished by the ladies of the church, who seem to be grand workers, so far as we at this date are able to judge. Through their thoughtfulness in providing for our household wants, we feel certain of a happy year of home-life.

As to the church, work has begun in earnest; and the pastor, having read the general rules and explained them and informed the members that they must be kept, has every reason to believe that the membership will, with scarcely an exception, keep them, or promptly withdraw from the church. There may be a few who will seek to remain in the church and yet not live up to their profession. The prospects of the Shreveport charge in this vital matter of living up to their vows are very encouraging. We have had constantly increasing prayer meetings, and the class meeting spirit is growing fast. I have held several most excellent class meetings, and will, according to chapter V, and section 4, of the Discipline, announce next Sabbath the class leaders, and read off the names of the members, as I have placed them in the classes. There is every sign that this will soon be a class meeting, i. e., a Methodist Church. Pray for us to this end. Two Sabbaths ago, we had three of our Northern brethren with us. Rev. Dr. J. D. Ford, in a style that I feel sure could hardly be surpassed, addressed the teachers and scholars of our Sunday-school. His clear statements, apt illustrations and soul-stirring exhortation will remain with us all unforgotten for many a day.

At eleven o'clock, our pulpit was filled by that brilliant divine formerly of your city, and now of Wilmington, Del., Rev. George R. Bristor, D. D. His text: "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever," was handled in a way that was very original, powerful, and convincing. He argued most forcibly and eloquently for the whole Bible, Old as well as New Testament. His sermon was finely suited to his audience, and, given in his somewhat dramatic style, made a deep impression on our people. At night, Bishop Cyrus D. Foss preached to a packed church, taking for his text: "Ye are witnesses of these things." His sermon was on experimental religion, claiming that God's people as witnesses constitute the unanswerable argument for the truth of Christianity. He held his audience throughout by his resistless logic, his telling illustrations, his always chosen words, his earnest utterance, and his manifest heart-power, all culminating in one of the strongest exhortations I have ever heard. Bishop Foss preaches just as every man would like to preach who would save souls. These brethren, and the other white brethren, Rev. Dr. J. C. Hartzell among them, were entertained by Brothers Stockwell and Daughtry of our church. I visited their Conference and enjoyed it; of course we all talked, and I for one feel no worse for it, and hope ever to have a hand, heart and word for such men as this new Bishop evidently is. They were delighted with Shreveport, and especially with the Southern Methodists of Shreveport, and we are glad that they came.

I see Bro. Ransom will be in Marshall, Texas, on the twenty-sixth, and I have written him to make the few hours' run to get to us, that we may have a taste of what you in New Orleans have been lately having at his hands.

Bro. McClendon is here, and will hold his first quarterly meeting next Saturday.

J. T. S.

February 9, 1881.

The Ministerial Educational Association of the Mississippi Annual Conference was organized in Crystal Springs, December 15, 1870. It has done some good work, and is still helping, in a most important matter. The following articles from its constitution may be read with interest by some:

"Article 2. The object of this Association shall be to assist in the literary and theological education of young men preparing for the ministry.

"Art. 4. The payment of five dollars annually shall constitute any one a member of this association; and any one executing his note for one hundred dollars, payable in ten annual installments, without interest, shall be a member for life; said notes not to be collected after the death of the parties who gave them.

"Art. 5. Applicants for assistance must come recommended by a quarterly or district Conference, and when one enters school he must execute to the treasurer of the Association his note for one hundred dollars for each year that he is assisted to the amount of one hundred dollars, or more, and when he enter the Annual Conference as a traveling preacher he shall be entitled to a credit of one hundred dollars per annum until the whole is liquidated; his notes are not to bear interest. Should he fail to enter the ministry, or to continue therein for at least three years, said notes shall be of binding effect and in full force against him, and collectable."

These articles sufficiently explain the nature and object of this Association, and its apparent importance commends it to every intelligent Christian. We wonder at the seeming indifference of some whom we have a right to expect to be foremost in every good word and work. We cannot imagine that any one will fail to appreciate the importance of this cause who will pause long enough to reflect upon it. Strange to say, it is always difficult to get a meeting of the Association during the session of Conference.

Nearly every year we resolve to have an anniversary and a public collection at the next Conference, but we seldom have one. When we do, the result is always satisfactory. The fact is, the great heart of the church feels more interest in this cause than its representatives manifest, to our shame be it said.

After repeated calls we had a hurried and a very unsatisfactory meeting in Vicksburg, last December, during Conference. At that meeting, the following resolution was presented: "That we request the Conference now in session to direct our preachers to take up a collection, in each of their congregations, during the ensuing year, for ministerial education," etc. Upon consultation, it was deemed useless to make the request of the Conference, and the resolution was withdrawn. I see the Louisiana Conference adopted a similar resolution, and I believe the Mississippi Conference would have acceded to the request of the Ministerial Educational Association had that request been made. But let me suggest that there is nothing to prevent our preachers from taking up this collection if they feel disposed to do so. The people, in my judgment, are ready to respond to such an appeal, and there is pressing need for the money. We have several young men in hand now, and there are others ready to enter college, to prepare for the ministry, as soon as the way is open. If we only had the money to aid them, we could do a valuable service to the church in this way. Surely, there is no better investment of money in the church than in ministerial education.

In this connection let me make an appeal to those who have given their notes, and who have not paid their annual installments.

Rev. Dr. Andrews, President of Centenary College, is the Treasurer of this Association. All moneys for the cause of ministerial education should be sent to him. Brethren, let us pay what is due on our notes, and take up collections in our congregations, and send the money by post-office order to Rev. O. G. Andrews, D. D., Jackson, La., and it will be faithfully applied. "Cast thy bread upon the waters; for thou shalt find it after many days."

W. R. LEWIS, Secretary.

BROOKHAVEN, Miss., February 10, 1881.

Temperance vs. Whisky.

MR. EDITOR: On last Wednesday there was an unusual interest manifested by the people of Mansfield upon the subject of temperance.

At a previous temperance mass meeting a committee of four ministers of different churches and two laymen had been appointed to wait on the Police Jury, and present a petition to them, praying them to submit to the people of the parish for their vote to decide for or against local option. This committee met at a lawyer's office at 9 A. M.; got all necessary legal advice, then marched to the court house, and was formerly presented to the Police Jury, which was in session. The object of the committee was made known, and after a few general remarks on the subject of temperance, Attorney J. L. Scales read the petition with the signatures, which were over two hundred; then at some length, he presented to the Police Jury the legal aspect of the case, which was plain enough to a man who had eyes and wanted to see. But the whisky men were out in force with a lawyer, paid as we understand, to defend their cause; which he did by attempting to show that the law was not only obscure, but had been abrogated, or rendered null and void by a constitutional provision, and declared that the Police Jury had no power to act in the matter, and sat down as though he believed it; to the apparent gratification of his clients. However, the sophistry of his argument was shorn of its strength by two other legal gentlemen. The Police Jury then took the matter under advisement, and inasmuch as there was no petition from one or more of the wards of the parish, they deemed it prudent to lay the matter over for one month, or till their next regular meeting. The whisky men are all astir. Their craft is in danger.

It is currently reported here that one of the leading commission houses in Shreveport proposes to furnish money to the whisky men to carry the election in this parish—a house from which we expected better things. We propose to furnish the Police Jury at its next session a petition with a thousand signatures, begging an opportunity to test the question.

The saddest feature, and the one most to be deplored, is, there are individual members of all the churches who are the most inveterate opposers of the temperance cause.

We do not claim to be a prophet; but it is our settled conviction, that it is only a question of time when the church will come to a square issue upon this question.

J. P.

MANSFIELD, LA., February 4, 1881.

Centenary College of Louisiana.

The intermediate examination and exhibition were held January 17-20. The examinations were, in the main, satisfactory, though as is usual where such various orders of intellect are concerned, some failed to pass. On Wednesday night, January 19, was the exhibition of the preparatory department; select speeches and dialogues. Thursday night was devoted to the original speeches of the representatives of the societies; three from the Franklin Institute, viz.: B. F. Jones, of Jefferson county, Miss., J. P. Porter, of Natchitoches parish, and J. W. Lipscomb, from East Baton Rouge parish, and three, from the Union Literary, viz.: T. G. Dickson, of Caddo parish, D. W. Faulk, of Ouachita and L. Levy, of Jackson. The weather was inclement on both nights, but appreciative audiences were in attendance.

Prof. J. W. Nicholson, of Baton Rouge, delivered an address to the societies on Thursday night, which was humorous, eloquent, and instructive. He was interrupted with frequent outbursts of applause.

One hundred and twenty-eight students have entered to date; forty-three of them are in the college classes; sixteen are preparing for the ministry, and one for the foreign field. The services of two competent tutors have been secured, so that the Faculty are enabled to do full justice to the increased number of students. The friends of the college are much gratified by the solid evidences of success. The Faculty especially are under many obligations to the late session of the Louisiana Conference for its strong and helpful action.

The second term has just begun; this is a good time for students to enter, they will be charged tuition only from the time of entrance.

O. G. ANDREWS, President.

Oregon Correspondence.

MR. EDITOR: The Willamette flood marks an era in the history of this great valley. In 1861 there was an overflow that exceeded this a few inches in height. Perhaps the damage and loss is much greater now, as the country is much more settled up. Stock, fences, houses were swept away, and many thousands of bushels of grain destroyed in the warehouses, along the river. No one drowned, that I have heard of. The pressure upon the people will be great, as rust one year and low prices for grain the following have made times exceedingly hard. Many of the people had everything swept away by the quick, rushing waters. I have not been able to get over to Junction City for some time. Bridges gone, railroad washed away, and bridges damaged.

In consequence of the flood, I went out eleven miles to a school house that was in a neighborhood destitute of preaching, and held a meeting. I have frequently been invited to come out and preach to them. I have just closed the meeting and returned home. Results as far as visible: Fifteen sermons to large and serious congregations; three adults baptized; five received into the Southern Methodist Church, on profession; others, we think, will follow. Sister churches will likely share largely in an increase of membership.

I stood alone, no ministerial help, no member to lead in prayer, or to even lead in singing. My own soul is greatly blessed. To God's blessed name be all the glory!

Oregon soil yields meagerly, according to the plowing and seeding done in the gospel harvest field. We trust in the living God who "giveth the increase." Our health is tolerably good.

Affectionately in Christ,

T. H. WARREN.

ALBANY, OREGON, February 1, 1881.

A POPULAR MINISTRY. A ministry that pleases everybody, especially in the Presbyterian Church, may well suspect itself. Look at the doctrines we preach: human depravity, our Lord's true Deity, the atonement on the Cross, the Personality and work of the Holy Ghost, the need by every man, the most amiable and cultivated—of being regenerated, the Bible the sole rule of faith, self-denial a part of true Christian living, retribution on the impenitent, concurrent with natural immortality, the obligation of the Sabbath; and all this with a worship conspicuously plain and free from showy and meretricious decoration. Make all this palatable to "society," the "world," everybody? No; this whole message tramples on the pride of human intellect; it belittles the boasted culture of the time, and it is, if understood, in direct opposition to the "life" which we are being persuaded to import and servilely copy, from Paris.

"Then what am I to do?" one may say. Go and preach these truths, only more clearly, firmly and tenderly. "But what if the people leave me?" Yes; some will leave you and go to churches they like better, assigning various reasons for the same. This is their matter. Yours is to preach for the saving of men, not for the keeping of them in the pews. "But cultivated and well-to-do people will quit the church." Let them. It is so much the worse for them. Remember Paul's words, "Not many wise, mighty, noble, are called." But it is a pity they should not be saved." Certainly, but it is by the truth they are to be saved; and you are a teacher of the truth. "But I may set them against it." Yes, and if your spirit is bad, you will be verily guilty in so doing. But if yours is the right spirit, then your ministry will be like Christ's, which irritated, and drove off not a few, especially of the ritualists and intellectual kind. "For judgment I am come into the world, that they which see not might see, and that they which see might be made blind." Dr. John Hall.

Good Words.

Oh, not upon the lofted hill or field,
Where foeman meet with sabre and with shield
Are mightiest battles fought;
Not amid warfare's wild alarms,
Nor in the roar of cannon, the flash of arms,
Are greatest victories wrought.

Look abroad thro' the earth's wide homes,
Where fierce temptation steadfastly comes,
Followed by woe despair;
Where souls are wrested by some fearful fate
By sin, by hollow-eyed want or woe,
And make the angels glare.

Only God and his angels pure
Ever can know who they endure
Who fight with these unseen foes;
Only heaven will its mighty ones
Can symbol the grace of the saints whose Names these perils unclose.

A man may beat down the bitter fruit from an evil tree until he is weary; whilst the root abides in strength and vigor, the beating down of the present fruit will not hinder it from bringing forth more. This is the folly of some men: they set themselves with all earnestness and diligence against the appearing eruption of sin, but leaving the principle and root unhurt, perhaps unsearched out, they make but little or no progress in this work of mortification.

John Owen.

—It is not toiling, but believing, that brings rest and joy and peace. It is not doing or suffering, but simply believing that Christ has suffered and done. It is not waiting, but receiving now. It is not seeking to make ourselves better, but coming in all our sinfulness, that Christ may make us so. It is through Him we come to know the love of God; and in this is rest and peace.—R. Newton.

—The London Methodist Recorder says: "The church can only cease to be missionary when it ceases to receive Scriptures as divine—that is, when it ceases to be a church. And just as the church's faith in the divine authority of Scripture is strong and vivid, and its obedience to God's voice speaking in Scripture is simple and unquestioning, will its missionary zeal burn clearer and brighter."

—The happiness of life depends on the regular prosecution of some laudable purpose or lawful calling, which engages, helps and enlivens all our powers. Let them bear witness, who, after spending years in active usefulness, retire to enjoy themselves! Prayers should be offered for their servants and wives, and for them, also; they are a burden to themselves.—W. Jay.

—Let us read the gospel, not so much to know what truths it contains, but as we say our prayers, that we may possess our hearts with the same spirit which Jesus Christ discovers in them; observing his actions and manner of life, and striving continually to imitate them, following his instructions and believing his promises and threatenings.

—He who diffuses the most happiness and mitigates the most distress within his own circle is undoubtedly the best friend to his country and the world, since nothing more is necessary than for all men to fulfill his conduct, to make the greatest part of the misery of the world cease in a moment. Robert Hall.

—Seek pleasure whenever you can consistently do so. No enjoyment, however inconsiderable, is confined to the present moment. A man is the happier for life from having once made an agreeable tour, or lived for any length of time with pleasant people, or enjoyed any considerable interval of innocent pleasure.

Duty is a power which rises with us in the morning, and goes to rest with us at night. It is coextensive with the action of our intelligence. It is the shadow which cleaves to us, go where we will, and which only leaves us when we leave the light of life. Gladstone.

—A gentleman said to his pastor, "How can I best train my boy in the way he should go?" "By going that way yourself," wisely replied the minister. If you want your children to feel an interest in the Sunday-school, go there yourself and take a share in the work.

—The happiness of your life depends upon the quality of your thoughts; therefore guard accordingly, and take care that you entertain no notions unsuitable to virtue and reasonable to nature.—Marcus Antonious.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1881.

SOME OTHER DAY.

Some other day, all, soul! we know not when,
We shall be free from earth, with all its cares,
And speed away beyond all mortal ken,
To find the answering echoes of our prayers.

Some other day, when life is lost its pain,
We shall look back to earth, and see with grief,
What we thought loss has now proven endless gain;
Father, we ask thee, help our unbelief.

Some other day, the loved ones who have gone
Beyond the reach of our complaining cry,
Will meet us, and we'll see 'twas for the best,
Though then we said 'twas hard that they should die.

Some other day, the lips that now are mute,
Or opened only to give breath to prayer,
Will join in songs no mortal ear hath heard
Among the angel choir, so pure, so fair.

Some other day, ah, soul! we little know
What trials yet will meet us on the way,
Ere we shall see our loving Father's face,
And rest at last in peace, some other day.

IN MEMORIAM.

William H. Watkins, D. D.

BY REV. C. K. MARSHALL, D. D.

The Rev. William Hamilton Watkins, D. D., pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, departed this life at noon, February 5, in the city of Jackson, Miss.

The functions of digestion had long been deranged, and, finally, for many weeks, seemed to have entirely ceased to perform their work, and slowly, with little or no pain or suffering, he quietly closed his eyes and slept. Nearly all the members of his beloved family were with him, whom, as a patriarch, he blessed as he took leave of them for a while. For two weeks before his death he had rallied a little, and hopes were indulged of his improvement and recovery. But his work was done. "The Master is come, and calleth for thee," was the message. His last words were: "Let me go," and thus closed the solemn scene. Then he departed into light, into life, into the great assembly of those "who have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

Could soulful affection, unequaled nursing, watchful love, fare devotion could the solicitous sympathy of a great community, that forgot its friends, in its Christ-like charity, could the prayers and tears of the devout and humble, could these have saved him, then our brother had not died. But infinite wisdom and infinite love called him to the skies. He desired to be laid beside his mother's grave, in the old family burying grounds in Jefferson county.

The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon, the 6th inst., at the church, and was attended by a large and deeply affected concourse of people; many Masons and Sir Knights being in the city, they also joined, reverently in the solemn ceremonies.

The casket containing the remains was borne to the church by the stewards and officers, and received at the door in the usual form, the audience standing while the impressive service was read. The choir sang two stanzas of the hymn, "Home of the soul," with touching pathos. Rev. J. [illegible] read the lessons appointed for the occasion. Rev. [illegible] pastor of the Presbyterian Church offered prayer. Then [illegible] sang the following hymn:

"Thou art gone to the grave—but we will not deplore
[illegible]
Servant of God, well done,
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

The services were concluded at the grave for the present.

Dr. Watkins was born in Jefferson county, Miss., in April, 1815. He was one of the several sons and daughters of Asa and Sarah Watkins, all of whom have been among our most useful and honored citizens. He was educated at the best schools of the neighborhood, and made great proficiency in his studies. He was early brought into the church. But, more vital than that, he was truly converted to God, and "born of the Spirit." This doctrine is the shibboleth and rock of the church. Lightly esteemed in rationalistic, and spurned in skeptical circles of a purely mechanical Christianity, it is nevertheless the sum and substance of the new life, and the only pathway to the kingdom of God. He devoted his young life to God, and realized the fulfillment of the Divine promise: "Them that honor me will I honor, and they that despise me shall be lightly esteemed." As he lay dying he said to me: "I gave my young heart to God, and the God of my youth has been all my life long my confidence and trust. I know in whom I have believed, and he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him. From early boyhood to this hour I have never distrusted him, and now I am in his gracious hands."

Thus we see the virtuous son, the youthful convert, the ripened Christian, the venerable minister, rising along the pathway of life, "as a light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day," now ready to depart and be with Christ. His mind was as clear and bright all through his sickness as in the days of health. I was deeply impressed with the manner in which he said: "In my Father's house are many mansions—many habitations. Jesus said, I go to prepare, to fit up and make ready those mansions for the reception of my own, and all in God, all within his bosom." After a little while he added: "The future is as real to me now as is the present, with my family and friends around me. I go from one reality to another still more substantial." He was constantly uttering the blessed words of hope, trust, love and faith; the calmest and most resigned of all those around him. In such a presence, and listening to such words, I felt that "The chamber where the good man meets his fate,

Is privileged beyond the common walks of virtuous life,
Quite on the verge of heaven."

As a young man, with great prospects of usefulness before him, he was a diligent student; every faculty was alert, and every opportunity, every source of knowledge, every means and measure, promotive of the ends of his high vocation, were laid under tribute for the achievement of his purpose. The most cultivated and accomplished citizens, of both sexes, were his constant associates, with whom the interchange of thought could not fail to prompt the thirst for knowledge, while books of rarest merit were the fast friends and companions of his hours of seclusion. Scholarship or no culture, that is the law alike for the solitary self-taught student who unites in himself the pupil, the tutor and the professor, whose bookish solitude is at once the cradle and the guarantee of all valuable attainments in learning and knowledge. Thus, by constant attention, habitual industry, cultivated society and golden books, he aggregated and multiplied his intellectual treasures until he became a full and also a ready man, nice accurate, clear, well-versed and highly intelligent gentleman. He was a scholarly and able divine. His knowledge of Hebrew, and the original languages of the New Testament, were sources of daily inspiration and enlargement of the powers of his mind. The Bible was the foundation upon which he built, as a master, and the superstructure of character, experience, culture, piety, learning, and all manly and Christian virtues, rose with rare symmetry, grace and beauty, and in such just proportions and sharp statuesque disclosure that, like a Grecian temple, to behold was to admire, to contemplate was to offer the unspoken but heartfelt homage of appreciative love.

In person he was tall, or rather a slender form, compact, straight, manly and of so striking a mien that a stranger would naturally enquire who he was. His face was full of luminous, benevolent expression and intellectuality, his eyes very large and dark, lustrous and penetrating, overhung by heavy arching brows, his forehead lofty and retreating; his locks and beard, worn full, were silvered with the snows of many fruitful winters. His voice, if not musical, was flexible and sonorous, thoroughly controlled and deeply solemn. He was refined in manners and punctiliously polite, the very soul of urbanity, grace and dignity. In his prime of manhood and health he was regarded as an unusually handsome and imposing person. Everything about him expressed the superior man. He possessed the rare ability of mingling with men and families of every creed and church, conscientiously maintaining his own deeply fixed convictions without in any manner discomposing the genial cordiality his presence inspired. Indeed, like a sunbeam he fell with refreshing influence upon every circle he entered, and so happy was his power of adaptation to all sorts of people and children of tender years as well, that he was everywhere an overwelcome guest. In affability, politeness, gratitude, delicacy of feeling and tender solicitude for the comfort, ease and happiness of others he had few equals and no superiors.

His friendship was a treasure. While he was possessed of the largest sentiments of philanthropy, and yearned with sincere desire to pour blessings upon all, yet there was an inner sanctuary of noble and elevated affections, to the beneficiation of which not every one could successfully aspire.

He was a magnanimous friend. And innumerable citizens of this State, of Louisiana, and other parts of our country, in every walk of life, alike in fashionable and in churchly society, seemed strangely drawn into exalted sympathy with and reverence for our sainted friend. He possessed rare forces of attraction, seemed insensibly to impress himself upon unselfish, congenial natures, and inspired every one with the idea that he possessed great excellence of heart and life.

While he lingered, and life slowly ebbed away, the public concern was so great that every one, from the lowly boot-shine to those in high host walks of life, were eager every hour for the last news from his dying couch.

The veteran editor of the Vicksburg Commercial, who had known and loved him for nearly forty years, then uttered the following generous and truthful words, which were but the universal sentiment:

"We regret to learn of the serious and probably fatal illness of that venerable and beloved man of God, the Rev. W. H. Watkins, D. D. His sands of life are fast running out, and, when his pure spirit ascends to heaven, Mississippi will have lost one of her noblest sons, and the cause of religion and morality one of its noblest advocates and brightest exemplars."

And yet I would not say of my friend what may be justly said only of a gentle child, that

"None knew him but to love him,
None named him but to praise."

For every noble, unselfish, brave man is often called to the performance of painful duties that must vex and arouse the opposition of very many in so cold and selfish, so degenerate and vicious an age as ours. But he was loveable, because the best elements of our being were so commingled in him, and the riches of divine goodness were so replete that Heaven's own seal seemed deeply set upon his brow,

"To give the world assurance of a man."

Yet he was as guileless and transparent as a child, as gentle as a woman, as brave as a tried veteran of many wars, and so inflexible in all purposes of right doing, he would have burned at the stake as a martyr had duty demanded the sacrifice in obedience to the call of the Divine Master. To comprehend the truth and follow its guidance was the earnest and unwearied study of a lifetime. His thirst for knowledge, and his desire for the largest usefulness, increased with the lessening numbers of life's rapidly gliding sands.

His intellect, if not of the highest type of vigor and power, was of so superior a mould that he was capable of almost any work. I have heard learned jurists say that, had he given his life to the constant study of metaphysics, he would have made a reputation of no ordinary measure. He had published only occasional articles in the journals of the church, all of which showed the cogent thinker, the deferential inquirer, the lucid expositor, the facile writer. Some years ago Centenary College conferred upon him the degree of D. D., and he reflected credit upon the institution that thus honored him. It was a token of appreciated learning and worth. What may hereafter see the light from his pen remains to be considered.

As a preacher and expounder of the word of life he was very able, always instructive, often eloquent. Every sermon stood, like the pillars of a temple, each by itself, and all were of a style, form, argument, freedom and force that drew thoughtful listeners, and left on them salutary and permanent impressions. He rarely used illustrations, which, perhaps, was not the best; but, with clear, forcible and cogent argumentation, built his sermon as a master-builder. He never allowed his hearers to feel that he attempted to "light the temple of the Lord with unbeaten oil." He was earnest, urgent, at times tender, and with moistened eyes would apply the impressive lessons of the text, and the occasion, as a loving parent entreating his children.

His prayers in public were always simple, solemn, touching and indicative of the nearness of his heart to God. Not greatly given to family visitation, his services in the sick room were almost unsurpassed in tenderness, adaptation and helpfulness. Not every faithful preacher possesses the happy art of visiting and ministering to the sick and dying. It is a rare and precious gift. For gentle, assuring ministrations, spiritual instructions soothingly uttered, with inspired hopes, may prove not only a great comfort to the sufferer, but materially assist the skill of the physician in fixing the patient over a perilous crisis. Our brother was happily fitted for such a service. Grateful task! Happy he who can so uplift the languid, faint and fearing! Hundreds will gratefully remember his holy mission to the sick room, to the homes of bereavement and sorrow, who may forget the earnest admonitions and searching sermons of the pulpit.

While writing these thoughts a prominent member of the Mississippi bar wrote me concerning his condition, and said: "I love him with a filial love. His hands baptized me. His tongue has taught me. He has exercised over me a greater influence for good than any other man living. He taught me how to think. I can never estimate the debt of gratitude I owe him. The church at large has never fully known his worth. They will feel his loss when he is gone. Great in intellect, great in heart, who will take his place?"

The relations of Dr. Watkins to the Mississippi Annual Conference were all that could be desired. He was respected, reverenced, loved by his clerical brethren, and often intrusted with important duties by them. Punctually he answered to the annual roll-call for forty-four consecutive years, and, though sick when he saw the forty-fifth session approaching, resolved to attend. To be compelled to remain at home and see his companions pausing to grasp [illegible] annual meeting without him, was a new and fearful trial. Alas! hereafter he will respond to the call of the roll in the temple of God.

In 1845, when the great convention of the church assembled at Louisville, to perfect the organization of the Church, South, after the great Methodist economy of the United States had been divided, his Conference elected him, in conjunction with elder brethren, to represent them there. He was elected to several quadrennial or General Conferences, and well and faithfully did he perform the duties of that honorable office. Occasionally he had presided over the Annual Conference, in the absence of a Bishop, with such gravity, firmness and fairness as to indicate qualities that might have made him a Bishop indeed, with great advantage to the whole church.

During the war he continued to fill the pulpit at and near Natchez, to the extent of his ability, while in every possible way he endeavored to minister to the necessities and moral support of the community. His hospitality, his care for the sick, the wounded, the poor will never be forgotten. Every day was filled up with some useful deed. He was ever a true patriot, and strove to uphold and advance his State and her local interest by his wisdom in counsel and his life of patient toil.

At the close of the war he was elected to the presidency of Centenary College. And, though greatly preferring the regular pastoral work, he consented to serve that institution until some person could be found to permanently fill the presidency. He continued for two years to occupy the chair and preside over that valuable seat of learning, and then resumed the regular work of the pulpit and pastorate. In the interests of sound learning, with the respect and esteem in which he was held by the students, parents and trustees of that college, it is to be regretted that he could not have felt satisfied to have devoted his life to such a vocation. But the pulpit was the chosen field of his life-work, and he returned to it with the utmost joy.

Our brother spent many years in New Orleans as a pastor, during which he passed through several epidemics of yellow fever, when his white race and ability were given to the relief of the suffering. In that city, in Natchez, Woodville, Vicksburg, and other places, as well as in Jackson, Miss., where he died, he had resided as a pastor and preacher, and leaves everywhere hosts of Christian friends to mourn his death. He had lived three years at Jackson, and, by our itinerant economy, might have remained one more. At the assembling of the Conference, on the eighth of December, it seemed tolerably evident that he could not render much service in the pulpit should he survive, but such was the deep attachment of that noble, almost peerless church to the man of God, they proposed that if a young minister could be appointed with him they would receive and provide for both. This was accordingly done. And I presume it was hardly ever done in any other case, and was a monumental act of enlarged faith, love and Christian esteem on the part of his people. Surely I may say to that church, in the words of inspiration: "God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labor of love which ye have showed toward his name in that ye have ministered to the saints and do minister." May the fragrance of their beloved pastor's name long abide in that congregation a holy and hallowing memory.

Finally, to look back for a moment. In view of the conditions of society in his early life, the then recent organization of the State, the new settlement of the country, with the nameless disadvantages of a ministerial life, the labors to be performed, the scanty compensation for support, books, stationery, magazines, quarterlies and kindred necessities, the long and weary rides from one neighborhood and church to another, the constant exposure to all weathers, seasons and times, by night and at noon, the frequent demand for one's presence in seasons of sickness, often in remote places of difficult access, and always when the pestilence walked in darkness, and destruction wasted at noon-day—in view of these conditions, and in contemplating the unfaltering steady performance of every obligation and duty, for nearly fifty unbroken years, with as lofty a purpose and as true a principle as ever animated the breast of an Evangelist, is it more than meet to call such a life heroic?

Single deeds of heroism are often surprises, and are refreshing, as they raise the tone of the people's heart, quicken the pulse of the masses, and lift higher the standard of the capacities of manhood for noble things. But here is a life of steady endurance, patient and unexhausted and uncomplaining toil. A life of comparatively unappreciated labor, rendered in a spirit of disinterested Christian bravery and Christian faith, imparting fresh luster to manhood, and, by its purity, zeal, sincerity and usefulness, kindling noble aspirations in the hearts of his brethren, and leaving a life worthy of imitation by the young men who shall follow in his steps. With our friend it was not a single heroic deed, but a life of heroism. He had seen other men achieve and suffer and die in the same battle, and therefore he went into the fray fully posted, fully consecrated, with a snowy banner on which one might have seen inscribed: "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." "To fight the good fight of faith," to win souls to Christ, to bind up the broken hearted, to wipe tears from weeping eyes, to show how ashes could be exchanged for moral beauty, and the oil of joy could fill the place of mourning; in a word, to take, in some sense, the place, and do the work of his blessed Master; this was his life, and it stamps the man above the ordinary level of his kind. It is heroism. His soul was above the mean standard of arithmetically calculated rewards, as he was superior to mere pleasure seeking, easy loving and upholstered luxuriance of life. It was a self-sacrificing life, and penetrates us with better, more charitable and loving estimates of men, as it brings us into loving sympathy with the true, the brave, the chivalrous and the nobly good. With such a life before us we may feel the full force of England's laureate bard:

"However it be, it seems to me,
'Tis only noble to be good:
Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And Christian faith than Norman blood."

During his pastorate in New Orleans, in 1842, he was united in marriage with Mrs. E. Johnson, who now mourns his loss. They were blessed with several sons and daughters, and few parents were ever more loved and honored by their children, few children more loved and prized by devoted parents. I think they are all useful members of the church, of their parents. Medicine, theology and agriculture are the vocations of the sons, while the daughters are the pride and joy of the best of mothers at home.

It were needless to speak of such a character as a husband and father. He could be nothing less than one of the most exemplary, devoted, loving and loved.

The church of Christ was his great concern. He gave his life to her upbuilding. Specially in the last twelve or fifteen years did his soul more than ever take in the great Shepherd and preaching and holding forth the words of life. He has been a growing, ripening Christian minister, leaning, with life's approaching sunset, to accomplish all it was in his power to do, and one in the midst of solid usefulness.

He passed gradually from life like a receding star, growing fainter and fainter, till one hardly knew when lost to sight and to life. At last the flickering spark expired, and

"Wonderingly we're gazing where the soul
Has gone, but where it is we do not know."

For many days he felt himself dying, and yet was calm, resigned, triumphant, and most patiently waited the Master's call. Death came as an angel to release the mortal, doors of his earthly prison, and fly his pure spirit away, to the bosom of his God. Over and again he spoke most consoling words to his excellent wife, and children, who hung over his couch and ministered to the dying one as few could do. Rarely has death stopped the beating of a warmer heart, or quenched the heart of a manlier and more loveable life. As a true soldier of the cross, he died at his post, with his armor on. This one commonwealth; the whole church, as well his bereaved family, have sustained great and irreparable [illegible].

He leaves little [illegible] yet [illegible] as it is written, [illegible] an inheritance to [illegible] children," so he has left [illegible] of an exalted character, [illegible] a life of useful[illegible], [illegible] memory that will remain [illegible] grant;

"And [illegible]"

This imperfect and too hasty tribute, I lay on his fresh grave, as a garland of pure brotherly love. Shadows thicken on my path, and the loss of one so good and true, adds a deeper gloom. My early companions in the battle, in the race, in the voyage, are fast creating a solitude for me, as they go home to our Father's house.

"Where all the ship's company meet,
Who sailed with the Master beneath;
While shouting each other they greet,
And triumph o'er sorrow and death."

Vicksburg, February 9, 1881.

Obituaries.

MRS. ANICE ELLEN FOWLER, wife of Mr. W. W. Wigington, died at the family residence in New Orleans, February 3, 1881, aged thirty years and eight months.

She was the only daughter of James F. and Angeline Fowler, a native of Alsace, Fifth district of New Orleans, and was brought up in the Methodist Sunday school at a very early age. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, professed conversion, and lived always a consistent Christian life. Her death was sudden, and from the nature of her case there was scarcely any opportunity for dying words. These were needless to assure her friends of her readiness for her change. A quiet and exemplary life is better than any dying testimony, and this she leaves as a precious memory to those who knew and loved her. In all the relations of life she adorned the doctrine of Christ. Her step-children found in her a devoted and affectionate mother, her own children everything that a mother's piety and love could secure. A devoted wife, the heart of her husband safely trusted in her. As a daughter she was fond and dutiful, ever seeking to cheer and brighten the lives of her parents. As a member of the church she was loved and esteemed for her consistent, cheerful piety, and for her quiet and earnest devotion to the cause of Christ. Her death came to the prime of her years, and she has been snatched away from a home of which she was the light and joy. Her motherless children, her bereaved husband, her sorrowing parents are left in sadness and in grief. But it is well with her. She has joined the about-washed company on the peaceless shore, and has passed beyond the regions of pain and sorrow. She did what she could for her Lord; she ministered patiently and lovingly to the duties of her earthly sphere, and now she doubtless rejoices in the possession of the heaven-ly crown. P.

JESSE TAYLOR.—In the death of Jesse Taylor, which occurred in Meridian, Miss., November 7, 1880, the church and community were deprived of a good and useful man. He was born in Greene county, North Carolina, July 13, 1803. The greater part of his life he was a citizen of Choctaw county, Alabama; for the last twelve years he resided in Meridian. In 1829 he became connected with the church, and for more than fifty years lived in the communion.

His life was fruitful in good works, and in all things he exhibited such a character and spirit, as led all who knew him to trust and honor him. He was [illegible] upright in his dealings. He exemplified in his life the best civic virtues, and thus showed to the world the power and beauty of religion. He was diligent in business, and the blessing of the Lord prospered him, so that by his own unaided efforts he attained to comparative wealth.

As a Christian, he was faithful and unvarying, always ready to aid the cause of God, both by personal labor and by money. In Alabama he was largely instrumental in the building up of a flourishing country church, composed, in a good measure, of his own family, children, and grandchildren. It was to that period of his life that later he recurred with most pleasure. In Meridian he was one of the pillars of the church, holding an official relation, and faithful and prompt in all things. For some years he was a trustee of the East Mississippi Female College, and always a firm friend of the institution.

Bro. Taylor's experience in religion was deep and clear; he knew whom he had trusted. His successive pastors can testify how well he loved the church and the cause of God. His last illness was heart disease, and was protracted through several months. Though able to be up the greater part of the time, he knew that the period of his death was uncertain, so he was led to speak beforehand about his hopes of another life. He had no fear; all was bright.

He died as he had expected, so calmly, at night, soon after he had fallen asleep, and perhaps unaware of the translation. There were no last words, telling whither he was going, for all had marked the point toward which his life had been long directed.

He had lived so purely among his fellow men, and so reverently toward God, that when his pilgrimage of seventy-seven years was finished all felt that a good man had gone to his rest. E. H. MORGAN.

STEELE ARNOLD DOUGLASS STRICKLAND was born in Lawrence county, Mississippi, August 4, 1851, and died of consumption in Brenham, Miss., January 27, 1881, aged twenty-six years five months and twenty-three days.

Bro. Strickland was blessed with a pious mother who had him dedicated to God in baptism in September, 1856. This aided woman, still remembered in these parts as a zealous member of the Methodist Church, died when these acts of this notice was only three years and seven months old, but she left the impress of her Christian character upon her child. Among her last utterances on earth were "Mary" [illegible] me in Heaven," and which he said: "Mother I will."

In [illegible] Strickland went to Texas. He had grown to be a wayward boy. His [illegible] Brenham, where his father had moved to [illegible] him away from the influences of his [illegible] there he was a constant attendant at the Methodist [illegible] left for Texas determined to make [illegible] and impressed with the [illegible] God directed his steps [illegible] Providence [illegible] to [illegible] Methodist Church, South, [illegible] Bro. Strickland was a young man of more than ordinary promise. He soon had evident and promising gifts as an exhorter, and preached [illegible] with power. The ruling ambition of his regenerated soul was to make himself useful in the world.

In his last illness he suffered much, but never murmured. Patient and resigned he committed himself to the Lord. He was conscious to the last, and a short time before he breathed his last said: "I am so happy." W. H. LEWIS.

MARY EMMA FLOYD, daughter of Wm. H. and Mary E. Floyd, died in Pine Apple, Wilcox county, Ala., December 20, 1880. She was born January 21, 1866, and was therefore very nearly fifteen years old.

Being baptized in childhood, and brought up in strict accordance with the rules of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, she ever considered herself a member of the same. Her father was a tenter at the Asbury camp meeting, near this place, in the fall of 1876, at which time she voluntarily took upon herself the vows of the church.

Being but little more than ten years of age, her father refused to admit her upon the doctrines and discipline of the church, and, becoming fully satisfied with her understanding of the same, he then received her, and with joy witnessed her return to full communion with the church. I was her pastor for more than two years, and knew her to be a remarkably well disposed child, consistent as a Christian, constant in her attendance upon all the ordinances of the church, studious and attentive to the Sabbath-school, which she dearly loved. With patient resignation she bore her last illness, which was extremely violent and painful, so much so that it terminated her life in a little after four days from its first attack.

While we regret her loss to us here and now, we bow submissively to the will of God, knowing that to her it is eternal gain. [illegible] RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the Nashville Christian Advocate for publication.

WHEREAS, the call to the retribution of Bro. Quince Lewis with this Quarterly Conference closed by his death on the thirteenth day of January, 1881, in the eighty-seventh year of his age, and the fifty-ninth year of his connection with the church militant

Resolved, That it was the pleasure of the Quarterly Conference to continue the membership of Bro. Quince Lewis by receiving his request to retain his membership for years, it is now our solemn duty to pay his absence and pay our merited tribute to his memory.

Resolved, That in the death of Uncle Quince the church has lost one of its shining lights in the world, the civil community one of its most urgently efficient and Christianity one of its most exemplary professors.

Resolved, That though he is now above the effect of praise or censure, instead of indulging in eulogies or panegyrics, let the truth be manifest that by the grace of God he was what he was, and the Lord whom he served will give him glory.

Resolved, That this preamble and resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Quarterly Conference, and that the secretary furnish Rev. H. P. Leake, of the New Orleans Christian Advocate with a copy of the same. T. C. MOORE, Secretary.

CHARLIE B. SMITH, oldest son of Mr. Holloway Smith, and grandson of Mr. Lewis Henderson, of Sumter county, Alabama, died at his father's residence, January 23, 1881. He was born October 19, 1861, and reared in the communities in which he died; so that he was well known by [illegible] and all respected and loved him.

When about nine years of age, he made a public profession of religion and joined the Methodist Church. His life from that time to his death was always consistent with his profession. Indeed, so orderly was his deportment that it came to be a proverb among the boys of his age, "Charlie is a good boy." Quiet, truthful, polite, and affectionate he gave much promise of usefulness to the cause and comfort to his family; but the Master, who does all things well, saw best to take him from the evil to come.

Such a life, in one so young, is rare in these days of youthful dissipation and frolic. He died as he lived, leaving the strongest assurance that he is gone to rest with Jesus. J. M. PARVIN.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1881.

AFTER THE FEAST.

BY EMILY HUNTINGTON MILLER.

The bells chime softly in the gloom;
The guests are gone; the fire is low:
I wait with bliss the coming doom
To greet mine own before I go.
Mine own for whom, beside the board,
To-day no empty chair was set;
For whom the silent pledge was poured
While trembling tears the eyelids wet.

No foot-fall echoes on the stair,
No shadow falls across the light,
No whisper hits the happy air
While the last music of delight;
Yet all my restless thoughts are stilled,
And, waiting by the hearth alone,
My longing heart is warmed and filled
With the dear presence of its own.

Beloved faces faintly set
In halos of my tenderest thought,
Immortal eyes, whose radiance yet
With yearning human love is fraught,
Dear lips whose kisses, sweet and slow,
Drop, like a balm, on mortal pain,
Dear hands whose every touch I know,
Yet may not hope to clasp again.

I know not to what clearer height,
In that sweet heaven their thought has grown,
Or what new fountains of delight,
Untasted here, their souls have known;
But since through changing years I keep
Their precious memory green and fair,
I cannot dream that love can sleep
Or cease its tender virgils there.

O unforgetting souls, that swell
The swift, exulting host above,
Where face to face with him ye dwell
Whose endless years are endless love,
To-night, by some celestial air,
The cloudy curtain wide is blown:
Ghosts of my heart, but grown more fair,
I see you, greet you, claim mine own!

Our Pulpit.

The Two Evils.

BY J. B. WALKER, D. D.

"For my people have committed two evils: they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and have hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water." Jer. ii. 13.

These words were primarily spoken of the Jews, who had forsaken God, and gone after idols. The Holy Ghost, by whom spake the holy men of old, said of God, by the Psalmist, "And thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures, for with thee is the fountain of life." And God, manifested in the flesh, said, to the Samaritan woman, "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink, thou wouldst have asked of him and he would have given thee living water—the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." Thus God has been pleased to present himself to us under the idea of a fountain, life-giving, refreshing, and fruitful. Fountains were scarce in portions of Canaan, and in that hot and dry climate were highly prized. Cisterns were dug, or hewn with labor and cost, and when made were in every way greatly inferior to fountains. To forsake a fountain of living water, with its refreshing and inexhaustible supply, for a cistern, was the climax of folly.

The inspired writer, as a mouth-piece for God, charges the ancient Jews with two evils. First, in "forsaking God, the fountain of living water," an act as ungrateful as it was unwise, and then emphasizing their folly and sinful contempt of God by attempting to substitute him with a creature-idols, and broken and worthless cistern that can hold no water.

It is a sad evidence of the carnality and enmity of man, that to get rid of the recognition of God and dependence on him, men are willing, and even disposed to resort to painful and costly labors. Men turn from the God given, and freely flowing fountain, to some laborious and worthless device to satiate the thirst of their immortal natures. But this charge cannot be confined to Jews, other nationalities cannot lay the flattering unction to their hearts that they have not "erred and strayed" as well, all have sinned, all are guilty before God. Let us proceed to consider this—

All the nations who have turned from the living God (and all have) and have turned into dumb idols, have, in the most glaring and aggravated form, "forsaken the fountain of living water, for broken cisterns."

All Atheists, who deny the being of God, and all Pantheists who deny the personality of God and his providential and moral government over the world, and ever men, have forsaken the fountain to famish outright, or to perish in the vain attempt to satisfy their thirst with water from broken cisterns.

All skeptics who deny a revelation from God, and so cut themselves off from all knowledge of God, who cannot intelligently nor hopefully pray, who cannot trust, for they have no ground for faith, who are ignorant of the Divine character, and unable to explain the enigma of natural and moral evil, have forsaken the fountain of living waters, and have nothing better than a broken cistern, that can hold no water.

There are others who forsake God in a somewhat different way. These claim to have some respect for the Bible as a revelation from God, but in fact show that they have a great deal more respect for human reason, especially their human reason. This class forsake God as the fountain of living waters, by refusing to accept God and his government as he has been pleased to reveal in his Word, and to adopt interpretations of his word at open war with the convictions and conclusions of ninety-nine hundredths of the wise and good in all the ages of the church.

All those classes of men are forsaking God as the fountain of living waters, who are trying to make a "path of peace" out of the "broad way," who are trying to find the path of life in the road to death; who are not saying, God is my portion, my exceeding and everlasting reward, but whose hearts are going in covetous greed after gain, pleasure or power.

But men in their unbelief and enmity to God do not stop with the "evil" of forsaking "the fountains of living waters," but they attempt to get permanently rid of God, by attempting to be independent of him, to be self-sufficient, and hew out to themselves cisterns that shall supply their needs. The so-called skeptic scientist proudly rejecting revelation attempts to project a theory of creation, and of Providence without a personal Creator and governor, and so constructs his theory as to get rid of moral obligation, and winds up by being without God and having no hope in the world, only a cistern whose emptiness and dryness mocks his thirst.

There are many who are willing to hold to God, so long as only his eternity, his omnipotence, his omniscience, and his immutability are presented, who immediately forsake him as soon as his holiness, which abhors sin, and his justice, which punishes it, is revealed. They cannot and will not hold to God, if to do so involves accountability in their actions, and begin at once by some theory to hew out a cistern that shall make them independent of God. Alas, in the tremendous necessity of fallen nature, surrounded with the dark problems of sin and sorrow, they cry, like Voltaire, "I could wish I had never been born."

And those who rush away from the scriptural doctrines of sin—atonement, forgiveness and regeneration—find they have in the soul's great need, nothing better, nothing more than a "broken cistern;" no Christ, no salvation, no hope. Those who, like Solomon, in the pleasures, the riches and glories of the world, have sought to make to themselves cisterns, which should supply their spiritual and immortal needs, and be substitutes for "the fountains of living waters," have said last in the despairing bitterness of their souls, "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity and vexation of spirit."

How many awakened souls have vainly spent their strength in going about to establish their own righteousness by tears, fastings, prayers, good works, and external ordinances, men "broken cisterns," that could hold no water of life, have found that all that they had been doing was but turning away from, and forsaking the "fountain of living waters"—that the life-giving, the cleansing fountain flowed from the Redeemer's side. Let us ever remember:

"There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Immanuel's veins,
And sinners plunged beneath that flood,
Lose all their guilty stains."

And let us abandon the folly of trying to be independent of God, and trying to substitute the merits of Christ with some broken cistern. Why tax ourselves with this laborious and useless toil, when salvation is flowing free as a fountain? Why come with our costly offering when Christ paid all our debt? Why try by any method to expiate our sins, when the Lord has laid on Christ, "the iniquity of us all"? The invitation is: No, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, come without money and without price, and almost the last inspired word of God cries, "Let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will let him take of the water of life freely."

"Not Attended to Soon Enough."

The book of a pastor's experience has many dark pages. Here is one from mine. I was recently calling on one of my parishioners, who had been a widow for two years, residing on her farm with her son, perhaps forty years of age, and his wife. The sun was not at home when I arrived; but while I was conversing with the ladies, he returned intoxicated, and entering an outer room, called loudly for his wife. When she had withdrawn, I heard through the closed door such a torrent of abuse and vile, filthy language, that it made my blood run cold. It continued until I could stand it no longer, when I left the room and conducted him out of the house. This has been going on for a long time from bad to worse, until now it is almost an every-day occurrence. And this in one of our most respected families! "Not attended to soon enough," said the broken-hearted mother.

Fathers, mothers, do you hear that? We sometimes hear children spoken of as the "flowers of the family." But often, when the buds are formed and are rapidly preparing to burst into flowers, a little grief appears on the stem, which pierces into the parents' hearts. It is only a little one and does not hurt very much, perhaps, and so not much attention is paid to it; it is not broken off. Alas! how soon it becomes a veritable thorn, not only in the flesh but also in the spirit, which cannot be torn out. Many are the hearts to-day bleeding from such wounds, which might never have been made if parents had only done their duty in time.

There is one sore evil which I have seen under the sun, and that is the boy-man, the boy who is only fifteen or sixteen years of age, but has attained to man's stature; our big boy, of whom father and mother are so proud. He must now, forsooth, talk as men, go with men, and have the liberty of men—night-key and all. And father and mother, looking fondly at the big fellow, seem only to see the stature and forget the age. Too big to be kept in leading-strings now! And so the man's stature with the child's judgment, ignorance, and weakness, comes and goes at will, and is answerable to no one. Is this right? Is it best for parents so to do? Is it kindness to the boy? The wonder is that any, from whom restraint is thus entirely thrown off, should grow up without becoming a disgrace to the family. In this way parents are often responsible, if not participes criminis, in the ruin of their sons. It is a fearful thought, and a fearful load to carry.

This may meet the eyes of some who have just such a big boy. Take care of him yet awhile. The boat is large, but has not enough ballast yet to carry it safely over the tempestuous seas. Better delay casting off the moorings, than risk swamping the vessel. And remember that, when your sons go forth on their own responsibility, the Divine "anchor to the soul" is the only thing on which they can surely rely. You must help them to get it before they go.—Christian Intelligencer.

A MOTHER AND DAUGHTERS.—I once met (it was at a garden party) a clergyman's wife—a graceful, accomplished woman—who introduced her three daughters, all so much alike the mother's type, that I could not help admiring them.

"Yes," said she, with a tender pride, "I think my girls are nice girls. And so useful, too. We are not rich, and we have nine children. So we told the girls that they would have either to turn out and earn their bread abroad, or stay at home and do the work of the house. They chose the latter. We keep no servant—only a char-woman to scour and clean. My girls take it by turns to be cook, housemaid, and parlor-maid. In the nursery, of course (happy mother who could say "of course!") they are all in all to their little brothers and sisters."

"But how about education?" I asked.

"Oh, the work being divided among so many, we find time for lessons too. Some we can afford to pay for, and then the elder teach the younger ones. Where there's a will there's a way. My girls are not ignoramuses, or recluses either. Look at them now."

And as I watched the gracious, graceful damsels, in their linen dresses and straw hats—home manufacture, but as pretty as any of the elegant toilettes there—I saw no wunt in them; quite the contrary. They looked so happy, too—so gay and at ease!

"Yes," answered the smiling mother, "it is because they are always busy. They never have time to pet and mope, especially about themselves. I do believe my girls are the merriest and happiest girls alive."

Would we could engage it.—Mrs. Muloch Craik, in Bazar.

Religious Intelligence.

MISSIONARY.

—A Martyr's memorial church has lately been erected in Erromanga and was opened on Sabbath, thirteenth of June last. The church was filled by a deeply interested congregation. Among the numbers were two sons of the man who murdered John Williams some forty years ago. The elder of these led in prayer. Throughout the service there was the most perfect order. No wonder that the missionary in writing of the occasion says: "As we looked around on the people, some of whom had been James Gordon's greatest and best helps, and who love to speak of him, and others not learned to read when boys under George A. Gordon and Mrs. Gordon; others had been given us from the grave almost in answer to our earnest prayers; and others had been born since our settlement, and with their bright faces proved they were the children of Christians and were happy; and then to see those who had been with the murderers of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon—I say, when we beheld all these before us singing praises to God, and turned to look at the martyrs' tablet, and then to the tablet for the church itself, and again looked at the beautiful church and heard Dosoud (or Daniel) pray, and to remember that, forty years before that, his father, Koiwiowi, clubbed to death John Williams on the opposite bank of the river, in front of the church, you cannot wonder that we found it difficult to suppress tears of joy and thankfulness. Christian at Work.

—Henry K. Carroll, in a late letter on the "World of Missions," presents a concise summary of the world's effort in the conversion of the heathen. There is a steady increase in the number of societies and in the aggregate of contributions. There are now do less than 80 societies, where there were only long ago forgotten years ago. Of these societies 30 are American, 25 British and 25 Continental. More than fifty of them have been organized in the last fifty years. Their aggregate income is nearly, if not quite, $7,000,000 a year, against $250,000 eighty years ago. This vast sum represents not the receipts of an exceptional good year, but the income which the societies expect and receive yearly, with little variation. The managers of the societies make their appropriations in advance, and lay upon the churches the obligations to furnish the funds. These obligations are never disowned or dishonored. The British societies raise more than half of the whole amount, or something less than four million dollars. Five of them raised last year more than three, of which the two Anglican societies (the Church Missionary and Propagation) received $1,900,000. The American societies expend about $2,000,000 yearly and the Continental societies nearly $1,000,000. The grand total of all missionary expenditures, at home and abroad, would assuredly not fall below $15,000,000.

—The affairs of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society are, according to the Congregationalist, looking up. A growing interest in home missions is seen in the more frequent presentation of the topic at missionary concerts; in more frequent calls for literature and information about the home field; and in enlarged gifts. In illustration of the last point are an increase in contributions over last year of 40 per cent. each in Old South and Central churches, Boston; 21 per cent. in Eliot church, Newton; 37 per cent. in Dalton; 100 per cent. at Taunton; and 146 per cent. at Williamsburg.

—The Creek Town congregation in connection with the Mission of the Scottish U. P. Church in Calabar, Africa, has just sent to market palm oil valued $1,800, to help pay for the church building it occupies. They have in all paid $1,175. It is also stated that King Eyo has ordered that the children must not run about the streets any more, but must go to school. In consequence, the school attendance has increased from 90 to 300.

—It is now six years since the Free Church of Scotland set about establishing the Livingstonia Mission Settlement in Eastern Africa, as a memorial of Dr. Livingstone. A sum of £21,000 has been expended, and not only has the Gospel been preached to the natives on the shores of Lake Nyassa, but an effectual check has been put upon the slave trade. Formerly as many as 10,000 slaves were annually carried off from this region.

—The Ladies' Auxiliary for Female Education in the Wesleyan Missionary Society was formed in 1858 and now pays an income of $11,000. It has sent out forty-five women as teachers during the years, and during the last five years has maintained a monthly forty-three schools in Cornwall, India, China, South Africa, Western Africa, France and Italy.

Great improvements are reported in the Holy Land. The number of houses in Jerusalem have more than doubled in twenty-five years. Bethlehem and Nazareth have the appearance of newly built towns, nearly all the houses having clocks on the outside. Bells are allowed to be tolled in Christian churches.

Says the Methodist Advocate: "On Sunday scholars at Gainesville, Ga., last raised this year eight dollars missionary money. Having no money to give, each brought an egg for the contribution, and the result is eight dollars in cash."

Miss Annie McKean, daughter of Thomas McKean, Esq., of the First Presbyterian Church, Washington, Pa., has gone to Fairmont, Utah, as a missionary teacher, under the care of the Woman's Executive Committee of the Board of Home Missions.

In Gaza, Palestine, there are four mission schools, three of which are frequented exclusively by Moslem children, and the girls are especially anxious to learn. The reading-room of the mission is much frequented by Moslems of the better class.

In Sweden 30,000 people listen every Sunday to Methodist preaching. Thirty years ago Methodists were imprisoned for attempting to preach in that country; now they have fifty churches and not less than 7,000 members.

Burmah stands third in the list of donors last year to the American Baptist Missionary Union. Massachusetts gave $11,312; New York, $39,409; and Burmah, $11,011.

—The London Missionary Society has found its station at Ivingstonia, on Lake Nyassa, too unhealth, and is taking measures to secure a more salubrious site.

—Mr. Philander Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., has given property valued at $5,000 to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

—In various missionary fields in Italy, the Methodists have eighteen charges and eight hundred members.

—Miss Brittion reports the mission of the Methodist Protestant Church in Japan an established fact.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—Of Baptists in Great Britain and Ireland there are 3,451 churches, 1,879 ministers (of whom many are engaged in secular business,) and about 400 are at present without a charge. The total number of church members is 276,318; scholars attending Sunday-schools 400,000. There are ten denominational colleges, with thirty professors. The estimated number of Baptists throughout the world is 26,505, pastors 17,083, members 3,473,088.

The chapel at Burnley-lane has been renovated at a cost of £800.

The proceeds of the recent bazaar at West Croydon Chapel have amounted to upwards of £300.

The Nonconformist Independent states that the youngest son of Lord Justice Lush, having taken his M.A. degree at Oxford, has entered Regent's-park College with a view of the Baptist ministry.

The following are the principal statistics as given in the official summary as furnished by the churches to the Baptist Union: In England there are connected with the denomination 1,912 churches and 2,750 chapels, containing 707,478 sittings; number of church members, 290,713; number of Sunday-school teachers, 35,108; scholars, 351,602; number of pastors, 1,404; evangelists, 2,729. In Wales there are 541 churches, 840 chapels, 210,488 sittings. Number of church members, 69,487; teachers, 7,528; scholars, 69,237; 401 pastors and 251 evangelists. In Scotland 86 churches, 103 chapels 28,871 sittings, 9,456 church members, 999 teachers, 8,425 scholars, 79 pastors, 35 evangelists. In Ireland 26 churches, 31 chapels, 5,450 sittings, 1,895 church members, 213 teachers, 1,331 scholars, 21 pastors, 14 evangelists. The total represented by the United Kingdom is as follows: 2,567 churches, 3,577 chapels, 942,279 sittings, 281,061 church members, 41,820 teachers, 430 Sunday scholars, 1,902 pastors, and 3,031 evangelists.—Watchman.

—"Sadlier's Catholic Directory and Ordo" for 1881 gives some important statistics of the progress of Roman Catholicism in the United States, which is by no means without interest to Protestants generally. There are now twelve Archbishops with 48 suffragans, 8 vicars-apostolic and one perfecture apostolic. The number of priests returned is 6,702 and there are 1,170 ecclesiastical students preparing for the priesthood. The churches in the country have increased to 5,826 and the population is estimated at 6,577,336. The progress of parochial schools show immense exertion and sacrifice to educate children. In 2,383 schools there are 423,383 children.

—There are in Massachusetts 526 churches of Congregational order. In more than two hundred of these, with an aggregate membership of over 22,000, there was not one "solitary addition" from the world during the year 1879-80. In the State at large the net gain was one hundred and sixty, while there are less names on the rolls than appeared in the last set of tables. Only eleven Congregational churches in Missouri have become self-supporting during the past four years. The increase in number has been ten per cent. in that time, the population has increased by 75,000.

—The following religious sects, whose places of worship have been certified to the Register-General, England, for the first time this year, appeared in Whitaker's Almanac for 1881: "Anglican Church," "Dependent's," "New Hebrew Congregation," "Open Brethren," "Salvation Army," "Theistic Church," and "Worshippers of God." The total number of religious sects now on the register is 180.

—The fifty-six Presbyterian churches of the Sandwich Islands, connected with the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, reports a present membership of 7,459. For the past year their contributions for foreign missions amounted to $1,128.80, while for all purposes, home and foreign, they have raised during the year no less than $27,512.21.

—At the January meeting of the Board of Managers of the American Bible Society, grants of books to the value of about $8,000 were made, including $1,000 to the American Baptist Publication Society, $500 for distribution at United States military posts, and $5,000 for colportage. Receipts for the month $47,376 29. Issues, 141,618 volumes.

—Monseigneur Guibert, Roman Catholic Bishop of Amiens, has published a pamphlet to show that agreement between Roman Catholicism and the republic is possible, in which he severely chides the journalists who throw their influence against agreement.

—There have been organized during the last year in this country 105 new Congregational Churches, against 87 in the previous year. There have been 205 ministers ordained or installed, against 173 in the year before.

—The Protestants of Germany are beginning preparations for the celebration of the 400th anniversary of the birth of Luther, which occurs Nov. 10, 1883. The principal celebration will be held at Wartburg, were Luther completed his translation of the Bible.

—Fifty years ago North Carolina Baptists numbered only 15,000; now there are over 180,000. Then they gave little or nothing to benevolence; last year they gave $185,265 for the kingdom of Christ.

—The total number of Congregational churches in Great Britain and the colonies is 3357, whereas the number in the United States was 3620, according to the Congregational Year-Book of 1879.

—The Lutherans of all branches in America have 3,225 churches and 712,240 communicants. This is an increase for the year of 133 ministers, 309 churches, and 17,814 members.

—The Bishop of Manchester believes that Episcopal churches enough have been built for the present, and that attention should now be given to the increase of the clergy.

—There are 3,000,000 of Christian communicants in England and Wales. The average Sunday attendance at places of worship is 10,000,000.

—The Churchman reports that the Mexican Episcopal Church has a ministry consisting of one Bishop, two Bishops-elect, and two Presbyters.

—Bishop Robertson, of Missouri, states that among the Anglican Church clergy there are 130 converted Jews, of whom three are Bishops.

Our Young People.

WHERE IS YESTERDAY?

BY M. HOLDEN.

A little boy, Earnest H——, says to his mother: "This is to-day; to-morrow is coming; but where is yesterday?"

Mother! some things I want to know,
Which puzzle and confuse me so.
To-day is present, as you say;
But tell me, where is Yesterday?

I did not see it as it went;
I only know how it was spent—
In play and pleasure, though in pain.
Then why won't it come back again?

To-day the sun shines bright and clear
And then To-morrow 's drawing near.
To-day—O, do not go away,
And vanish like dear Yesterday.

'T is when the sun and all the light
Has gone, and darkness brings the night,
It seems to me, you steal away,
And change your name to Yesterday.

And will all That be just the same—
To-day the only name remain?
And shall I always have to say,
To-morrow you 'll be Yesterday?

I wonder when we go to heaven,
If there a record will be given
Of all our thoughts and all our ways
Writ on the face of Yesterdays?

If so, I pray, God grant to me
That mine a noble life may be;
For then I 'll greet with joyous gaze
The dear lost face of—Yesterdays!

Chamber's Journal.

Monroe, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I thought I would write you a few lines for your good paper. I am going to the Methodist Sunday-school; my teacher is named Mrs. Lizzie Garratt. We all like her very much. I have got one little sister, seven years old, named Minnie, and two little brothers; Robbie is ten years old, and my sweet little brother, Daniel, two years old. I expect you are tired of me now, so I will close. Please don't put my letter in the waste basket.

From your little friend,

EUGENIA PIGOT.

February 7, 1881.

A Kind Word at the Right Time.

William and Henry were clerks in a large wholesale establishment. They met one morning on their way to the store and proceeded together. After talking awhile on various subjects the following dialogue took place:

"By the way, William," said Henry, "I understand you were last evening at ——," naming a fashionable billiard saloon.

"A mistake, Henry. I was never in a billiard saloon."

"Well, I thought it very strange when I heard it."

"Why so?"

"Why?" said Henry, in astonishment. "Why, because you are a religious young man and a church member."

"Do you ever visit such places, Henry?"

"O, yes; but that is quite a different matter. I don't profess to be a Christian, you know."

"You would think it wrong for me to be there?"

"Of course I should."

"And right for yourself?"

"Well, yes; there's no harm in my being there."

"Why not?"

"Why, because—because I do not profess to be bound by the same obligations that you are."

"And who has released you from those same obligations and imposed them upon me?"

"O, well, now, there's no use in talking, William; you know that Christians do not and ought not engage in what they consider pernicious amusements."

"I certainly do know that they ought not; but I wish to know why it is wrong for them and right for others."

"You know the fact that it is so."

"No, I do not know that it is; and I wish to call your attention to the truth that the obligation to refrain from evil rests upon every rational human being in a Christian land. God has commanded all men to love and obey him; also, to the fact that the difference between the Christian and the sinner is that one acknowledges the obligation, while the other denies it; and that the denial does not remove the obligation. God has not invited you to love him if you prefer to do so; but he has absolutely commanded you and me to love and obey him. I have the right, if you have, to engage in any kind of amusements; and to follow my inclinations in all things; and it is your duty, equally with mine, to honor our Master's law by shunning every wicked way. Think of this, friend Henry, I entreat you, and acknowledge the responsibility which you can not remove; and which, after accepting, you would not desire to be released from."

They had arrived at the store, and each went to his own department. These young men had entered the employment of Y. H. & Sons at the same time, about two year before the above conversation occurred. William had gained the confidence of his employers, and had risen in position. The senior partner intended retiring from business, and was looking about for a Christian young man of ability and energy to propose as a partner for his sons; and had lately been thinking of William as a suitable person. He had observed him closely, and thought he saw in him the habits and qualifications necessary to make a business man.

He had also been watching Henry's course. He had heard of him at places where a young man who aspires to positions of truth and honor will never be seen, and was about proposing his discharge to the other members of the firm. He knew that a clerk whose style of living requires more money than his salary gives him will be very likely, indeed almost sure, to resort to dishonest practice to make up the deficiency. Instances of this kind are every day occurring in our cities; and as long as we meet, as we may every morning and evening in the Broadway stages, dainty looking young men, dressed in finer, fresher broadcloth than their employers wear, with heavy gold chains, fine chronometers, and diamond pins and rings, we may expect to hear of a great many more."

That morning's conversation made a deep impression on Henry's mind. The subject had never been presented to him in that light before. He had imagined, as young persons are apt to suppose, that no moral responsibility rested upon him until he assumed it fully by uniting with the church.

He knew, of course, of the future misery of the wicked; but he did not mean to die a sinner. O, no, he fully intended, after he had enjoyed what he considered the pleasures of youth, to settle down into Christian manhood. After this talk with William he could not get rid of the idea of accountability to his God. His wicked amusements and extravagant habits appeared to him as they had never done before, and he began to see their inevitable tendency. The result was an entire change in his aims and conduct. This was so marked that it very soon became known to all of his associates, and of course, to his employers.

He remained in that house; gradually rising to the highest clerkship, and, finally, becoming the junior partner of the firm of which William had for some time been a member. His happiness and prosperity he always attributed to the word kindly spoken at the right time by his fellow-clerk. He has been successful not only as a merchant, but as a Christian, exercising a powerful influence for good upon all about him, but particularly upon the young men employed in his house.—Ladies' Repository.

Dandy.

Dandy lived on a farm in Rhode Island, and had become quite famous for his sagacity. Mr Bundy, his master, had several friends at his home, and in speaking to them about Dandy, said, "He seldom fails to do whatever I set him at. Sometimes I am almost certain that I see human intelligence in his eyes."

The company were all anxious to see what he could do. They were trying to think of something to the purpose, when Harry, a bright little fellow, exclaimed, "Papa, I know something that I don't believe Dandy can do." Then he whispered to his father, saying, "Dandy mustn't hear me, because he knows every word I say."

Dandy looked as if he knew perfectly well what was going on, and stood quietly by, as if sure of his ability to perform any task set him. Showing him a handkerchief, his master said, "This is what we want, old fellow," and directed that he be taken to the barn, and chained.

Harry hid the handkerchief under the cushion of grandma's easy-chair, and grandma promised to remain seated in the chair. Then Harry ran out to the barn, shouting to Dandy to come and find the handkerchief.

Dandy trotted up to the house, made a careful survey, and finally begged to be admitted into grandma's room. There, after looking around as before, he at last placed his fore-paws on grandmother's lap, and looked his wish that she would leave the chair.

"Down, Dandy!" cried grandma, "I must not be disturbed to-day; go away!" But Dandy continued his appeal, wagging his tail, and now and then giving vent to a short, sharp bark.

At length he slowly walked to the open fire, stretched himself before it, and appeared to sleep. Occasionally, however, one eye would carefully turn upon the grandmother, showing it was only a game he was playing to put her off her guard.

Some time passed in this way, when suddenly he sprang up; and no mischief ever had mischief more plainly written on his face, than had Dandy at this moment. Grandmother's bed was her special care. It was always white as snow, and perfectly arranged. Upon this lay the dog, sprang, and began tossing the clothes with his teeth and paws.

"Harry," cried grandma, "take Dandy away! Down, down! naughty dog, down!"

"O, grandma," begged Harry, "do let him stay, do let him stay, just to see what he will do."

But, all of a sudden, Dandy changed his course. Jumping from the bed with a pillow between his teeth, he ran to the fire-place, and threw the pillow directly upon the blazing fire.

Grandma, with a scream, hastened to save the pillow, when Dandy rushed to the chair, pulled out the cushion, seized the handkerchief, and rushed with it in triumph to his master.

"Dear old Dandy!" cried Harry, and he fell on his neck, hugging and kissing him, Dandy very modestly receiving the praise for his success.—The Nursery.

FROGGIES RIDE.—As I was passing a little pond in a meadow near by, the other morning, I saw a mother duck and her four ducklings fast asleep in the grass at the edge of the pond. Every spoon-bill was tucked away under the wing, and I was just thinking what a nice nap they were having after their morning bath, when a saucy little frog no bigger than a quarter of a dollar, jumped out of the grass, plump on to the back of one of the ducklings.

Now, when a frog takes a leap I never know where they are going to come down and I don't believe that half the time they know themselves.

Poor little duckie woke up with a bounce, and that woke the whole family up. The mother quacked, and the little ducks giggled; but the more duckie squirmed the more froggie held on with his little fingers and crouched down into his feather bed. All at once a bright thought came into duckie's head. She waddled down the bank and swam off into the deep water, the mother and brothers and sisters all following, "Indian file." The frog lifted up his head and looked about him; then settled himself down for a pleasant sail over the pond.

The poor duckling shook herself and ducked her head under water, but her little tormentor held on bravely. Finally she dived down head foremost until I could see nothing more of her than her stubby little tail and the paddling web feet, and nothing at all of froggie. In a second up she came, wiggled her tail, shook out her feathers and struck for the shore, all the family following in high glee, no doubt thinking she had drowned froggie. I shouldn't wonder if it was his first and last ride on a duckie's back.—Youth's Companion.

"WHO'LL PRAY NOW?"—In a family where there are two young children the mother has been a Christian for a number of years. The father commenced to live a Christian life only a few months ago. For some time the mother has asked a blessing at the table. A short time since she was taken sick and confined to her room. When the family came to sit down at the table without mother, the youngest child, a boy three years of age, said, "Papa, who'll pray now; mother's sick? Shall I say, 'Now I lay me down to sleep?'" The father took up his cross, and since then has performed his duty. "A little child shall lead them."—Congregationalist.

—A modern novel has this thrilling passage; "With one hand he held her beautiful golden head above the chilling wave, and with the other called loudly for assistance."

Christian Advocate.

Organ of the Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences of the M. E. Church, South.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

Rev. J. W. Rush. Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt,
Rev. C. B. Galloway, Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1881.

Confessing Christ.

The obligation is not met by a moral life. However exemplary this may be, the demand of the gospel goes beyond it, and requires a personal recognition of Christ as the Son of God and the Saviour of the world. A man of the world may claim to be as good as any Christian, as blameless in deportment, as generous in his charities, and as amiable in his disposition. But this is nothing to the point, unless he has given in his allegiance to Christ. Neither is the obligation met by a religion in which Christ is not the object of faith and obedience. However devout any of the Jews were, and however zealous for the worship of God, they were required to accept Christ as the promised Messiah, and to confess him as the Redeemer of men. Those who believed in God must also believe in Christ. No morality, no religion can relieve us from the obligation to receive Christ and to confess him before men. We may say, that it matters not, so the life is upright, what the faith may be. But if moral goodness and virtue were possible without Christ, still the duty of confessing him remains.

There is a duty direct and personal to Christ. Our argument with the moralist, the deist or the atheist need not be that he is corrupt and sinful, and that all his claims to goodness and benevolence are a sham and a delusion. If we were to concede all, still the supreme guilt of ignoring or rejecting Christ rests upon him. All to whom Christ has been proclaimed, whatever their lives may be, are under condemnation if they refuse him as their Lord and Saviour. "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him." We might perhaps truly explain that without faith in Christ it is impossible to attain to spiritual life, and consequently to eternal blessedness. But the wrath that hangs over the unbeliever seems to be threatened because of his unbelief. On this single ground, of rejecting Christ or neglecting to receive him, is he excluded from the hope of life. The same conclusion is forced upon us by Paul's declaration: "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema Maran-atha." Whatever love he may have for men, for country, for kindred, and whatever of benevolence may be in him, still every man is accursed who loves not Christ. Christ's demand upon us is absolute. This supreme personal love to him must be yielded, or his coming to judgment can have for us nothing but terror and condemnation. Nothing can substitute faith and love for the person of the Saviour.

If we were to admit that, for practical morality, the teachings of Confucius and Buddha were as good as those of the gospel, still there would be no release from the claims of Christ upon us. Neither, if we allow that the moral code and worship of the Jews are pure and spiritual, does this fact free them from the obligation to accept the yoke of Christ. It is becoming common to say that one religion is as good as another if only the outward life be right. But, if this were so, then there would be no obligation to believe in Christ or to confess him. This religious indifferentism is largely owing to the fact that the supreme and absolute claims of Christ to our allegiance have become obscure. The true test of rightness is this question of our personal relation to Jesus Christ. Comparisons in moral conduct and experience may have their value, but we are shut up to the one irreversible declaration that without faith in Christ there is no life, that without love to Christ a fearful judgment awaits us.

This clear, distinctive allegiance and personal adherence to Christ is not always sufficiently prominent in the religious profession. It is not a muddled and obtuse subscription to a lengthy creed, but it is rather the acceptance of Christ as an atoning sacrifice, as our prophet, priest and King. We come to the church, and into the church, but the essential and comprehensive thing is that we come to Christ. It is a solemn transaction between us and Christ, in which we renounce all for him, and espouse his cause and service. It becomes a conscious sense of Christ in the heart, of Christ living in us, and that he loved us and gave himself for us. Confessing Christ is that which distinguishes the Christian from the world of unbelief, from a religion of mere morality, and from every system that excludes Christ as the Son of God, the ground of righteousness and the object of a personal and living faith.

Christians may well seriously consider under what obligations this confession brings them. We do not now refer to the rules and Discipline of the church, but to what is directly due to Christ, whom they confess before the world as their Lord and Redeemer. Have they put on the Lord Jesus Christ, or are they making provisions for the flesh to fulfill the lusts thereof? Where there has been a formal confession, is there no practical denial of him whom they have vowed to honor and obey? We do not inquire what profession they have made in matters of inward experience, or of degrees and state of grace, but are they faithful in their confession of Christ? Having taken him for their Lord, and having renounced covetousness, worldliness and fleshly lusts, are they walking consistently with their personal vows and duty to Christ? It is a fatal omission not to confess Christ. There is no hope for those who deliberately refuse to take his yoke upon them. But what is the condition of those who both confess and deny him—of those who have declared their allegiance to the Son of God, and at the same time put him to an open shame by their frivolity and love of the world? The self-denial and heroism of the early confessors are needed now. It requires as much courage to stand up for Christ to-day as it did in the time of the apostles. The opposing forces of Satan are marshalled on somewhat different lines, and with other tactics, but the powers of darkness are in formidable array. It is a time for vigilance, and for every follower of Christ to be sober, and to watch unto prayer.

The right of society to protect itself by prohibiting the opening of drinking houses and the sale of inebriating beverages can hardly be disputed. There are some poisons, the sale of which is conditioned upon a physician's certificate or prescription. The sale of bad meat is a criminal offense in our cities; and we suppose that the right to enact laws against the adulterations of food, where such adulterations imperil life and health, would be questioned by few. The principle involved is much the same as in the prohibition of the sale of spirituous liquors. This sale is the cause of the greater part of the crimes and miseries of every community. Whisky is infinitely worse than rotten meat; it is far more destructive of life than all other poisons combined. The moral right to prohibit would seem to be clear. There is no moral right to permit such a fearful enemy to the well-being of the people. Illuminating oils, since there is danger to life and property from the sale of explosive kinds, are subject to inspection, and those that are under a certain test are excluded by law. If life and property may be protected in the matter of illuminators, why may it not be in regard to beverages which burn up more property and inflict damage to life and character a thousand times greater than that from all the explosive oils in the world. Government exercises a rigid oversight in regard to steamboat boilers, the qualification of engineers and pilots, and over many other things where the lives, property and comfort of the people are concerned. This it not an equal right to regulate the sale of commodities and of beverages so as to exclude that which is pernicious, and to prohibit that which brings untold suffering and widespread calamities upon all classes. The rum-seller really has no rights in the premises, and with society it is only a question as to the most effectual means and measures for suppressing him.

Nothing that can be done will ever drive intemperance wholly out of the world. The most stringent prohibitory laws will not entirely prohibit. But they will greatly lessen the evil, and be a means of immense alleviation. Drunkenness cannot be altogether suppressed, but it may be repressed and greatly lessened. We are in favor of prohibition, of local option, of any and all legislation that assumes and asserts the right to prohibit, and that stamps the liquor traffic as a crime against society. We hope the time will come when public opinion will assert the principle, that the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is a crime, and that a civilized government has no right to license crime. Local option is good, and Sunday closing is good, and pint laws or gallon laws may yield a trifling benefit, but we need a public opinion and a public conscience against licensing of crime, and that refuse to recognize the sale of intoxicants as a beverage as anything but a crime.

We do not see how Christian men can have but one conviction on this subject. They may differ as to what is practicable and possible in legislation now, but we do not see how any Christian man can oppose local option, or concede for a moment that there is anywhere the moral right to deal in inebriating drinks. If appetite and gain were excluded from the consideration of the subject, we verily believe that the devil would be the only advocate of the whisky traffic in the universe.

—We regret to learn that the Northern Methodist brethren of Ames' Church, in this city, have had some trouble among themselves of late. The greater number, we understand, desired the return of their late pastor, the young and eloquent Dr. Bristor, who had been with them the two past years. But there were opposing influences, and at the Conference, a short time ago, Bishop Foss transferred Dr. Bristor to the Wilmington Conference, and appointed Rev. W. C. Webb to succeed him as pastor of Ames' Church.

This created no small stir and excitement in the camp, the matter was ventilated in the city papers, and the Bishop was petitioned to reconsider his action. The Bishop, however, stands firm, and Mr. Webb arrived late last week, and was announced to preach on Sunday. When Sunday morning came the steps at the entrance of the church had entirely disappeared, and the doors of the Sunday-school chapel and church were locked, and policemen were on guard. An entrance, however, was effected at the Sunday-school hour, when, behold, the floor of the chapel had been torn up and the furniture piled pell-mell in the audience room of the church! The Webbites were not to be defeated in this way, and, in spite of these untoward obstacles, services were held, and Mr. Webb preached. We have been informed that the floor of the chapel, and the front steps of the church, were really much decayed, and that the official board decided that last Saturday was an opportune time to begin the much-needed repairs, maugre the fact that the new pastor was advertised to preach the next day.

This locking the doors on the duly appointed pastor, and the attempt to make his opening service impracticable, looks very naughty. It is, indeed, rebellion and revolution, and a perverse attempt to obstruct the order and law of the church. Mr. Webb and his friends are in the line of law, and of course will hold the fort. We presume that neither Dr. Bristor nor Mr. Webb has had anything to do in fomenting this strife. Each has obeyed the mandate of the Bishop, the latter by vacating and the former by occupying the pulpit.

The affair has created quite a sensation, and one of which the secular press has made much. We refer to it as a matter of current news, regretting that our Northern brethren have resorted to such strange and unseemly measures, and that they cannot be at peace among themselves. If they will suffer the word of exhortation, we would say: "Let brotherly love continue," and, in the words of one whom they probably reverence next to Paul, we would offer the gentle and wise admonition: "Let us have peace."

—Dr. Marshall's excellent memorial sketch of Dr. Watkins will be found on our second page. It will, of course, be read by thousands of our people. Ministers of the gospel may study it to advantage, and our young men will find in it an incentive and inspiration to noble and useful lives. Dr. Watkins, in his life, labors, attainments and usefulness, illustrated what the Methodist itinerancy is as an educating institution. Bishop Marvin was another illustration of the merits of our great training school. He always declared that he was a graduate of "Brush College." Colleges and theological seminaries are valuable, but the itinerancy by itself, or as a post graduate course, is a wonderfully effective educating agency.

Among the Figures.

In the Wesleyan of last week there is a comparison of the figures reported, for 1880, to the North Georgia Conference with those reported to the Southwest Missouri. It shows that the North Georgia paid per member for ministerial support $160, and for missions twenty-two cents, and that the Southwest Missouri paid $200 for the one and twenty-eight cents for the other. It is also stated that for missions the German Conference leads all, with over ninety cents per member, and the Western Texas comes next, with thirty-one cents.

The article made me turn to the minutes of the Alabama Conference, and examine them as I never did before. Permit me to give some results of the examination, with a reflection now and then. But let me say first it always seemed uncivilized to estimate manhood by the number of pounds one can lift, or the number of inches he measures on the door post; and unchristian to fix an opinion of a man's or a community's religious character by arithmetical rules and tables of denominate numbers. Figures do not lie when applied to abstract quantity, to distances, to surfaces and solids, but they cannot be so absolutely relied on when applied to the exercises and relationships of the soul. In every piece of Christian work there are factors, both in the operation and the results, which are incapable of mathematical statement. Zeal is not measured by the yard, nor faith by the ounce. Nor can the final results of zeal and faith combined be always expressed in terms of Federal money. The Saviour settled this truth when he said of the poor widow that her two mites were more than the much the rich men had cast into the treasury, and also when he compared the Pharisee and Publican at prayer in the temple. And yet he frequently employed numbers himself, did so in both these cases. And so must we. We cannot avoid it. But we must never forget that figures cannot state all the case, and consequently we must not fix our opinions by their apparent significance.

In round numbers, then, the Alabama Conference has 31,000 members; paid for preaching at home (Bishops, domestic missionaries, presiding elders and preachers in charge) $72,544, or $2 33 per member; and for preaching in other lands, $3,792, or twelve cents per member. In the support of the home work we are ahead of these Conferences, but in supporting the foreign work we are far, very far, behind the hindermost, paying about one-half of what the North Georgia does. That looks ugly. Cannot we catch up? Is it want of means or want of will that puts us so far in the rear? In both these items the Montgomery district leads as to the whole amount raised, the Selma as to the amount paid per member, and the Eufaula as to the approximation of the amount raised to the amount assessed. But there is precious little ground for glorying on the part of either of them.

The missionary fund fell nearly $1,000 behind the assessment. Had the collection been twice as large as it was we would have been a cent or two ahead of the North Georgia, but still far below the measure of our obligation to the blessed Master. Such contributions hardly save the Methodism of Alabama from the disgrace of hardshellism. And, if they continue, must inevitably kill us out as a church in the State. But we are doing better; did better last year by $270; that is, grew in this grace at the wonderful rate of nearly one cent per member in twelve months. And the resolutions we recorded show that we intend no longer to "live at this poor dying rate." As to allowances for preachers, I cannot find an extravagant one in the whole list. In so large a number of boards managing any affairs other than those of the church, and fixing the pay of the principal officers employed to work for them, it would not have been at all strange if a few had gone beyond the bounds of prudence and assessed pampering salaries. But not one can be found in these minutes. I do not say that these allowances are mean and niggardly, but I do say that in consulting them the preachers will not "wax fat." Of the 116 charges only 36 actually paid what they promised. It is but just to state, however, that some of the deficient charges have done better in this matter than any that sent up clean papers, as Milton, for instance, which leads the whole Conference with a fraction over $8 per member for ministerial support. Yet there stands that unpaid balance of $10,059 35; quite a big sum to so few preachers; quite a small sum to so many members, but uncollectable. I have often questioned whether anything at all will be said about these things on the judgment day.

These deficiencies are very serious matters, evils of the gravest character, doing incalculable damage by embarrassing the ministry to an extent, in many cases, almost ruinous, and by corrupting the conscience of the church to an extent, in some cases, absolutely destructive to all moral and religious power. The preachers can live better without receiving these amounts than the church can without paying them. There is a sure remedy for these things, as there is for every form of sin. It lies first in the getting of more religion, and second in the changing of our methods. But enough for the present on this subject.

We are having a terrible east wind and rain storm. It began on Friday, and has kept up furiously since then, day and night, with only an occasional lull. Hope it may prove to be the storm usually attending the vernal equinox, though it is full one month ahead of time.

J. W. R.

Test Your Powers.

The injunction to every one to whom the gospel comes is: "Work to-day in my vineyard." It is sad to see so many who appear to think that they have fulfilled the command when they have gone into the vineyard. They seem to have no idea of the gist of the command. They seem to think that God calls men into his vineyard to be looked at; that if they have obeyed the call to go into the vineyard they have met all the demands. Thus they make the Lord less wise than man. What farmer employs people to idle about his premises? What shop-man engages clerks to stand around and do nothing? The command of God is imperative. Work is the law of spiritual life. Imlolence is death. If a man would obtain the comforts of this life, and have pleasure in them, he must work for them. The same truth holds in the spiritual realm. The reason there is so much negative religion in the church is because there are so many church members who do not "work to-day in the Lord's vineyard." But a brother says: "What can I do?" We do not know what you can do, brother, but it is fair to suppose that you can do something, or the Lord would not have called you into his church. Grace supplies a man with abundant resources with which to accomplish all that God has for him to do. These resources constitute a man's power. They are given in proportion to a man's capacity for receiving, and his ability for using. No man has too little. No man has too much. If you know not what you can do, you can certainly try your resources. You can test your powers. No man knows what he can do until he has some notion of the resources within his reach. If God imposes duty, the ability to perform is surely present. It is absurd to say: "I can't do what I ought to do." Test your powers, brother, and find out where your strength is. Every man has a talent for doing some kind of work in the Lord's vineyard, and in the majority of cases it is a talent for doing what are called "little things." The process of testing your powers will reveal the spring of power, and that revelation will be an inspiration of the knowledge of power possessed which will astound you. God says: "Take hold of my strength." This testing process is a strengthening process. A man's experience in the use of divine grace strengthens the moral powers, so that what was difficult becomes easy of execution. Test your powers, brother, and see how surely you will become "strong in the Lord." This testing process is an enlarging process. Growth is the law of religion. A wise use of grace to-day makes room for a larger measure to-morrow. Test your powers, brother, and see how fast you will grow. Remember that the emphatic word in the Lord's command is: "To-day."

C. W. C.

The Model Preacher.

BY R. H. RIVERS, D. D.

Preaching is a great calling. It is not a profession. Its origin is of God. Its object is to save souls. The model preacher is one called of God to this work. He has not presumptuously called himself, nor selfishly placed himself in this high office. He probably had great struggles before entering it. His unworthiness, his weakness, his utter inability to represent the court of Heaven as an embassador for Christ, caused him to turn with fear and trembling from a work involving so much responsibility and offering so few inducements to worldly ambition. Before taking the solemn vows of this sacred office he was deeply and mightily moved by the Holy Ghost. He felt that a woe deep and terrible was pronounced against him if he preached not the gospel. The conviction of duty, both to God and man, alone caused him to determine to preach Christ and call sinners to repentance.

God calls no unconverted man to this work. Hence the model preacher is a converted man. He has passed from death to life, from nature to grace. He knows by experience the pangs of repentance. His soul has thrilled with the joys of the new birth. He is a regenerate man. He is born of the Spirit. He enjoys communion with God. He has a deep spiritual experience of the pardon of sins, and of a thorough change of heart. He has Christ within him, the hope of glory. His peace flows like a river, and his joy is unspeakable and full of glory.

He is a student. He searches for truth. He seeks to be a polished workman. He knows that instead of ignorance being the mother of devotion it is the mother of superstition, and often the fountain of crime. He is eager to gain the highest knowledge. His studies are pursued systematically, thoroughly and perseveringly. He wastes no time. He gathers knowledge from every source within his reach—from nature, from books, from men. But the great mine of truth which he seeks most of all to explore, is found in the Bible. Its teachings are his guide, its holy truths his theme, and its promises his support. He loves the Bible more than a mother her first-born son. He studies it with more than filial affection. It is more needful to him than the chart and compass to the sailor. So he studies the Bible, and brings to his assistance languages, literature, history, science and philosophy, and thereby makes all other knowledge subservient to this, the highest of all.

His preaching is lucid. No obscurity rests upon his utterances. He presents the truth so clearly that all may understand. He exposes sin, confronts error, establishes truth, enforces duty with a clearness which throws around his hearers the very atmosphere of light. His preaching gives no uncertain sound. He is bold, original and convincing. His thoughts are deep, but his feelings are deeper than the sea, and as pure as they are profound. Full of the importance and responsibility of his great mission, he never allows himself to enter the pulpit unprepared. He does not daub with untempered mortar. He dares not offer ideas crude and disconnected. He places the judgment of the great day right before him, and utters every word as in the hearing of his Judge. His tongue moves, his heart throbs, his words fall, his appeals come, as though under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. He has a clear, full, strong voice, a distinct articulation, a correct emphasis and a most impressive manner. His eyes flash, his bosom heaves, his countenance almost shines as he utters the grandest truths in words that burn. In every gesture, and in every intonation of his voice, there is the deepest earnestness. Himself is forgotten in the grandeur and glory of his theme. With imagination sanctified, and faculties all consecrated to his Master's cause, he seems all unconscious of the sublimity of his utterances. He places himself behind the cross, and seeks to make it the center and the source of attraction and of power. He aims only to glorify God and to bring souls to Christ. He seeks no honors from men. He makes no effort to gain reputation. He is not a sensationalist. He does not long for flattery from a secular press. He would rather win a soul to Christ and virtue than be enthroned as a monarch or be courted as the greatest orator living or dead.

The model preacher does his best all the time. Whenever he ascends the pulpit it is with this feeling: Something must be said that may save a soul from death. This may be the last sermon that shall ever be heard by some one in this congregation. I must therefore preach in no careless or trifling way. I must preach the truth, and preach it with all the unction that my Master will bestow. His reputation is nothing, while the cause is everything. He is a hero. He wields his bright Damascus blade with the highest courage. He strikes with an unerring aim. He strikes for God and truth. He lives with Christ in his heart. His spirit is bathed in celestial light. He walks on the brink of the spirit world. He hears the echoes of the voice as they come back from the eternal shore. Hence he has all the magnetism of earnestness, and is armed with all the power of truth. The people must listen, for his eloquence is more of heaven than of earth. His appeals to duty must be felt, for they are direct to the heart and conscience. Tears flow, convictions seize, fears alarm, hopes encourage, sinners fall. The church moves, and souls are saved. The model preacher is sustained, first, by the power of his own character. He is a man of blameless life. He is pure in heart. His motives are the highest and his aims the purest. He has no spot upon his robes, for they have been washed in redeeming blood. His character shines with his incorruptible integrity and his unadulterated truth. Then, after bringing all the power of a high character, he adds to it the power of God. He prays, he invokes the spirit, he claims his credentials from Jesus of Nazareth. He preaches under the direct influence of the Spirit divine. The spirit glows and burns and warms and melts in all the mighty truths of this man of God.

Experimental Evidence.

In the year 1867, in company with several preachers, men of no mean ability, I was attending a protracted meeting at George's Chapel, in the Flat Woods, a desolate region of country in the western part of Chickasaw county, Miss. Tuesday the preachers dined with old Sister George, after whose husband the church was named. She was then a poor widow, well advanced in years, living, on her little farm, in a small log house built by her husband a short time before his death. The old lady had been weeding a rough row all along the journey of life. She was unlearned, but very wise. It was with difficulty that she spelled out the words, verses and chapters of her well-worn family Bible. I doubt whether she had ever read five pages of any other books than her Bible, hymn-book and the Discipline of her church. Many well-educated people did not know one-twentieth part as much of these books as dear old Sister George. There was another unwritten volume which she had studied closely in the original, and understood with critical exactness, and that was the human heart. She knew what was in men so well that she "understood them from afar off." That Tuesday, when the preachers dined with old Sister George, and spent the long summer afternoon at her house, there was, in company with them, a gentleman, handsome in appearance, gentlemanly in deportment, and evidently a man of fine cultivation, but unfortunately an avowed skeptic. Indeed, he had fallen into the common but erroneous idea that skepticism is an evidence of strong mind, too strong for the "cunningly-devised fables" found in the word of God, and yet weak enough to believe in a thousand follies far more incredible than anything found in the Divine record. After dinner the company moved out under the beautiful shade trees in the yard. Pretty soon the skeptic, with some degree of boastfulness, avowed his principles and flung his banner of battle to the breeze, and proposed, single-handed and alone, to meet the preachers present on the genuineness and authenticity of the Scriptures, and the credibility of miracles as taught in the New Testament. Three of the preachers, old men, well versed in the word of God, intimately acquainted with theology and used to war of this kind, promptly accepted the challenge. Old doubts and difficulties were brought out by the skeptic with an air of triumph, as if they were new ideas fresh from the virgin soil of his powerful and well-trained mind. These were met by arguments hoary with age, calmly and confidently presented by the preachers, who seemed to have touched bottom in this question, and felt the everlasting Rock underneath them. The skeptic was full of talk, and wanted to monopolize the time. He used his lungs freely and fully, and gesticulated with a vigor that indicated a man of strong physical force. The preachers were perfectly serene, talked in low but earnest tones, and made but few gestures. The skeptic evidently questioned the validity of his skepticism, while the preachers betrayed neither doubt nor fear as to the truth of the word of God. It was a bootless war, however, as wars of words generally are. All this time old Sister George was sitting by, smoking her pipe, knitting now and then, and giving close attention to all that was said. When the whole ground of controversy had been traversed, the skeptic showed signs of going over it all again in another form of words, but the preachers, like Shakespeare, did not want to repeat, so they paused, and for half an hour the skeptic had full sway. At last he paused, too, to take his breath and wait for a reply, but no reply came. Throwing himself back, and swinging his thumbs in the arm-holes of his vest with quite pompous air, he asked: "Well, Mrs. George, don't you think my logic is better than the logic of these gentlemen, and that I have decidedly the advantage in this argument?" "Well, sir," said she, "I don't really know what logic is, and I am not prepared to appreciate the arguments on either side, but one thing I do know and understand. About fifty years ago I was a poor, miserable sinner on the verge of hell. I believed in the Lord Jesus with a heart unto righteousness, and God forgave my sins, and made my soul happy. He gave me a new heart, and sent the Holy Ghost to bear witness with my spirit that I was a child of God. Religion has been my only comfort and joy along life's journey; it has made me glad in the darkest hour, and has been my greatest joy in time of affliction. It has grown sweeter and sweeter to me as the years have passed away. The Bible, sir, is a very precious book to me. Its promises were like a staff in my hand when my dear husband died and went home to God. It brings joy in time of sorrow, light in the hour of darkness, and hope of heaven and rest beyond the grave. If you were to take my Bible from me, sir, you would take all I have, and life would not be worth living. Now, my dear sir, I love God to-day and God loves me, and I know it, for I've got the witness here in my heart, and all your logic and arguments can never take it out. Bless God." This was said with an unction and earnestness that sent the words burning hot to every heart. The skeptic's eyes had grown misty, and, in spite of himself, big tears were falling fast on his manly bosom. Living testimony is worth more than logical arguments in the conversion of souls. That skeptic was converted, and made a useful man, and always called Sister George "Mother." GILDEROY.

Alarming.

Dr. T. S. Cuyler, in the New York Independent very justly laments the small number of conversions and accessions in the Northern Presbyterian Church. But we think he makes a mistake in assuming that the same unsatisfactory condition exists in all the evangelical Churches. There was in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, last year an increase of 51,000 members. There was this increase with "bottom facts" considered and with desertions and deaths substracted. The Southern churches, generally did well last year, we believe. As things are, however, in the North, and in the Northern Presbyterian Church, the brethren up there have reason for alarm. Dr. Cuyler says:

The alarming feature in the present aspect of the Evangelical churches is that the number of accessions is so small—whether by the gradual system or the periodic revival method. Last year the total increase in the number of communicants in the Presbyterian Church exclusive of the Presbyterian Church, South, was only 4,200. This does not include the "U. P.s" or the Cumberland Presbyterians. But when we consider that it includes 5,400 individual congregations, and shows that there was less than one addition to each church, the statement is absolutely appalling. Some statistics equally startling were presented at the Congregational Council. These two denominations are probably no worse off than the Baptists, Methodists, and Dutch and German Reformed, if the "bottom facts" were carefully brought out; for, while there is more or less addition each year to the front rank of the Church armies, there is almost a corresponding mortality at the rear by deaths and desertions. The dearth of revivals has left the great Evangelical bodies of the land almost at a stand-still as to numbers. New churches are springing up in the West, but some old ones in the East are decaying or dying out. The falling off in church attendance over the land is undeniable. All attempts to gainsay or falsify such facts are both cowardly and criminal. The first for our churches to do is to face them. When the returned exiles of Jerusalem were unable to "see the distress" of the city, they soon rang out the cry: "Let us rise up and rebuild!" He is not to be branded as a grumbler or a pessimist who uses unpalatable truth, either as a lancet or as a purge. If we should succeed by the arts of arithmetic in blinding ourselves, we cannot deceive God.

When the apostle says, "we have all sinned and come short of the glory of God," he indicates the precise point of human failure. The literal meaning of the glory of God is the showing forth of God, the manifestation of God, the chromosphere in which God dwells. Man was made to show forth this glory. He has failed to do so—has come short. This is his sin; this is his ruin. Man shows forth the glory of wealth, of position, of intellect, of culture, of genius, of achievement. God made him to show forth himself. This is God's glory and man's glory, for they are one and inseparable. But he came short. Yet God did not leave him here. He was too valuable even in his ruin and misery to be abandoned, and so God came and put himself into that ruined nature, lifting it up into union with the divine, and securing it all in a new line of development. The head of the new family, around whom should be gathered children, in whom and through whom he could realize the highest purposes of love. And so in the revision when it was told Christ that his brethren and mother stood without inquiring for him, he asks, "Who is my mother, and my brethren?" and then goes on to answer himself: "Whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother." Thus to my brethren, because I came into their nature. But I have come into their nature to lift them into mine, and to constitute a family, not upon the old human but upon the new divine basis concerning which the genealogists of the old foundation was slated to be, gave way under the first assaults of Satan; but the divine family is founded on the everlasting Rock of Ages, against which the whole power of hell shall not prevail. Rev. Dr. J. M. Chapman in New York Christian Advocate.

Here is the way the Christian Register talks to some of its correspondents:

"Made a mistake in your article, did they? The wonder was that they could read it at all. Perhaps, if you try, you can make it absolutely illegible every time. Get a stub pen, write in a very fine hand, use pale ink and thin paper, write on both sides of the page, up, down, and across, till it is full of curls, sprinkle it all over with obscure proper names, write the two first letter in each name, and wriggle out the rest. We know everything here. Our proof-reader has the whole encyclopedia by heart, from Burgundy pitch to Seltzer water. You couldn't mention anybody we hadn't heard of. We read in all languages. We have read every book that you can quote. It isn't worth while to mark where your quotation ends. We can always tell you from something else. Do all this, if you wish to, but remember that every Thursday morning our brain cylinder rolls around like a day of Judgment, and that, with every sheet that falls from the fly, the persecuted compositor may have his revenge."

"We returned two weeks ago, says the New York Independent, to the want of good judgment in Dr. J. P. Newman's letter in the Northwestern of the 22d. We could now use stronger language. It turns out that his attack on the Drew Theological Seminary, and the trustees, who have given like princes for its relief, and his charge of partisanship in the election of Dr. S. F. Upham, and various other dissatisfactions, have all come from the fact that he was himself a candidate for the professorship of pratical theology, and out of thirty-three votes cast he received only two! Does it not look like a grim joke on the part of the Methodist bishops to have nominated him? It is entirely too late in the day to criticise Bishop Hurst's relation to Drew Theological Seminary. He gave eight years of intense work to that institution and its existence is now a fact, and the trustee have shown their appreciation of his labors by endowing a professorship and calling it the "Hurst Professorship."

Rev Dr. Patterson, writing to the Nashville Christian Advocate from the City of Mexico, January 22, says:

Our work in Michoacan is doing as well as could be expected, under the circumstances. In Morelia, the capital of this State, and in some other towns, we are beginning to feel that we have a footing. We have been holding public services for a few months past, but not without much difficulty. In Morelia a strong guard has been necessary to keep back the mob. Much opposition has been waged by the priests and those who serve them. A man recently gave to the populace two hundred knives with which to attack the Protestants, but was soon afterward himself killed in an attack by robbers upon a diligence. A short time since a city paper announced the establishment of Protestant worship in the State of Michoacan "by the help of the soldiers," making comment on the extreme fanaticism of the priests and their subjects. To-day the liberal papers publish, with severe criticism, the excommunication, by the Archbishop of Morelia, of all the State and city officers concerned, directly or indirectly, in allowing the Protestants a footing in that State. As this includes the Governor, Mayor, etc, we expect to hear more of the matter; and although we may get many bumps on the way, we shall doubtless find ourselves well established in that fanatical, oppressed section of the country. The field is rich, but we shall have to work to reap.

The Richmond Christian Advocate of February 17, writing of Rev. John Hannon's new charge in Richmond, Va., says:

Large audiences have been attending the Sunday services at Park Place for the past few weeks, and much interest has been manifested in the regular weekly meetings. Some dozen or more persons have recently been added to the membership on profession of faith. The church was packed to overflowing on last Sunday night, and such was the interest manifested, that the pastor, Brother Hannon, gave notice that services would be held every night of this week. We trust the fervent zeal of our brother may be crowned with an abundant harvest of souls.

Mr. Spurgeon does not believe in homiletical monthlies and such like helps for ministers. He says: "We must be a very feeble tribe if we need such assistance. Go-carts, whistles, sucking bottle and carols were evidently made for an infantine race, and if we may judge preachers by the helps prepared for them, they must many of them be still in long clothes and bibs and hoods."

Our latest advices from the City of Mexico, says the Central Christian Advocate, pronounce the Christmas and watch-night services held there "grand successes." The week of prayer was observed with interest. The Presbyterians and Southern Methodists united with our own congregations. The attendance was full and an excellent spirit prevailed.

Appointments of Rev. J. W. Lambuth.

Bro. Lambuth, superintendent of our China missions, writing from Ocean Springs, Miss., February 19, says:

"We are now in Ocean Springs, and find the weather delightful. My cough is gone, my appetite never better, my strength rapidly returning, and it seems I cannot get sleep enough. I began to improve three weeks since, and to-day I am astonished at myself. It is all through the blessing of God in answer to prayer. If the church ever expects to get a sanitarium for her missionaries, or broken down missionaries, she could not do better than to get it now, and on this coast somewhere. Well, I will write you more about this in future. Here are a few of some appointments I have made. I have written to the preachers stationed at these places, but by inserting this notice in your paper it will give greater publicity to them.

"LIST OF APPOINTMENTS.

"February 27, Sunday, Moss Point, Miss.; March 2, Wednesday, Citronelle, Ala.; 6, Sunday, Shubuta, Miss.; 8, Tuesday, Enterprise, Miss.; 10, Thursday, Meridian, Miss.; 13, Sunday, Starkville, Miss.; 16, Wednesday, Brandon, Miss.; 18, Friday, City of Springs, Miss.; 20, Sunday, Brookhaven, Miss.; 22, Tuesday, Jackson, Miss.; 27, Sunday, Natchez, Miss.; 31, Thursday, Madison Station, Miss. April 3, Sunday, Canton, Miss.

"Cannot tell where I shall go from Canton; possibly to Montgomery, Ala."

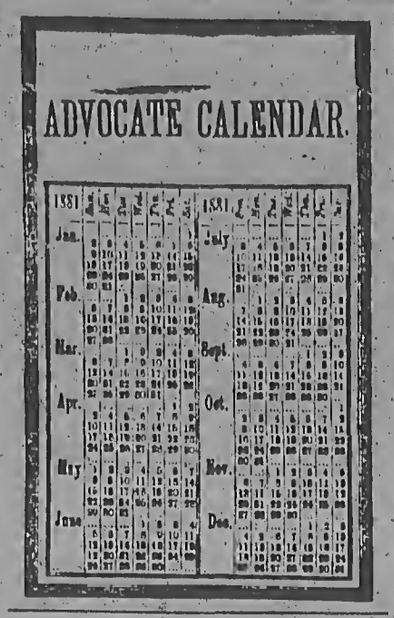
—Before our next issue the carnival will have culminated and ended. And from this writing, Tuesday, February 22, the excitement will grow until after midnight March 1. The incalculable amount of extravagance and dissipation which this annual fete engenders is its shallow pretension. The tide of worldliness reaches its flood at this time, and the delirium of mirth and pleasure pervades nearly all classes of society. The like is not to be seen anywhere else in America, and hardly in Europe. For ourselves, we wish New Orleans were well rid of it. It is one of the severest tests of Christian fidelity, and happy are they who in the midst of this almost universal madness and folly keep themselves unspotted from the world. Our pastors have lately uttered the voice of warning, and have endeavored to fortify their people against the dangers of the hour. Notwithstanding, there will be some spiritual shipwrecks, and Christ will be wounded in the house of some who profess to be his friends. Nothing that we can write will in the least arrest this insane orgie, or lessen the stream of dissipation that is pouring in upon us. But possibly some who are wavering in their allegiance to Christ, and are ready to break their vows to God, may pause before the step is taken, and resist the devil before they become hopelessly entangled in his net. May Christ's followers in these days of exceeding peril be kept from "the evil."

—Tuesday, Washington's birthday, was a high day in New Orleans. The city filled with visitors gathering for the approaching Mardi-Gras riot, was also visited by two splendid military companies from down East, the Boston Lancers, and the Charlestown Cadets. These, along with our own citizen soldiery, made a fine military display. The shipping was gaily dressed in bunting, and an endless expanse of stars and stripes was thrown to the breeze from public and private buildings. The weather was bright and cool, and everything seemed to contribute to the interest of the occasion.

Periodicals.

—THE SOUTHERN PULPIT.—The February No. of this Magazine of Sermons has been brought out in the choice garb of the printer's art. The table of contents tells of the valuable contribution this periodical is making to sermonic literature. SERMONS.—I. Absolution: By Rev. T. U. Dudley, Bishop of Kentucky. II. Ministerial Obligation: Rev. James A. Duncan, late President of Randolph Macon College, Va. III. The Mission and Ministry of Isaiah: Rev. T. D. Witherspoon, D. D., Pastor Presbyterian Church, Petersburg, Va. IV. The Soul's Rest: Rev. W. W. Tudor, D. D., Pastor Centenary Methodist Church, St. Louis, Mo. V. A Glorious Church: Rev. J. L. Burrows, D. D., Pastor Baptist Church, Louisville, Ky.—OUTLINES OF SERMONS.—VI. Christian Call and Conduct: Rev. F. P. Mullally, D. D., Pastor Presbyterian Church, Lexington, Va. VII. Systematic Beneficence: Rev. T. W. Hooper, D. D. Pastor First Presbyterian Church, Selma, Ala. VIII. Man's Sinfulness Universal: Rev. G. L. Leyburn, D. D., Pastor Presbyterian Church, Lexington, Mo. IX. House of Prayer: Rev. E. T. Winkler, D. D., Pastor Siloam Baptist Church, Marion, Ala.—SUGGESTIONS ON TEXTS.—X. Life to Come: Rev. Joseph Packard, D. D., Professor Theological Seminary, Va. XI. Purity: Rev. H. M. Jackson, Rector Grace Church, Richmond, Va. XII. Choice of Service: Rev. W. P. Wright, Pastor Laurel Street Church, Richmond, Va.—HOMILETICAL ILLUSTRATIONS.—XIII. Subject: Bible: fifty-five illustrations.—Book Review. Price $1.50 a year. Address, Southern Pulpit, Richmond, Va.

—Our Sunday-school periodicals for March are out in good style. The Magazine has two or three excellent articles from contributors. The expository notes on the lesson by the editor are however the most valuable feature, and worth, to all Sunday-school teachers, ten times the price of the Magazine. Every teachers should have a copy. We take occasion once more to protest against the use in our Sunday-schools of other publications to the exclusion and neglect of our own. Our Nashville periodicals are good, and better than any other for our Southern Methodist Schools. Let us have our own literature. It is loyal, expedient, and to the interest of our church, that we do so.



—The Review of Missions for February has been received. It is a periodical of high grade, a first class missionary journal. The editor, Dr. Wilson, is strong, comprehensive, incisive in his leaders, and his articles calculated to enlarge the plans, strengthen the faith, and stimulate the zeal of the church. We wish our noble missionary paper, "Advocate of Missions," could be read by all Southern Methodists. It would greatly help to make our missionary church. Remember that it is published at Nashville Tenn. A. W. Wilson, D. D., editor and publisher. Price only fifty cents a year.

—The Sunday Magazine for March has an excellent article by the editor, Rev. Alfred Taylor, on "My Home Heathen. It is about the Chinese. For the rest the articles in prose and poetry are numerous, varied, and generally interesting and instructive. There is much in the Sunday Magazine that we cannot specially commend for Sunday reading, but there are many excellent religious articles, and on the whole we are disposed to think that the Magazine is better than it has ever been. The present number shows considerable improvement in the artistic quality of the illustrations.

—The North American Review, 1881, has the following article: 1. Theology in the Public Schools. Bishop A. C. Coxe. 2. The Isthmian Ship-Railway. James B. Eads. 3. The Effects of Negro Suffrage. Chief Justice H. H. Chalmers. 4. The Success of the Free School System. John D. Philbrick. 5. Despotism in Lunatic Asylums. Dorman B. Eaton. 6. The Political attitude of Mormons. Judge J. B. Goodwin. 7. Theological Charlatanism. John Fiske. 8. Recent Publications in Physics Prof. A. W. Wright.

—We have received the Louisiana Journal of Education for February. This publication is greatly needed in Louisiana, and we hope that it will be successful in arousing our people to a deeper interest in the cause of popular education. This Journal is published monthly in New Orleans. Robt. M. Lusher and Wm. O. Rogers, editors and proprietors. Price $1 per annum.

—Appleton's Journal, March 1881, has: Scotch Orthodoxy and Modern Thought; Adventures in Patagonia; The Veterans of Yesterday; Snowdrops; The Criterion of Poetry; Our Saxon of Shakespeare's Famous Characters; Ophelia; Tennyson's new drama; George Eliot; Orlando's Revenge; Some read novels; Heist's Grave, a poem; Editor's Table; Notes for Readers.

Publisher's Department.

☞ We shall do our best to exclude fraudulent advertisements of every description from the ADVOCATE, and we ask our friends, in ordering goods from the leading merchants of New Orleans and elsewhere, as represented in our columns, will mention having seen the advertisement in the ADVOCATE. We will also take pleasure, in attending personally to any commissions for our friends in the country with which we may be favored, while endeavoring our advertisers as being worthy of their patronage.

As a lazy tramp came down the street
With free and easy gait,
This welcome sign his eyes did greet
"Free chops to those who wait."
"Now here, he said, "I'll get some food
Without the slightest tax:
They led him to a pile of wood,
And handed him an ax.

A couple of Sundays ago a lady of this city took her irrepressible four year old to one of our fashionable churches. Directly in front of them sat a man, whose head was utterly denuded of hair, and shone as if it had been polished with an emery wheel. The little fellow caught sight of it, and there was no more quiet for mother or boy. He was excited over the unusual spectacle and wanted to express his feelings, and kept pulling at his mother's cloak, she endeavoring to hush him. Finally, with an extra pull, and came, "Mamma, mamma, that man has got quilting bit skin all over his head," in a loud, wild-per, heard by all around. The sanctity of high churchism was disturbed by a general smile, the man himself participating with the rest.

"Above all things in this world," said a youth who stands on the street corner for a living, "do I value the love of my dear mother." "God bless you, young man, for these noble sentiments," said a missionary. "Having so much love and respect for a mother, you need no other recommendation to successful men who will aid you." "Yes," continued the young man, "mother feeds me, clothes me, does my washing, and has been doing it for twenty-five years. I don't know what I would do without her."

Edward, aged three and a-half, asks for more cookies. "Have you an appetite, Edward," says his father. Edward, reflecting that if he answers "yes," he will be given graham bread, and that if he says "no," he will be told he doesn't need anything more, replies to his father (a minister), "Well, pa, God has given me an appetite for cookies and not for graham bread." He got the cookies.

It was on the Burlington railroad train and politics had given way to theology, and the young man with a million hair dyed the floor and was denouncing the old fashioned idea of hell. "I tell you," he cried, "that was never intended for such a fiendish punishment. God never made me for kindling-wood." "Reckon not," said the old parson, back near the stove; "too green."

"James Jenkins," said a school master to his pupil, "what is an average?" "A thing, sir," answered the scholar promptly, "that hens lay eggs on." "Why do you say that, you silly boy?" replied the pedagogue. "Because, sir," said the youth, "I heard a gentleman say the other day as a hen would lay on an average, 120 eggs a year."

"Now, then, madam, please look steadily at this place on the wall," said a photographer to an old lady, when he had put her head into the slide in the camera. The old lady looked hard at the spot indicated, then got up and walked across the floor and critically inspected it, with the remark: "I don't see anything there."

It was a very honest old Dutchman who on Saturday evening was heard for several hours to curse, gargle and curse and then said: "I erase me I took forty-eight lagers on goin' sides since dare haf been seven forty nice coopies of law prig in up. I tell dat de tree days of a mother Gose dunna, but I shall ewentually vash a Sunday."

W. C. SHEPARD & CO. "American China dinner breakfast and tea sets, 100 pieces $15. Equal of look and finish goes to French China.

"I don't like a cottage built man," said Sonia Sparks to his rich old uncle, who was telling the story of his early trials for the hundredth time. "What do you mean by a cottage built man?" asked his uncle. "A man with fifty-five years of wasted living, sweeps that seldom young man was left out of his uncle's will.

An old lady in a town in Massachusetts refused the gift of a load of coal, a free stock by lightning, the night after that some of the "blind" might remain in the wood, and also disaster to her kitchen stove.

The train had just rolled into the station, and little Charley stood listening a moment to the sound of the escaping steam. Then turning to his father, he said, "Pa, the engine's all out of breath, ain't it?"

Mr. P. Worlein, 135 Canal street, New Orleans, deals in the leading pianos and organs. He requests you to send for his catalogues and prices before purchasing. Low prices, reliable dealing, and full guarantee are to be had at this old house.

They were at a dinner party, and he remarked that he supposed she was fond of ethnology. She said she was, but she was not very well, and the doctor told her not to eat anything for dessert but oranges.

A Syracuse grocer used to smoke his pipe while leaning against his kerosene barrel. His mail now goes to the dead letter office.

Business Notices.

Burnett's Kalliston allays all irritation caused by the bites of mosquitoes.

Because, It adds to Personal Beauty by restoring color and luster to gray or faded hair, and is beneficial in the scalp, is why Parker's Hair Balsam is such a popular dressing.

CANVASSERS make from $35 to $50 per week selling goods for R. G. RIDROUT & CO., 10 Barclay St., New York. Send for Catalogue and terms.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

25 CENTS. SEND 25 CENTS IN POSTAGE STAMPS FOR

A HANDY DICTIONARY!

Giving the spelling, pronunciation and meanings of the words, useful tables, the metric system of weights and measures, a list of foreign words and phrases, alphabetically arranged and many engravings.

A book of 320 pages, bound in cloth, and mailed postpaid on receipt of 25 cents, by

LATHROP & WILKINS,
New Orleans.

WANTED A SITUATION FOR AN EXperienced and well qualified teacher. References to members of faculty of Vanderbilt University. Address, JOHN HUMPHREYS,
Jackson, Miss.

NEW YORK SHOPPING

Of every description for ladies and gentlemen. Household articles bought with discretion, taste and judgment. For circular, address

Mrs. M. C. ADAMS,
P. O. Box, 593, New York.

ENGINE AND BOILER FOR SALE CHEAP.

The engine and boiler used in ADVOCATE office will be sold very low, as we have a new engine on the way and need the room. About eight horse power. Address G. T. LATHROP & CO.,
Advocate Office.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

MANSFIELD, LOUISIANA.

Owned, controlled and managed by the Louisiana Annual Conference.

Course of study equal to any college in the South.

Its roll of pupils has nearly doubled in three months, and still they come. Noted for healthfulness of locality. All at living rates.

Total expense for Spring term, commencing February 14, 1881, only $25 in literary and classical course. Music $30. No extras. Let Louisianians build up their own schools.

A specimen copy of College News free on application. Address REV. J. LANE BOOTHE,
President.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF METHODISM,

BY REV. W. P. BLACK.

Concerning this work Dr. E. Parker editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, says: "The history, statistics, polity and doctrines of Methodism are clearly and correctly stated by the author, and the causes, under God, of the wonderful success of Methodism, are unfolded with much acumen and analytical power. We hope it will be extensively circulated." The Mississippi Methodist says: "The work shows the mind of a master. Every lady, friend or foe of Methodism, ought to read it." Pastors will do a good work by circulating it among their people. One order has been received for three hundred copies for 60 additional distribution. More than a thousand copies were sold within sixty days of its publication. Price 20 cents or $2 per dozen. For sale by LATHROP & WILKINS,
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

DR. EDWARD HARRISON,

112 Canal Street, from 11 to 4 P. M.

NEW ORLEANS.

Carpet and Oil Cloth Warehouse.

ELKIN & CO.,

100 - - - CANAL STREET - - - 100

New styles of

MOQUETTE, VELVET, BODY BRUSSELS, and TAPESTRY BRUSSELS, with border to match.
3-PLY and INGRAINS, in great variety.
OILCLOTHS of all widths.
WINDOW SHADES and CURTAINS, new patterns;
CORNICES and CORNICE POLES.
MATTINGS of every description.
CURTAIN GOODS, TASSELS, CORDS, GIMPS, Etc.
Our prices for corresponding qualities of goods are as low as any house in the South or West.

DR. C. J. BICKHAM,

RESIDENCE AND OFFICE,
220 Jackson St., Bet. Chestnut and College
NEW ORLEANS.
Office Hours: Eight A. M., and three to four P. M.

FIVE FAMOUS OPERAS.

MIGNON. Opera by AMBROISE THOMAS. This very successful opera, first became known in Paris, where it enjoyed a long run, surely worked its way to popularity in this country, and is to-day one of the standards. It is very full, occupies 405 pages, and furnishes to the purchaser quite a library of music and study.

AIDA. Grand Opera by VERDI. Composed and first given in that ancient kingdom, where alone there can be found an appropriate setting. Quite forgotten ages come to life in this stately work, by the thrilling music, one of the most brilliant of composers.

CARMEN. Opera by GEORGES BIZET. A Spanish Opera, founded on Spanish life and Spanish customs. Text in English with the stories, and the original text of the Spanish dialogues, and the translations quite literal, so as to assist with the pronunciation.

MEFISTOFELE. Opera by A. BOITO. Mefistofele is the tempter, and accordingly is the wicked character throughout. A daring composition, romantic and weird, as now widely given, and pronounced a success.

FATINITZA. Opera by F. E. von SUPPE, whose productions are, as a rule, bright and sparkling, and who produces this, in a free and easy and humorous way, to Russia and Turks during the war. Very popular.

Any book mailed, postpaid, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston

C. H. DITSON & CO.,

843 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED.

If you intend sometime to get a copy of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary,

"DO IT NOW."

See Webster's Unabridged, page 1164, giving the name of each sail, showing the value of DEFINITIONS BY ILLUSTRATIONS.

The pictures in Webster, under the 12 words, Beef, Boiler, Castle, Column, Eye, Horse, Moldings, Phrenology, Rowing, Ships, (pages 1163 and 1174) Steam engine, Timbers, define 343 words and terms far better than they could be defined in words.

New Edition of WEBSTER, has 4600 NEW WORDS and Meanings, Biographical Dictionary of over 9700 Names.

Published by G. & C. MERRIAM, Springfield, Mass.

Agricultural.

A PLANT CASE.—Plant cases may be termed miniature greenhouses or conservatories, says Mr. Franks, subject to the same rules and regulations as their larger and more pretentious neighbors, and they are equally capable of giving as much pleasure and entertainment according to their size.

These cases may be made any shape or size, to suit individual taste. Some prefer them octagonal, others quadrangular. They are especially adapted to the growth of ferns and other cryptogams, but, by proper attention to watering and ventilation, many flowering plants may be grown successfully in them. Each class, however, had better be grown in separate cases, as they require different treatment.

Make the box in any form you may desire; let it be about six inches deep; this should be well painted inside and out. At one end, in the bottom, insert a small faucet or wooden plug, to allow the water to pass off if necessary. Put in the bottom about two inches of drainage—it may be broken brick, cinders, or anything of a porous nature, that will absorb water or allow it to pass through freely. Cover the drainage with decayed sod or moss, to prevent the soil from mingling with it, and on this put as much good compost as the box will hold, composed of sand, loam and leaf-mould, about equal parts. In this soil may be planted a variety of plants of small growth, according to taste. The upper portion consists of a permanent framework of wood (black walnut looks well,) or it may be made of iron or zinc. It had better be glazed on all sides and top. The frame may rest in a groove sunk in the box.

Give the plants a good watering, then put the frame on, and they will not require any more air for many weeks. The frame should be taken off for half an hour every morning to admit air, but do not let a cold draught strike them. For ferns and mosses, it will not be necessary to remove the top oftener than once a month.

Perhaps the most simple, and at the same time, tasteful, plant case, is a bell glass, with terra cotta dish; but these are necessarily small, and the variety of plants must correspond.

It must be borne in mind that ferns, although they like a moist atmosphere, cannot thrive when their roots are in water; hence to obtain the best results, they must have good drainage. Then, a fragment sprinkling over the fronds will not injure them, but will be rather beneficial. They delight in a compost of leaf-mold, well decayed, and a little sand.

In a fern case of two or three feet in diameter, there is room for a great deal of taste to be displayed, not only in the arrangement of the plants, but in building miniature castles and rock-work. Many of the choicest and most delicate ferns may be placed on these elevations, and will there show to great advantage. Care must be taken not to overdo the thing by putting in too many ornaments. Anything that is glazed or highly colored will be out of place, and will be liable to detract from the quiet beauty of the little fernery.

The best material for building up the rock work and arches is coke. By making a thin mixture of cement and water, and dipping the coke in, a nice, solid, brown stone is imitated, which will soon be covered with natural moss, adding much to its beauty.—Mobile Register.

FEEDING COWS FOR MILK.—A New Jersey correspondent of the Country Gentleman, writing on the subject of feeding cows for milk, says that his experience teaches him that the food that is good for butter, is also good for milk. He finds it more profitable to turn his milk into butter, as his customers do not so readily recognize the difference between good and inferior milk as between good and bad butter. With them milk is milk, and if a competitor comes around with the commonest kind, at five cents a quart, they will give up taking milk that yields twenty per cent. more cream, if it costs six cents a quart. But as other dairy farmers may have customers with better tastes, the writer referred to, gives his experience as to the best feed. He says:

"If one wants a large quantity of fairly good, well flavored milk for sale, he will find the best and cheapest food to consist of sugar beets, or mangels cut and sprinkled with wheat shorts, or sharps, or bran, and the best clover hay or corn fodder cut and mixed with a thin slop of steeped malt sprouts and cotton seed meal or corn meal. I have fed my milking cows as follows: Morning feed, cut hay or cornstalks, wetted with the above-mentioned slop, made as follows: Two quarts of malt sprouts and one quart of cotton seed meal or corn per head, soaked in water in a barrel for twelve hours. This slop is poured over the cut fodder in a mixing box, and the whole mixed, until the slop is equally distributed; then a heaped bushel basket is given to each cow. Any cow that is a specially good feeder, and will pay for it, is treated to a quart or so of ground feed of corn and rye bran in addition, scattered over her mess. At noon, a peck per head of cut sugar beets or mangels, sprinkled with a quart of the above ground feed is given. At night the morning feed is repeated. But if I could not get six cents a quart for milk, I would double the allowance of roots, giving no meal with them, and give malt sprouts and bran, or only coarse wheat or rye middlings, made into the slop above described. This will make as much or more milk of good salable quality, but not so much cream. If one is near a brewery, and can get brewers' grains, they are excellent and wholesome food when mixed with corn meal. A bushel a day, with four quarts of corn meal, given to a large cow, with hay and fodder, will produce a copious yield of rich-flavored milk, of a good body and color, although not rich in cream; but a thick, creamy-looking milk, with only five per cent. of cream, will be more satisfactory to the consumer, than pure Jersey milk, with twenty-five per cent. of cream, but which is thin and blue when the cream is taken off. This should not be forgotten when considering the feeding of cows for milk. The best cows for a milk dairy, are large grades of Short-Horn, or Dutch, and native, as these yield a large flow of milk, not rich in cream, but thick and of rich color. Food is a necessary condition, but if it is not put into the right kind of milk machines, it is wasted, or diverted from its most profitable use."

CORN FOR FUEL.—There are places in the West and Northwest, where scarcity of fuel has forced people to burn corn again this winter. The frequent recurrence of the fuel famine in those places, leads a correspondent of the St. Paul Pioneer Press to suggest what he calls a practical solution of the problem. Coal cannot be found, and the use of wood will soon exhaust the available supply of that article; corn is the only substitute, and must be the fuel of the future. For stoves it is superior to any other substance, hard coal alone excepted, and it is cheaper than anything that is likely to be used for fuel. Two or three acres of corn will afford an ordinary family a year's supply of fuel; and this writer alleges that the same corn sold in the market, and the proceeds turned into either wood or coal, will not begin to do it. Of course he speaks of the far northern prairies. Corn may be used in either a wood or coal stove without any change of grates, and makes a steady, hot fire, which can be regulated as readily as a coal fire. Two bushels of corn in the ear, it is estimated, will keep a comfortable fire in the coldest day in winter. Regarding the squeamishness about burning an article that is used for food, the writer says pointedly: "I would sooner have an acre of corn that can be replaced in a single year, than to burn an acre of timber that it takes years to replace, even on the score of sentiment." There is common sense in this. It is cheaper for people on the fertile prairies to raise their fuel, as they do their food, and save what little timber they have for other purposes, sentimental squeamishness should not deter them from doing so.

INSECT PESTS IN ENGLAND.—At a late meeting in England, one of the speakers made the following report in regard to the multiplication of insects during the last year: "Among the special features of the year may be mentioned the great quantity of certain insects. Aphides were in astonishing numbers in the early part of the year. The apple shoots, before the leaves expanded, were in almost every case covered with them, and among wild plants the meal gnedler rose was specially attacked by them. Wasps again, have been in extraordinary numbers, and dreadful accounts of them have been sent to the various entomological periodicals; their numbers appear to have exceeded all previous experience. The larvæ of the gooseberry moth and of the gooseberry sawfly have also been extremely destructive; and finally, as an undoubted result of the wet season of 1879, the larvæ of the crane fly have been a perfect plague in some localities. The scarcity of small birds has been universally noticed; some, no doubt, perished from the cold, but vast numbers had migrated. The enormous numbers of larks which hastened to the eastern countries on the first break of cold weather was astonishing."

JUNIPER TREES FOR GRAPE ARBORS.—It is stated by Farm and Fireside, that in districts where grape-rot prevailed, only the fruit of those vines escaped which were allowed to run at will over trees of red cedar. Other trees so used saved them to a large extent; "but the juniper" alone seems to afford a sovereign antidote. The juniper hedge of a correspondent of The Tribune, now ten of twelve feet high, carries a crown of vines at one end which yield abundantly of perfectly fair fruit, no rot; but then he has little rot elsewhere. The Italian method of growing the grape on living trees, seems to suit our varieties better than the severe cutting and forceful training of the German and French pattern, the recommendations of which are the larger bunches and berries (though less in total quantity) and the convenience of reach.

Pampas grass is a very agreeable thing to everybody possessing what impressionists delight to call, in their own peculiar and vague way, the artistic instinct. Some farmers in Southern California, have found that this beautiful grass can be grown with very little trouble and sold for decorative purposes at a large profit. One of these men put three-quarters of an acre under the grass, and was able to sell each head or plume at two and a half cents, netting about $500; another sold all he raised at seven and a half cents a plume. This industry is growing. Ten thousand plumes were disposed of in Southern California last year. Europe could take an almost unlimited number of them.—America.

The Prairie Farmer says: "Weeds on gravel walks may be destroyed and prevented from growing again by a copious dressing of the cheapest salt. This is a better method than hand pulling, which disturbs the gravel and renders constant raking and rolling necessary. One application early in the season, and others as may be needed, while the weeds are small, will keep the walks clean and bright."

DUST.—Dust is more injurious to plants than many suppose. Those who grow plants in their houses should with a sponge wipe off the leaves of all small-leaved plants. Others should be set in a tub or in a sink, and watered with a fine rose watering-pot. When dusting rooms, in which flowers are kept, cover the plants with paper.

Do not leave farm machinery standing out in the fields and around the barns to rust and rot. By fixing up sheds, and taking the machinery apart, it could be stowed in and kept out of the sun and storms; and the machinery would last a half longer. Machinery and tools are often lost through rust and rot than through wear.

Mr. George Conner, of Burlington, considers a ton of cornstalks worth more than a ton of hay for cows. He feeds to each milch cow, one bushel of finely cut stalks; two quarts of bran, and two quarts of cornmeal mixed and wet with water, both morning and evening.

No family in China is said to be too poor to keep poultry. About every shanty struts a pert cock and a few hungry hens, which lead a precarious existence, and never become diseased from overfeeding. During winter they get barely enough food to sustain life.

Exposure to cold rains is very injurious to fowls. A few hours under the rigors of a storm of snow or sleet will put them back for days and sometimes weeks in laying, besides the danger of their getting cold or becoming crompy.

To have good laying hens we must keep the best samples of the breeds, and these must be well fed, well housed, and well cared for upon system, and in all seasons.

When the poulterer discovers the appearance of disease in his flock, he must make an effort to stop it at once, and not leave them to their fate.

One good farmer says that he purchases in the summer, his mill feeds for his stock, when it is cheaper than it is in winter.

An Iowa farmer sows about forty acres yearly with clover and other nice things for the benefit of his bees.

"A little farm well tilled." It is not those having the largest farms who make the most profit.

Household.

POTATO AND MEAT PIE.—Cut any kind of cold roasted meat into very thin slices; shake a little pepper and salt over each slice; then dip it into a small plate covered with flour. Place the slices, in layers, in a small yellow nappy; and if a seasoning of onions is liked, sprinkle a little chopped onion over each layer—or use three or four tablespoonsful of canned tomatoes instead of the onion; but a very small quantity of onion will add to the seasoning of the tomato and the meat. Turn in all the gravy that was left, from the roast meat, or if none remains, put bits of butter over the top layer of meat, and pour in enough boiling water to cover the meat. Put a plate or a tin cover over the dish, and bake for one hour. While it is cooking, put some potatoes into salted boiling hot water, and boil until a fork goes easily into them (perhaps twenty-five minutes.) Pour off all the water; scatter salt over the potatoes, and shake the kettle vigorously while you slowly count one hundred. This will make the potatoes very mealy. Then mash them with a wire masher or a fork, and spread them over the top of the dish of meat. Put bits of butter all over the potatoes, and brown them in a quick oven. This makes an excellent breakfast or lunch dish.

POTATO PAT.—Lay a small skin or piece of the ribs of beef, mutton, lamb or veal at the bottom of a yellow or brown nappy, and season it well with salt and pepper. Chop a small onion very fine; pare eight or ten raw potatoes, slice them very thin, and fill up the dish with the potatoes and onions, mixed together. Sprinkle salt and pepper over the potatoes, and shake in a little wheat flour from the dredging box. Fill the dish with cold water, cover it with a tin plate, and bake for an hour and a half. If desired, a cream crust can be made with a cup of sour cream, a little salt, a small teaspoonful of saleratus, and flour enough to stir up thickly. Put it over the dish when it is nearly baked, and let it brown nicely.

POTATO BREAD.—For a change, a loaf or two of pot-to bread, made either with wheat or graham flour, will often prove acceptable. Boil eight large potatoes in salted water, and when soft, peel off their skins, and mash them thoroughly, either on the moulding or bread board, with a rolling-pin, or put in the pot, over the fire, in which they were boiled, and mash fine with a potato masher. I prefer the latter way, as it takes out all the water and makes them less pasty. Then put the potatoes into a pan, and add enough graham or wheat flour to make it into a thick dough. Turn in a cupful of hot water or milk, and when cool enough, stir in a cupful of home-made yeast, or three tablespoonfuls of Baker's yeast. Add a teaspoonful of salt and set it in a warm place to rise. It can rise all night. When risen, knead the whole mass thoroughly, for upon good kneading will depend the quality of the bread. When it has risen again very lightly, knead only enough to put into well-greased pans. Let it rise twenty minutes, and bake in a moderately hot oven. Potato bread should bake a little longer than wheat bread. Bread made in this way is a cheaper article than when made entirely of flour.

STEAMED DUMPLINGS.—Take a small quantity of dough made by the above receipt, and add to a tablespoonful of butter, and the same of sugar, and knead them into it. Roll it out thin, and let it rise for fifteen minutes. Then lay on it a quantity of thinly sliced tart apples, or stewed fruit of any kind. Dust a little flour over them, and roll up the dough. Put it into a cloth wet in boiling water, and dusted over with flour. Then put it into a kettle of boiling water and boil one hour. Or the dough can be cut into rounds the size of a small tea plate, and spread over with fruit and rolled up, and each roll, placed in a steamer so far apart that they will not touch each other, as they swell in size when cooking. Steam one hour, and serve hot from the steamer with sugar and butter sauce.—Daisy Eyebright, in Country Gentleman.

HOW TO TREAT FROST-BITES.—If any part of the body gets frozen, the very worst thing to do is to apply heat directly. Keep away from the fire. Use snow if you can get it; if not, use the coldest possible water. Last winter our little boy of five years, froze his feet while out coasting at a considerable distance from the house. He cried all the way home, and the case seemed pretty bad. I brought a big pailful of snow and put his feet into it, rubbing them with the snow. But my hands could not stand the cold. I was alarmed to see him keep his feet in the snow so long, but he could not bear them out of it. It was half an hour before he would take them out, and then the pain was all gone, and when I had wiped them dry, and rubbed them a little, he was entirely comfortable, put on his stockings and shoes, and went to play. He never afterward had any trouble with his feet on account of this freezing.—American Agriculturist.

HOW TO BOIL AND STEW.—To do either properly the food must be immersed at the beginning in actually boiling water, and the water must be allowed to reach the boiling point immediately, and to boil for five minutes. The action of the boiling water upon the surface of either meat or vegetables is to harden it slightly, but enough to prevent the escape of either juice or mineral salts. After the pot containing the food has begun to boil the second time, it should be removed to the side of the fire, and allowed to simmer until it is done. This simmering or stewing extracts all the nutritious qualities of either meat or vegetables. The pot should be kept closely covered unless for a moment when it is necessary to remove the scum. The steam will condense upon the inside of the cover, and fall back into the pot in drops of moisture, when boiled slow. Do not think rapid boiling cooks faster than the gentle process recommended. After the pot once boils you cannot make its contents cook any faster if you have fire enough under it to run a steam engine. Remember, if you boil meat hard and fast, it will be tough and tasteless, and most of its goodness will go up the chimney or out of the window with the steam.

DUTCH APPLE PUDDING. One pint of flour, one teaspoonful of soda, half a teaspoonful of salt, an egg, nearly a cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of butter, four large apples. Mix the salt, soda and cream of tartar with the flour, and rub through the sieve. Beat the egg light, and add the milk to it. Pour the milk and egg on this, and mix quickly and thoroughly. Spread the dough about half an inch deep on a buttered baking pan. Have the apples pared, cored and cut into eighths. Stick the pieces into the dough in rows. Sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and bake in quick oven for about twenty-five minutes. This pudding is to be eaten with sugar and milk, or lemon sauce.

Educational.

—The really greatest prizes of English clerical life, from a pecuniary point of view, are the head-masterships of the great public schools. Those of Eaton and Harrow are worth from $25,000 to $35,000 a year, and those of Westminster, Rugby, Charter House, and Merchant Taylors, are worth from $12,000 to $20,000 a year including the spacious abodes attached to them. The heads of college at Oxford and Cambridge, do not, for the most part, receive nearly so much. The master of Trinity College, Cambridge, has about $15,000 a year; and the dean of the Cathedral Church, who is also dean of the Christ Church, who is also dean of the Cathedral Church, over $10,000. The next most lucrative position in Oxford, is president of Magdalen, which is worth about $10,000, Magdalen being a very wealthy college. The provost of Trinity College, Dublin, has a separate estate allotted to him, estimated to be worth some $20,000 a year. Most of the other headships in the English universities, vary from $4,000 to $7,500 a year. The college property is managed by an officer called the bursar, who has an office in college and is one of the fellows. The revenue is, for the most part, derived from land scattered over all parts of England. Brasenose—which, after Magdalen, is the richest college in Oxford—has a good deal of London property. Endowments since 1650 have been comparatively very slender, until Keble College, founded about seven years ago, received some heavy donations. College property is entirely distinct from university property. At Oxford the university property is considerable; at Cambridge it is small.—New York Independent.

The Young Men's Society for Home Study, the object of which is to guide and advise young men, by correspondence, in the matter of home reading and study, announces five courses, with a promise of more should a demand become known. Those offered are courses in American and English History, English Literature, German Literature, Natural Science, and Mathematics. Among the members of the advisory committee of the Society, are Oliver Wendell Holmes, Charles Dudley Warner, Henry W. Longfellow, Arthur Gilman, William D. Howells, and other persons of literary and scientific prominence. The secretary is Frederic Gardiner, Jr., of Cambridge, Mass.

—Professor Bancroft, of Brown University, in a recent address, commended the thorough study of the English language to schools. He said that pupils should be taught composition in a careful plan; the foundation should be laid by giving to the pupil the works of the best authors, and also a clear idea of what he is expected to do, making him understood and follow out the plan in the simplest matters of composition. Many teachers, he said, think that the way to write is to write, and he added that indefinite aims never accomplish anything but indefinite results.

—Since the Hampton, Virginia, Normal and Agricultural Institute opened, in 1868, with but fifteen pupils and one teacher and a barrow, 1,429 students have been in regular attendance. Ninety per cent. of those graduating, have devoted themselves to the cause of educating the colored people, and their efforts have met with encouraging success. The past year's enrollment has been as follows: colored men, 181; colored women, 195; Indian boys, 47; Indian girls, 21; total, 351. Average age of young women, 18½ years; average age of young men, 20. There has been a gain of thirty-two colored students over last year.

—The Baltimore School Board has rescinded its previous resolution to place colored teachers in the colored schools, and has elected four white teachers to fill vacancies in those schools, in spite of the fact that twenty-one colored candidates passed the teachers' examinations. There is much indignation in Baltimore over the action of the board. President Morris and five other members stood by the resolution honorably, but were outvoted. It is possible that the question will enter the next election.

—The course of instruction in the proposed French colleges for girls will be as follows: morals; the French language, reading aloud, and one living language; ancient and modern literature; geography and cosmography; the history of France and an outline of general history; arithmetic; the elements of geography; chemistry; physics and natural history; hygienics; domestic economy; needlework; elements of law; drawing; music; gymnastics.

—There are at present in South Carolina twelve colleges, two professional schools, three industrial training schools, eighty-one private academies, fifty-nine public academies, three evening elementary schools, 208 private elementary schools, and 2,793 public schools.

—Athens is giving much attention to common school education. It has a polytechnic school, and a fine astronomical observatory; and the National University has fifty-two professors and 1,205 students from Greece and all parts of continental Europe.

—The School Board of Indianapolis, after experimenting for years with various heating apparatus, are now in favor of heating all school buildings with stoves, instead of steam, believing them superior in respect of ventilation and distribution of heat.

—The Russian Government is doing all in its power to promote the success of the Siberian University. The sum of $365,000 was expended before the foundation stone was laid, and a library of 65,000 volumes has already been collected for the institution.

—Mr. Joseph B. Wilson, of Rockbridge county, Va., who had given $18,000 during his life to found scholarships in the Virginia Union Theological Seminary, died recently, leaving his entire estate to the seminary. It is valued at not less than $15,000.

—Williams College has now two hundred and twenty-seven students. The freshman class has seventy-two members. The requirements for admission have lately been increased, and now include additional Greek and an English composition.

—Cyrus H. McCormick, has given another $100,000 to the Northwestern Theological Seminary, and in a few days this money will be placed in the hands of the treasurer.

—The permanent school fund of Iowa is now estimated at $3,484,411; and it will be increased by further sales of school land. The length of the school year in that State, was last year one hundred and forty-eight days.

—Twenty-five students of Bowdoin College, are teaching school in various parts of Maine, and about the same number from Colby University and from Bates College.

—Brown University has a library of 54,000 books and 20,000 pamphlets, to all of which the students have access.

—There are 66,000 schools and colleges in India, with an attendance of 1,900,000 boys and girls.

EDUCATIONAL.

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE,

ABINGDON, VA.

In point of grounds, buildings, apparatus and faculty, this is one of the most thoroughly equipped schools in the South. It is located in one of the finest sections of Virginia, 2,000 feet above the sea.

Bishop McTyeire, Dr. Garland, Dr. Summers and Dr. A. W. Wilson give it their cordial endorsement.

Music is a specialty. The director of this department, Prof. V. Koerlinger, is a noted teacher and composer, and his assistants are thoroughly cultivated musical artists.

A full course of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Natural Science, and Mental and Moral Philosophy is taught with great care.

The fare is good, and every care is taken of the health of the young ladies.

Parents living in the South would do well to send their daughters here to spend the summer.

$200 paid in advance will cover board, tuition, fuel, washing and lights for forty weeks. Music is $50 additional.

Spring session begins February 4, 1881. A discount of twenty per cent. to Methodist preachers, and Publishing House hands taken from them at par.

Send for catalogue to

REV. R. E. HOSS, President.

HAMBURG (ARK.) HIGH SCHOOL,

Thirty Miles North of Bastrop, La.

This institution, for both sexes, now in its fourth year, has 6½ months yet remaining. Its facilities for educating are peculiar, and its charges are moderate. All modern improvements introduced. Faculty full and experienced. The principal boards his teachers and pupils, regarding the latter as his own children.

One hundred and twenty-five dollars will cover all school expenses, except Music.

City inquirers are referred to Judge R. B. Todd, J. M. Bonner and J. M. Lewis, Esqs.; to Rev. Dr. C. W. Carter and Bishop Keener.

D. C. H. CONNERLY, Principal.

January 6, 1881.

READVILLA SEMINARY,

BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA.

A home school for girls. Thorough training in all departments. Full corps of efficient Teachers. Expenses moderate. Numbers limited.

For particulars address

MRS. MARY W. REED, Principal.

Memphis Conference Female Institute,

JACKSON, TENNESSEE.

REV. A. W. JONES, A. M., D. D., President.

This well known College of the South and West begins its Fall session the First Monday in September. Opening Concert and Address Tuesday September 7, 1880. For thirty-six years there has been an average of more than twelve graduates annually.

The Faculty is full and efficient. The determination is to stand among the foremost in the progress of Science, Language and Art.

For further information apply to the President.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE,

AT BATON ROUGE, LA.

The next session of this school will begin September 29, 1880.

This is a Family Boarding School for boys. The healthfulness of the location is unsurpassed. Instruction thorough in all that is necessary to prepare the student for any grade in college or the pursuits of life. Discipline paternal. The constant personal care of the principal is given to the health, morals and manners of the pupils.

For circulars, with more extended information, apply to

W. H. S. MAGRUDER, Baton Rouge, La.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,

JACKSON, LOUISIANA,

Opens September 6, 1880. The last session was the most prosperous in the history of the College. The whole cost of board and tuition need not exceed $144 in the Preparatory, $180 in the Junior, nor $216 in College classes for the scholastic year. Send for a Catalogue.

C. G. ANDREWS, President.

East Mississippi Female College,

MERIDIAN, MISSISSIPPI.

REV. J. W. ADKISSON, A. M., PRESIDENT.

A chartered and prosperous Southern school for girls and young ladies. Few schools have grown more steadily and rapidly in public confidence and patronage. Increased in numbers during the past seven years as the following figures show: 6, 6, 8, 6, 9, 4, 9, 6, 9, 7, 14, 3. Commanded patronage the last year from Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee and Alabama. Its past history, increasing facilities, accessibility and methods of close and thorough instruction assure its friends of a long and prosperous future for the institution. Send for catalogue.

HIWASSEE COLEGE,

EAST TENNESSEE.

Founded 1849, and located where

Pure waters flow,
Sleek cattle low,
Cool breezes blow,
Ripe apples grow.

Excellent and tried teachers. Terms very favorable. The Female Department is at SWEETWATER, on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad. The Male Department, at HIWASSEE COLLEGE POST-OFFICE, seven miles out in the country. A neat monthly paper, the "Hiwassee College Reporter," at fifty cents a year. Address

J. H. BRUNNER, President.

JEFFERSON COLLEGE,

HIGH SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND YOUNG MEN.

Six miles from Natchez, Miss. Session begins September 16. Full corps of instructors. Course of study thorough and extensive. Nearly fifty boarders, from abroad. Pupils from adjacent board with the principal. Entire expense for ten months, $145. For catalogues address the principal,

J. S. RAYMOND, Washington, Adams county, Miss.

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE,

SUMMERFIELD, ALA.,

Will begin its forty-first session October 4, 1880. Great attention paid to the regular course. Teachers in the Music and Art departments selected with reference to special fitness. Charges moderate.

For further information address,

H. N. MOSS, A. M., President.

HOMER MALE COLLEGE

THE TWENTY FIRST SESSION

will begin the

FIRST OF SEPTEMBER 1880.

Address R. A. SMITH, President.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Crescent Insurance Co.,

67 & 69 Camp Street,

NEW ORLEANS.

ORGANIZED 1849.—REORGANIZED 1880.

Cash Capital $100,000.

SOLICITS

FIRE, RIVER AND MARINE RISKS.

W. R. LYMAN.....President.
S. B. NEWMAN.....Vice President.
CHAS. E. RICE.....Secretary.

SPORTSMEN'S DEPOT,

RICHARD RHODES,

55.....ST. CHARLES STREET.....55

NEW ORLEANS.

Articles for Fishermen of all Kinds.

Rods, Nets, Hooks, Lines, and every desirable article for the Angler, wholesale and retail. Guns imported to order. J. H. Cooper's Breech and Muzzle Loading Guns always on hand. All kinds of Improved artificial Balls. Repairing of Guns carefully done by experienced workmen, and Fishing Rods made to order. Address Postoffice Box 1599.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS.

SIZES AND PRICES.

Diam. of Bell.	Wt. with yoke & frame	Cost of Bell & Hang'g.
No. 6, 25in	230 lbs.	$ 25 00
No. 61, 27in	340 lbs.	50 00
No. 7, 30in	490 lbs.	60 00
No. 8, 34in	730 lbs.	75 00
No. 9, 38in	825 lbs.	130 00

RUMSEY & CO., Seneca Falls, N. Y., U. S. A.

My New Illustrated Price List describing over 100 Gold and Silver Waltham Watches sent for a 3c stamp. It tells how I send watches to all parts of U. S. to be examined before paying any money. Undoubted references. N. M. White, Jeweler, Newark, N. J.

EDUCATIONAL.

TEACHERS,

SCHOLARS

AND

DEALER

Are hereby advised that the

Largest Stock and Most

Complete Assortment

SCHOOL BOOK

in the South-west is now in stock and ready

all orders, large or small at Publishers' prices

112 CAMP STREE

NEW ORLEANS.

All the books used in this section supplied at notice, and prices guaranteed as low as they had elsewhere. Catalogues mailed on appl

Also a general line of

School Supplies

SLATED PAPER,

SLATED CLOTH,

LIQUID SLATE

BLACKBOARDS,

BLACKBOARD RUBBERS,

CHALK, CRAY

MATHEMATICAL INSTRUMENTS

NUMERICAL FRAMES,

SCHOOL SATCHELS,

BOOK STRA

WRITING PAPER,

DRAWING PAPER,

BLOTTING PAP

WRITING BOOKS,

COMPOSITION BOO

SLATES AND PENCILS,

INK, INK STANDS, PE

PENHOLDERS, CALL BELLS

Kindergarten Material,

ETC., ETC.

Send for anything you want or address for p

LATHROP & WILKIN

New Orle

In addition to the above we keep a complete of all the standard religious publications, for members and Sunday-schools. Prices application.

South-western Agency for

Readers' and Writers' Economy

LATHROP & WILKIN

New Orle

W. C. SHEPARD & Co

AMERICAN CHINA HOUSE,

49 Camp Street, New Orle

We append a few prices:

The American China Dinner, Breakfast and Tea Set, comprising 130 Pieces, for $12.

A Real French China Dinner Set, 97 Pieces, for $ 7.

English Stone China Dinner Set, 112 Pieces, for $10.

English Stone China Chamber Set, comprising 10 Pieces, for $2 50.

Decorated Chamber Sets, with dinner Colored Bands, 10 Pieces, for $3 50.

Glass Goblets, from 50 cents to $1 per dozen.

Particular attention given to Novelties and Notties pertaining to the House-Furnishing Depart Orders promptly attended to. We have just a full and complete stock of holiday goods. Co examine before purchasing.

W. C. SHEPARD & Co

Christian Advocate.

The Rev. Dr. Morley Punshon, M.A.

"A listener," in the Daily Telegraph, gives sketches of Cardinal Manning and the Rev. Dr. Punshon. Of the latter he says:

"Not so frequently heard in the metropolis as in years that are past, though still to be reckoned as one of the worthies of London's teachers, is the great Wesleyan divine whom I have linked with the Prince of the Papal Sea. That the system upon which the Wesleyans framed their church should deprive the pulpit of the Empire for many years at the time of the teachings of a marvellous orator and a clever thinker is, perhaps, to be regretted by Londoners; but to those to whom Mr. Morley Punshon is lost by the Conference, as the scenes of his labors change, this is rather matter for congratulation; seeing that, so long as he is allowed to minister to them in holy things, they possess not only an accomplished thinker but a singularly powerful monitor. To see Mr. Punshon at his best the visitor should enter the large Wesleyan chapel in the City-road some evening when the great Methodist minister is announced to preach. The building will be crammed from the doorway downstairs to the topmost standing-place in the gallery, and he must remain for all that; the treat which is in store for him is worthy some sacrifice. Nor must he be impatient because the preliminary service is long. The other minister or ministers taking part in the "exercises" as they are called, will probably read long chapters from the Scriptures and deliver prayers of such length and comprehensiveness that no one is omitted, from the unconverted Jew to the islander in the Caribbean sea; but the congregation will wait. The preacher is sufficiently attractive to outweigh all that, and though a fourth of his hearers are either forced to stand or sit very uncomfortably, they will cheerfully submit to that rather than lose the sermon he will deliver. At last there ascends the pulpit a man considerably in the middle age; but whose eye is not yet weary, and whose spirit of a powerful speaker; and of more ado the discourse is on. It may be that the text chosen is from the despairing wail of the Israelite "God is departed from me," the while he implores the Most Outcast to bring up Samuel from the grave. The text is one that, suited to the preacher's fancy and genius. The terrible gloom of the benighted king, who plaintively says no more: the bad conscience rises in his mind; the penance that Saul has still all this is set forth in words that lift the hair with consternation, and then the picture of Samuel comes up, and of Saul as in penance he looks out in distress, and so does the whole congregation. The stands in the gallery, and of the preacher's lungs, and the modulations of his voice, so that the "Lord will not answer me" is almost as terrible to the hearer as the "Lord hath departed from me." It is not the Witch of Endor, conjuring up the past, but one inspired by an even than she to the mind, or even the multitude in mind, the dead Samuel is indeed at all a moment very near. And so the sermon goes on, the audience almost breathless and quite motionless, as, with their eyes fixed upon the appalling spectre of Endor, they brood over the desolation of the stricken king; till at the end is called upon to draw the conclusions which the preacher considers the incident suggests. Utterly unlike his great brother teacher, Mr. C. H. Spurgeon, he by no means learns from the story of Saul that God's people can fall "God hath departed from me." Saul has enjoyed the favor of the Highest, was chosen by him to lead Israel, then served the Eternal in his temple, and was actually the Lord's anointed; but he falls, and falls for ever. He seeks out a place for repentance, but finds it not even with tears. If his regrets there cannot be the least doubt of the blankness of his life now that God "no more appears to him in dreams and visions of the night" there is not the slightest question. But for him the day of pardon is past. To-day he seeks for the forgiveness that can never be his. It is not perhaps so comforting a doctrine as that which is presented at the Tabernacle, but it is as direct. The believer may "backslide," he may "fall from grace" even as Paul can write "lest I myself become a castaway," the Spirit must not be grieved. There is no attempt made to lessen the terror of this doctrine; it is earnestly and plainly proclaimed to every hearer present. They may have been "communicants," may have taken the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, may have sung in the chapel, offered up public prayers, may even have been ministers and teachers, and yet in the end may fall far away. Saul's fearful experience is one of the warrants for this. He is strange how untutored the people thus addressed are by this style of preaching. To some it would almost seem that such a doctrine would drive them from the place of worship when their hearts go to seek other comfort. But such is not the case. All there are those amongst the Wesleyans of course, who do dare the dogma truth to parentage of life, the duty of conduct, and more watchfulness than a Calvinist is likely to maintain. But this as it may, the doctrine of Free Will is consistently taught by the Rev. Morley Punshon. May, to him, is of intelligent being, duly observe the eternal, moved to obey the Gospel by the promptings of the Paraclete, but capable of resisting it; capable, too, of delaying it for a while, and yet, as a little merciful, weak and irresolute, able to cease to listen to its voice after a lapse of time, and to find in the end that "God has departed from him." The preacher certainly throws more responsibility upon the shoulders of man, and shuts it proportionately from those of his religion. But whether it is more honoring to the Creator to teach it or not is a point over which schoolmen are best able to contend. Mr. Punshon so suggests that have, at any rate, in both of its truthfulness, as is soon when it prosperously rises at his bidding, and, in mournful tones, earnestly sings

Stay, then heated spirit, stay,
Though I have done thee such despite,
Nor cast the sinner quite away,
Nor take thine everlasting flight.

The picture of the weeping Saul and the unrelenting prophet has instilled into every beholder the dread of not less deplorable fate than that of the downcast king.

Joshua Soule.

Some time previous to 1814, when Soule was on a circuit in Maine, one day on his way to an appointment he fell into company with a stranger who was traveling in the same direction. Without inquiry as to who or what his companion was, the stranger commenced a tirade against the Methodists. Soule inquired who and what sort of people they were.

"Why, they are an ignorant set of fanatics who don't know even the English grammar, and much less the dead languages, never having been to college; and yet they claim to know their sins are forgiven, and that they have constant communion with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ; deceiving many, who profess like conversion; and they would, if they could, deceive the very elect itself. They ought to be driven out of the country."

"Did you ever hear them yourself?" inquired Soule.

"No; nor do I want to; I've heard enough about them."

Soule, with his well known gravity, and without offering any defense or explanation, turned the conversation upon the English grammar—how much easier it was for an English student to acquire a knowledge of it since Dilworth and Murray had anglicized it, than when it was obtained only through the Latin and Greek languages. He referred to those languages, and also to the Hebrew, as the sources from which the English was derived; and the redundancy of the latter, and its advantage over either of the others, having been so largely drawn from all of them. He also discoursed upon mathematics, astronomy and philosophy.

At this point they came to the forks of the road where they must part, of which Soule apprised his companion. At this the stranger reined up his horse, and said, "Sir, I have been highly gratified with our interview. My name is Mr. ——. I am priest of this parish. I live in the village a short distance ahead; and if you ever pass through it I should be pleased if you would give me a call. Now, I should be happy to know your name and profession."

"My name, sir, is Joshua Soule. I have the honor to be one of those ignorant Methodist preachers of whom you have so freely spoken. Expect to preach to-day at such a man's house, a few miles ahead; and should be happy if you would give us a hearing. I think if you would, your opinion of us would be more favorable. Good day."

The man blushed to the eyes, dropped his bridle on his horse's neck, and sat like a statue looking at Soule. Soule rode on his way, and as far as he could see backward, the man still stood there, wondering no doubt what manner of men the Methodist preachers were. Alfred Bennison, D. D.

Hot and Dry Air.

The fact that a watery vapor is constantly passing into the air, from the water, leaves and earth, is due to its development, and thus a part of the food needed by the lungs in the respiratory process is provided. It is certain that this supply is increased at the time when the most complete development of new growth, the greatest activity and the largest amount of vapor is required, is the most favorable result of the living machine that in dry, parched and intense the tissues, all animal forms with which it comes in contact, promoting some of the indications, or could, indeed, should be thought that a simple breathing is an evidence of a cool, calm way, be an evidence of the symptoms produced by a cold, and various other causes.

Of course, in warm weather, when we are much out-of-doors, and when our doors and windows, fortunately, are often open, we have a reasonable supply both of air and moisture, but in the winter, when so many, through a false fear of cold air and colds, rarely are out in the air, it is far otherwise unless special efforts are made to secure moist air by artificial means. Too often, in the church, school room, lecture-room, work-shop, almost everywhere, the air is overheated and dry, well calculated to produce colds and the accidental symptoms of them, of necessity reducing the power of generating animal heat, poisoning the blood, practical diphtheria, from the fact that when the blood is not purified by a good supply of pure air, the blood, of necessity, becomes more or less putrid. In feeble women, if not generally, enthrall heat in the winter that we would tolerate in the summer.

We should also remember that such hot air is so rarefied that a cubic it represents but a part of that of cool air, and that the receive their usual and ply, not enough to purify the sufficiently, since this is one most important and essential means in its purification, worthy of the sarsaparilla and quack blood-purifiers of the universe. It is also true that such hot air, even if the same quantity, cannot nerve the blood like that of sufficient coolness, from the fact, well known, that heat tends to debilitate, while a reasonable coolness acts as a tonic, quickening the circulation and every power of the body. The more the oxygen of air unites with the carbonaceous matter or waste of the body, actually destroying it for a time combustion, the more the blood is purified and the animal heat sustained, which must be kept about 98° Fah., or both will cease. It must be plain, therefore, that one subjected to a higher temperature than that which is regarded as comfortable in the summer, or from 65° to 70° Fah., must be more or less debilitated, and just so that extent the victim of disease. As an illustration, it is well known that those coming from one of the mountain regions are specially subject to colds and consequent diseases, so debilitated that any slight chill or exposure to currents of cool air overpowers the wilting powers, the wilting powers, which allow "exposure to all weathers," storms, freshes and the extremes of cold, seldom contract a cold, though it is evident that less exposure during these extremes of cold would be more favorable to health generally.

The foundation of such exposure to hot air is first to encourage the flow of the blood to the small vessels of the surface, where about one-half of it should be, and then, by its debilitating influences, to cause it to return, circulating through the larger, the internal blood-vessels, deranging the whole system and producing internal disease.

To protect and the integrity of the lungs, throat, nasal passages, etc., will be secured to some extent, even though the temperature may be too high, by securing the natural amount of moisture in the air, by having a vessel of water constantly on the stove, so that the greater the heat of the room and the greater the danger from debility, the greater will be the amount of moisture evolved. This fact is well illustrated as one passes from the work-room filled with steam from the excessive heat scarcely noticed to the sitting-room, where the heat is less, but where the air is dry, so much so as to retard the natural escape of the heat of the body, through the agency of perspiration; which acts as a safety-valve gradually and constantly conducting off the surplus heat. It is always safe to remain comfortably cool, while it is always dangerous to be uncomfortably warm.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time, and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical bent of rare value it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial Fever; and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for Females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Incontinence or Falling of the Womb.

As a blood purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

READ ITS RECORD.

"It saved my life."—E. B. Lakely, Selma, Ala.

"It is the remedy that will cure 9/10 many diseases peculiar to women."—M'Ores, Macon, Ga.

"It has proved every-to-be and worth endorsements from some of the highest medical talent in the country."—New York Herald.

"No remedy in recent years has ever been so widely and justly lauded as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. It is a boon to Diabetes, equaled by WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy."—Rev. C. A. Lavee, D. D., Washington, D. C.

This Remedy is in liquid form, 3 doses in a bottle, is put up in two SIZES, and is sold by all druggists and dealers at $1.25 [illegible] Diabetes, equally for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy.

H. H. WARNER & CO., Rochester, N. Y.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION DEPOSITORY.

[illegible] Books, Catechisms, [illegible] and [illegible] Cards, [illegible] Cards, [illegible] Cards,

PRICES CURRENT.

REVISED AND CORRECTED WEEKLY.

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
New Orleans, Monday, Feb. 21, 1881.

Our readers should bear in mind that our quotations represent prices for round lots, and that in filling small orders higher prices must be paid.

SOUTHERN STAPLES.

	To-day.	Ast.
Cotton, ₩ lb.
Low ordinary	7¾	7¾
Ordinary	8¾	8¾
Good ordinary	9⅝	9⅝
Low middling	10⅝	10⅝
Middling	11⅛	11⅛
Good middling	12⅛	12⅛
Middling fair	13⅛	13⅛
Sales to-day	2,600 bales.
Receipts since our last	856 bales.
Receipts previously	1,114,266 bales.
Sugar, ₩ lb.:
Fair		6¼
Fully fair		6⅝
Prime		6⅞
Choice
Yellow clarified	7¾	8¼
White clarified	8	8¾
Powdered
Crushed
Molasses, in bbls., ₩ gallon:
Common	26	25
Fair	33	34
Prime	36	38
Choice		46
Rice, Louisiana, ₩ lb.:
Common	4¾	4¾
Fair	5¼	5¾
Prime	6	6¼
Choice		6¾
GROCERIES.
Butter, ₩ lb.:
Western	16	35
New York	17	34
Coffee, ₩ lb.
Rio, ordinary	11	11¼
Rio, fair	13	13¾
Rio, prime	14	14¾
Cheese, ₩ lb
Western factory
English dairy		16
Candles, ₩ lb:
Best brands		12
Corn Meal, ₩ bbl.
Choice K. D		3 00
Flour, ₩ bbl.
Superfine	3 50	3 75
XX	4 25	4 50
XXX	4 75	5 00
Choice XXX
Choice family
Fish:
Mackerel, No. 1, in bbls		8 00
Half barrels		4 50
Kits		95
Mackerel, No. 2 in bbls		6 75
Half bbls		3 50
Kits		85
Mackerel, No. 3, in bbls	5 50	6 75
Half bbls	3 00	3 70
Kits	75
Codfish, ₩ lb	5½	6
Herring, ₩ box	30	35
Oils, ₩ gallon:
Coal, in cases	25	30
Coal, in bbls	19	22
Linseed, raw	55	58
Linseed, boiled	59	61
Cotton seed	37	40
Laid	73	75
Soap, ₩ box:
Magnolia		1 85
Olive		2 40
Palm
Castel		2 40
Soda, ₩ lb
Starch, ₩ lb		3½
Salt, ₩ sack
Coarse	1 02½	1 05
Fine	1 40	1 45
GRAIN AND FEED.
Corn, in sacks, ₩ bushel:
Yellow		60
White		60
Mixed		60
Oats, ₩ bushel:
Western	44	45
Red rust-proof	60	62½
Bran, ₩ 100 lbs:
Choice		1 25
Hay, ₩ ton:
Prime	23 00	23 00
Choice	24 00	25 00
Cow Peas, ₩ bushel:
Mixed
Clay		1 35
PROVISIONS.
Bacon, ₩ lb
Breakfast		10
Shoulders		6½
Sides, clear rib		8
Sides, clear		8½
Hams, sugar-cured	10	11½
Mess Pork, ₩ bbl	15 75	16 50
Dry Salt Meat, ₩ lb:
Clear rib sides
Clear sides		8½
Shoulders		5½
Lard, ₩ lb:
Choice, in kegs		11½
Choice, in tierces	10½	11
ESCULENTS.
Potatoes, ₩ bbl.
Irish	2 65	3 10
Sweet
Onions, ₩ bbl	5 00	5 25
Apples, ₩ bbl.	3 50	4 00
Cabbages, ₩ box
Sour Krout, ₩ bbl	11 00	12 00
BALING STUFFS.
Bagging, ₩ yard
India
Jute
Baling Twine, ₩ lb		17
Ties, ₩ bundle:
20 lbs and buckles		1 65
SUNDRIES.
Poultry, ₩ dozen:
Grown chickens		6 00
Young do	3 00	4 00
Ducks	3 00	4 00
Geese		5 00
Turkeys		12 00
Eggs, ₩ dozen:
Western	13	15
Southern	12½	14
Honey:
Strained, ₩ gallon
Comb, ₩ lb
Pecans, ₩ lb
Louisiana		10
Texas		9
Oranges:
Louisiana, ₩ bbl
Foreign, ₩ box		2 00
Wool, ₩ lb.:
Louisiana		25½
Texas
Feathers, ₩ lb
Geese
Hides, ₩ lb:
Country green		8
Dry salted		11½
Dry flint	12	12½
Ox Horns, each		6
Tallow, ₩ lb	5½	6½
Cotton Seed, ₩ ton
In sacks
Meal	22 50	23 00
Oil cake	23 00	24 00
Cooperage, ₩ each:
Sugar hogsheads	1 20	1 30
Molasses barrels	1 20	1 55
Half barrels		1 05
Kegs		70
Oak Staves, per 1000:
Kegs
Barrels
Extra claret	85 00	100 00
Extra hogshead	100 00	125 00
Extra pipes	150 00	175 00
Tobacco:
Low lugs		4½
Medium
Good to fine
Low leaf
Medium	5½	6½
Good	6½	7
Fine	7½	8
Selections	10	12

The Cause of Science

has received an important addition in the elegant Observatory which Mr. H. H. Warner, proprietor of the valuable Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, has erected at Rochester.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE

In Indigestion and General Debility.

I have used the Acid Phosphate in my own family in case of indigestion and general debility, with entirely satisfactory results.

S. H. MOORE, M. D.
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

VICKSBURG, Miss., Feb. 15.—The Mississippi Valley Cotton Planters' Association held their February meeting here to-day, and reported on the successful operation of several kinds of agricultural machinery. The monthly meetings of this body are attracting great interest as pertinent subjects of labor, practical planting and other kindred matters are fully discussed, and plans of economy marked out for the people of the South.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The amendment to the scudry civil bill, reported from the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, to-day, authorizes the President to send a special embassy, consisting of two ambassadors, to the Government of Mexico, for the purpose of negotiating additional treaty provisions to promote the commercial relations of the two countries, and for the protection and encouragement of the works of internal improvement, such as railways and canals, constructed by American citizens. The embassy will act in conjunction with our Resident Minister at the city of Mexico.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 17.—The friends of prohibition have been making great efforts to secure the passage of prohibition measures by the Legislature of North Carolina. Petitions were presented to-day, signed by 66,000 persons, making with former petitions, an aggregate of at least 200,000 petitioners. Legislation favorable to the movement is anticipated.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 18.—A special to the Times says: A disastrous fire occurred at Scottsboro, Ala., Thursday night. Loss $40,000. Twenty-five houses were consumed.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 18.—The City Council last night, accepted the proposition of C. C. Ruthroof and others for lighting the entire city with the Brush electric light, for two years, at $14,000 per annum.

WHEELING, Feb. 18.—The proposed amendment to the constitution of West Virginia, prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks, was defeated in the Senate to-day.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The Senate has passed the funding bill by two-thirds vote. It is substantially the House bill, including the section relating to national banks, known as the Carlisle section, and the differences between the two Houses are so slight that the passage of the measure is regarded as now assured.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—The snow storm, which began here last evening, continued all night. The fall being from eight inches to one foot in depth. The storm extended throughout Northern Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin. It is now drifting badly, and the prospect is that blockades on railway lines, which have just been broken, will be established again, firmer than ever.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 19.—A telegram from Winchester, represents that troops were present for the protection of the alleged Lajrade murderers on trial there, and that they gave a parade in the court-house yesterday, before dark. Last night after dark a furious thunder storm came on, and fear of the prisoners being lynched their vanished.

A night session was held to finish the trial. Judge Stark gave his charge to the jury, after which the Sheriff proceeded with Lou Thweat, Robert Thweat and Jas. Elder to jail.

A mob of about two hundred pressed upon the sheriff, took the prisoners, closed the court-house and its grounds, stationed a strong picket guard around them, and hung the five negro prisoners from the second-story window of the court-house.

NASHVILLE, Feb. 19.—It is reported that Duffy and Murphy, the Laprade murderers who turned State's evidence, were found hanging to a tree near Guthrie, Ky., this morning.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—The Census office announces the following approximate distribution of the total population of the country among the several classes: Males 25,520,582; females 24,632,284; natives of the United States 43,475,006; foreign born 6,577,141; Chinese 105,465; number of colored persons to each 100,000 whites is 15,453.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The funding bill was not taken up to-day, but the indications are that the House will agree to the Senate amendment, and that the bill will become a law. There is a growing Republican sentiment in favor of passing an apportionment bill, and the New York Times admits that Cox's bill, providing for 307 members is a fair proposition.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The Golos, of St. Petersburg, received in London by mail, states that a plot has been discovered to blow up the arsenal at Kieff, and there have been numerous arrests.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—It is stated that Gen. Colley has telegraphed that the Boers have made overtures of peace; that the proposals have been considered in cabinet council, and that a reply has been dispatched by telegram to Gen. Colley, the contents of which are not yet known.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Mr. James Anthony Froude writes to the Times, saying that the papers of Carlyle left in his hands are extremely voluminous. There are several thousand letters, he says, including his own to members of his family, and letters to him from Goethe, John Stuart Mill, Lord Jeffrey, Sterling, Emerson, Leigh Hunt, Dickens, Thackeray and Varnhagen Von Ense.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—A dispatch from Alexandria states that Henry Lezart, a French explorer of Atrica, and all of his suite have been murdered by the Gallos tribes.

NICOSIA, Feb. 16.—News has been received here from Beyrout as follows: A Turk murdered a Christian on Sunday last, and a number of Christians thereupon left town and went to their villages, where they were met by Turks and ten persons were killed in the fight which ensued. There was renewed fighting on Monday, but the result at present is unknown. There is great excitement. Business in Beyrout is suspended and the bazaars are closed.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The Times, in an article on overtures for peace from the Boers to Gen. Colley, after recapitulating their proposals for negotiations, viz: That the British evacuate Transvaal, and that commissioners be appointed to settle its future relations with Great Britain, says the signs as far as we can discover, are not favorable to an early peace. The manifesto addressed by Boers to the Orange Free State Volksraad has no very peaceful sound.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—A dispatch from Athens to Reuter's Telegram Company, says a royal decree has been issued calling out the reserves. The troops of Morea are being gradually ordered to march northward. The largest college in Athens has been converted into a military hospital.

Alabama Conference Statistics.

MR. EDITOR: I have made, for my own information, some calculations based upon the statistical report, made at the last session of the Alabama Conference. I think it possible they may be of interest to others, so you are at liberty to publish them in the ADVOCATE. I wish to call attention particularly, to the missionary collection. But one District, (Union Springs,) paid the full assessment for Foreign Missions. The highest amount per capita, was paid by the Selma District, seventeen cents. In the whole Conference, the per cent. paid was only seventy-nine, the per capita only twelve cents.

There was a considerable amount of enthusiasm at our last missionary anniversary. The resolutions passed, all looked to progress in our missionary operations. It is to be hoped that the Methodists of Alabama, have a larger interest in the conversion of the world, than is represented by a contribution of twelve cents a member.

M.

For Support of Bishops:

District.	Assessed.	Paid per cent.	Paid per capita.
Mobile	$1130	91	05
Greensboro	140	94	05
Selma	150	1 05	07
Prattville	120	83	03
Montgomery	170	99	04
Eufaula	165	1 02	03
Marianna	80	86	01
Union Springs	135	96	03
Pensacola	125	80	03

For Support of Presiding Elders:

District.	Assessed.	Paid per cent.	Paid per capita.
Mobile	$1544	85	37
Greensboro	1350	79	34
Selma	1640	83	45
Prattville	1165	78	31
Montgomery	1705	89	34
Eufaula	1475	90	29
Marianna	760	73	15
Union Springs	1305	89	30
Pensacola	1225	86	30

For Support of Preachers in Charge:

District.	Assessed.	Paid per cent.	Paid per capita.
Mobile	$9653	84	2 39
Greensboro	7675	77	2 13
Selma	8894	85	2 56
Prattville	6925	80	2 09
Montgomery	10120	81	2 05
Eufaula	7756	98	1 49
Marianna	2252	70	66
Union Springs	7645	89	1 80
Pensacola	6830	85	1 56

For Conference Fund.

District.	Assessed.	Paid per cent.	Paid per capita.
Mobile	$1029	78	25
Greensboro	760	72	19
Selma	788	65	17
Prattville	657	64	09
Montgomery	909	86	17
Eufaula	778	80	14
Marianna	230	48	04
Union Springs	741	70	15
Pensacola	697	44	05

For Foreign Missions:

District.	Assessed.	Paid per cent.	Paid per capita.
Mobile	$700	80	10
Greensboro	500	75	13
Selma	700	71	17
Prattville	655	55	11
Montgomery	700	80	13
Eufaula	650	70	10
Marianna	110	70	03
Union Springs	550	1 01	14
Pensacola	300	42	07

For Domestic Missions:

District.	Assessed.	Paid per cent.	Paid per capita.
Mobile	$600	85	14
Greensboro	400	76	10
Selma	650	72	16
Prattville	450	84	10
Montgomery	600	1 00	14
Eufaula	550	70	09
Marianna	110	62	03
Union Springs	450	80	09
Pensacola	300	82	07

Paid per capita on all Collections

Mobile District	$3 34
Greensboro	2 84
Selma	3 57
Prattville	2 87
Montgomery	2 94
Eufaula	2 51
Marianna	82
Union Springs	2 51
Pensacola	2 71

An Error Corrected in Part.

MR. EDITOR: I notice several mistakes in the minutes of the last Louisiana Conference. Why these mistakes should have been made, I know not, and especially those pertaining to the Opelousas District, for I am satisfied the reports were handed in correctly. The first error is, there is no mention of any local preachers. The minutes report eight colored members, when it should have been eight local preachers. But the error which concerns me most, is, the amount reported as received by the P. E. The minutes only report $373, and I know I reported as received, up to the time I handed in my report, $458 15. But before the Conference closed, I received $57 80, which made $515 95, received by the presiding elder.

I hope you will give this a place in the ADVOCATE, and that our secretaries will be more careful in the future.

J. M. JOHNSON.

MORGAN CITY, LA., Feb. 8, 1880.

Assessments for Shreveport District.

The following are the assessments and apportionments of Shreveport District:

	PRESIDING ELDER.	CONFERENCE CLAIMANTS.	FOREIGN MISSIONS.	DOMESTIC MISSIONS.	BISHOPS.	EDUCATION.
Shreveport	$300	$150	$125	$40	$25	$50
Caddo	125	100	75	20	11	22
Mansfield	100	100	80	20	11	22
South Bossier	75	40	40	15	8	18
North Bossier	75	40	40	15	10	18
Mooringsport	65	30	30	15	9	18
Pleasant Hill	100	60	60	20	12½	25
Coushatta	100	60	60	15	12½	23
Springville	50	30	30	10	4	10
Natchitoches	100	60	50	15	10	20
Natchitoches circuit	50	25	25	5	6	10
Many circuit	50	20	20	5	3	6
Anacoco	35	10	10	2½	2	4
Logansport mission	25	5	5	2½	2	4
Totals	1500	$720	$656	200	125	1 250

T. H. MCCLANDON, P. E.

THE NEW SOUTH.—The old ruling classes have become workers; the old servile classes are working better than they worked in the days of slavery, and the "close-fisted farmers and the greasy mechanics" of the North and East, and West are everywhere welcomed. This is the great social and industrial revolution which the late war accomplished. In the days when the planter was king, the South had no need for these classes. And they did not go there. The civilization amid which they grow up, was the very converse of the civilization then in the South. In the one section, labor was honorable; in the other it was dishonorable. To be a workman was to be a serf. All this has been changed. The pursuit of commerce and trade, which in the past carried a social stigma with it is now the pathway to distinction. In fact, the South is endeavoring to convert itself as rapidly as possible into a nation of mercenary traders, close-fisted farmers and greasy mechanics. The rattle and clatter of the factory are beginning to be heard all over the South. Georgia alone has forty cotton manufactories, and new ones are going up in every direction. The South to-day seems to me to present the most magnificent field for industry and investment in the world. She has raised 300,000,000 bales of cotton this year, and there can be no doubt that the annual production, so far from diminishing, will grow every year larger and larger. The great problem before her now is to convert it into the manufactured article instead of sending the raw material a thousand miles to be made into cloth. That problem she is working out, and with profitable results. It is almost impossible to picture the prosperity of the South when that day shall come. She will be richer than ever India was. Just consider the advantages she possesses. The climate cannot be surpassed. Labor is cheaper, and, owing to her climatic superiority, it always must be cheaper in the South than in the North. Then there are her unrivalled water facilities. The streams that now run idly to the sea, are capable of running all the spindles of New England and Old England, from one end of the year to the other, without a single interruption. In ten years, I firmly believe, the South will convert at her own door, one-half her cotton crop into cloth, and in a quarter of a century she will be the greatest manufacturing centre in the world, in this particular line. The present condition of affairs is an anomaly; it is against all the laws of trade, and it is impossible that it should last. Capital always seeks the most profitable field in which it can operate—the field in which it can find the largest returns. In the past the social condition of the South repelled capital. Neither the capitalist nor the "greasy mechanic" was welcome unless the one came in the form of a planter and a slave owner, and the other of a slave driver. But, as I have said, all that has been changed.—Col. McClure.

The Methodist Book Concern.

At the recent session of the Book Committee in New York City, Messrs. Phillips and Hunt, made a very full account of the business and condition of the Book Concern at New York, and the depositories under their management at Boston, Buffalo, Pittsburg and San Francisco, from which we glean the following:

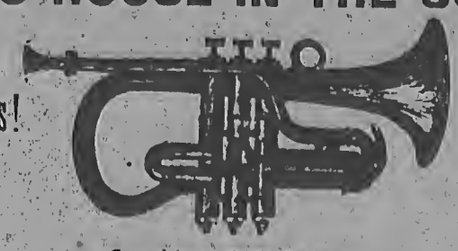
For the year ending June 30, 1880, the exhibit is as follows: Assets, consisting of real estate, merchandise, notes and accounts, and cash on hand, $1,768,249.20; liabilities $603,584.31; capital as per ledger $1,164,664.89. Deducting estimated amount necessary to fill contracts with subscribers for advance payment, and twenty per cent. from notes and accounts for probable losses, leaves the net capital, June 30, 1880, $1,025,017.66. The net profits for the year were $71,7—.67. The sales of books and periodicals of the New York Concern for the year amounted to $844,398.79. The sales of the depositories at Boston were $74,747.05, Buffalo, $54,143.67; Pittsburg, $45,086.76; San Francisco, $32,926.37; Northern Christian Advocate, (Syracuse) $21,337.50. The following statement shows the number of periodicals issued Nov. 30, 1880:

Christian Advocate	68,750
Quarterly Review	4,500
Sunday-School Journal	67,500
Sunday-School Advocate	66,000
Classmate	15,000
National Repository	1,700
Golden Hours	875
Berean Leaf	550,000
German Quarterly	2,000
Leaf Cluster	2,000
Picture Lesson Paper	2,000
Northern Christian Advocate	110,000
Berean Supplement	10,500
The Study	2,000
Western Christian Advocate	21,797
National Repository	3,408
Golden Hours	4,518
Christian Apologist	16,742
Hearth and Home	7,250
Northwestern Christian Advocate	17,540
Central Christian Advocate	14,256
Methodist Advocate	3,400
Sunbeam	2,400
Quarterly Review	1,100
Teachers' Journal (average	58,800
Lesson Leaf	468,000
Picture Lesson Paper	64,000
Berean Quarterly	6,500
Sunday-school Advocate	87,000
Sunday-school Classmate	50,000
Sunday-school Bell	34,500
Bible Lessons	24,000
Little Folks	6,500
Central Christian Advocate

THOMAS CARLYLE was born in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, in 1759. His father was a farmer, and a man of great force both of intellect and character. Thomas was designed for the ministry, but at an early age his theological views became unsettled, and he abandoned the plan. Another reason given by him was the discovery, that he "was the miserable owner of a diabolical arrangement called a stomach." He turned his attention to literature, and was enabled by his marriage to secure the requisite leisure. His first essays were without much recognition. He wrote biographical sketches for Brewster's Cyclopædia; also, the Life of Schiller; and translated Goethe's Wilhelmeister. His famous essays began to appear in 1827, and were forty in all. It was a revelation to the literary world, followed as it was by "Sartor Resartus." These were all incognito. "Sartor" was long unable to find a publisher. It was brought out in this country by Emerson. The first book published with his name was the "History of the French Revolution," 1837. "Chartism" appeared soon after; three years later "Past and Present." In 1845, he published "Cromwell," and in 1850, "Latter Day Pamphlets." The Life of Sterling appeared in 1851. The Life of Frederick the Great, was published from 1858 to 1864, and was the fruit of many years' study. This was his last great work. He was chosen Rector of Edinburg University, over Lord Beaconsfield. He espoused with great heat, the southern side in our war of the Rebellion, and that of the Germans in the Franco-Prussian war. He died at Chelsea, London, January 5th, of old age, without a struggle. We shall hereafter speak of his character and writings.—Christian Intelligencer.

Nearly all the ills that afflict mankind, can be prevented and cured by keeping the stomach, liver and kidneys in perfect working order. There is no medicine known that will do this as quickly and surely, without interfering with your duties as Parker's Ginger Tonic.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE CROSS STYLOGRAPIC PEN OR FLEXIBLE PENCIL.

A pencil that writes with ink; never needs sharpening and never wears out. Made of hard vulcanized rubber, silver, gold, platinum and iridium. 14 kinds from $2 50 to $5 each. Call and see them or send for circular.

LATHROP & WILKINS, Agents for the Southwest,
113 Camp street, New Orleans.

LEON ARLAUD
DRUGGIST,
Corner Customhouse and Dauphine sts., New Orleans.
PURE AND GENUINE DRUGS. GUARANTEED UNADULTERATED.
Medicines, Perfumery, etc. Specialty of Rather's Eau de Cologne.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR
MUSIC HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

Easiest Terms! Lowest Prices!

General Agency for the Celebrated
Steinway, Knabe, Pleyel, Weber, Fischer Pianos,
And the Popular Organs of
CLOUGH & WARREN AND PELOUBET, PELTON & CO.,
Everything in the Music line at rock bottom prices. Send for Illustrated catalogues.
LOUIS GRUNEWALD,
Grunewald Hall, New Orleans.

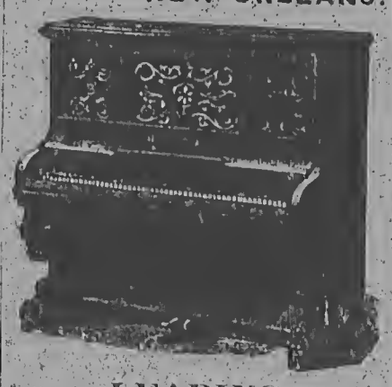
LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE
INSURANCE COMPANY.

SOUTHERN DEPARTMENT:

OFFICE: CORNER CAROMDELET AND GRAVIER STREETS.

The capital of the Company is TEN MILLION DOLLARS, to which there must be added the unlimited liability of the proprietors.

Fire assets, excluding paid-up capital	$9,841,426 21
Paid-up capital	1,223,200 00
Total fire assets	$11,109,876 21
Fire liabilities	2,844,558 23
Making the surplus for policy holders	$7,165,267 98



Losses by Chicago Fire in 1871 $3,239,611
Losses by Boston Fire in 1872 $1,129,729

Fire risks of all kinds respectfully solicited. The Board of Directors is fully empowered to adjust and pay all losses from this city, thus placing the Company on an even footing with the local companies chartered under the State laws.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

J. F. SCHRODER, Esq., Chairman of Leopold Christ & Co.
NEWTON BUCKNER, Esq., of Buckner & Co.
PERRY NUGENT, Esq., of Nugent & Laflande.
PELEG ANDERSON, Esq., of Anderson and Simpson.
HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary.
JULES C. ROUX, Assist. Resident Secretary.
NEW ORLEANS, October 20, 1880.

P. WERLEIN,
135 Canal Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

LEADING PIANOS!
ORGANS!
MUSIC
AND
Musical Instruments.
Send for my catalogues and prices before purchasing.
$25 TO $35.
STEWART'S NEW IMPROVED
SINGER
Sewing Machine.
Great Reduction in Prices!
Down with Monopolies!
Hard Times Demand Low Prices.

We warrant all our Machines to be NEW, LATEST-IMPROVED and PERFECT.

FIVE YEARS.

Our NEW MACHINE is supplied with a LOOSE BALANCE WHEEL, which is a great improvement over the old SINGER, as it enables the operator to wind the bobbin without running the machine, or removing the work from the needle. This is the most important improvement ever put on the Sewing Machine.

Also dealer in all first-class Machines, such as the
WHEELER & WILSON,
DOMESTIC, GROVER & BAKER,
WILSON, WEED, Etc.
Cotton, Silk, Flax, Oil and Needles for all kinds of Machines. Address

M. A. PECK,
General Sewing Machine Agent
153 CANAL STREET,
Next to Maimes' Dry Goods Store,
New Orleans.

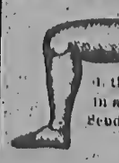
UNITED STATES
Four Per Cent. Bonds
BOUGHT AND SOLD BY
New Orleans National Bank,
58 CAMP STREET.
B. J. MONTGOMERY. C. KIRSCH
R. M. & B. J.
MONTGOMERY
FURNITURE
AND
MIRROR EMPORIUM,
Corner Camp and Poydras Sts.

After a sojourn of over six weeks among the Factories North, East and West, we open the Fall and Winter Trade with the largest and best selected stock of Furniture, French and German Plain Mirror Ornaments and Fancy Goods, Upholstery Goods and Cabinet Makers' Hardware ever brought to this city. We select our goods in person from the best factories and are determined not to be undersold. Our assortment being too extensive and varied to be enumerated in detail, we respect our customers and the general public to call and inspect for themselves.

On hand a full line of the celebrated Vienna Bent Wood Work and Invalid Wheel Chairs.

Goods packed and delivered F. O. B.

SPENCERIAN
STEEL PENS
Of the Very Best European Make, and unrivaled for Flexibility, Durability, and Evenness of point.
REAL SWAN QUILL ACTION.
In 20 Numbers. A complete Sample Card, for trial, by mail, on receipt of 20 Cents.
A Sample Gross of 10 of the Leading Styles, for trial, on receipt of 40 Cents.
IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR & CO.,
138 & 140 Grand St., New York.



FURNITURE.
W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
desires to inform the public and his patrons that his Stock of Parlor Suits, Chamber Suits and Dining-Room Suits, both fine and medium, has never been as complete as at present, with prices lower than ever.

His stock of Furniture suitable for country trade is very large, and special inducements are offered to wholesale buyers.

Orders from the country will have especial care and prompt attention.

W. G. TEBAULT,
47 Royal Street,
New Orleans.

D. MERCIER & SONS,
Better Known as Cheap John.
NO BRANCH STORE IN TOWN.
MEN'S, BOYS' AND YOUTH'S
CLOTHING,
HATS, BOOTS, SHOES, FURNISHING GOODS, ETC., ETC.
Cor. Dauphine and Bienville sts.,
New Orleans, La.
Orders from Country Merchants promptly executed, on most reasonable terms.

DR. BLY'S CELEBRATED PATENT ARTIFICIAL LEGS AND ARMS have all the motions of the natural limbs. Perfect satisfaction in all cases or no pay. Prices reduced. Send for pamphlet.
A. MCILHENNOTT, Manufacturer.
153 Camp St., New Orleans.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 27.—NO. 9. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MARCH 3, 1881. WHOLE NO. 1343.

PUBLISHED FOR THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D., Editor.

G. T. LATHROP & CO., Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, . . . $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.
REV. H. D. MOORE.
REV. G. R. BLUE, D. D.
REV. J. G. ANDREW.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. H. WATKINS, D. D.
REV. JAMES A. GOMPERTY.
REV. W. L. C. HINNICUTT.
LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. JOHN MATHEWS, D. D.
REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

THE BETTER LAND.

I know not where the islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
I know not where the coral reefs
Lie submerged and fair;
Unpiloted and silent seas
Where never ship hath been,
The lotus blows, the wavelet flows
Somewhere, I ween.

I cannot see the waving hands,
Upon that far-off shore,
I cannot hear the welcome songs,
Or catch the chorus o'er;
But listening souls and blinded eyes
Would hear and see, no doubt,
Were not the doors of mortal ears
Shut fast about.

When morning's flushed the eastern sky
And crowned the Lycian day,
The splendor of ten thousand ships
Fades into haze away;
When God's light shines into the soul,
A glory round it bright—
All earthly splendor fades away,
Like stars in morning light;

All worldliness will flee apace,
All earthly veils will fall,
Till all but the divine is gone,
And God is all in all.

There is a rapture of the soul,
The joy of sins forgiven—
For it is the blessed reign of Odin,
And what is it, "Its heaven."

Christian at Work.

The Piney Woods.

Passing along the street this morning, I heard one man ask another: "How are the piney woods?" The words themselves did not express very much, but there was a suggestiveness about the speaker's tone, a sort of jesting taint, implying that, although he himself might have a very good opinion of these woods, yet there were others who had not. This is true. Much sport has been made of them, and of their inhabitants. The Saddusee of the river lowlands, and the Pharisee of the liver uplands, sneeringly ask, Can any good thing come out of this Nazareth? Now, though the pine woods of the world are, as yet, its back woods, they should not be a by-word and a reproach. Let us take a stroll through them, and bring back, as trophies of our ramble, a few stray facts and thoughts.

It is scarcely becoming in a child to boast of his own mother. For this reason alone, do I hesitate to assert the fair degree of civilization already existing in the great pine belt of the South, and to prophesy the great importance and glory that are destined to crown the early future of her progress. The immigration arguments in her favor, though not as widely published as they should be, yet are too well known to justify more than a passing reference to them here. The immense latitude and pliant utility of her soil, apart from her other timber, the inexhaustible native resources of the pine tree itself in every department, heart, fibre, sap, bark, boughs, twigs, cones, and leaves; the home industries, of which these alone form the base; the powerful auxiliaries of climate and atmospheric advantages; her vast mineral and mineral wealth; the endless variety of her fauna, and the boundless beauty of her flora, the tremendous and indispensable assistance of good irrigation and drainage; together with the incidental, but vast advantages of territorial, commercial, civil, educational and religious privileges; all combine to proclaim the innumerable attractions of this favored land.

Her position in the probable political and national future merits more than a few moments' attention. The late revisal, among its astounding revelations, brings to notice the fact that the great germ-life of the South, though nipping frosts and a treacherous spring have greeted it, is at last beginning to unfold. The southern half of the United States is to-day, above all the world, the land promising the speediest-used-mighty and hitherto unfulfilled possibilities. Towards the youthful, but lusty and growing immunity of Southrons, the eyes of many are turned with expectancy, and, if need be, with assistance. Our prosperity is assured by the multitude of attractions held out to immigrants, and the immense profits offered the investment of foreign capital; it will be hastened by the necessary mutual exchange of interests in that grand system of commercial circulation through whose veins throbs the wealth of our own continent; nay, it already exists in the rapid enrichment and actual improvement of our people.

But, extensive as is the range of the pinelands of the South, they are only one little corner of the great pine forests of the world. Of all known woodland vegetation, the pine is the most universally diffused, and the most widely useful—that is, the tree tribe, of which the pine forms but one member. It is a member of the numerous and aristocratic family of the Coniferæ, of which the naturalists enumerate some twenty distinct varieties. These are scattered over the habitable globe, through every variation of climate and of surface. In the icebound regions of the north, or scorched by the hot breath of the southern archipelagos, in the low, barren waste, or on the bleak, solitary mountain peak, everywhere this tree seems to bid defiance to unfavorable circumstances. It rises up in all shapes, from the scraggy shrub that scarcely casts a shadow on the rock, to the tall giants that stand up in matchless majesty and brush the clouds with their waving hands. Its sturdy nature has been compared to that moral grandeur of character in the man who grows up from the unpromising desert of human ignorance and vice, and boldly braves the storms of ridicule and calamity. It is not nourished in the lap of a luxurious soil, fanned by gentle zephyrs, and kissed by bright sunbeams. Its home is in the barren, dark, lonely place. At times, as in our own land, it pleasantly robs the smiling valley or crowns the gentle slopes of the hill country; but this is not its normal, its representative place. It is oftener born in the narrow crevice of some bare, steep rock. Its cradle is rocked by the storm-wind. Its lullaby is sung in the tempest's voice. Like the poor little Indian papoose, it is flung out alone to sink or swim. Its fibrous muscles are toughened in a life-long battle with the elements. Its sepulchre is in the rocky ghar. Its dirge is chanted on the sad strained Eolian harp of its mourning companions.

The ends served by the peculiar position of the pines are numerous and important in view of the purposes they effect in nature. It was well said by the ancient Chinese philosophers, that "the mightiest rivers are cradled in the leaves of the pine." Their towering tops condense the passing clouds, and catching the falling shower, their leaves form the great natural water distilleries of the earth. Borrowing, for a moment, the analysis of an eminent and close observer of physical geography, it will be found that the demolition of the vast pine forests that once covered the Apennines, has reduced the Papal States to a region of poverty, disease and wretchedness." "The present sterile condition of Palestine is attributed to "the disforesting of its mountains and hills." O'Grove, it has been tearfully said that "their water nymphs have vanished along with their sorrowing sisters, the Dryads." The great conservative and sanitary influence of these trees is felt and acknowledged in all lands. Not only are they the agents of good; they also protect from evil. But for the sturdy scathed trunks of the Norwegian pines, the peasants of Norway would be compelled to abandon their homes before the march of the rushing mountain ice slides. These great glaciers bulge sternly against the pines, and there slowly thaw out into the valleys below. In south France and in the northern part of the Peninsula the great natural fortifications afforded by the pine forests are just as indispensable. Formerly the fierce winds sweeping in from the Bay of Biscay whirled upon its clouds of sand, burying the coast, and, for many miles into the interior, carried away everything before them. But now, running coastwise, there is a dense pine wall, sheltered behind which the peasants live secure.

A pine forest possesses a deep, soul-inspiring beauty. I will not quote Ruskin and Wood in their graceful tributes to this point, because around us we may read a still better proof from the page of nature. And yet the very fact that it is right around us, leads us to overlook this rare beauty. Let one advance, however, for the first time into the midst of an ordinary pine forest, and he is appealed to on every side by types and forms, colorings and perspectives, all in the highest style of effective combination. He may not be able to analyze this beauty, but he feels it. It is artistic, yet natural. It is clothed with the rarest complexity, yet it is in the "undress of Nature."

Through all the year, too, it remains. Other trees may look well in the spring or in the fall, by day or by night; but few, like the pine, look equally so in every season of the day and year. The early dawn, the mild, mid-day sun, the evening glamouring, the solemn, starlit night seem to vie in crowning it with peculiar charms. It is hard to tell which season suits it best. The budding freshness of its glorious spring, the deep, cool shadowy ease of its fervid summer, the surviving immortality of its evergreen, or the regal majesty of its autumn, or the regal majesty of its snow-crowned winter. "It is beautiful in calm, when the tree-tops scarce in whisper to each other, and the twitter of the golden wren sounds loud in the ear; it is more than beautiful in storm, when the wild fingers of the wind play the most mournful music on its great harpstrings, and its full diapason is sublime as the roar of the ocean on a rock-bound shore."

I shall not go to the length to which Holmes goes in one of his readable little volumes, where he calls the elms his "tree-wives," and puts his wedding-ring on each of them; but I do love the sight and sound of the pine woods. Seated, or lying prostrate on the straw carpet, or walking through its arched aisles, I am filled with an incommunicable awe and a spirit of holy reflection. Besides the mere element of beauty, to which reference has just been made, there is much in these woods that draws the soul toward God. Hugh Macmillan, in his excellent chapter on the "Trees of the Lord," among much other useful information, tells how the Saxon mythology chose the pine forest as the favorite abode of their deities. Odin or Woden and Thor. I do not wonder at the choice. I have found a greater than Odin there. The religious influence of these silent sanctuaries does not vary with the changes of human thought and worship. In them the heathen offered the noisy service of his ostentatious sacrifice, and in them the Christian still sends up the sweet incense of silent devotion; in them the European worshiped his god, and in them the American worships his God; in them the polytheist walked in pretended converse with grinning satyrs and chattering wood nymphs, and in them the theist hears the whispering voices of attendant angels. The poet ever feels this mysterious spell as well as the ancient. Longfellow says Nature seems kneeling there with folded hands as if in prayer. Pope Burns, speaking of such a scene, while in one of his strangely-blended musing moods of serious thought, says: "This is my best season for devotion; my mind is wrapt up in a kind of enthusiastic adoration to Him who "walketh on the wings of the wind." Bryant calls such a place a

> "Fit shrine for humble worshipers to hold
> Communion with his Maker.
> These are the lofty temples of the earth.
> Here in the shadow of the trees, I feel
> The soothing influence that turns the thoughts
> That rise above the summits of the trees
> To nobler objects. Here the natural brook
> Murmurs its music, and the breezes play
> With a pleasant sound. Here the solemn shade,
> And verdure of the undisturbed sod,
> Seem like the floor of some vast temple, fitted
> For the worship of its Maker. Here
> The fresh, living ground, spread all to meet with thee."

P. A. Strut.

Blanton, Miss., February 21st.

Alabama Penitentiary.

INTERESTING STATEMENT BY DR. DUGGARS.

Mr. Editor: In noticing a communication from "J. W. R.," of Prattville, Ala., I see that he alludes to the great whisky question which has been before our Legislature for some time; or its influence in bringing men to Wetumpka who were swelling the State Treasury by their labors as convicts.

Seeing this, and for the information of many of the readers of your Advocate who are anxious to know something of the Alabama Penitentiary, I thought proper to send you a few facts concerning this institution.

Nearly six years ago Col. John G. Bass was appointed warden by the late Governor Houston, one of Alabama's most illustrious men. And when Col. Bass was appointed warden, the State prison was in a dilapidated condition; in fact, it was a dead expense to the State, receiving an annual appropriation of from $40,000 to $50,000 to keep it up; and the governor at one time proposed to give the prison gratuitously to any man who would take and run it.

But Col. Bass, being a man of ability and manhood, took the elephant by the proboscis, tamed him and turned him into a domestic animal and makes him not only self-supporting, but to bring in a handsome revenue for his master.

But few men would have accomplished what Col. Bass has done. But his term of office will expire the first of March, 1881, when the new warden, Col. John H. Bankhead, will enter upon the discharge of his duties. Both of these gentlemen are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and are Christian gentlemen.

I was chaplain to the penitentiary last year and am now, and the facts which I send you are from personal knowledge, and from the monthly report of inspectors which has recently been published.

To Alabamians this report is one of much interest, as it shows the workings of a large institution of one of the most progressive States of the American union.

The principle that seems to rule the present penitentiary system is the one that governs all great business enterprises. It is the principle that keeps constantly in view the interest of the State. But while the interest of the State should be thus carefully observed, yet humanity towards those lives whom the strong arm of justice is exercised ought never to be lost sight of. In other words, the prisoners for the most part are placed where they will do the most good. And this is outside the walls of the prison. This certainly can not be termed cruelty to the convicts, whatever other objections the keen visions of some may seem to see. Of the 511 convicts, only the comparatively small squad of forty-four are kept within the walls.

The buildings are in a first-class condition, having under the present management been fully and thoroughly repaired from pit to dome.

And what is more the grounds thereto have been effectually ditched and drained, and where were once old brick yards and quagmires, fertile gardens are now to be seen, and large crops of wholesome vegetables are produced for the benefit of those kept within the walls.

The convicts for the most part are hired to miners and farmers—most of them at five dollars per month. These are the first-class hands. There is a second class that bring only two dollars and a half, and a few who are let for their victuals and clothes."

The report shows, however, that as fast as the five dollar contracts expire new ones are made at eight dollars per month. It is worth noting here that the sum of $45,000 has been paid into the State treasury during the two years. Within the five years under the present system, $81,000 have been paid into the treasury, $35,000 of State bonds cancelled, besides building the Wetumpka branch railroad, worth $12,921 20, and making repairs and improvements on buildings and grounds, worth $12,200, making a total for five years of $112,121 20. Under the new contract, of course the income to the State will be largely increased.

There has been a wonderful diminution of transportation expenses under the law of the last Legislature. Under the old law, it cost per capita about fifty-nine dollars for transporting convicts to the penitentiary; now it costs about one dollar and seventy cents.

Out of the 511 convicts, it is interesting to note that there is but one solitary white woman. The fact is certainly creditable to the character of the sex in Alabama. This one is thirty-five years old, and was sentenced to a term of three years for adultery. She is from Lee county, and her conduct is put down as bad."

The number of white male convicts is only 93. The colored male convicts are 351, and colored females 20. There are some children among the colored convicts, the youngest being ten years, and is sentenced for seven years, for manslaughter. There is one twelve, one thirteen, one fourteen and quite a number ranging from fourteen to twenty. The oldest, colored, is seventy-five; he is in for manslaughter, for five years. There is one seventy-two years, and is in for two years for assault with intent to murder. The five sentences are fifty-one.

The table showing the previous occupations of convicts is of interest. It shows four hundred and eighty-nine laborers, nine cooks, eight carpenters, seven horse-swappers, six farmers, three blacksmiths, two engineers, two shoemakers, one hotel-keeper, one baker, one machinist, one jeweler, one brick mason, one teamster, one sailor, one musician, one dentist, one painter, one schoolmaster, one horse-trader, one tinner, one steamboat engineer, one doctor. The doctor is in for life, for murder, from Colbert. His document is "good." And it is with pleasure that we note that there are no editors, no printers, and no preachers in the list of convicts at the Alabama penitentiary.

The table of nativity shows: Alabama, 338; Georgia, 11, and the balance scattered about, three being put down to England, two to Germany, and one each to Ireland, Switzerland, and Canada.

The table showing crimes for which convicts were sentenced, shows that the crime of burglary is the most largely represented; there are 170 burglars. Grand larceny and murder stand next on the list, there being 101 names under each of these heads. In the olden times, horse stealing showed the largest number of convicts, but that does not seem so popular a business as formerly, there being only one horse thief. There are quite a number for rape, and a few for arson, and nearly every other crime has one or more representatives.

Another fact worthy of note. In the tables touching the conduct of the several convicts, it is put down as for the most part "good." Out of fifty-three employed by the Newcastle Coal Company, the conduct of every one is reported "good." Out of forty-six employed by C. P. Pollard, only two "bad" are reported for two years. Out of eighty-seven employed by Col. Thomas Williams (our excellent Congressman) the report for two years show twenty-eight "bad." These are samples.

The number of deaths during two years were sixty; number escaped, twenty-six; number discharged by expiration of sentence, two hundred and seventy-four, number pardoned, twenty-nine.

Oh, what hath whisky done! Nearly all, the murderers and a large majority of other convicts attribute their crimes to the enlisting and fighting in the great army whose chief officers are Capt. Rye, Gen. Barnum, and Col. Dexter.

Morally and religiously, the penitentiary in some respects is as good as could be expected.

The warden and all the officers and guards under the present regime are strictly moral and religious men. And we pray God that no immoral, profane, wicked man will ever be allowed to have anything to do with this prison. We hope that the governors and wardens will see to this. There is a chapel in the prison and the chaplain is required by law to hold service at least one time each Sabbath.

As chaplain last year and now, I discharged my duty acceptably to the officers of the prison, and I trust more acceptably to God.

The prisoners manifest great interest in the religious services and are, doubtless, much edified and benefitted. I can truthfully say and with pleasure, too, in the language of part of my report published: "That I have seen among those who are now suffering the penalty of a broken statute, some made to rejoice in the blessed hope and comforts which are only found in the gospel of Jesus Christ." Since my connection as chaplain with this prison I have been more fully convinced that many a Waterloo is fought in the human heart where no eye can see but God's eye; and that there are many heroes worthy of immortal renown who wear no chaplet or crown in this world, but shall be made through the gospel of Christ, for the life to come, worthy of a crown which shall be braided by the hand of God, and will sparkle with diadems when the stars are dead. My visits to the prisons have not been few, and my pastoral work has been attended to. I have especially visited the sick and prayed with the spirits in prison." For the Supreme Governor of the Universe to pour his richest blessings upon our beloved Alabama and her institutions I shall ever most earnestly pray.

J. D. Anderson.

Wetumpka, Ala., February 1, 1881.

The New Version.

Advance copies of the revised version of the New Testament, have, says the Watchman, been distributed among the newspapers of England, and the London Record of January 7th criticises specimens of the work. We give some of them below, that our readers may see for themselves the sort of English Scriptures which the revisers are about to give us. The whole New Testament will be out in a few weeks, but even a glimpse of it will not be without interest. We place the original version of the passages beside the revised version, for convenient comparison.

Revised Version.	Common Version.
Matthew 1:6. Jesse begat David the king.	Matthew 1:6. Jesse begat David the king.
Matthew 1:18. Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise.	Matthew 1:18. Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise.
Matthew 1:20. Joseph, thou son of David.	Matthew 1:20. Joseph, thou son of David.
Matthew 2:1. Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judæa in the days of Herod the king.	Matthew 2:1. Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judæa in the days of Herod the king.
Matthew 2:2. Where is he that is born king of the Jews?	Matthew 2:2. Where is he born king of the Jews?
Matthew 2:3. He was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.	Matthew 2:3. He was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.
Matthew 2:4. Where the Christ should be born.	Matthew 2:4. Where Christ should be born.
Matthew 2:5. In Bethlehem of Judæa.	Matthew 2:5. In Bethlehem of Judæa.
Matthew 2:6. Art in no wise least among the princes of Judah.	Matthew 2:6. Art not the least among the princes of Judah.
Matthew 2:7. Inquired of them diligently what time the star appeared.	Matthew 2:7. Inquired of them what time the star appeared.
Matthew 2:8. Search diligently for the young child.	Matthew 2:8. Search for the young child.
Matthew 2:9. Stood over where the young child was.	Matthew 2:9. Stood over where the young child was.
Matthew 2:11. Fell down and worshiped him.	Matthew 2:11. Fell down and worshiped him.
Matthew 2:13. Flee into Egypt.	Matthew 2:13. Flee into Egypt.
Matthew 2:14. Took the young child and his mother by night.	Matthew 2:14. Took the young child and his mother by night.
Matthew 2:15. Out of Egypt have I called my son.	Matthew 2:15. Out of Egypt have I called my son.
Matthew 2:16. Slew all the children that were in Bethlehem.	Matthew 2:16. Slew all the children that were in Bethlehem.
Matthew 2:19. But when Herod was dead.	Matthew 2:19. But when Herod was dead.
Matthew 2:20. Arise and go into the land of Israel.	Matthew 2:20. Arise and go into the land of Israel.
Matthew 2:21. Arose and came into the land of Israel.	Matthew 2:21. Arose and came into the land of Israel.
Matthew 2:22. Was afraid to go thither.	Matthew 2:22. Was afraid to go thither.
Matthew 2:23. Dwelt in a city called Nazareth.	Matthew 2:23. Dwelt in a city called Nazareth.

A Remarkable Conversion.

The following is the story of the conversion of the young French evangelist, M. Reveilhaud. Four months before the event he had written a book, in the preface of which he said:

"It is not a work of faith, though it is a work of good faith. The writer is not a believer, though he would fain be one. He belongs to no church. Born and educated in the Catholic Church, he early abjured its pomps and works. He is called a "free-thinker." He is one of the great multitude of enthusiasts for freedom of conscience, the progress of the human mind, the honor and glory of his country. His testimony for Protestantism is spontaneous and disinterested. His book is not for the propagation of a creed, but for the preservation of society."

But within four months of that, at the conclusion of a sermon in a Protestant church in Troyes, on the rapture of Stephen in his death, M. Reveilhaud suddenly arose and approached the pulpit. The account is given by the preacher:

"I turned quickly and perceived that the intelligent and educated young man who was coming toward me, and whom I well knew, desired to be heard. "Worthy sir, suffer me," he said, "to bear witness to the Holy Ghost." I gave him leave, and, standing before the communion table below the pulpit, he spoke nearly as follows:

"My brethren, I desire to bear witness for the Holy Ghost, and to declare, with our pastor, that there is an invisible and supernatural world, not known to the senses, but apprehended by faith and heavenly grace. Last night it pleased the Holy Spirit to reveal himself to me and give me that baptism in which, according to the promise of the Scriptures, we become the children of the Father, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. By this baptism I have been born again, and have put off the old man, with the lusts of the flesh. I feel the grace, the power, the love of God. I have entered into the invisible Church of Christ. I am converted."

Good Words.

In the Lord Jesus Christ we have a "Days-man," or Mediator, who, partaking in his person of both the Divine and human natures, can unbuckle the chains of God's inflexible justice, having Himself satisfied to the uttermost the requirement of his holy law on behalf of guilty men; who can therefore be admitted to pardon and Divine favor by that gracious hand stretched out from heaven to bring back to God all who trust in Him. Rev. J. W. Pinkny.

When Hagar was quite disconsolate with indignation, tears and distress of mind, there was a fountain by her, though she knew it not. So the weeping believer has relief at hand, which he cannot see. God's Word, God's Spirit, and God's ministers are the angels that direct and lead His afflicted people to the Fountain opened.—Toplady.

The better a man becomes, the stronger does the hope of "the glory going on," take hold of his nature. The instinctive expectation of life beyond the grave strengthens with the increase of virtue in the soul. The man who lives best most keenly feels that life is worth living; most resolutely turns away from the thought of its extinction. Sunday Afternoon.

Paul saw in Hagar and Sarah what an unbeliever could not see. I look into the Gospels; how infinitely different do they appear to me, and to the skeptic who only sees in them certain sexploded myths; and yet how very far does my view remain short of that of angels and saints within the veil. Andrew Jukes.

"In all their afflictions he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them." Isaiah lxiii. 9. It is between Christ and his church as between two lute strings, no sooner one is struck but the other trembles. Thomas Brooks.

The damps of autumn sink into the leaves and prepare them for the necessity of their fall; and thus insensibly are we as years close round us, detached from our tenacity of life by the gentle pressure of recorded sorrow.—Landor.

There is a burden of care in getting riches, fear in keeping them, temptation in using them, guilt in abusing them, sorrow in losing them, and a burden of account at last to be given up concerning them all. Matthew Henry.

"I have never been able," says Marcus Aurelius, "to discover that a man is at all worse for being attacked. One foolish line of his own does him more harm than the ablest of my libels written against him by other people."

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MARCH 3, 1881.

THE BORDER LAND.

In fleshly weakness as shed I life,
And through the casement catch the gentle swing
Of emerald boughs against the sapphire sky,
And list the sweet wild birds their vespers sing,

I have no wish but my tired soul to lay
Upon the bosom of the Good and Great;
To feel my hands in meek consent and say,
"Well if thou bid'st me come, well if to wait."

One word, "Forgive," embraces all past years,
With praise for present gifts my heart runs o'er,
While through the mist of silent, tranquil tears
Gleams the far vision of a golden door.

Stands it ajar for me this summer night?
To greet me there are my lost angels met?
Am I so soon to share their pure delight?
Hark! a soft voice responsive saith, "Not yet."

Go back once more a simple child to school—
The worlds wide battle school of toil and heat;
Follow no law but Christ's most loving rule,
And bring each day new trophies to his feet;

Some selfish aim subdued, dark passion slain,
Some sweet forgiveness of a bitter wrong,
Some tender solace of a brother's pain,
Some sorrow bravely borne in duty strong.

And aye, the more you wrestle on to know,
And knowing, walk the path the Master trod,
Your all of hope in holier homage throw
Upon the mercy of the perfect God."

Ah, yes! When sickness into death ages by,
The border land should be a holy place—
A glorious mount of pause 'twixt earth and sky,
Whose finer airs give souls a deeper grace.

So be it mine hence forth in chastened mood
To wear my lengthened years, forgetting never
The Pisgah height where I this night have stood,
And glimpsed afar the home beyond the river.

—Gospel Worlds.

Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. CHRISTIAN KREBER.

First Quarter Lesson XI.

Subject. The Sinner's Friend.

Golden Text. The Same Is Forgiven Much.

SUNDAY, MARCH 13. LUKE VII. 36-50.

36 And one of the Pharisees desired him that he would eat with him. And he went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat.

37. And, behold, a woman in the city, which was a sinner, when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an alabaster box of ointment,

38. And stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.

39. Now, when the Pharisee which had bidden him spake within himself, saying, This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him, for she is a sinner.

40. And Jesus answering said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, Master, say on.

41. There was a certain creditor which had two debtors: the one owed five hundred pence, and the other fifty.

42. And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me, therefore, which of them will love him most?

43. Simon answered and said, I suppose that he to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.

44. And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for my feet; but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head.

45. Thou gavest me no kiss; but this woman, since the time I came in, hath not ceased to kiss my feet.

46. Mine head with oil thou didst not anoint; but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.

47. Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much; but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.

48. And he said unto her, Thy sins are forgiven.

49. And they that sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, Who is this that forgiveth sins also?

50. And he said to the woman, Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace.

INTRODUCTION.—Some of the most precious facts in the life of our Lord on earth are recorded as complaints made of him by enemies. "This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them," he hath gone to be a guest with a man that is a sinner." What a blessed thing to know that while Christ was here on earth he received sinners and accepted invitations from them, and, what is more blessed still, to know that he is still the same kind friend of sinners, for in the last letter we have from him, since he has arrived at heaven and taken his seat at God's right hand, he saith: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

Verse 36. Two feasts at which our Lord was entertained are memorable for their striking contrasts as well as for their marked differences. We mean the one given in Bethany, by Simon the leper, when Mary and Martha were present, with Lazarus also, when a box of nard was broken, and this feast, in the lesson to-day, given by Simon the Pharisee.

Each feast had a Simon as the host; each had an objector; each was marked by a most beautiful tribute of gratitude to our Lord. In each the Lord uttered a blessing and a reproof.

There was a marked difference in the character of the two Simons, a difference in the spirit that prompted the entertainment, a difference in the character of the two women receiving the blessing.

How Simon came to invite Christ to his house we cannot tell, any more than we can tell why some people, who feel themselves to be good enough already, come to church. Whatever may have been the spirit of the invitation, Christ accepted it as if meant in the spirit of true hospitality. I have known men to go to church to be amused, and receive a blessing when they came; men and women who go to ridicule and leave in tears.

Verse 37. How came this woman in this goodly company we can understand when we know that in Palestine hospitality was so free that at meal-time the doors were all open, and it was in order for anybody to come and look at you while you ate. This woman came in with others, who were there as spectators.

When she knew that Jesus sat at meat, she brought an alabaster-box of ointment. There were no chairs to sit on at this feast, but the guests reclined upon couches as high as the table, with [illegible] to the table. Upon these each guest reclined, leaning on his left elbow, and with his head toward the table, his body extending out at a right angle to the table. Being thus situated, it was easy for this woman to come up to the feet of Christ, and bathe them with her falling tears.

Verse 38. She stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet and anointed them with ointment.

The sight of this woman, her dishevelled hair falling down to hide her tears and confusion, her sacrifice of perfume, once devoted to herself in an unhallowed art, now poured upon the feet of her Saviour; it was enough to melt a heart of stone. But Simon sat and looked upon the scene with a disapproval ill-concealed. It was enough for him to know that Jesus let this unhappy creature not only touch his feet, but kiss them without a word of disapproval. If he were a prophet he would have known what manner of woman this is that touched him. The touch of this woman would have put Simon in a ceremonial quarantine for a month. One word from the Master, one look of disapproval, and Simon would have been but too glad to put the creature out. These were the thoughts passing in Simon's heart, but Christ heard his thoughts, and read his mind, for he needed not to be told what is in man.

Simon, I have something to tell you. Say on, Master, was his constrained reply. Then follows the simple story of two debtors, both frankly forgiven because they had nothing to pay. Which of them will love him most? As I understand it, the one he forgave most. Thou hast judged rightly, Simon.

Seest thou this woman? The two persons whose cases are set forth in his parable are brought face to face; little did Simon hail looked down on her, if he looked at her at all, now he must look up to her. I came into thine house; it was thy duty rather than hers to show me the attentions worthy of an honored guest; but see, you gave me no water for my feet, no kiss for my face, no oil for my head; but she has washed my feet with tears and wiped them with her hair; she hath kissed them, and anointed them with precious ointment. She loves most; she has most forgiven her. Wherefore, I say unto thee, her sins, which are many, are forgiven, for she loved much. Not because she loved so much was she forgiven, as though her love is the cause of her forgiveness, but you may know that she is forgiven by the fact that she loved much, as is proved by the parable I told you.

He who feels little need of forgiveness loveth little. To deepen our love for Christ our conviction of sin must be deepened.

Verse 50. Thy faith hath saved thee. Not the love; it was faith, the hope of a penitent, based upon the words and character of Jesus, which brought her to the house of Simon; in this faith her love was born. The order is faith first, then love, then peace.

From this incident we learn many lessons:

1. We learn to judge not by appearances, but to judge righteous judgment.

2. We learn that cold, selfish hypocrisy is as hateful to God as more glaring sins.

3. That Christ looked upon unbelief in the Pharisee as hateful as in the sinner.

4. We learn that faith saves faith that works by love.

5. That in feasts where Jesus is honored we are to be excluded because they are sinners.

Report on the Publishing Interests.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, DECEMBER, 1880.

The committee on the publishing interests beg leave to make the following report:

The phrase, "publishing interests," as used by our church, is generic, embracing the family of Advocates, Sunday-school literature, the Quarterly Review, books and tracts, and the Publishing House.

The value of these interests to the church cannot be computed. They have been, and are still to be, urged as so many great and indispensable conditions of unity and prosperity. There is truly cause for devout thankfulness to the great Head of the church for the present status of our literature. Its purity, variety, and completeness are matters on which the church may congratulate itself. Wherever it is disseminated it is attended with the most gratifying results. Its fruits are to be seen in almost every direction.

But the great desideratum at present is not so much an increase in the quantity and quality of our church publications as the distribution of them among our people. It is much to be deprecated that it can be said, and truthfully, too, in many places within the limits of our Conference, that our people are not a reading people. The ministry of the word from the pulpit would be greatly enhanced in efficiency, and would be accompanied with far greater and more lasting good could it have the advantage of that great supplemental agency which is so timely and thoroughly furnished by the reading and study of our literature.

Every preacher in charge owes it to the church and, in consequence, to himself to secure the greatest practicable circulation of books and periodicals within the bounds of his work. Not only his effectiveness as a preacher and pastor, but also his support will be [illegible] dotted that the liberality of a people, as well as their sympathy with the general advancement of the kingdom of, directly proportional to the degree of christ, will, other things being equal, be information and coincident reading with respect to the claims of the gospel. Hence it is that we observe, in those communities of most intelligence on these subjects, a corresponding liberality toward the support of the gospel. Much more in this direction might be done by us all than we would suppose before the test has been actually made.

To give somewhat more minuteness to the various interests comprised in this report, we proceed to notice them in detail:

1. The Nashville and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATES claim our attention. The Nashville Christian Advocate is worthy of the church of which it has the honor and responsibility to be the grand denominational exponent. We commend it as being ably edited, and for its bold, uncompromising advocacy of those fundamental doctrines and usages which constitute some of the prihaitive and evangelical characteristics of Methodism. A very salutary influence is exerted by the class meeting spirit which attends this paper. It has thus been the means of reviving class meetings which were dead, and of imparting new life to many not entirely extinct. We most heartily endorse and recommend it to all our people. Our own ADVOCATE, published in New Orleans, is, in the estimation of the committee, first-class, and should be in every Methodist family in the Mississippi Conference. It certainly has superior claims, both as the ability with which it is edited and the judicious care with which it is published. We are sorry to be informed, by the report from the Publishing Committee of this paper, that the number of subscribers has been reduced by the adoption of the cash system. In view of this fact, we do earnestly solicit the members of this Conference to make extra efforts during the ensuing Conference year to extend the circulation of this ADVOCATE sufficiently, at least, to keep it on a self-sustaining basis.

2. The Quarterly Review is an interest of our church, which should commend itself to our favorable consideration. Its merits demand a larger support and more general introduction. We recommend it as a periodical which will abundantly repay its readers for the money invested and the time devoted to its careful reading.

3. With respect to our Sunday-school literature, it is the sense of this committee that it is excellent, and, taken as a whole, superior to what it has been hitherto, that it is well adapted to the wants of the Sunday-school, and ought to be used in every Methodist Sunday-school in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whatever objections may exist with reference to it will generally vanish when a thorough and faithful test shall have been made.

4. As regards our books and tracts, we are pained to be under the necessity of stating that entirely too few are bought and read by our people. The feebleness of the spirit of Methodism, as exhibited by many of our members, is attributable, in a large measure, to the absence of that nourishment to be found in our good Methodist books. There is one small book which we cannot forbear to mention in this connection, the book which every Methodist should "read, study and inwardly digest," but which, alas! is read by comparatively few. We mean the "Book of Discipline." Our preachers should insist on the people reading this book. In our church Conferences a fine opportunity is afforded for bringing the subject of our literature before the church.

5. We are much gratified to learn, by the report of the Publishing House, that the past year has been one of so much prosperity that the prospects for final deliverance from all embarrassment are growing brighter each day, and that only promptness on the part of those who have not yet met their subscriptions to the four per cent. bonds is needed to place the House beyond the liability of failure or further embarrassment.

E. M. REED, Chairman.

Administration of Discipline.

MR. EDITOR: Allow me, for one, to thank you for your well-timed remarks in last week's ADVOCATE on the subject of Discipline. I rejoice to believe that more attention is being paid to this all-important subject. The pastors, and it is said especially the young men of them, are giving no uncertain sound at this point, and both firmness and wisdom are displayed in this direction. While, however, there has in all probability been improvement in this line, and considerable has been done, there is doubtless much room for many of us to improve yet, and much that might be profitably done still.

Our rules are, no doubt, as perfect as human wisdom, in a spirit of dependence upon God, could make them. The need is not for better law nor more law. The law as it is, is good enough, and there is more of it at present than quite a number of us understand. What we want is the law as it is fearlessly and wisely enforced. In order for this to be realized, it is necessary for the preacher to have courage to proceed in the discharge of this duty regardless of position, influence, or anything of the kind, and have religion enough not to take into consideration a decrease of a few dollars in his salary from the loss of some wealthy member who sometimes [illegible] in the whisky traffic. If the ministry is regarded simply as a profession, and followed by a man only because his meat and bread are dependent on it, he is acting consistently with his own principles when he allows paying members to remain in the church on almost any terms; but if he is called of God to preach, and to "watch over souls as they that must give account," he can scarcely afford the church to become corrupt, and the standard of Christianity to be lowered, in order to build up his salary.

Is it possible that this imputation is never just, and that members are never retained in the church from this motive? I would that I could believe it; but how am I to believe it, and how can the world outside believe it, when men and women of wealth and influence are retained in the church, and sometimes even trusted with official positions, who engage in improper amusements with impunity, and carry on business that is dishonoring to God and hurtful to humanity. Let pastors do their duty in this matter, regardless of men's money, leaving their salaries, as they should everything else, in the hands of God.

PRION.

DARIEN, ALA. Feb. 3, 1881.

Pearlington, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: Among the "warm welcomes and kind receptions" alluded to in Bro. T. B. H.'s last letter, I wish your readers to recognize one offered by the good people of Pearlington, on the twenty-first of January, the time appointed for my family to arrive. The dinner was prepared and the store-room supplied with many of the comforts and conveniences of life, when a dispatch informed them that a detention on the Jackson railroad would delay the arrival until seven P. M., when we hoped to enjoy our dinner at supper time. But, alas! for us, it was about five P. M. when we found ourselves at Lake Catharine, switched off, there to remain, we knew not how long, for the reconstruction of the railroad. So we could pass, and there we staid for twelve long hours, as comfortably as a passenger coach, crowded with strange but most agreeable passengers, could render us. A little before day we found ourselves moving slowly up and passing around the wreck, and felt that our troubles were much lighter than they might have been, and that we had much more cause for thanksgiving than for complaint, of which we all were guilty. Soon we were at English Lookout, where, after several hours delay, we were met by our little tug-boat, which faithfully bore us up the chilly current of Pearl river to our new home at Pearlington, when, with grateful hearts, we devoured our dinner, cooked the day before, feeling that though it was cold, it was prepared by warm hearts and kind hands.

The next day was the holy Sabbath, and, though cold and raw as it was, a good congregation of women and children, with a few men, turned out to church, and with Christian patience listened to a discourse that I thought partook very much of the temperature of the weather. Then came the prettiest and largest snow that ever graced these sunny shores, quite a treat to the natives. But our voyage had wholly disqualified us for the occasion, for several days myself and wife were quite sick, which, together with the bad weather, has kept me indoors, so that I have seen but little of my work yet; not enough to attempt a report. Hope soon to be able to give a fuller and more cheerful account of things than I now could. Yours in Christ,

P. HOWARD, P. C.

The Angels' Joy.

MR. EDITOR: While studying last Sabbath-school lesson this question arose in my mind: what was the main ground of joy to the heavenly host that joined the messenger angel to the shepherd's praising God in the highest? Was it their love for our race of redeemed sinners and sympathy with us? or was it a profound interest they felt on their own part in the fulfillment of the prophecies of the Scriptures in particular touching this subject? Is not every moral agent in the universe deeply interested in the verity of every word that proceeds out of the mouth of the Lord God? Would not any failure of the least iota of the prophecies, promises or threatenings of the Lord unsettle, shake and ruin the world? And are they not as helpless and dependent on him, and the perfection of all his attributes, as we are, seeing he is the fountain of their existence, for it is in him they live and move, and have their being as much as we do? Does not the Scripture teach that we were created in him before the foundation of the world, and by him, and for whom all things made that were made, and that in him all things consist? And can any stream be indifferent to the stability, perfection of the fountain from which it flows?

Let it not be said that they do not walk by faith as we must do. Nay, they stand by faith in God; not so much by faith in his promises, but by faith in his character in the highest ideal of the sum total of all perfections. The worth of salvation is according to the grandeur, glory and stability of its source or author. Hence, as I have been thinking since Sunday, this heavenly host heartily sang: Glory to God in the highest.

Have we not equal reason to rejoice in the Divine [illegible] perfections?

J. W. JORDAN.

GREENVILLE, Alabama.

Marriages.

HAYS—DAVIS.—At the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. L. M. Davis, Brunswick, Warren county, Miss., February 13, 1881, by Rev. H. O. Wills, of the Louisiana Conference, Mr. Jack P. Hays, of Hays' Landing, to Miss Susie H. Davis.

MADSEN—GRAVES.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Pearlington, Miss., February 10, 1881, by Rev. J. Howard, Mr. Ferdinand H. F. Madsen and Miss Louisa E. M. Graves, all of Pearlington, Miss.

LAWHORN—GORDEN.—At the residence of Mr. J. W. Johnson, February 9, 1881, by Rev. P. A. Johnston, Mr. R. S. Lawhorn, of Madison, to Miss Mollie E. Garden, of Hinds.

The happy pair commences life by taking the ADVOCATE.

KELLER—PICKLES.—At the residence of the bride's father, December 8, 1880, by Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, Mr. Jacob Keller to Miss S. C. Pickles, all of Avoyelles parish, La.

SPILLMAN—ROGILLIO.—At the residence of the bride's father, in West Feliciana, La., January 27, 1881, by Rev. A. G. Miller, Mr. Reuben B. Spillman to Miss Emma J. Rogillio.

MILLER—BALDWIN.—At the residence of the bride's father, in the town of Franklin, La., February 9, 1881, by Rev. T. K. Gaugh Lelloy, Mr. Henry Franklin Miller, of Marion county, Ky., to Miss Lillian A. Baldwin, of Franklin, St. Mary parish, La.

SCALES—BENSON.—At the residence of the bride's father, Dr. J. M. Benson, January 25, 1881, by Rev. J. M. Patton, Mr. James W. Scales to Miss Sally L. Benson.

WIMBERLY—BANDRUM.—At the residence of the bride's father, February 8, 1881, by Rev. J. M. Patton, Mr. Andrew J. Wimberly to Miss Cora E. Landrum.

CHERRY—SHIVERS.—At the residence of the bride's mother, January 9, 1881, by Rev. M. H. Miller, Mr. Josh. Cherry to Miss Willie Shivers; all of Rankin county, Miss.

BROWN—EASTERLING.—January 27, 1881, near Canton, by Rev. A. D. Miller, Mr. Cornelius Brown, of Limestone county, Miss., to Miss Kate Easterling, of Rankin county, Miss.

READE—VAMON.—At the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. V. Vamon, February 15, 1881, by Rev. John F. Wilkins, Mr. Henry C. Reade to Miss Emma A. Vamon, both of Etowah county, Ala.

PORTIS—BARNES.—At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Alfred Barnes, Sweetville, Ala., January 30, 1881, by Rev. A. B. James, Mr. Rivers Portis and Miss Mary Barnes, all of Sweetville, Ala.

Obituaries.

MRS. ELIZABETH BLADSOE, late of Natchez, was the daughter of David Friendly and Ann Phebe, nee Jones, and was born in or near Natchez about 1806 and died at her late residence December 7, 1880.

She grew up to womanhood in Natchez, and with but little exception, spent the long years of her life there. Her religious training was good first of her parents and after their death by her elder sister, the late Mrs. Ann Haring, of Natchez. She was well educated in English literature and music, and was highly refined and polished in her manners and social intercourse, and was of high, elegant form and stature. Her early religious life was one of sincere devotion to the principles of Christianity and always a careful, prayerful worshiper at God, she was long one of the worthy members of the church in which she moved, and did not unnecessarily neglect the interest or the services of God until early in life. At this time she was living with her only brother and her eldest sister in Pope Gibson. Special efforts were being made by the active use of social dropping to retain her in their agreeable and worldly sports, but an individual and respectful talk from a near relative was instrumental in [illegible] her resolutions to withdraw forever from such worldly amusements. In the meantime there was a state of revival and ingathering both in the Presbyterian and Methodist Churches in Pope Gibson, and she was deeply interested seeker and knew where from [illegible] found among her papers, we learn on March 5, 1838, she was enabled by faith to embrace the Saviour of sinners as her personal Saviour, when her heart was filled with that sweet love, joy, and peace which was the solace of all her after life. She [illegible] a few days after which the writer united with [illegible] and pray for [illegible] direction, as it was made plain to her mind that she ought to unite with the Methodist Church, of which but two or three sisters were now members, as they did not wish to [illegible] in a life of piety and usefulness. In a few days she joined the church, and took upon herself the vows of holy Christian baptism. She soon after returned with her sister to Natchez where she spent the next fifty years like her illustrious namesake, Elizabeth, the wife of Zacharias, "walking in all the commandments of the Lord, blameless." Not long after her return to Natchez she was married to Mr Richmond Bladsoe, a prominent merchant, and member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr Bladsoe died early in life, and left her in charge of their three children, who were, with untiring diligence, and [illegible] prayers, brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Her home was always a welcome home for her ministers. She took an active part in all church matters, and was seldom out of her usual place at the social and congregational meetings of the church, and her pastors were always encouraged in seeing her quiet and meek, but deeply interested, countenance in all the assemblies of the saints. She was a constant reader of the Scriptures, we found no [illegible] or comment, and it would be interesting to know just how often she read the whole Bible through in the more than fifty years of her church membership. The only memorandum found, written by herself on this subject states that from January 1, 1851, to December 31, 52, she had read it through eleven times. She also read our church literature extensively, and the secular papers of her city, so that she kept well posted on the religious and current secular news of the times. After having passed her seventy-fifth year, her humanity seemed to be nearly worn out, for nearly two years before her death she kept her bed most of the time. Her vocal organs failed so that during her last year she could seldom articulate more than a few words at a time. Before she became quite helpless, she said that she felt that her work was all done, and she only had to wait in patience and hope for the Master's call. Very gently and peacefully did life fade away without a murmur, or the least impatient word. Her favorite expression, while she was able to utter it, was, "Thy will of the Lord be done." She relieved her protracted imprisonment in her room and bed was all in order for her ministry in grace, and with delicate simplicity she sweetly kissed the hand that laid this last burden upon her. A few weeks before her death, she seemed for a time unusually wakeful, and her daughter, Mrs. Annette, fearing something troubled her mind, asked her what she was thinking about. By a special effort, she faintly whispered, "old times." She was calling up the sweet reminiscences of the long ago, when, in the fulness of womanhood, she was united with scores of Christian women in pushing forward the Redeemer's kingdom in Natchez. These had "all died in faith," including her two eldest sisters, and had left her with some of her early fellow-laborers in the Lord's vineyard. But these loved ones were not lost; only gone before, and she now joyfully awaited a speedy reunion on the other shore. When the Lord's will was accomplished, she quietly "fell on sleep." Such a Christian's death is nothing more than to be absent from the body, and present with the Lord." She was a near relative of mine, and to reflect on her beautifully consistent Christian life has always tended to make my heart better.

J. A. JOSEY.

BRO. R. P. HOWE, for forty-two years a member of the Methodist Church in Vicksburg, and for thirty-nine years an officer in the same, has fallen asleep. His death was sudden, though not altogether unexpected. A wide circle of friends, relations, and fellow-laborers in the church have sadly felt his untimely loss; and treasure with mournful pleasure his precious memory. Brother Howe was born in Albany, New York, April 6, 1818. At the age of fifteen he was converted and joined the church in the county of Delaware, New York, where his honored father, the Rev. R. Howe, was then laboring as an itinerant preacher. He graduated at the Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., in 1838, under the presidency of Rev. Wilbur Fisk, D.D. As a student he was painstaking and conscientious, and for accurate and varied scholarship, ranked among the foremost sons of the University. In the autumn after graduation he came to Vicksburg, and engaged in teaching with Rev. A. W. Chapman and Gen. Richard Griffith. After some years they withdrew, leaving Brother Howe principle of the Vicksburg Male Academy. This institution had an honored history, and educated many of the first citizens of that city and surrounding country.

Soon after his marriage, in 1850, to Miss S. E. Bland, daughter of the Hon. James Bland, he gave up the profession of teaching, and engaged successfully in the merchantile business. After the war, like thousands of others, he was left ruined in fortune, and resumed his loved employ, the teacher's chair. In this he continued to the day of his death. For many years he was superintendent of the Sunday-school, to which he was greatly devoted, and for which he labored with efficiency and fidelity. The son of a minister, Brother Howe, had a special attachment for the pastor and his home. As his pastor, for the last few years, and at the hour of his death, I can bear grateful testimony to his warm friendship and brotherly sympathy. He was a diligent Bible student, and was fond of reading the Scriptures in the original tongue. His clear expounding of the Word has often been to me a help and inspiration. Never have I known a man,ololster, or layman, better versed in the history, polity, and doctrines of our church.

He leaves a widow and daughter to weep over his sacred dust. At home, his virtues shine with peculiar lustre. Without the privilege of a farewell word he suddenly, peacefully fell asleep. In all of life's relations he was transparent and true. Though not demonstrative, his attachments were ardent, and his friendship undisturbed by time and varying fortunes. I shall ever count it a distinguished privilege to have been his friend and eulogizer.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

CORNELIUS SMITH COZINE was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, 1807, and departed this life, in Washington, La., December 30, 1880, in the seventy-fourth year of his age.

